Feminism is a joke women already have everything going for them. Nobody is more priveledged than an attractive woman in her 20's or 30's. Women are graduating college at a faster rate than men by far. They just want it all.....I know a few feminists in my social circle who I would never even consider dating. They are all mid to late 30s, all have careers...mostly in HR which is another story all together...dont get me started on that...but they all seem semi unhappy, drink too much wine. They prioritized career ovet family and now can't find a quality guy to settle down with and have a kid with later in the game...why wont these guys just man up? Haha. I wonder why. Most of these women have masculine traits and have a resentment for men.	Nobody, Woman	Age - Youngsters, Gender - General	2/136	1.471

Women can say or do anything to men like accusing them & shaming them etc and nothing is done! Women are so busy be controllng & making all the rules to suit them. Women never put their life's on the line like men do, fighting in wars for our freedom or doing dangerous jobs that can take your life! Women havnt built a city for men to live in yet? I think feminism means Zan-parasti. zanparasti means to give them some extra protocol just for making relation with them.... I have written two articles on this topic. As a 17 year old boy, I would tell you that I have goals that I set up for myself. Not some women telling me that I should. No one tells me to catch up because I don't time myself on changing who I am. I here people say that they're beast of a kind, but all cowards trying to a imitate the beast. No one is more important, not powerful than the man who created us. He created you for to make a difference in the world, create with positivity, and spread the message of peace. There once was a woman who told me that it's tough out there for a man, but it's not for her. I looked at her and told her that If life had obstacles you will fall. And it's all for you if you don't get back up.	Old, Woman	Age - Over 65s, Gender - General	2/144	1.389

Short answer, yes. The first question is what the feminist movement is actually about. Why does everyone need to become ‘feminist’? It is hard to see what feminism actually stands for through all the noise and fuzz. In its radical form (and it appears that the movement is getting more and more radical), feminism rejects any ‘male’ value. This polarised form of debating will unfortunately not move the discussion forward. Second question is if the feminist movement should be seen as a means for a higher objective or as a goal as such. Unfortunately, the latter view seems to have won it from the first. The feminist movement has turned into a movement that embraces the call for ‘more women’ or ‘more female values’ as such, without even critically assessing why these would be needed. Even the women that refer to feminism as a means to achieve higher societal needs seem to fail in conveying their ideas in a nuanced way. Firstly, they refer to feminism as a matter of fairness: society needs more women because women used to be discriminated in the past (and yes it is mostly a question of the past in Western societies as the ‘pay gap’ and other illustrations are way less striking if one dares to analyse the figures with intellectual honesty instead of a call for attention). Is it fair though to project the previous discrimination of women by the previous generation on the current generation of men (e.g. why do women need special executive training programmes in companies; why do companies need to hire more women, especially in overly politically correct institutions such as international organisations)? Secondly, women claim to justify feminism by reasons of accepting diversity. Creating a more diverse society is a valid reason to pursue, but does the current feminist movement stay true to this value? It rather seems that feminists put the fight for women’s rights at a higher pedestal than other categories of diversity. Does the radical call for feminism imply that the fight for women is of a superior nature compared to for instance the fight for equal recognition of black males? In addition, any radical form of ‘equality’ paradoxically undermines diversity. Demanding that everyone becomes a feminist, neglects that men and women are fundamentally different and that their different traits deserve to be respected. It is shameful and sad to see how many people try to surf on the hype of feminism simply because they see that any opinion in a newspaper on embracing feminism in a radical and overly politically correct fashion will immediately give them the attention they are desperately seeking for. With particular reference to the politicians of the European Commission, who recently voted in favour of a woman to become the next president of the European Commission i.e. because she is a woman (indeed not only because she is a woman but it was one of the criteria), I would like to say: what is the goal of the European Union for the next years? To solve the problem of its people or to become the worldwide centre of political correctness? This radical yet sad example only illustrates that politicians will follow any hype that gives them attention. By embracing any feminist initiative without even talking about substance, politicians curb the attention of the real problems people are dealing with such as less jobs, jobs taken over by robots, geopolitical tensions, trade wars etc. The debate on

I think this feminist nonsense as got out of hand. days of because you're period!!!! so that means 5 to 7 days of every. month!! women don't want to be equal with men to many want to be superior.men and women are equal and should compliment each other with their differences. not go to bloody war over it. yes if a woman does the same job and hours as a man she SHOULD get the same pay! men and women should be judged for jobs etc on their ability to do the work. not because there has to be a balance in the numbers! same as race. that to should be on merit.NOT to make up more equal numbers. I am a woman and have three daughters and a granddaughter. and wether you like it or not. men and women are equal. but we are also a bit different to each other. that's how it is. so get a grip. it's the poor woman and girls in the eastern world that have got plenty to complain about NOT the women in the west.	Race, Woman	Ethnicity - General, Gender - General	4/184	2.174

There are something men go through roughly every month, where their hormones and body chemicals change. It is similar to PMS according to scientific studies. I know as a man I can't try to relate to what happens to a woman while she is menstruating, but women getting extra off days for their period is wrong. This is not the way to show you're equal. If you can't work a few days a month because of menstration, then you shouldn't be hired over a man who does not have to deal with these issues.	Woman	Gender - General	1/94	1.064

Dallas the Great well, feminism has changed. Yes. I would call myself a first wave feminist, only because this new third wave feminism is really bizarre. However, I'll never turn my back on feminism. Yes it is a response to men. It would not have been needed if men hadn't stood on women's necks, pretending it's remotely acceptable to tell humans what they can and can't do, based on biological circumstance. Even that statement is too vague. It was to be born into slavery, being born a woman . If you smiled and accepted it, life was hospitable. If you sought after any form of identity or equality, life was hostile. Sometimes you were killed, ostracized, or rejected. You can be mad about feminists all you like, it won't change anything. The world isn't going back in time. That's actually why people like you are so angry. Feminism will eventually defeat toxic masculinity by standing on its very own neck, killing it, burying it, and disallowing it.	Woman	Gender - General	1/166	0.602

Most men don't realize that staying silent for fear of being shamed of what they said to be perceived sexist or misogynistic is the first step to emasculation. Women for a majority of human history have been oppressed. But there's society in history that have had women play major, or equal roles to men. For an example the country I come from South Sudan (cush in ancients times) had women for most of their history as leaders or queens. Actually the name kandace or Candace literally translates to queen. Most these queens were brilliant military tactitions and in all cases lead armies to war and even participated in battles. Most feminesms today truly believe that men see women as unequal and weak. History has shown most men will follow anyone with leadership qualities wether they be a man or a woman . Humans in general (men and women) won't follow some one or a group that's sees themself as a victim. Even today's feminist when it comes to achieving their goals or having laws passed in their favor ironically end up using men to achieve those goals.	Woman	Gender - General	1/187	0.535

Supriya Dwivedi I'm sorry but you have a biased "I'm the victom" view on the world that you choose to look through. You would find it sexist if a man like I put a woman first IE.(opens the door for her, Allowed her to go first for whatever, or did physically demanding labor so she didn't have to.) All as sexist which is wrong. Men are typically larger(more mussel mass) so personally I volunteer to do labor women close to me are physically unable to do or don't want to do because of the effort required, women like you call me sexist when all I'm doing is helping. Feminists are just women who wish they were born male and hate the thought of fulfilling gender roles that have existed for thousands of years and for good reason, men and women are different mentally, hormonally and anatomically. Gender roles don't exist to oppress one gender or the other, they exist to maintain a system that has always worked for Humanity, women are the nurturers and men are the providers. Some claim this power Dynamic can be reversed but not without creating more damage than progress. Feminism hurts the very people it seeks to help. Equality is a harmful myth. The problem is equality has become a belief that women and men are seen as the same. The important differences that exist between men and women are being ignored. Women given choice would rather work less hours, have children and spend time raising those children. Feminists seek to remove this choice by insisting the women and men are equal and forcing women to take roles they normally would have avoided. When a feminist sees disparity in the workplace between men and women they believe it to be the cause of the evil patriarchy rather than for what it is women's choice. Then they demand actions to be made to right the wrongs so that there is an equality of outcome. This takes the freedom of choice away from women and punishes men for something that had nothing to do with them. Overall, feminism hurts everyone in this manner and it is my hope that people start embracing the idea that men and women are different and each have important roles to play in our society. Feminism is obsolete. Once it became a human right to choose your gender , being female is no longer exclusive to those that are biologically female. I'm biologically male, but I'm decidedly gender fluid now. Still look male, dress male, and attracted to women, but I now identify with both being a woman and a man. The reason is that being male or female doesn't have any value, so why would I pigeonhole myself as one gender . If a biological man can identify as a woman , or a biological woman can identify as a man, then both genders lose their property of exclusion. If both genders are inclusive to whoever chooses it, than why would anyone continue to identify as only one gender , subjecting themselves to exclusionary policies by choice?I'm now free of all gender segregation, as well as I can benefit from all gender based equity programs. No matter what feminists accomplish, I get all the same benefits. I can also go into every segregated space, even ones where women are potentially nude. Welcome to equality ladies. Now pass me that towel.	Gender, Woman	Gender - General	9/183	4.918

Yes, it has, we live in a country where you get a desirable position based on your gender not on who is best suited for the position. Since Trudeau wants equality of outcome so much, why aren't women being drafted into our military, or being put in jobs in the waste management field? Why are the people that deal with the septic tanks of my family members that have them almost always a man?I sincerely wish people would stop fighting for equality of outcome and start accepting equality of opportunity. If a woman wants to work in my field (Instrumentation) they are more than welcome to, but they have to get the education to do so, and in the classes I took at the trade school I attended, there were 3 women in the two classes of 30+ students. As for the concern of some women having it worse than others every month, I see it as a medical issue. Many people run into various medical issues in their lives, and you deal with them. I don't see why this particular issue should be treated any differently than any other medical issue? You don't see many people working on an offshore oil rig if they are confined to a wheelchair, why? Because the company realizes they would be unable or at least inefficient at the task and thus hire someone more appropriate for the position. How does this relate to additional days off? Well, the employer will see that worker 1 has to take more days off than worker 2, so I'll hire the second worker. This point also makes the " gender wage gap" look kinda funny. If an employer could really pay a woman $0.77 for every $1 they pay a man, nobody would hire men unless there was a performance reason to do so. So is the pay gap a myth or do men just work that much harder than women that companies decide to hire men too? I, as a woman , am fed up with the double standards of modern feminism!!! The feminist movement is a politicized mental illness, which brings vote tot he liberals and the democrats! Or at least here in Canada that is the only way these 2 parties able to collect vote or even grab power. They have no message, they have nothing to offer to the people. So, what to do to get the votes? alingne with feminists, visible "minorities", with groups of "sexual-diversity", and any other misfits whom the "victim-hood" narrative can be sold, then offer legalized marijuana, legalize bestiality (already is!), maybe next year legalize pedophilia and prostitution, and voila! they got their votes. the ONE big issue they brought up in this chat, the wonderful younger lady didn't even acknowledge as an issue!! yes, millenial men ARE confused about the balance between sameness/equality and biological differences. VERY confused. we're the generation that is beginning to understand the balance, but we are no where near a point where we can actually say, "I think men my age are NOT confused about this." No. We getting to the point where most men CARE and understanding generally comes AFTER that.	Age	Age - General	1/84	1.19

I think we sometimes forget that there are women doing a whole lot worse than those living in Western communities.In some countries female genital mutilation is still all the rage.It is estimated that more than 200 million women worldwide have undergone the procedure.In Saudi Arabia, women have only just been given the right to drive. But they still can't marry, divorce, travel, get a job or have elective surgery without permission from their male guardians.They can't mix freely with men, with authorities ordering shops employing both men and women to build "separation walls" in 2013.They can't appear in public without wearing a full-length public abaya, retain custody of their children in a divorce after children reach the age of seven for boys and nine for girls, eat at restaurants without a designated family section or receive an equal inheritance.We need to keep fighting the good fight for feminism.But I think we need to be more conscious of the women who are being left behind.I'm not downplaying the many issues yet to be solved in Western nations.But we need to fight for women in far worse circumstances too and advocate for their rights, health and wellbeing in any way we can. Decent debate. We need more of these discussions. It's easy to say "yes it has" but the reasons why are important. The panel touched on a good point that confuses men and confuses the entire conversation. What kind of equality is it that the feminist movement desires? Ought we to have "men's" newspapers and "women's" newspapers, or not? Are we distinct markets with different interests, or are we fundamentally the same? It seems to me that feminists are just as confused on these questions as everyone else. But feminism's method seems to be attempting to have their cake and eat it too. They want women's newspapers but they also want 'regular' newspapers to have a balanced and diverse voice that speaks to everyone. It begs the question of how they really feel about our equality. It seems that instead of some established and well-defined notion of equality, what feminism wants is anything that benefits women. As long as that confusion and lack of definition exists, feminism will be at risk of making claims or proposals that go "too far."The phrase "too far" can mean several things in this context. In my evaluation, too far includes anything that is a denial of science, that creates a hierarchical status of women over men, and anything that is unrelated to the rights and privileges of women. Again, these issues only arise because everyone is still confused as to what equality should be; feminism has not provided a clear and concise definition of equality. As such, they'll sometimes try to deny biology with the aim to increase "equality." For example: trying to get transgender women the right to fight other women in MMA matches, despite any science that says that should not be allowed on the basis of biology. That is feminism going too far. Secondly, the sick days for period pains is one issue where some men feel that it is giving women special privileges, ones denied to men. Personally I don't see it as an issue, but it's an example of how "equality" may be denied for the sake of benefiting women. Another example of how feminism may go too far. Lastly, feminism can go too far when it overreaches. That is, when it makes an issue unrelated to rights and privileges into a "feminist issue" or a women's issue. For example: "manspreading" is apparently a women's issue. Feminism claims that the male gender is prone to spreading their legs wide, taking up unnecessary space, and this is a form of microaggression toward women, implying that the man is more worthy of space and attention, implying that men are dominant and women are submissive. When in reality, it's not about sexism or the removing of rights and privileges, rather it's an issue of rude people that take up too much space. Whether it's a man with his legs, a women with her purse, or a child with their toys, people taking up space unnecessarily is not a feminist issue. This sort of overreaching into both mundane and serious matters, is another way that feminism can go too far. In conclusion, a lot of these problems could be avoided if feminism or society at large could agree on exactly what kind of equality we want, what is reasonable expectations for each gender given our biologies, and what exactly is a women's issue as opposed to a general issue. This lack of clarity and lack of definition is what makes this conversation so difficult, confusing, and unproductive. Feminism was a lot easier to support when it was very clear about it's goals regarding	Gender, Sexism, Transgender	Gender - General, Sexual Identity - Transexuality	4/639	0.626

Despite the dictionary definition, feminism stopped being about equality a while ago. Sorry Liz. Side note - funny how the definition of " sexism " has to be redefined so that men can't experience it, and the dictionary definition is apparently woefully inadequate and outdated, but when it comes to claiming that feminism is still relevant, the dictionary definition of "all about equality" is perfectly acceptable.	Sexism	Gender - General	1/64	1.562
I would like to mention that feminism can be defined on a spectrum. There are women who truly believe that men are inferior, but there are those of us, who actually believe in equality for all. I believe that is the core message of modern feminism is equality for all. And who said that men can't experience sexism ? That's just ludicrous.	Sexism	Gender - General	1/61	1.639

I was referring to your earlier LOL:) You've had a few. That's an example of a misunderstanding. But saying the wage gap is "misunderstood" doesn't even come close to cutting it, in my opinion. Women's Studies professors and other "experts" have used the wage gap as a symbol of patriarchy . Well, they can't claim to be experts on the subject AND simultaneously be ignorant on the subject can they? (though they may feel they are entitled to do so)... So if the wage gap "misunderstanding" as you call it, obviously wasn't based on fact, what would you say it is based on? Simple ignorance from "experts"? Doesn't it seem very odd to you that there were so many professors/experts who claimed the wage gap is real without doing the proper research? Tell me if a doctor told you that you had a disease, then later said "Oops! My bad. I misunderstood the x-rays!" Lol how would you feel about that? So why should those "experts" be let off the hook so easily with an excuse of "misunderstanding"? I guess for the same reason as the panelist can get away with saying that if men had periods they would need the whole week off, while a man would be fired for saying something along those lines..
