In the US racism is mainly based on skin colour, in Europe racism is based on culture. The europeans are very protectionistic with their cultures, and think that other cultures pose a threat to their own.	Racism	Ethnicity - General	2/36	5.556

I don't think the race industry has done us any favours. It keeps the pot boiling and is a barrier to the natural process of integration by keeping us thinking in terms of race . I try not to think in this way but sometimes feel that there is something hovering over my head waiting for me to slip up. This makes people defensive and reinforces difference in an unhealthy way. The best way not to be accused of racism is not to mix with other races and that sucks.	Race, Racism	Ethnicity - General	3/89	3.371
As I approach 40 I cannot understand why people descriminate purely on someone's colour of skin. Speaking as a white person i can say I do not understand what it feels like to be treated differently but I hope some black people remember we are not all racist . And I think of this fine young man as my equal and he's also British like me and what a personality he has too!	Black, Racist	Ethnicity - Black, Ethnicity - General	2/73	2.74

One of the biggest differences between America vs UK is the fact racism will not stop a talented person of color from rising to power in America. The UK still is not ready to accept a person of color as their national leader. And there are far more wealthy people of color in America than the UK.	Racism	Ethnicity - General	1/57	1.754

In the UK and I say the UK excluding London, we don't see black and white, but we do see religion and the majority are not religious and I think that is the issue here, in the USA they are obviously just racist and that causes employment issues for people that are black which leads to them doing desperate things including crime, the USA culture needs to change to fix this. The USA is a disgrace to humanity, we evolve, we forgive, we move on, the USA are stuck in a time loop	Black, Racist	Ethnicity - Black, Ethnicity - General	3/93	3.226
Racism is Not likely or judging a person on their race . Nothing more. I have meet blacks who don't like me simply because I am white. I'm not rich. My family was on welfare. I don't blame anyone for my situation. But you say I have white privilege. No I don't any any kind of privilege. Do I know what it's like to be a black man. NO. Just as a black man. Doesn't know what it's like to be a white man. So how about we let the past go. And move on. Not saying forget about it. But get the hell over it. Cry, cry, cry... Find racism in everything and anything. Just because you are not picked for a job doesn't mean it's because you are black . Just because you are not given something doesn't mean it's because of you being black . But that's seems to be the excuse that blacks will grab simply because it's there. When deep down inside. You know it just because you where NOT the best one for the job. Or soemone just happens to be better than you. I don't see white basketball players crying over all the black basketball players being picked over them simply because they are black . No. Because the black players are just better. That's all. A cop pulls u over. Follow his or her directions. Get pissed after and deal with them. Not during. Whites know this. And funny fact MORE WHITES are killed by cops then blacks. But the news doesn't want that known because well...It doesn't make ratings. So wake up Black America. And learn it's not whites that are holding you back. It's just yourselves. Racism really does suck. I've walked down places I shouldn't be in. People would give me looks like I shouldn't be there. As if my rights don't apply as long as they're around. Certain places I feel threatened. All because of what I look like. All because I have a differing opinion to someone else's. Racism really does suck for anyone who is a target. Black , white, Hispanic, etc. It's not exclusive to one race or another. If we start to realize that and stop playing the victim and stop acting like we're better than one another then there won't be so much racial tension in America. Why can't we have differing opinions and still be able to kick back with each other at the end of the day?	Black, Race, Racism	Ethnicity - Black, Ethnicity - General	4/129	3.101

I appreciate your effort, but this was a very short video on such a topic with a long memory.————— Also, there is a lot of internecine discrimination among black people themselves in America, especially in New York, which is confusing. They look down heavily against England and blacks who are from, represent, or speak highly of it, are often looked down upon as traitors. —————Natural racism in the States, is slick, sickly and slyly worked in such a manner where one needs to really decipher what is transpiring. The workplace is set up that the whites can ”play” blacks against each other in an astute and slick manner. They know where their bread is buttered. They really long to get a social taste of the other sides ”greener” pastures. There is some fawning interplay from both sides until they clock out and check-in to the start of a new day of reality where they are holed up in their cultural Rubicon. I don't deny there's racism everywhere but in the US is just ridiculous; and it's from BOTH sides despite what the PC culture wants it to make it look like. This is, because in the USA the black -white construct is heavily imposed; I would even argue, that right now, even though there are still white racists, it is even more pronounce on black people that do tend to self segregate.In my country Colombia, there's some racism I won't deny it; but, what I love about my country is that we think about ourselves as Colombians first and foremost; diversity is just an additional asset we proudly embrace and most of us, do not even think in terms of race , or any sort of segregation. This is all very true and real, but it affects most people who dont seem or look white, not only black people. It exists everywhere, but in some places more openly used than others. Subtle racism is equally psychologically harmful for the sufferer. No excuses. As someone who is technically white and has suffered brutal racism since childhood I say is one of the biggest problems society faces today.Ironically free speech has been abolished outside internet, and now none is racist and all speak like it was a thing of the past, when sadly isn't.Tell me a European country who isnt racist and I give you the key to eternal life. Everyone resists change, it's part of being human. I'm sure if white British or white American people migrated to sub Saharan Africa there would be discrimination towards them be it religious grounds, social grounds or cultural grounds. It just happens that there are more opportunities in Britain and the USA so people elect to immigrate there instead. I really don't think more than 5 of people in Britain even take race into account when meeting people and even less than that think it a negative thing. You get pricks in all denominations sections of humanity. For God sake look at Hitler. I as a white person have been subjected to black racism . Dislike and rudeness for no other reason other than the color of my skin. I've noticed this particularly when on holiday in the states. I think it stems from poor education and for the most part bad parenting as this man says I think it's very important to have a father figure around the child particularly in the home. Ugh. First off, I know that racism is evil. What I take issue with is that he's just telling us it's still there in the vaguest possible terms whilst offering no empirical evidence and just expects us to take it because we don't know his life experience. OK David, but if it is so obvious then why would I need a different life experience to notice it? If its there then it's there for all to see. WTF does that mean? what is "feeling" the racists?. Look if i was to tell a doctor i just "feel" that everyone hates me and i dont know why because im actually a legit nice guy, the doctor would tell me its all in my head and i might have some paranoid disorder. Hell, even Hispanics think they are not people. I don't know how many times I've heard a Hispanic person say they were white. It's crazy. Dragged from Africa because "they" did not want to crop their own lands and it was free and easy labor for them. Raped the women..hell you have so many instances of the most powerful men in Washington, at that time having black female mistresses and birthing mixed children. Skip to 2018 and the black female student was in a common area at Yale and the white student calls the cops on here I GUESS SHE WAS SHOCKED THAT A BLACK PERSON WAS ABLE TO HAVE GREAT SATS AND GET THERE. I mean called the damn cops on the girl for falling asleep because she worked all night on a paper that was due. Let us not forget too quick about two black men waiting FOR A WHITE friend no less and they get kicked out of Starbucks when white people can take their time and wait for their friends all the damn time. Had a cop put cuffs on a black guy, once they got him to the ground he then took a run at him and kicked him dead in his head. Had a black therapist get surrounded by cops because his mentally challenged patient had a toy car in his hand. The therapist layed down on the ground with his patient and told the cops please do not shoot. I'm his therapist and he is only holding a toy car and guess what....they shot the therapist and when the therapist asked why did you shoot me...they said..."I don't know?" I DON'T FCKING KNOW? As long as we're not just focusing on racism from whites and there is definitely plenty of that still. Maybe not as bad as years ago but it's still there. There is also plenty of racism and discrimination from other races too. Indian girl at work openly told me and some other girl that if she got with a black guy her parents would disown her so there you go. Non whites from other countries would happily disown their children or kill them even for getting in a relationship with someone outside their race or religion so what does that tell you? Video on here about some poor Chinese girl on a college campus in America who said that there were some black guys in a car who yelled out the window at her and told her to go back to her country! So my point is if we talk about racism let's talk about all racism that happens from people of all backgrounds that goes on and it does go on. Instead of these discussions that imply only the white race as the guilty party the only ones responsible for it because they're not! That's racism in itself I think! Racism in the past was the result of ignorance, period. Racism today is the result of the marginalization of Gnosticism and academia in general. I've seen students get in outright verbal jousts with social science college professors, because they didn't like what the professors were saying. In the end, those same students would resort to cheating in order to get a passing grade, because they'd learnt nothing . Because of the defamation of subject area experts, racists see no value in learning critical thinking at a college level, leading them to fall prey to charlatans and false prophets who tell them to shut up and listen, "we'll tell you what to say". Consequently, they've supported woefully under-qualified candidates and mentors, all who go by their gut/instincts, rather than experience and intelligence. It's a sad day in the progress of our social revolution, when the secretaries of at least half a dozen of our environmental and other government agencies, were opposed to their very existence. suleydaman i wanted to reply to your question: "If it's blatantly apparent, then why can't you demonstrate it?" in the thread below but for some reason your reply doesn't show there so I will answer you here. I think that the commenter DeeperThanMyThoughts explained very well and gave excellent examples of the racism/discrimination that is blatantly apparent; however, I will offer a few more on a personal level.A few years ago, there was a school shooting a few miles away from where I live. Two young white boys (10 and 12 years old) killed 7 people, teachers and students, and injured many others. They were sent to a juvenile detention center until the age of 18 when they were released and their records expunged because they committed the mass shooting as minors. I have a nephew who was an accomplice in a robbery at the age of 16. The store owner or cashier was killed during the robbery. My nephew was tried as an adult and sentenced to 40 years in prison because he refused to say that he killed the man. He would have gotten a lighter sentence if he had said he did it. He is still in prison and is now about 37 years old. Now don't get me wrong, he should have been punished for his involvement in the crime and may even deserve the 40 years, but you are telling me that those two boys who killed 7 people should have gotten only 6-8 years.If that's not a good enough example for you, how about this true story. Two years ago, my nephew who was on the high school football team was practicing his drills in his backyard when he was suddenly tasered by the police. What excuse did the police give? He looked like the suspect, who from my understanding, was actually a white man. Now, my nephew is dark-skinned and is nowhere near white not even in the palm of his hands or his eyes. Imagine if they had used guns instead of a taser? My nephew would be dead. They messed up his arm, and he was not able to use it for weeks.One more for you, I visited a predominantly white school district to give a presentation. On the entire staff, there was only one black person, a man. His job was in-school suspension or security; he was also a probation officer. I don't believe that they could not find a qualified black person who could teach.Is this demonstration enough?	Age, Black, Old	Age - General, Age - Over 65s, Ethnicity - Black	6/423	1.418

The difference is that the USA is the only world power with a federal system of government where an entire race of people were systemically enslaved, used as farm animals, regarded as property with a monetary value, all on its own home soil. Then, after a war that nearly split the country in two, these people were begrudgingly set free with no foundation... no homes, no money, no jobs. Laws were created to deliberately make life as difficult as possible for them. It has only been about 50 years since the official end of Jim Crow laws. Yet people complain "get over it" and "quit living in the past". Please note that I am not dismissing the history of slavery in other countries. European nations like the UK have much older histories than the USA.	Crow, Jim Crow, Race	Ethnicity - Black, Ethnicity - General	3/135	2.222
There is a lot wrong with that. An entire race of people wasn't enslaved. There were plenty of free blacks that weren't slaves. The French, British, and Portuguese did the enslaving. The US didn't enslave anyone, and only bought slaves for about 30 years. South America was covered in race based slavery as well as the Caribbean. Europe used most of it's people as farm animals for over a thousand years. I don't know where you got the idea that the US invented that. The simple truth of the matter is that workers have been treated like shit just about everywhere for just about forever. American slavery only stands out because of it's hypocrisy. It was far less brutal than most contemporary slavery. China is a world power and there are a shitload of slaves in China. This entire outlook of yours is preposterously historically ignorant. Always Learnin' You're making a very fine point, one that I haven't heard on the topic before. I much appreciated that input. I think you are right. Those 100 years cemented racial relations in some ways, creating factions (to put it a bit simple): one faction wanted to protect systematic racism and started making Confederate monuments and statues celebrating those views, while others went increasingly progressive and started working towards ending systematic racism and creating civil rights. In a sense, "the right to discriminate" is part of a ideological vein in American society that shows up in other issues, imo. Such as the right to discriminate based on religious beliefs, which is also something many Americans are still fighting for. Compare this some other Western nations who quite undramatically just made laws against any type of discrimination.	Racism	Ethnicity - General	2/137	1.46
The US, and the western world in general, put an end to the practice of slavery. I may be wrong but I believe the US is the only nation in human history to have fought a way in which one of the goals was the abolition of slavery. Slavery still exists in many corners of the world, as well as rampant, overt racism and genocide. Yet the US in considered racist , defying all odds of proof, statistics and reality. It's absolutely astonishing.	Nation, Racism, Racist	Ethnicity - General, Nationality - General	3/82	3.659
DeshaunX The English brought slavery to America. England is in the U.K. Slavery occurred in the UK too. Slavery occurred in African countries such as Sierra Leone and many more. Being Black British is just as hard as being Black American. Black people here have been attacked, beaten, raped, enslaved, marginalised and much more. We are remind we do not belong here. We aren't even taught about black history in the U.K. which predates slavery. Some Americans believe they are the only ones who endured a struggle. No its universal. Though different we can all relate and should all acknowledge each others struggle.	African, Black	Ethnicity - Black	5/103	4.854
TheLocalBrownie slavery wasn't the only atrocity brought upon people. Just ask the Irish what was done to them. The Scots. Even the English themselves the havoc wrought on them by the aristocracy, the Normans, the vikings, the saxons, the romans. Suffering is universal. We cannot all simply commiserate and complain about hurt feelings. Live your life as an individual, not at a part of a victimized group. Ignore hatred and ignore mere words and 'covert' racism . Stop trying to separate and divide but rathe just simply unite and live your life	Racism	Ethnicity - General	1/91	1.099
Scott A I agree and I also said suffering is universal in my comment. I just spoke of slavery as his comment was in reference to the suffering of black people. Asians, Chinese even what is occurring in Syria as we speak. I am well aware of the issues. I am more focused on how we can combat racism for the future generations	Black, Racism	Ethnicity - Black, Ethnicity - General	2/63	3.175

TheLocalBrownie I think the only real way to combat it is to completely ignore it. Racism today is an extremely small issue, but the more attention is paid to it the more common people without a racist bone in their body get fed up with the constant race baiting and talk about things for which they see absolutely no proof of. It actually ends up swaying them to harbor racist feelings toward groups they feel are now getting benefits and preferences simply bc of their skin color. We must ignore race totally and simply look at each other as fellow human beings, and the dregs of society lagging behind in that view will simply be forced to follow suit in the coming years.	Common, Race, Racism, Racist	Ethnicity - General, Social Class - Working class	6/123	4.878
Scott A Racism is not a small issue. People are being murdered because of their race. Muslim women beaten and attacked. Arrested for just sitting in Starbucks. It is not a small issue in society. I have experienced so much racism in the U.K. its small to you but not to those living it. We can't ignore it or act like it doesn't exist. If people discussing their experience causes you to harbour racist feelings thats on you. Change comes about through action and discussion. We know not everyone is racist but the system it's self within western countries are. I appreciate your opinion but to be frank. Walk a mile in our shoes and then speak on whether we can ignore racism.	Race, Racism, Racist	Ethnicity - General	6/123	4.878
TheLocalBrownie I believe firmly the respect and opportunities are all equal and present. It's all a matter of how you present yourself as an individual that determines how you will be treated. Gone are the days when skin color determined your treatment. A white and a black man with similar skills, language, behavior, grooming and dress will 100 be treated equally in almost any conceivable situation. It's differences in the above listed qualities that will cause differentiated treatment yet somehow always become blamed on race.	Black, Race	Ethnicity - Black, Ethnicity - General	2/85	2.353
TheLocalBrownie I can't speak for the U.K. bc I'm an American. But I can honestly say that if you're making those claims about anything happening in the US you're completely full of it. Racism has never been less prevalent, less of a problem or less present in the system here. But to here our leftist media you'd think it was our biggest obstacle in society. It is not. It is nearly completely a fabrication of the media who relies upon it for ratings. It's a disgusting practice. I can honestly say to you that if you're unhappy with your treatment in Britain you should try coming here. As long as you value the same things in life that we do here, such as freedom, equality, kindness, self reliance and hard work, you will welcomed with open arms in almost any community you enter. That's what America is really like today.	Racism	Ethnicity - General	1/150	0.667

Panama never had slavery, what are you talking about? During the Panama Canal construction when the US took over the Canal Zone after the French had failed to build it, they imported blacks from the Caribbean and the Andes and surrounding areas but they were never were slaves, they were't owned by anyone. The US tricked them into working at the Canal for better pay and a better future but obviously the conditions for black workers vs white workers during the construction was totally different. US officials will sail to places like the DR, Jamaica and preach about working at the Canal and showing off well dressed Black men so the people would voluntarily leave their homes for work at a better future and then realized it was all a scam. They were paid much less, their living conditions were horrible and so on... This was all happening in the Canal Zone which was an unofficial US territory at the time , not even Panamanian citizens were allowed to be in the area unless you worked there, it was almost as if there was a country within a country.	Black	Ethnicity - Black	2/189	1.058
+Scott A With all due respect, I have to disagree. I would agree that comparatively, racism is far less openly prevalent than it was in the 1960's and prior. But to say "A white and a black man with similar skills, language, behavior, grooming and dress will 100 be treated equally in almost any conceivable situation," that simply is not true. I don't know what your racial background is or your geographic location, but that statement is purely your opinion based on your perspective, upbringing and geographic location within the States, but that does not make it a national reality. The fact is there are numerous studies about the racial discrepancies in prison sentencing for the similar criminal acts, racial discrepancies in hiring for certain positions, regardless of educational background, etc. I will say open racism is less prevalent in certain parts of America than others. People have a habit of labeling the United States as if every city is the same, but the fact is every city, state, etc. has a different history and different social realities for people who reside in them. Even within the same states, cities have very different cultures. Los Angeles and San Francisco for example are both in California, but are very different cities from each other and have different social realities based on that history. There are Americans who move from one region of the United States to another and have as much of a culture shock in the different lifestyles of different places as they would if they had moved to a foreign country. You can't say the social realities of a person in a city in the state of Illinois would be the exact same as the realities of someone in a city in Mississippi. While I would agree that media often fans racial flames, racial issues are still a difficult reality in many people's lives.	Black, Racism	Ethnicity - Black, Ethnicity - General	3/315	0.952

Nah, slavery was universal through history. In Europe is easy to have black friends, you forget they are black because they speak like you and have the same culture. There is no " black culture". You create a huge amount of your own problems, while you are almost all mixed with an average of 30 white DNA, so you are not 2 races, you still use the one drop rule which is abhorrent (the fact that you criticize mixed people for not saying they are black is totally not cool. They are the bridge of brotherhood between two worlds).The contribution of blacks in terms of family decomposition, despising English and replacing it with Ebonics (good luck becoming a neurosurgeon with that lexicon. Language is a tool you need to master in its most sophisticated form in order to create the most value) and stimulate a tribal separation instead of destroying that absurd apartheid you have that creates that "victimhood " so strange and characteristic of black Americans that at the same time is not seen remotely in other blacks in Europe and for Christ sake not even remotely comparable with blacks from Africa, who do not seen themselves as less. It is sad the narrative in the US is so wrong. Outside the US black and white Americans are just Americans, we hate you equally PS: Whites do their part too, but way less than you think (people get more nervous than truly racist (because you constantly remind them you are different). ”Racism” against whites is simply name calling and words, with little to no action or act of power against whites; racism against nonwhites has been and is more than just words or name calling and has had much greater devastating effects against nonwhites, even up to now. Racism, as you call it, against whites is no way comparable the other way around. It is largely systemic. Whites not only have a great rap sheet of hating, feeling, or saying hateful things about other races, but they have demonstratively made it clear about how they feel about nonwhites as well on a large scale, historically, and today! They have a history of harming nonwhites, whereas nonwhites history of harming white people is a drop in the bucket, not saying it’s right at all, but making such a comparison is a false equivalency. So when nonwhites begin to react from being on the receiving end of historical violence and hate from white people it is understandable of how it came about and what fuels it. I didn’t say it was right but understandable. It should be normal for nonwhites to hold white people in suspicion of anything they do or to have great distrust towards them.	Racism	Ethnicity - General	3/204	1.471

Tate, you promote racism , you are not stopping racism with your words. Advocating that there is a natural hierarchy of the races, is the text book example of racist thought.Your logic is basically that there would be less racism if more people started thinking like racists, or adopt racist ideology.There is no hierarchy between races, because there is only ONE human race . There are of course lots of different populations of people who can be distinguished by different markers, but there is no simply way to genetically categorize people into races, because humans are far too mixed.Of course you can tell the difference between extreme cases such as an Iclander and a Khosa. But there is no clear border where somebody goes from being white to being black . There are gradual transitions all the way. Povel Vieregg a lack of discrete boundaries doesn't negate the fact that there is a clear differentiation between some peoples. a lack of discrete boundaries doesn't negate the environmental conditions that different peoples developed in. a lack of distinct boundaries does not negate the fact that collectivising people of neighbouring ethnic groups is justified because of common traits held between them.by the way: i'm not trying to "solve" racism. i'm saying that there is no point in lying to ourselves and pretending that everyone is equal. that's not an innate inequality: i don't think that all indigenous europeans are inherently superior to everyone else because they are white; it's a superiority that has been allowed to develop and be learned and passed on for thousands of years because of the environmental conditions of europe. it's silly to expect people who have been living a completely alien lifestyle since humanity came about to behave as westerners would in a world created by the white man.	Alien, Common, Ethnic, Racism	Ethnicity - General, Nationality - General, Social Class - Working class	4/165	2.424
--	--------------------------------------	---	--------------	--------------

Tate, "a lack of discrete boundaries doesn't negate the fact that there is a clear differentiation between some peoples."That is the problem with you argument. The difference isn't CLEAR. You can't tell what genes somebody has for temper, intelligence, cooperativeness, creativity etc from just looking at their physical exterior such as skin color or hair style. Two people could have equal mix of black and white and look completely different on the outside. E.g. there are cases of white couples getting a black kid and blacks getting a white looking kid.Racism is about judging people on how they look on the outside, which has little to do with how they are on the inside. "a lack of discrete boundaries doesn't negate the environmental conditions that different peoples developed in"You show you didn't understand what I meant with discrete boundaries. Your problem is that you think that humans split into these separate groups which lived completely independent in a narrow geographical area developing particular traits. That is not how it worked. Sure people DID develop certain traits over time, such as Europeans got white around 10 000 years ago, which is fairly recent. But all along people were shuffled around and mixed all the time. Human migration and mixing happens at a faster pace than genes change. "by the way: i'm not trying to "solve" racism. i'm saying that there is no point in lying to ourselves and pretending that everyone is equal."That isn't my issue with racism. The problem isn't that people pretend we are all the same. The problem is racists pretending we are far more different than we ACTUALLY are. "i don't think that all indigenous europeans are inherently superior to everyone else because they are white; it's a superiority that has been allowed to develop and be learned and passed on for thousands of years because of the environmental conditions of europe."Western culture of course has had a strong edge over others, and I am not a cultural relativists. I do in fact hold the rather non-PC view that western culture is in sum superior to most other cultures. HOWEVER I don't associate that with whiteness as you seem to do. Culture doesn't get absorbed by genes. Until proven otherwise I would assume that blacks, asians, arabs or whoever who get raised in a western culture by western parents will be the same as white westerners.Of course we have to a very small degree been able to test that, because most non-whites in the west don't get raised by westerners and racism is still a potent enough force to push people down who look different.We do have historical precedence to suggest that they will likely be the same however. In earlier times when Irish, Jews and Italians faced a lot of racism in the US, they did poorer than others on most metrics. Irish were known as lazy, quarrelsome drunkards. In fact Irish were in the 1800s considered a lesser race then blacks by many. "Black man preferred, Irish need not apply" was not an uncommon sign in those days."it's silly to expect people who have been living a completely alien lifestyle since humanity came about to behave as westerners would in a world created by the white man."Why, the adopted kids raised by whites I know, have no obvious different behavior from whites.Your racist thinking is exactly there is a problem for people looking different to live together. raj pujara have you considered why they are more athletic? it's because they literally had to be to survive. the sub-saharan african was living 50,000 years behind the west before the european man steamrolled the entire continent. they are physically fit out of necessity because they had neither the brains or resources to create a system of mass agricultural and domesticated animal farming, and thus primarily had to hunt for sustenance.the european man is biologically superior in the sense that they have the ability to dominate the entire world while sub-saharan africans were living in mud huts. Tate don't contradict your statements , whatever the reason maybe Black men are more athletic but that doesn't mean they white men can't be sports men , this applies in academia too . There's so much wrong with your comment do you really think white people are 'allowed' to be racist towards black people these days?? There not! Not at all! For example, I watch late night talk shows very often. When a black person makes a 'joke' about a white person, everyone laughs uncontrollably. If a white person said a similar thing about a black person, they'd be booed and it would be really awkward. On to your next point... 'getting a taste of your own medicine'. Are you serious? The biggest point that Kaluuya was hinting at is that black artists seem to have to get big in America instead of England, meaning there is not much opportunity for black artists in England. True, if you compare the history with actors and musicians who made it big, U.S. seems to offer more opportunity than England. people have group mentality. they judge others by their group. if a certain group is accused of something bad, be prepared to be blamed for it. people can be grouped with some many way. easier ways to guess someones group is color and appearance. same happens when you point out your political view or religion. there will be an opposition and aggression from someone who has opposite view. so its just not racism its notion of judging by the groups. and that will never change. people will learn over time that racism is bad. but that fundamental group judging idea will never change. will find its way out always. its really hard to lean to judge people by their personally and not by their group that u might think they are part of. Tom Kopala you have just summed it up perfectly. I'm Nigerian and live in England but I have not actually experienced true racism , so I don't know how it feels to be looked upon negatively in such a way. However, when I go to places such as the USA, I just have this feeling of unease whenever I walk around and I have no idea what causes it. Perhaps it may be the rigid ideas of how bad I think racism is in America when it may not be as bad as I thought. I always got stared at a lot when I went on holiday to America as well and I don't know why? Maybe because I'm dressed better than most of the other black people they see? I'm not sure to be honest. Looking at this issue from a Scandinavian perspective, I'm bound to agree. For one thing, there is a very fluid sense of what it means to be Swedish, beyond having a social security number as a citizen. I don't even consider language a prerequisite. Racism is definitely a problem, but it's also not as overt and outspoken as in American culture. I generally believe people do try to not behave racist , and not just because there are anti-discrimination laws in place to stop the brunt of it. Of course not because the UK is 82 white. When the UK reaches the multicultural magnitude of the US (where whites will be a minority in 20 years), then race will be on the forefront of conversation in the UK too. It's not because minorities in the UK are satisfied with race relations, it's more than their voices aren't as heard as those in the US. The UK doesn't deal with a multicultural society at the magnitude experienced in the US. But systematic racism exists in the UK, and as the UK becomes increasingly multi-ethnic, the discrepancies become more apparent. We see it with the Brexit campaign and that's just the beginning. The reason racism is more 'overt' in America is because people are constantly talking about race 24/7/365 in an 'overt' fashion. It is a simple Newton's Third Law. The thing about Black Americans, is they keep talking about 'me, me, me, me, me', and really annoys the hell out of people. Nah as a European I can tell you I quickly observed in the US how racism is much more clearly expressed and acted upon by society there. You see it in how cops threat blacks. You see from how white friends talk about other "races". Of course racism varies a lot in Europe and many places are much worse than in the US. But at least in Scandinavia where I am from, we definitely have racism but it is less overt. One thing I notice e.g. in the US is how seldom it is for black -white couples in the US. You see that much more frequently here. I believe it is also changing in the US, but I had family members in the late 60s/early 70s who dated a black girl, but they could not make it work, because American society at the time was not accepting towards this combination. +13579hee People of certain racial groups carry certain traits. While a white man might not specifically say he is into white women, he might say that he is into blondes or redheads – features most often associated with white women. When black men of means often describe the women they are into, they will not only name traits but specifically mention races/ethnicities. When you follow them on social media, you will see everything but the woman that most closely resembles them. If a white man said he preferred women with darker skin or kinkier hair, that would be a way of him uplifting black women – or at the very least – a woman of color. There are some videos of black British men saying that they aren't into black women. However, the opposite also exist. I understand that colorism and such are symptoms of white supremacy. Part of the problem is that black men don't. They refuse to educate themselves and act like things just come out of nowhere, with no explanation. Then, they try to blame other people because they choose to be stupid.	Black, Woman	Ethnicity - Black, Gender - General	7/186	3.763

+The God hand Black men have been dating and marrying out more than black women since it's been recorded. Besides this, black men openly bash black women, while uplifting non- black women. On top of this, black men fail to do the things for their women – like promote them, provide for them, and protect them (and their kids) – that men of other races do. Furthermore, a lot of black men do mix races. It's just that those that tend to get married – less than half of the black male population in the U.S. – tend to marry black women. I know a lot of non- black women that will get with black men because they find them attractive, but these women don't take black men seriously because they don't have anything to offer.	Black	Ethnicity - Black	10/134	7.463
twistedblktrekie your initial comment was still a reach.And I'm confused as to what you mean when you say black men specifically mentioned race ... Because you haven't provided any real proof other than what you said.Besides, your initial comment almost implies that you would want black men to specify what races or ethnicities they want in women. You pretty much said you wanted them to say that they want black women. Now you're saying that they specifically mention race and somehow that's the problem LOLAnd like I said before when high-profile famous white men go on television and talk about their dream woman more than likely they name characteristics of women. That's something most people do. Most people say they want someone who's funny or someone who's caring for someone who's thoughtful.I fully understand the issue of black men dating outside of their race because of their own self-hatredBut..... Your initial comment was one hell of a reach and you attempted to position non-american blacks over African Americans even though this anti-blackness is rampant through all black communities across the Western world.And from what I can see just as many black women are self-heating is black men. It just so happens that black men have an easier Time dating outside the black community because black men have been hypersexualizing there many non black women who want to sleep with black men whether they care about said black men or not	African, Black, Race, Woman	Ethnicity - Black, Ethnicity - General, Gender - General	18/245	7.347

+13579 When I said black men specifically mention race , I'm talking about how they will say they specifically want Latinas (even though Latin people are an ethnic group) with long, curly hair or describe blondes and such. Dark-skinned black men like Kodak Black and Gilbert Arenas openly admit to not liking their own skin tone and wanting women that don't look like them. Marshawn Lynch is an educated football player, and even he has said he is into light-skinned and racially-ambiguous women. Gilbert has suggested that Lupita Nyong'o is ugly on multiple occasions. She is a highly-educated and intelligent woman that dates black men, talks about how awesome they are and refers to them as kings. You say that I'm trying to position non-American black men over black Americans. The thing you're not taking into consideration is that black men outside of America don't necessarily have the same value system that black American men do. One example is how black men allowed a racially-ambiguous man raised by white people, Colin Kaepernick, to be the face of the " Black Power" movement within the NFL. A black man that resembles those that unfairly get gunned down and such should have been the face of said movement. Beyond this, the only reason Colin has had the space to do all of the great work in has done is because of the Black Lives Matter moment, which was started by black women. +AlphaBlackAce Black American men (as a group) don't do the same things for their women (as a group) that men of other races do for theirs. Black American men also don't value the same things as non- black men (like marriage, education) and generally just seem to have lower standards for life.	Black	Ethnicity - Black	2/51	3.922

+AlphaBlackAce Here are just a few things. 1) Black American men do not promote phenotypically-looking black women (like Lupita Nyong'o or Danai Gurira). Whenever you see black men in the media (or even regular black guys), they tend to be with white or racially-ambiguous women. If you do a search on YT for something like "I love black women," the majority of videos are by mixed and other non-black men. There are a small handful of black guys that started posting videos, however. Even they admit they started doing it because black men don't promote black women, and it makes them look bad.2) Black men don't build or provide for black women. Black women start and own the majority of the businesses in the black community, according to the U.S. Census (60+). Black men also don't provide for black women. Part of the reason black men can't provide is because they are allergic to education. Black men don't seem to realize that we live in a technologically-based society, where degrees have become the standard. I'm from a small town in the south and live around a bunch of white people. The only thing they hire uneducated, black people for is fast food – and those jobs typically go to women. This is why you have so many black women going to school and bragging about their degrees and what not. Black American women make up approximately 70 of the black, educated population. If the black woman is poor, she basically knows that she has to go to school and possibly even start her own business to make it big. Where I live at (smaller town in the south), all of the medical doctors at my local hospital are black women. Black women going into healthcare of mental health is popular where I live. Because the black men are uneducated, they haven't found a space for themselves. Even when it comes to manual-labor jobs, white men prefer to hire other white men or Indigenous Mexicans (have a reputation for doing really good work, working hard, and working for less). The last time we hired a plumber (white), he said that his family had been doing it and construction for 3 generations. He said they keep it "all in the family." In truth, the Indigenous Mexicans have more opportunities (have their own restaurants in addition to getting hired to do manual labor) and are able to better provide than the average black man. It's sad.3) Black men don't value marriage – even though it's one of the easier ways for blacks to have access to capital). Other communities value the institution, and white people are more likely to lend a black, married couple money and all of that stuff. Yet, the majority of black American men (about 55) NEVER marry. If you think this is just a black man-black woman issue, it's not. Even when black men do get married and marry outside of their race, their divorce rates are in the 80+ percentile. The Census also tracks this. So, there are just a few examples. +AlphaBlackAce Your question points to your mentality and is part of the reason why the black community is in the state it's in – why no one respects black American men. We live in a patriarchal society, where men have an economic advantage over women and where men of other races promote, build, provide for, and protect their women and children. Black men want respect but refuse to do the things that men of other races do. The worst part is that they still expect black American women to do the same things for them that women of other races do for their men. It makes no logical sense.	Black	Ethnicity - Black	4/109	3.67
+AlphaBlackAce Everyone – man or woman – gains self-acceptance and respect through external, positive validation. It doesn't matter if it has to do with looks, intellect, or athletic ability. These things are validated through attracting other people deemed attractive, how well someone performs on tests or sports (in comparison to other people. Furthermore, how you feel about and carry yourself doesn't necessarily correlate to how people actually perceive and/or treat you. Blacks, especially, aren't necessarily seen as individuals – and this is coming from someone that grew up around a lot of whites in the south. It's kind of like how black people are constantly profiled for simply existing in certain spaces people don't believe we belong in.	Black, Woman	Ethnicity - Black, Gender - General	2/118	1.695

+Simran Rodh Black women don't get the same treatment as women of other races. Black men, as a whole, are the only group of men that don't uplift their own women. If they did, people seeing Chadwick Boseman and Lupita Nyong'o and Daniel and Danai together as love interests in Black Panther wouldn't have been such a shock. When John Boyega said his type was a "gorgeous, black woman " on a morning show, the hosts and audience were surprised. They didn't clap like they usually do. Bryan M A white man will say he is into blondes or red heads, which excludes certain groups of women. Furthermore, the white man doesn't need to say he is into white women because it is obvious. They are pushed as the standard of beauty. Black women, on the other hand, are actually told they are ugly, and so-called researchers even publish things that supposedly prove why this must be true. Even the black man is constantly uplifting the racially-ambiguous or non- black woman . Black men (rappers and athletes, specifically) come out and say how black women are ugly because they are dark-skinned. Heck, they abandon their kids even when they have them with non- black women. Black people didn't have much to do with the things you mentioned – except for maybe hip-hop. These things would exist – whether we supported them or not. There has even been research done that shows that most rap/hip-hop is purchased by whites (like 65).If it were only something consumed by blacks, the record labels wouldn't spend so much money in promoting it. It's actually the most popular genre of music now. Oh, I forgot something. You mentioned "anti-white" racism .1) Racism isn't just about not liking someone. It's about power and being able to affect someone's daily life. Blacks don't have that power – except maybe on Africa. 2) Let's say I am "anti white." mr mac Well said Mr Mac. No one will ever actually confront you on such an issue because it strikes too true to actually argue against. Of course, lets also not forget when White farmers take land, legally, and actually make it into something useful, whereas 99 of the land is left to ruin out of neglect, but then Blacks suddenly want that tiny 1 for themselves and end up throwing the entire farm away and begging for whites to come back once they have fallen in famine. When you are standing for something and have thought it out so poorly you are begging the very people you ran out to come back, your race and your political ideals are a joke at that point. Comparing the racism that whites face in African nation to the racism that happens in the UK or the US is absurd. Totally different context and different situations. And to think that the racism that whites faced in the UK and the US is anywhere comparable to the racism that blacks faced in these nations is frankly, absurd. It's not comparable. There are centuries of oppression through slavery and/or colonization to cover. Not to say that racism against whites doesn't exist, and they are being discussed elsewhere. In this video they're asking specifically about racism against blacks in the UK vs the US. I'm sure there are other discussions about racism against whites, they covered this topic multiple times on The View and other channels. But nowhere have I seen that anyone dared to say that the subtle racism that they experienced is anywhere comparable to the oppressed minorities, because that would be born out of plain ignorance. Black Goliath, "Mugabe TOOK BACK what was his to take back. That's not racism you fool." No that isn't right. If we are to excuse our actions based on past injustices indefinitely, there will never be peace. That is why the Yugoslav civil war happened. People could not get over the injustices of the past. Not to mention that grabbing white farm land in Zimbabwe was momentarily stupid. They took farm land from people with long experience in running farms well and gave them to people with zero experience causing an agricultural collapse in Zimbabwe. Of course I am totally open to broker some sort of settlement over past injustices. E.g. if too much of the land is held by whites, then negotiate some sort of compromise where they have to give away parts of the land or there is a transition period, where they get some compensation and have to train blacks to farm the land. It makes no sense to be so preoccupied with "justice" that you do things which lead to "justice" along with more abject poverty. White Europeans sure colonized and exploited Africa, but they also built up infrastructure and industries which they knew how to manage. It was very stupid to kick out the people who knew well how to manage things effectively. It caused severe economic decline for many African countries. A better approach would be to try to find some compromise. Tell whites, you can stay, but you need to share and help us build a better future. You don't undo a wrong with another wrong. Anyone here who thinks racism is 'overdone' or that they don't really face it or should get over it, please just see the situation you are in. You think a black person discussing his personal experiences with race relations for A SINGLE MINUTE too much. You think it's silly that he basically says racism sucks. Which it does. And you don't want to give him the time of day to say that? He's faced it, not you. If someone was in a natural disaster, or an abusive home, or suffered with debilitating health conditions, you wouldn't tell them to shut up, it's not a problem and to get over it.So how can you dismiss this? "You think it's silly that he basically says racism sucks"Thats one thing of a few things he said, he also said that racism is systemic which is an idea that's completely debunked over and over again. But thats all it takes to be called a racist nowadays, one dissenting opinion that goes against that narrative and you're some evil person. No wonder theres so many racists if thats all it takes to be one. And to clarify, racism does suck. I would give him all the time of day to say what he wants, doesnt mean i wont have an opinion about it. In fact im glad he's able to say what he wants, that's free speech in action. JJ Alfred hey, I think that's good then. I don't mind people who say 'I believe this is happening in society etc' but I have a real issue with those in the comments which think this video has no place. I've also never seen 'systematic' to mean specifically law, I've always seen it as a constant disadvantage to black people that means they can never catch up to equality. In several areas (this is less prominent today than say ten years ago) there are systems in place and social norms that end up putting black people on an unequal playing field and a lot of white people (because they don't notice) think it doesn't exist.I just feel I can't really speak for those experiences I have not had, and I have to have faith that they don't lie about those experiences and trust that those issues exist. Pittsburgh Bear The prison industrial system that has become repurposed slavery (see 13th documentary on Netflix), the War On Drugs which the CIA confirmed was initiated to target black communities and is still effecting to this day, segregation in the housing market intensified by gentrification, police brutality, job discrimination, I could go on and on, but it's gonna be easy to dismiss it if you don't experience it yourself, which you won't if you're not black . But you could literally talk to any black person about it and they'll go into their personal experiences for you, you just have to take the time and listen. Or you could just use Google	Black	Ethnicity - Black	3/111	2.703
---	-------	-------------------	-------	-------

GoliathWarfare the prison system affects people actually convicted of crimes. There are way more blacks not in prison. You want to know how they got there? They didn't commit a crime. It really isn't that hard.War in Drugs, same thing. And you do realize that they "target" black communities because they are more likely to actually do those things. And don't you dare say something like, "well they can't help it," or, "it's because of their situation." That's true racism if you think they don't have the will power not to commit a crime.There is no "segregation" in the housing market. That comes down to wealth, which surprisingly, black people can aquire if they don't fall "victim" to the above. It's literally illegal to deny someone housing simply because of skin color.Police brutality isn't just a black issue. That's kinda racist if you don't think whites also have problems with individual cops. But that also not a "systematic" issue even if most of the black shootings were caused by racism(which they aren't). Most are because the person has a gun and/or is fighting officers. If you just comply and are taken to court, but you've done nothing wrong, you'll be released and probably given money if you sue for false imprisonment. Unless you happen to think that our entire justice department is racist too. But somehow, I don't doubt that you do.Job discrimination isn't "systematic."(you know like he talking about in the video) You're crazy if you believe 99.9 of employers are racist and that there aren't some whites out there facing the exact same thing. Even if it somehow is magically "systematic," if affects way less black people, even in their entire lifetimes, then you care to believe?"...which you wouldn't if you're not black." What a racist and assuming comment. In a single sentence you assume only blacks can experience racism, assume whites haven't, and (the biggest one) assume that because I disagree with what the person said, that I'm white. Oh you also assume that if I was, I couldn't possibly know what racism feels like."But you could literally talk to any black person..." So if they don't agree with this, then what. I don't, what now? You just breezed over the fact that the CIA (a government agency) targeted BLACK communities while trying to argue that systematic racism isn't real. Why haven't you bothered to ask why the CIA was doing this to American citizens???It gets better... You argue it's racist to say black people can't help taking drugs but it's somehow not racist to say blacks are more likely to do drugs??? Why do you believe that black people more likely to do drugs? Do you think they have a biological predisposition for drug addiction? So, what are your thoughts on the Opioid "Crisis"? Would you say Caucasians now more likely to abuse drugs? Why do you think there's suddenly so much sympathy for drug addicts now that it's become a white problem? Why does the government suddenly want to legalize drugs and open government-funded drug dens so degenerates can get high in a safe environment with clean needles? You think it has nothing to do with race ? Why are black men receiving harsher sentencing than their white counterparts who commit the same crime? Why was weed bad when it was a black thing, but legalised now that it's a white thing? The drug and its effects haven't changed, so why the sudden shift?I'm not expecting a knowledgeable answer. Pittsburgh Bear ok I'm going to go through and respond to your comments one by one. I would like to first start off by saying as I've thoroughly read your messages I hope you read mine and realize I'm trying to have a discussion based on fact but at the same time I can only speak about my experiences as a black woman in America. In general there are more people out of prison than in, but that's just common fact that not everyone is a criminal or gets caught. With that being said 1 in 5 black people are jail. You know how many black people have been falsely accused and jailed? You know how many have been released. It is naive to say that all black are in jail for the sole reason of committing a crime. I know it's hard to wrap your head around but I literally just witnessed to black men being arrested in Starbucks for waiting for their friend. Mind you they're two real estate brokers minding their business, but the manager and barista were uncomfortable which is an exact quote and called the cops. The criminal justice system is supposed to convict those who have committed a crime, but it's definitely not always effective. Their are people who get away with crimes, and people who are wrongly imprisoned because they can't afford a decent lawyer or trumped up charges.I'm not sure if you're aware of what the war on drugs actually is based off your statement but I'll assume you realize it's the American govt way to put an end to illegal drug trade and discourage people from using drugs. It's never been particularly effective except in the way that it's targeted black people. We can go back as far as the Nixon administration to his aides admitting that the war on drugs targeted black people. The war on drugs is the progenitor for our lopsided criminal justice system. The contra cocaine trafficking during the Raegan administration is another way the war of drugs targeted black communities. Drugs were literally taken by the CIA our if one country and shipped into the Bay Area and introduced into black communities. Then black men were arrested and imprisoned at disproportionate rates because of bill Clinton. To say that black people are more likely to do drugs is false. There is literally no scientific evidence supporting your claim that black people are more likely to do crack or any other drug. So I would like to see your support for such a statement. Also this is the first of many times that you deem something as racist that's not actually racist which leads me to believe that you don't understand the definition. Racism is the belief in the superiority of one race over another, which often results in discrimination and prejudice towards people based on their race or ethnicity. Although now a days we see it more in an ideological form from views left over from or systematically with policies like war on drugs. Systematically isn't exclusive to laws and policies I've experienced it more at the institutional level. Gentrification exists so their is segregation in the housing market. That is a well known fact. Only 10 of people in the United States leave their socioeconomic status to a higher one. That means 90 of people stay the same or go lower. That's all Americans not just black folks. If you look at that 10 that leave their socioeconomic status for a better one 8.4 of those numbers are Asians and Caucasians. Only 1.3 is black. In a population of 326 million people in which 13.3 of those people	Black, Common, Ethnicity, Race, Racism, Racist, Woman	Ethnicity - Black, Ethnicity - General, Gender - General, Social Class - Working class	44/1316	3.343

Just to be clear, I'm only speaking from my experience as a black man living in the UK. The USA is totally different and I have a problem with the fact that black people here think it is appropriate to compare themselves to African-Americans.	Black	Ethnicity - Black	2/44	4.545
suleydaman I'm not sure how racism can be totally different? If you mean the scale of racism , then yes, racism in the UK is not at the scale or magnitude as the US. However, racism in the UK is very much systematic and filters through in a clandestine approach. You might not have police shooting you dead in your car unarmed, but you certainly as a black person are being profiled. I also think its easy to over look that unless you live in a major city or diverse town that racism is more rife outside those cities. You have towns within the UK that are racially divided.	Black, Racism	Ethnicity - Black, Ethnicity - General	6/108	5.556

”However, racism in the UK is very much systematic and filters through in a clandestine approach”I don’t like this type of thinking. You’re basically just asserting that there 100 is a racist boogeyman out there, even if we can’t measure his effects, and that I should just trust your intuition. It’s exactly this intuition that I’m resisting!You’re right, I do live in a big city and perhaps racism is worse outside. It most likely is. How much worse and whether even that is worth discussing is a separate issue however. But here is what I do know: Most black people, and the sort of people that complain about racism like Kaluuya does, grow up in the big cities anyway!I grew up in a very multicultural area and I can tell you that, sadly, many of the kids that had disciplinary problems or were involved in gang culture were black students. Black people all know that one of the biggest issues in the black community is the lack of good male role models for the young men. Unfortunately, without fathers to set an example, they end up admiring and inspiring to be the gangsters they know from the ghetto streets. I’ve seen it happen numerous times. But this isn’t an exclusively black issue (although it is a particularly big issue amongst blacks) as we have the same problems with white working class ”chavs” too. In fact, here in the UK, the worst performing group at educational attainment are white working class boys! What kind of a racist society is that?With regards to the police profiling, I’ve never been stopped by the police and neither have any of my black friends. I assume that’s because I don’t look like I’m causing trouble. My point is that, just because black people are dis-proportionally stopped by the police, it doesn’t mean that the police are being racist if you take into account the fact that gang culture, which is exactly what police profiling is fighting against, is dis-proportionally black. If you go to the north of England where there are a lot of white working class people and a similar youth gang culture, you will find the same disdain for the police albeit without the racial component. There they talk about it from a class struggle perspective instead. Let me give you another example. Let’s say that south east Asian people are dis-proportionally arrested for human trafficking. Does that mean the police are racist or that south east Asians dominate the human trafficking trade?	Black, Racism, Racist	Ethnicity - Black, Ethnicity - General	15/424	3.538

Pittsburg Bear it is because of people who think like you that racism still exists; the problem is that you are not willing to understand and chooses to deny what is blatantly apparent; you support racism and don't even know it; you can be whatever race that you are and have an opinion; you can be a black person who hasn't experience it; it doesn't mean that it doesn't exist; your opinion is not fact, racism is; just as their is still discrimination against women, the poor, and other minorities; some of them are successful and have overcome and some may have never experienced discrimination but it still exists	Black, Race, Racism	Ethnicity - Black, Ethnicity - General	5/109	4.587

Aidan Proctor this comment is almost incoherent so I'll do my best to appropriately respond. I'm a lesbian, and I've made an effort to do a lot of personal research on the history of LGBT+ folk and all they've gone through, their triumphs etc. I never would've guessed half of it. Before I realised I was gay, I probably wouldn't have cared enough or really responded to it. Sometimes it's hard to take things seriously or give them any weight when you can't relate. So what I find odd is how dismissive you are of racism as a problem- yet you are SO dismissive of POC talking about their experiences in the world. You have NO RIGHT to tell anyone you don't believe or consider their life experience. Plain and simple, for not giving POC credit for the hardships they go through on a daily basis (people assuming they're violent, cops being biased, people like you being dismissive) you are a racist. You do the best you can in life with what you have, you try to be as fair as possible and you move on. Because thinking that it will somehow make things better(in fact most times it just accomplishes the opposite..look at USA, always talk about racism and it's only getting worse not better) just shows how deluded you are and how little you know about human beings(both from historical and psychological perspective).	Racism	Ethnicity - General	1/150	0.667

Ello I am inclined to disagree. Staying silent didn't get women the vote, it didn't abolish slavery, it didn't stop Rutherford from splitting the atom. Whether it's about justice or scientific progress we HAVE to speak up. I just don't think it's very nice for you to just accept the world as it is, I think that's a real shame. If people making movies like Black Panther, etc helps bring awareness then that would make the world a more understanding place. Hate is a learned behaviour!!We can eradicate it within a few generations, as kids only become intolerant when their parents raise them that way. It absolutely can change for the better and I've had personal experience with me becoming more tolerant through people like Daniel speaking up. Why do some white people get intimidated or defensive when black people talk about racism ? They're not saying all white people are racist , and just because we weren't slaves doesn't mean we're not affected by it today. I feel as though if you've never been oppressed, you can not have input on those who are actually oppressed. Those who don't face racism can have little or no comprehension in how it manifests its ugly head on a daily basis so are quick to disbelieve those that do. Sara Dickson what do you mean he's faced it and not you? If you're white in a big city you've felt racism !!! Its just that white people aren't conditioned to look at bad things that happen to them as racism ! That's a bigger problem to me is that we can't have a conversation about race because none whites refuse to acknowledge their own racism towards people who are of a different ethnicity ! On a side note just because something bad has happen to you doesnt mean it comes from a place of racism . that's what real equality is, people can be a jerk to you and it has nothing to do with the pigmentation of your skin and without proof you have no right to blame racism . This is an issue that surpass American culture and society, that surpasses black Americans/African americans a lot of you all don't even know how DIVERSE black people are around the globe yet we constantly get thrown into a one label fits all category. I keep telling black people y'all are wasting your time trying to talk sense into these people...I mean look at these comments, I'm not even surprised at all the dismissive, condescending and aggressive behavior coming from some of you? Why? That's already expected.And before you guys come for me I am not African American, my parents are immigrants from Haiti. There are a lot of black AMERICAN stereotypes that many black foreigners like West Indians, Africans, etc. Can NOT relate to and almost virtually doesn't exist in other black cultures. You guys need to be more mindful about how y'all approach the conversation because blacks in general don't understand each other and are trying to have conversations among ourselves. Some of you come and think you are being constructive and adding something to the discussion when in reality you all are just adding more fuel to the fire thinking it's water making everything worse. I am from the hood but I did not allow the environment to condition me to who I would grow up to become. I don't see myself as a victim, I see myself as a warrior, a spiritual being just navigating through this world learning and observing and just happen to share this planet with some VERY low vibrational beings as seen here. I'd be more than happy to just drop it all and ride the 'equality' train...funny how we speaking on equality and not equity...(that's a conversation I wanna see)but we are clearly not ready for that and it painfully shows I hope we can get to that time where we are all TRULY, AUTHENTICALLY, GENUINELY equal and not some wool over our eyes type of mess because some of you are a little TOO tight....almost like you don't truly care for change, you just don't want to hear about it anymore just because it makes YOU feel uncomfortable which is understandable from a human standpoint but it doesn't make it right. I would say black people should just drop it in exchange that you all drop, forfeit your privileges	African, Black, Brownie, Racist	Ethnicity - Asian (South-India, Pakistan, Bangladesh), Ethnicity - Black, Ethnicity - General, Nationality - Hispanic	14/672	2.083

If you can't achieve something as an individual, the easiest way is to identify yourself with the majority, in this case white majority.Racism exist, but it has nothing to do with race, it is just an inner conflict between "wishes and reality". In my country there is no racism, but nationalism. I think that, the more media talk on this topic, the more people are turning into racist, and that is their goal.	Nationalism, Nothing, Race, Racism, Racist	Age - Youngsters, Ethnicity - General, Nationality - General	6/74	8.108

Pittsburgh Bear First, if someone commits a crime that doesn't mean they deserve to be shot meaning you can't justify their deaths for being criminals. Second, black people are several times more likely to die in police shootings than white people. Third, a policemen's job is to protect, and the actions of a few have put enough fear into the black community that they fear every encounter with them.	Black	Ethnicity - Black	2/69	2.899
YoSmellLikePoop I don't think they are saying they deserve to be killed on a moral scale, but that's how the US seems to work unfortunately where if you slip up you are at risk of being killed. Plus it would help if less black people put themselves in stupid situations weren't involved in as much crime weren't involved in so much crime which then wrongly affects other black people who haven't done anything wrong but are consequently treated cautiously.	Black	Ethnicity - Black	2/79	2.532
Black people are putting themselves in stupid situations all the time???? These Black people are in communities that are over policed. What does that mean? Well, Say there is a total of 10 cops for two neighborhoods. One neighborhood is white. One neighborhood is predominantly Black. The crime rate is the same in both. Police will target the Black neighborhood and send 7 out of the 10 cops there rather than sending an equal amount to both neighborhoods. More cops around = more interactions with the cops. And with them assuming the worst about Black people due to their racial bias, that means more tension based interactions. Please look up the case of Amadou Diallo. Racial bias has made it so cops have lost common sense and killed people without provocation. And because they face no reprimands for their bad behavior, they don't feel the need to self-correct.	Black, Common	Ethnicity - Black, Social Class - Working class	6/148	4.054

You're a dumb loser who is too dumb to look at statistics, white people are killed more often per encounter with police and research shows that police are more likely to kill white people in the same situations.	Dumb	Physical Identity - Physical (and Mental) Impairments	2/38	5.263
Megin white people are also statistically much more likely to be engaged in a crime per "encounter with police." With cops randomly pulling over black men that deludes the statistic. monokhem you are right. Because police actually use police work when they interact with white people and have things like probable cause. For black people, just because they feel like it, they pull them over. Racial bias has led them to interact with black people more when statistics shows that their interactions with white people are way more fruitful in stopping crime or stopping someone committing a crime. Matthew Spencer EVEN IF African Americans commit a disproportionate amount of crime(which I'm not sure whether your statement is true or not) that doesn't mean the majority of that crime would have necessitated lethal force. Many African Americans are in jail for weed possession or intent to distribute drugs. Just because someone is committing a crime does not make it right that they are being killed. Also your statement doesn't even begin to address the hundreds of years of systematic and overt racism placed at the African American community. Jim Crow was only abolished 54 years ago and clearly racism is still very present in America today and because of this it might be easier for those communities to turn to crime due to lack of funding for basic services like education and child care and as fizzychizzy said African American communities are more policed whether or not that's due to a real threat or not is very unlikely(see super predators in the 90s). Allan Reford it is, take 10 seconds to look up the FBI stats. And yes, my statement kind of does address it. person906 "laws are more subtle" So you literally can't name a single one. You keep bringing up Stop & Frisk when none of those laws actually name race . You still haven't answered my question. The reason Blacks and Latinos get stopped more is because they're disproportionately part of gangs and single mother homes. You keep ignoring the part where people choose to break the law and instead treat them like they have no choice in the matter.	Race	Ethnicity - General	1/77	1.299
but they were innocent? so they didn't break any laws? And I don't care about your question. Bear in mind systematic racism is not the same thing as racist laws, systematic/institutionalized racism is the general practice of racism done by social and political institutions (google will give you the same definition). The police kill an extremely disproportionate amount of black people (and CHILDREN)). Local governments let these officers keep their jobs, often not giving them anything more than probation. I could give more examples but it doesn't look like you went into this with open mindedness. You really want to keep your opinion and honestly theres not a whole lot some random internet dude like me can do about that. Have a nice day buddy.	Black, Racism, Racist	Ethnicity - Black, Ethnicity - General	5/125	4.0
person906 Of course you won't answer my question. So by your logic the system is clearly sexist against men. The VAST majority of people killed by the police are men. The vast majority of homeless are men. The vast majority of conviction rates are men. The vast majority of suicides are men. The vast majority of drug convictions are men. Any race problem you can think of is far less important than Systematic Sexism . I'm using your logic against you. You see disproportionate outcomes and ASSUME it's because of racism . Asians make more money than Whites? RACISM! Black women enter college more frequently than Latin Women? RACISM! Iranian-Americans are more successful than Indian-Americans? Clearly it's Racism . You're basically a conspiracy theorist with no actual evidence of your assumptions. But somehow there was a great white Illuminati meeting to keep blacks down, because the truth of it all is too much for you to bear. You don't actually have the balls where it counts, I offered you an alternative that would actually get results. Do you support the repeal of gun laws that disproportionately effect Minorities? How do you answer? "I don't have to!" Pathetic.	Black, Race, Racism, Sexism	Ethnicity - Black, Ethnicity - General, Gender - General	7/194	3.608

nah I just stopped because you're ignoring everything I'm saying anyway. But as a practice lemme let you know that Stop and Frisk is something done all over the US without necessarily the same name or even any name regardless of which race (which in new york was admittedly mostly black and hispanic people) has the guns.But one more thing! YES! Men being negatively effected in the ways you listed actually IS a result of sexism ! Women are perceived as less likely to commit a crime because they're "too weak" and this indirectly harms men. Men also do not have support systems for mental illness because of toxic masculinity, which is basically the male version of sexism but mostly self-inflicted. As for the other stuff, I can speak for asian people tending to make more money than white people because we are culturally raised to not put focus on hobbies and artistic passions and focus on a job that makes money while white parents are more likely to support their kid's decision regardless of the field. Man despite all the hate you seem to have within you I love you and I hope you have a great day. Jaybird J I'm not sure whether you're aware or not but men biologically have less stress and love hormones than women do. It's the entire reason they don't show emotion as much as women do. Transmen going through hormone therapy have gone on record that they are aware of how less inclined to emotionality they are when they're taking Testosterone. The idea that society makes men be less emotional completely ignores the science of Evolutionary Biology. Furthermore Men also have different biological pleasure receptors than women do. When women are rewarded for being caregivers they receive far more pleasure hormones than if they become breadwinners. For example women entering advanced fields in Law drop out at enormous rates at around age 30 because they don't find pleasure in it. It's also why women enter nursing, teaching, and other such fields in far bigger numbers than men. Men are breadwinners because they are more Darwinistically crafted to be the breadwinners.You can try to change "societal standards" all you want, but you won't defeat 2 million years of EVOLUTION.	Age	Age - General	1/178	0.562
Isaac Asimov although I'm not your dictionary, I will. He means it's in the sense that it's a sub- conscious bias. As in if they have the choice between a black person and a white person to do various roles, the white person will, most of the time, be chosen. This happens across the board, and though it is not voiced or done in an outspoken and purposefully spiteful way in the UK, it is still tangible and there. In this way it becomes systematic. It's not necessarily supported by ANY law, that's not what he was saying.	Black	Ethnicity - Black	1/98	1.02
Mute LarsOrhougbe4 You're not naming anything regarding law which would make it systematic. That's fine, let's unpack Unconscious Bias then.The Unconscious Bias test invented by Harvard Research Chair Mahzarin Banaji is an immensely faulty test. I can take the test one day and have a completely different result even when retaking the test minutes later. So even the idea of "Unconscious Bias" can't have a scientifically proven basis.But let's say that it did, do you think majority of people are racist ? Because that's your whole point, minorities are kept down because people are racist . In order for you to believe that you have to admit that majority of people are racist .As for your "black name/white name" bit. What's a black name? Isaac asimov that is because there are no laws. Some people are victims but it does not tell a whole story. I am black lived in africa, canada and now in usa. Isaac Asimov It's not the laws themselves that are racist . But it is exactly how they enforced that is racist . In Michigan, a bunch of white racists assembled on a school campus with confederate flags to taunt minority students. Threats were made and the school had to be closed down. But not one law enforcement officer was involved. Now imagine if a cadre of black students assembled on a school campus taunt and vilify and insult the minority white students who attended that school, waving their black flag and ... oh wait. Joanny Kramer we absolutely need to unite as one. Sara Dickson okay when you say 'them' are you reffering to just black people or all nationalitites because im pretty certain there have been people of other races that are prejudice.... for myself i have a few experiences. Just because im light skinned but almost 100 completely Hispanic ive been frowned upon for being light skinned and being told how i should be ashamed of myself for something my realitives had NOTHING to do with, infact they were in Mexico and Italy at the time. So what youre saying is we need to keep pleadin forgiveness and sorrow to black people for what has happened to them in another sad part of human history? The Egyptians have been enslaved, the Irish were enslaved, the list goes on and on. And the more we hold on to these sorrows then the more likely we seperate ourselves as a society. Think about this stuff instead of saying 'we need to acknowledge the pain and suffering white people have caused against blacks we need to trust them with this and that etc...' ofcourse we trust them. And thats why theres a difference between learning history so that way it never repeats itself and just plain simply seperating yourself as a human being to feel sorry for another group. We need to stop saying 'im white and im sorry for what we did' then you just excluded yourself from even being considered as a united human on this earth. Joanny Kramer I absolutely agree that so many cultures, religions and ethnicities have been persecuted against in major ways. For me I think the important thing is acknowledging what has occurred. We can't simply 'move on' and start fresh without making up for what we have done. When I was in school in Germany, I found out that they had classes where they were taught not to feel guilty about what their predecessors have done, and that those atrocities are not their burden to bear. They've done all they can to make sure their modern society is a more united one. So when you see Germans commenting on how crazy the Trump ordeal is and how those Americans that vote for him can't see how their falling right into the situation the german people found themselves in in the rise of world war 2, that's what I mean. We need to seek forgiveness before we can move on and unite otherwise this is what we see happening. The german civilisation have learned never to allow that again. Many Americans have not. They hated anyone who was a slave, no matter the color. They beat, killed, insulted blacks, whites, asians... MisterCovek you brought it as your argument so Ok sure. And look how that's been overcome. Racism still exists but it's not where it was, which shows that they can coexist but we're not there yet where we can fully, and especially not if we 'send them back where they came from', as 'some' people say. And it's human history because that was the early stages of it. Look at the recent introduction and development of an actual society, humanity has evolved and therefore so will it's history. And the point is that I doubt the native Americans were brought over by your Europeans you talk about for them to then have their land stolen and way of life wiped out, and that doesn't justify it happening and especially reinforces that it shouldn't happen again	Racism	Ethnicity - General	1/135	0.741
+sugabudYou'll never get rid of, what you call, " racism ". This is about as low as you're going to get. But it still represents a huge problem in western countries. It's human nature. It's tribalism. Unless we all become one big race , which only proves my point.You didn't get my point about the "true native American". Europeans didn't bring them there. The oldest skull that was found is of Syberian origin. So it means, a long time ago, people who probably looked white were there before the today's version of natives. And when the natives came from Asia, they won their land. Fair and square. My point was that the whole "land was stolen" argument isn't a good one. If you look back enough, you'll always find some people who were conquered. And that's it. That's what happens.	Race, Racism	Ethnicity - General	2/139	1.439

Black skinned human beings may have suffered 'Racism' for the longest time but the tides are turning guided by hope and goodness. Though unfortunately it's newest victim are Muslims. I think whatever we do to eradicate it, this creature is a combination created by nature first and then human beings and it will always find it's new preys. It's the ultimate apex predator of this world because we are the ones who feed it. May be it's us who don't want it killed. After all, who wants someone else but the sky above them. Hey listen, I'm no sympathizer. Just stating the facts is all. From ancient civilizations to the Western colonies, people of all races have been enslaved but you'll find that the African people (so called savages) are the most common in all the Millenniums. Anyways, I was trying to emphasize on the term 'RACISM' in modern history.	African, Common	Ethnicity - Black, Social Class - Working class	2/56	3.571

Muslims are not a race ,genius	Race	Ethnicity - General	1/5	20.0

Para Soul In regards to Islam, by majority, there tends to be a correlation between race and religion. Muslims in general come from a specific part of the world by majority, just like Christians by majority reside in a specific part of the world. Yes, people of different religions live amongst people from all corners of the world but it's a very small percentage of people. And yes, there is a minority population of white muslims, but they do not face the same level of prejudice as muslim people originating from north Africa or the middle east. In general, if a person has physical characteristics of a middle eastern or a north african , some people will sub-consciously make associations to terrorists and muslims. Yeah, you're technically right, muslims are not a race . However, Muslims do experience racism and so do people of middle eastern decent, thanks to a small minority carrying abhorrent acts upon innocent people. "Muslim" is not a race , nor is it racist to hate or discriminate towards someone for being a Muslim. You'd be correct in calling in discrimination, but it is not racism . Do not mix the two together, especially when being Muslim is a choice and your ethnicity is not. A correlation means literally nothing . "there is a minority population of white muslims, but they do not face the same level of prejudice as muslim people originating from north Africa or the middle east" Do you have any information to back this claim up? MrDegradingChimp but thats not how ignorance works.ignorance has taught many in the western world to view muslims as all brown people, and you have to admit to yourself,apart from africans- brown people have the most number of muslims within their race . If you are Sikh, theyll call you a terrorist , if you are Hindu, they will call you a terrorist , if you are a brown aethist theyll tell you to go back to your country and stop blowing things up-the correlation is very strong/attack against muslims is racism .	Race, Racism, Terrorist	Ethnicity - General, Religious Identity - Muslim	4/88	4.545

Literally none of your points make any sense what so ever. It doesn't matter at all if many people believe all brown people are muslims, it doesn't make it a race . It means literally nothing what race a religion's followers predominately are. "If you are Sikh, theyll call you a terrorist , if you are Hindu, they will call you a terrorist , if you are a brown aethist theyll tell you to go back to your country and stop blowing things up-the correlation is very strong/attack against muslims is racism ." What on Earth are you saying? That has no relation to your previous point at all. Who's "they"? and how does calling a Sikh a terrorist , prove that attacks towards muslims are racist ? Look, it is an undeniable fact, discrimination towards muslims is NOT racist . Is it racist to call someone a terrorist due to the colour of their skin? Yes, if you call a middle-eastern a terrorist purely based off his colour, it's racist . Is it racist to call a muslim a terrorist just because he follows Islam? No, it is. You would however be discriminating and a bigot. Not really relevant, but "ignorance has taught" is probably the most funny oxymoron I've seen in a while. Then I suggest you stop calling yourselves Muslims and correctly address yourselves as Arabs/Arab identified. Seeing as muslims are not a single race what due to their originators, the arabs, going on hoards of massacring raids enslaving people from to North Africa, Spain, Eastern Europe, and now not forgetting the muslims of Indonesia invading West Papua and carrying out a still ongoing genocide.When muslims admit their really arab imperialists hiding behind a destructive political ideology they call a religion. It was not my intention to create a chaos or any disrespect to any one. Just a century ago, this world was not the same for any of the people that I've mentioned. And it's very unfortunate that the main intent of my comment has been misunderstood and turned into another ground for a racial and ethnic battle. Besides, did I mention any one responsible for all this? Then why are you people getting so butt hurt? And I apologize if my way of addressing black people has truly offended you (to everyone). And flake452 here just gave more proof of what I was trying to say. It was no hate post, ladies and gentlemen. Good points but Ethnicity and Race are not the same thing, for example, people assume being Latino is a race when its an ethnicity and ignore the fact Latinos can be any race !	Ethnicity, Race	Ethnicity - General	5/33	15.152
yr right, being Latino isnt a race . But i just wanted to add that this doesnt stop people who look "stereotypically" latino(sometimes even brown asians) from receiving a very distinctive type of racism (called immigrants/ racist latino jokes) compared to black latinos, who people may just assume are african american. In this way latino-just like african - ends up socially being viewed as one race -when it just an ethnicity (even latino media promotes this by whitewashing telenovelas). When people are making racist African jokes, they usually arent referring to Indian (brown)Africans or European(white)Africans. They are talking about black people. whether those black people are american, latino, asian or european usually doesnt matter to racists	African, Black, Ethnicity, Indian, Race, Racism, Racist	Ethnicity - Black, Ethnicity - General, Ethnicity - Native- American	10/109	9.174

Pittsburgh Bear 1. Do more research on racism being systematic.2. Prejudice against white people is not oppressing them in any way. So to say that racism is the same thing as prejudice is wrong. Prejudice and discrimination are similar terms and are sometimes used within the definition of racism but these terms cannot be used interchangeably. Simply put, racism =oppression, and thus it is not possible to be racist to Whites. Whites are in no way oppressed by the color of their skin. That is reverse racism , which is complete BS (or atleast in my opinion). And Mr. Bear, if you have anything else to say, good luck because I'll be living my life whereas you are living yours in the comment section of YouTube. Have a nice day. Julissa V "Do more research on racism being systematic." Look up the definition of racism , again."Prejudice against white people is not oppressing them in any way." So if a black person doesn't hire or serve someone just for being white, then that's not racism . And in what way are black people oppressed that whites also can't experience?"Simply put, racism =oppression, and thus it is not possible to be racist to Whites." HAHAAHAHAHA"Whites are in no way oppressed by the color of their skin." Neither are blacks. For something to be oppressive, it has to be "systematic," not just one person being mean because of your skin. What systems are in place that disadvantage blacks simply because of their skin."That is reverse racism , which is complete BS (or atleast in my opinion)." You mean racism . Something is either racist , or it isn't. There's no such thing as, "reverse- racism ." HAHAAHAHA"I'll be living my life whereas you are living yours in the comment section of YouTube." HAHAAHA Right, because it's not like I don't have notifications on and can respond when I have 5 minutes to spare. What, do you think I'm just refreshing the page waiting for someone to respond? That's pretty funny if you do.Judging by your ignorant comments, I'm guessing you're a high schooler whose only source of news is Twitter, is responding during class, and acting like she has something better to do when she knows that's not true. I'd recommend staying in school and actually learning what words mean. Ask your english teacher what racism means.
