How do all these 13 year old kids look so grown up?? Some of the kids in my grade are 13 and still don't wear makeup and wear t shirts and jeans and we look younger than 12 and 13	Old	Age - Over 65s	1/40	2.5

I'm thirteen, and a bunch of older people think we're all lazy shitsSure, I'm lucky my parents had enough money to buy me a phone, and I'm thankful, but people older than me always make me feel uncomfortable for having it, but I'm grateful and kind to them so I don't see anything but jealousy on their part. Second of all, to the Boomers who always criticize younger generations, your generation wasn't perfect either, you were born after World War Two and a seemingly good, easy world. Now I'm not going to pretend that your lives were easy or perfect, but Mother Earth had a lot less problems then than now, so anyways I'm with the story. Baby boomers then decided that taxes were stupid and basically you brought the nation into outstanding debt almost single handedly, then when the reports and evidence of climate change came though, y'all didn't care! Factories were making YOU money and stuff YOU wanted. So instead of fixing your mistake, you dumped all that sh*t on the younger generations to try and clean up. But wait! There's more! A majority of the government is influenced by mostly boomers, who seem to oppose change, and also boomers don't exactly support mental health.So yes, I'm sorry your jealous Boomers, but think about all of the things you had, and took away from us when you were the majority.p.s (this is the majority of the boomers, but certainly not every boomer ever)	Mental, Nation	Nationality - General, Physical Identity - Physical (and Mental) Impairments	2/248	0.806

Yeah same for me, its just because most of or generation is interested in nothing because they have phone to keep them busy. So they don't really have that thing inside that says"Hey, there is other things then a phone that are interesting" under 2000s those phone doesn't exist so people explore in other things to keep them busy and thats why they know a lot of stuff. Now every information is on internet so teen's don't even care about it but that's making them simple minds because they know nothing , they depend on those little phone	Nothing	Age - Youngsters	2/97	2.062

This entire "debate" is based off of stereotypical instances, and at the most, is trivial. Just because technology has advanced doesn't mean we have to continue using the obsolete devices of the past. The only advantage an old analog television will provide over an HD unit is the feeling of nostalgia, and that only applies to a certain amount of people. All of these are a result of time; how do you think older generations felt in the 1950's, when the television exploded in popularity and became internationally known? If you're into the older pop culture and devices, good for you. But don't judge others for enjoying something that wasn't in your childhood.EDIT: If you're young and enjoy something of the past generations, no need to shame your peers who don't. When you do this, you only come off as pretentious, not smart.	Old	Age - Over 65s	1/144	0.694

Are those girls really thirteen years old	Old	Age - Over 65s	1/7	14.286

So this is a common but over used trope at the moment so we're going to break this down a bit. 1. The difference between how 13yr olds dress now vs 10 or 20 years ago can be explained through the sexualisation of minors that our media (owned by straight old white men) pushes. Now children are being told they need to look good or a certain way instead of being allowed to be kids. This is intentional and it's large scale grooming of young girls (afab people). Don't blame them, blame creepy adults. 2. Children using technology instead of toys is not their fault. A child doesn't just get an iPad or tablet from no where. The parent made the decision to give them one and to just put them in front of it day in day out. My neice do3snt have a tablet. She has toys. She gets to watch some tv after school if she's been good. But mostly she plays with her toys and makes up games. Don't blame or mock the child. Look to education parents to do better by their children. 3. Younger people on their phones doesn't make them ignorant or stupid. I can't text and message people on my phone. I check in with my disabled mother when out. I can check bus schedules as well as my bank balance all from my phone. I can check the news too and get live updates online. I do a lot of work from my phone and most of the time young people can carry out maybe 3+ conversations on their phone plus real life interactions. Stop assuming that phones make young people dumb when it's been proven to do the opposite. 4. Old fashioned news papers and such are not better than online/technology. We currently have a climate emergency. The productions of news papers and such does not help with this at all. It's also always big corporate businesses and puppets for billionaires who publish/write in these papers where as online anyone can do it meaning that fair and independent news is possible. Even though I'm pretty young myself and I know that most "kids these days are so..." is not true or just not bad, I really hate the impact of smartphones in children's lives. I mean I saw 2 year old children watching YouTube so that they are quiet and their mother has silence. Also so many children in elementary school have their own smartphone and rather play with that than with their friends. I'm not saying that smartphones in general are bad or that a child should not have one, I just hate when they spend more time with their phone than with other things	Old	Age - Over 65s	1/105	0.952

honestly i kinda feel bad for our generation like we are the most lamest , lazy, boring, people to walk this earth like i wish i could live in the 90s but i'm stuck with this crap. The only thing i like about this generation is, billie eilish/music , memes, phones so i can call my mom for emergency's or i could use it for games. literally all we do is go on insta and look at people taking pics of there food, and 11 yrs old kids taking pictures of there legs and non existing boobs and wishing we can be like them and 13 yr olds with julls. like the past was unique and vibrant now we are walking brain washed kids who feel like the only way for to fit in is if we wear crop tops with short shorts and swear every flippin 5 seconds. wow this generation really sucks and i didn't even really think about this until now LOL! A couple days ago, I looked at my 17 year old granddaughter and, for the first time, really saw her as a young woman (instead of the little 5 year old who wanted me to always walk her right to the kindergarten class door) and that's when it hit me that she never even saw the 20th Century! I used to judge age by whether anyone could remember the "Cold War" (which ended in 1989) and, thanks to my granddaughter's "revelation" to me, I now realize that anyone old enough to have even been around when it was going on is already 30. The longest, most defining event of my life is no more relevant to them than was Prohibition to me - and even that isn't as shocking as the tarded up, prematurely sexualized little girls in this video. Worse, it only takes one or two girls presenting that way at a school to put irresistible pressure on all the other little girls to conform. Those are their peers and their competitors for attention, for boys, for status - and you cannot be the parent who puts their kid at the social disadvantage she would suffer if she tried to remain a kid a bit longer. at times like these, i feel like i was born in the wrong generation. yeah, i go on my phone constantly. but that appears to be the only thing keeping me in this generation. maybe its because i'm more educated because i grew up with cousins who were born in the 80s. maybe its because i grew up in a leaning-more-towards-poor household and we didn't have electronics like ipads until we were 9. or maybe its just because we got a lot of hand me downs from my older cousins. i don't know but i don't belong in this generation and i feel judged for not dressing up like an 18 year old when i'm 15.edit: oh my god that 16 year old didn't know what the rugrats was? 3 years ago my entire science class of 12 - 13 year olds got excited at the mention of watching an episode of rugrats and we all got into a nostalgic mood. maybe its just my country or city that's like this. or maybe i am right and its just lack of education. Honestly it's kinda sick af that LITERAL CHILDREN are dressing 'sexier' than I do at 22.. like wtf why are we oversexualizing our youth?? Seems like kids can't even be kids and obsess over Disney channel movies and read 17 magazines to see which Jonas Brother is right for you anymore. It's all about tight clothing and makeup which is FINE I suppose but not at 11, 12, 13 yrs old . Honestly if I could go back to my middle school & HS days I would've never even focused on makeup or appearance, sex or ANYTHING of that nature and took everything more seriously. Especially the way I treated people. Nowadays it's all about looking & dressing a certain way & honestly I feel bad for all these kids growing up. Aysu H. I do it. I do many things with my friends and other people and away from the phone.And I am very happy for the time I spend with my friends when I was 11. I can't remember what I watched on TV, I didn't own a phone or a computer, but I remember what I did with my friends. Right now I don't have school anymore and many friends aren't there so I spend more time with my phone, but honestly, I can't remember half of the things I watched on YouTube (or at least I don't think at it), but I can remember every minute I spend with other people.In 10 years, what do you want to tell others what you did this time? "Just chillin' around" or do you want to tell them exiting stories about what you experienced? Sorry for my long reply, but I believe that spending too much time before the screen on a too young age isn't good for the people. I can understand spending some time on the phone, but that doesn't make you happy, maybe in the moment you are doing that, but not for life. And young people have a better opportunity to spend time with their friends because they usually have more free time, they should use that time	Age	Age - General	1/223	0.448

So much of this depends on how old your parents were when they decided to have kids. My parents were getting up there when they had me and I didn't have my first son until I was 30. I'm 35 now and my 4 year- old is getting into playing some of the older video games I kept. I actually still have an original Tetris that works on my Gameboy Advance SP. Sadly no original Gameboy that works (crazy battery muncher that it was) but still, my boys will grow up with some old stuff around. I'm a barely millennial. Lol I grew up with a lot of the 'ancient technology' shown but also love all of the new stuff and keep up with upgrading everything. I have to say being able to stream movies/TV shows is amazing. I don't miss a million DVDs cluttering my home. I don't think I'll ever become so old that I refuse to embrace change. st85100 - "Back when you had to separate the seeds and stems"... LOL! In my day, we said that something was "the greatest thing since sliced bread". Is the successor phrase now going to be "the greatest thing since seedless weed"? What an amazing transition I've seen. When I was born (and well into my adulthood and professional life) everybody smoked tobacco - in restaurants, in airplanes, even in court (it wasn't even considered d isrespectful to light up while addressing the judge) and, of course, having enough weed on you to roll a doobie could land you in jail for 5 years (at least you were allowed to smoke there - and at your trial, too). Now my town is inundated with cannabis shops, nobody is stuffing wet towels under their doors to staunch the smell, and that delicious sense of paranoia and dread which used to accompany every toke is a thing of the past. Ah, but try to find a smoking section anywhere or a tobacconist's shop.	Nobody, Transition	Age - Youngsters, Sexual Identity - Transexuality	2/170	1.176

This is what i used to do as a kid. This is going to be long scroll away if you dont want to waste your time.I was born on 2001 and as a kid i mostly had those 90s things. I had both a dvd player and a vhs player (whenever i see a vhs i remove those tape things inside and play around with them), my dad gave me one of the portable disk mp3 players (I broke it when i was 4)i had a 'phone' when i was 5 it was a old nokia phone but it never worked. I used to play snake and this certain game where you bounce on clouds (idk whats its name tbh) on my mums phone. I used to play on a ps1 when i was 5 then it had got spoiled so my dad got me a ps2 when i was 7 (i still have the ps2 and it works) as a kid i really loved to play with sand when my family and i go to the beach and i loved crayons. I played a lot of football (soccer) and i used to ride my bike with my friends every day ! Oh and finally i loved toys like legos, hotwheels, (any car toy, just give me one and ill play with it).Now i just stare at my phone the whole day, play ps4 most of the times and just study !
