I fell like more people told the cashier on the black persons because he is black but that is my opinion	Black	Ethnicity - Black	2/21	9.524
The title should say WHITE woman and black man.	Black, Woman	Ethnicity - Black, Gender - General	2/9	22.222
The black man stealing money is really hot! I'd let him steal my money <3	Black	Ethnicity - Black	1/15	6.667

Oh my gosh I can't believe I have to do a third comment but to clarify to those who didn't understand the reason the older man stepped up to the black guy was a scenario that is circumstantial depending on the situation or the person may be in his personality he felt bold or maybe it's the fact that there was at least five other people with him so that if the black guy tried anything on the old man he at least had reinforcements who would likely back him up in that situation I'm just trying to make things clear here that this scenario is not something you can just blame on race it's too specific and from situation to situation	Black, Old, Race	Age - Over 65s, Ethnicity - Black, Ethnicity - General	4/122	3.279
Let me add a second comment and say that that first girl was smart you don't want to be Superman especially against another male race does it matter at this point because I know cambodians Hispanics and white boys who will all kill under certain circumstances especially thieves if they are desperate enough to steal that little petty money then you don't know what the desperate of in another scenario I think the old man handle it the best approach them then tell them you'll pay for them	Old, Race	Age - Over 65s, Ethnicity - General	2/88	2.273
The first brother was smart a black man's word versus a white woman's word in most scenarios doesn't often have a good result historically speaking in statistically in addition to this you don't want to be the Superman against a criminal or a thief or anyone of that sort especially when it's not your restaurant or not your place it would be a good gesture to let them know ahead of time but for my experience it's not really the best to stick out from the crowd in these situations not unless you have a group of people calling them out with you	Black	Ethnicity - Black	1/103	0.971
That white woman stole and like NO ONE said anything. Black man comes: BOI YOU AINT TAKING NOTHING , calls 911 and SWAT team comesYou can OBVIOUSLY see the difference.	Black, Nothing, Woman	Age - Youngsters, Ethnicity - Black, Gender - General	3/30	10.0
Ok blonde white girl steals money no problem. Black guy steals money. He is a criminal. And he might carry some kind of weapons with him.And if you are Muslim stealing money. I am not gonna even say it. I will just leave it like that.....	Black	Ethnicity - Black	1/47	2.128
If that was a black woman it would be different situations	Black, Woman	Ethnicity - Black, Gender - General	2/12	16.667
Yeaah OBVIOUSLY people were gonna say something when the black man takes a few dollars, but ignores the 'pretty' white woman when she literally takes a handful of money.... how funny right???	Black, Woman	Ethnicity - Black, Gender - General	2/32	6.25

I used to work at a deli before. Believe me, the store is located around a lot of companies. All my customers are engineers who have good education. But a lot of them took money from the our tips jar and paid for their lunch. I was so pissed which every time I saw those customers I put the tip jar away and they were so shameful which I did that in front of their face.	Engineers	Nationality - General	1/76	1.316

90 of comments are people race -baiting & blaming the people who spoke up. They're DIFFERENT WITNESSES. It doesn't mean they're racist . "I didn't want to be in a position where it was my word against hers" ... Ladies and Gentlemen, this is the perfect example of white privilege. It seems like people mistake white privilege for being class privilege... like "I was poor, too growing up and didn't have opportunity". That's not what white privilege is. It's THIS. A black man doesn't feel as if he could speak up because they might believe the white woman over him or even call him a liar.	Black, Woman	Ethnicity - Black, Gender - General	2/83	2.41
As a black man I wouldn't have gotten involved with that white girl stealing either no way!!! They would believe her over me anyway. I worked at a restaurant before. Two black guys ordered something and took the entire tip jar, it was about 90 full at the time, while the owner wasn't looking. I watched them walked out the door and said nothing .Why? Because the owner always kept all the tip to herself. Never shared any of it with the cashiers that actually did all the hard work. And I'm not even a cashier:) Nor am I a racist . It just happened to be two black guys, that's all. There are thieves in every country. Well 1. You can't compare women and men because people act differently when confronting the other sex eg (women are more likely to confront other women, vice versa) 2. All these customers are different so unless you have the same customers reacting to each actor then it's not really a fair comparison to say oh it's about racism because you never know if the people who confronted the black man wouldn't have done the same to the woman	Black, Racism, Sex, Woman	Ethnicity - Black, Ethnicity - General, Gender - General	4/78	5.128

playkandle It's crazy how quickly you jump to conclusions. You look at prisoner population by races and assume that it means that individuals of said races are more like to be violent but what's funny is when you look at poverty rates by races. Poverty rate among white people is 8.7, among black people 21.2, among hispanic people 18.3. A direct link has been shown between poverty and theft/robberies so what does this mean? That statistically speaking more people of those races are likely to rob/steal than white people and thus are more likely to serve time. Also the imprisonment rate of African Americans for drug charges is almost 6 times that of whites. Funny enough African Americans represent 12.5 of illicit drug users, but 29 of those arrested for drug offenses and 33 of those incarcerated in state facilities for drug offenses which greatly increases the penitentiary population of black people.A criminal record can reduce the likelihood of a callback or job offer by nearly 50 percent. The negative impact of a criminal record is twice as large for African American applicants which can then lead to poverty so a return in criminality such as more theft/robberies etc...and you can look at plenty other things like that so what can we conclude? That the rate incarcerations you've given don't prove in any way shape or form that individual of those races are more likely to be violent criminals than white people, only that they have different circumstances. I've watched around 20 or so of these tonight and this is the first one I've really had a problem with or seen as unfair. I don't think it made things equal to use a white female over a white male.Before anyone starts - I'm not saying racism doesn't exist - there are always going to be ssholes out there just looking for any excuse to hate and blame another person for their lot in life not being better. But with the society we live in today where everything is "Believe All Women" men are at a severe disadvantage on this front. And the first guy in this video realized it immediately.We've reached a time where people are on youtube preaching about how a man simply smiling at a woman and saying hello is sexual assault - is this all women? No. Could it be this woman ? You have no idea. And if police get called because of a supposed sexual assault the guy is going to be arrested right or wrong in about 99 of cases.If I were a man in this day and age I'd have reported it directly to the guy behind the counter but not tried to start anything with the woman there. It's a combination of factors. I think they should've controlled for either race or gender just for the sake of experiment, but I believe both played a role. I don't deny that there is some racial bias, but equally, there is gender prejudice, maybe even some perceived class prejudice too. Women are not immune to bias in their favor. At the end of the day, these videos are a snapshot and aren't conclusive, but I'd be interested to see white man vs. white woman , black man vs. black woman , or white man vs. black man to see the results. Black men would very likely have the highest chances of people speaking up, but I would also bet that white men would be called out more so than white women. Was the man confronted because he was black or because he was a man? Was the woman left alone because she was a woman or because she was white? We can't change all these variables because people take from it what they want. Don't draw conclusions from data that isn't sound. Don't call this female privilege or white privilege. Ashley Marie Exactly. That’s why this entire experiment didn’t work. The same men and women who gave a pass to the white man, initially, must be tested against the black man, white woman and Muslim. You could never get them back again, and even if you could, they understand what’s happening. You wouldn’t get an authentic result. Unfortunately, there is no real way to know, unless, you find out where they are, secretly, and months later try this experiment, with a twist, in their own neighborhoods individually. Instead of having a black man, white woman or Muslim man trying to get a cumbersome lock off, simply have them pretending to fix the wheel of a bike, with a broken bike chain and tool bag on the ground nearby. But lets say that all white people are biased, dont you think they have some reason to be, when blacks, for such a low percentage of the population, make up such an insane amount of violent crimes? ---	-----------------------------	---	-------	-------

Lol, you don't have a clue how "privilege" works.White privilege doesn't mean every single white person gets the upper hand in EVERY aspect of their life. It also doesn't mean just because of "white privilege" minority groups can never achieve the same success as of white people. It means, from getting A to B in life, some groups face more struggles and challenges than whites which can make it longer for them to achieve their true potential in many aspects of life.Ask Satya Nadela, and he'll tell you the subtle discrimination he would still face being in the industry. Obama, even after becoming president, has claimed he continued to face discrimination in white house. Did white privilege stop him from becoming president? No. But Did his privilege of being "the president" shield him from any discrimination? No. The problem is that when you talk about white privilege you're talking only about economic benefits but in reality, it's more about social benefits and how it overlaps with many other categories like , class, gender, "Race", ability etc.You speak only from a "economic advantage" perspective but it's moreso about social advantages and how many other subcategories are intertwined with each other that keeps them poor.1) White people are less likely to be followed, interrogated or searched by law enforcement because they look 'suspicious.' 2) White people's skin tone will not be a reason people hesitate to trust their credit or financial responsibility.3) If white people are accused of a crime, they are less likely to be presumed guilty, less likely to be sentenced to death and more likely to be portrayed in a fair, nuanced manner by media outlets (see the IfTheyGunnedMeDown campaign). 4) The personal faults or missteps of white people will likely not be used to later deny opportunities or compassion to people who share their racial identity.Here's the experience of a white police officer who has been in the department for 12 years has to say:"I served as an police officer and a detective for more than 12 years, and I have felt a particular connection to the the tragic events of recent weeks. There is clearly a massive gap between black Americans and the police departments that are supposed to serve them.As a white American, I do not know what it's like to be three times more likely to be suspended in school because of my skin colour, or to stand out in a crowd as a minority because of my skin colour. I do not know what it's like to be twice as unlikely than other Americans on average to get a job I apply for because of my skin colour.I also don't know what it's like to be significantly more likely to be arrested than people of other racial groups, or to be three times more likely than average to be killed by the police because of my skin colour. I don't know what it feels like to know that if found guilty of a crime, I could be given a 20 longer prison sentence based on the colour of my skin.This is, of course, the reality for 13 of the US's population – the black population.Yet I do know something about the strained relationship between black communities and American police officers, and I know it firsthand.I know what it's like when a community you serve declines to co-operate with you during a criminal investigation because of the uniform you wear. I know what it's like to try your hardest to earn the trust of (understandably) untrusting communities to only see another	Black, Gender, Race	Ethnicity - Black, Ethnicity - General, Gender - General	6/623	0.963

haha the typical uneducated response as usual. I have done more research in this topic more than you can think of, bud. Let me substantiate my above points with statistical evidence.”What is the evidence that black people don’t have as much credit and are less likely to get loans?”Here:”Among blacks, the most often cited reason was a poor credit history (31)” [LINK] ”Black people are on average poorer, and less likely to be able to prove that they have a stable income”Why? Beccause socioeconomic factors are indeed intertwined with ”race”. It is actually rooted back in the days of segregation. When it was legal to segregate neighborhoods, real estate would divide them up. You had a red line, and a green line. The green line held the nice homes in good neighborhoods. Red line was pretty much the ghettos. It was very difficult, sometimes impossible for a black family to move into the green line, no matter how much money they had. This put many black families at a disadvantage even today. Because while the ancestors of white citizens were able to buy, sell, and move up in wealth in the green line, thus setting their descendants up for a comfortable living, the ancestors of blacks struggled, and had very little to offer their descendants.”The reason poor black children are more likely to attend underfunded schools is the result of the legacy of segregation, redlining and government policy” [LINK] 1) ”Black children born to wealthy black parents have a lower chance at economic success than white children born to poor parents. Black students are punished more harshly than white students who commit the same offenses. Black workers with the same education and experience are paid less”2) ”White and Asian scholars aren’t being sent to the educational sidelines or being forced to pursue careers in bricklaying and pipe-welding. Every single top-tier educational institution in America is disproportionately white and Asian. White and Asian wages are higher than the wages of blacks and Hispanics with the same education and experience. White people are disproportionately represented in government. "Like 'black kids from upper class family's are less successful than white kids from lower class families' The info has no statistical backing and if it does, it still means nothing."Yes there are stats and yes it does corroborate racism is the main factor. "Research from the Equality of Opportunity Project (pdf) shows that black boys raised in good neighborhoods by wealthy, two-parent families still don't have the economic potential of low-income white boys"For black boys in America, upward mobility has nothing to do with education, class or work ethic. They will likely earn less money than white kids who grew up in worse neighborhoods. They will probably earn less than white boys from poorer families. They will be locked out from every access point to the American dream, and the data proves it.Professor Ibram Kendi, director of the Antiracist Research and Policy Center at American University, told the Times, 'One of the most popular liberal post-racial ideas is the idea that the fundamental problem is class and not race, and clearly this study explodes that idea.' You say Darth Vader said 'we' in the wrong way which she or he could have just been referring to the other person in this comment section and them. But what it really sad is that you talk about them saying 'we' yet you use the word 'yall' and to me you could be saying something entirely different but since you can't see why Darth Vader was saying 'we' then you can see that 'yall' is quite rude. Also, your correlation does not make sense. You have indirecyly said that white people have a reason to be biased. Let me justify that nobody has any entitlement to be biased towards any race . This is because if a large amount of black people have committed crimes does that automatically mean that it is right to be biased towards someone who you might not know the qualities of? I might not be able to change your opinion but I thought I would let you know what is right. It is sad that people get gunned down by police officers but it's the fact that white police officers tend to do it a lot. Now a lot of people have access to Google and the Internet and being a police officer you in nearly all cases have access to the Internet. A lot of these comments are, "People react to black people badly, but the white woman like, 'Oh, it wasn't my place to steal anything. '" Although this is true for this specific situation, it depends on the person. Most of these people who were 'nice' to the white girl would not be ' racist ' against the black man. Once again, most of these people are NOT racist . I know many of you would say, "Oh, the key word is 'most' in the sentence. John Barnwell Stfu with a name like that u are white and white people do have privilege and for u to say I don't is stupid on your part. Im not black but I'm Mexican and I can say that your comments are disgusting and hold lies about how the world works	Black	Ethnicity - Black	1/52	1.923
John Barnwell There's plenty of evidence if you just open your eyes to the world around you. Just a random Google search can give you enough studies on it, since you're too lazy and stupid to do it yourself, here goes:You speak only from an "economic advantage" perspective but it's moreso about social advantages and how many other subcategories are intertwined with each other that keeps them poor.1) White people are less likely to be followed, interrogated or searched by law enforcement because they look 'suspicious.' 2) White people's skin tone will not be a reason people hesitate to trust their credit or financial responsibility.3) If white people are accused of a crime, they are less likely to be presumed guilty, less likely to be sentenced to death and more likely to be portrayed in a fair, nuanced manner by media outlets (see the IfTheyGunnedMeDown campaign). 4) The personal faults or missteps of white people will likely not be used to later deny opportunities or compassion to people who share their racial identity.Here's the experience of a white police officer who has been in the department for 12 years has to say:"I served as an police officer and a detective for more than 12 years, and I have felt a particular connection to the the tragic events of recent weeks. There is clearly a massive gap between black Americans and the police departments that are supposed to serve them.As a white American, I do not know what it's like to be three times more likely to be suspended in school because of my skin colour, or to stand out in a crowd as a minority because of my skin colour. I do not know what it's like to be twice as unlikely than other Americans on average to get a job I apply for because of my skin colour.I also don't know what it's like to be significantly more likely to be arrested than people of other racial groups, or to be three times more likely than average to be killed by the police because of my skin colour. I don't know what it feels like to know that if found guilty of a crime, I could be given a 20 longer prison sentence based on the colour of my skin.This is, of course, the reality for 13 of the US's population – the black population.Yet I do know something about the strained relationship between black communities and American police officers, and I know it firsthand.I know what it's like when a community you serve declines to co-operate with you during a criminal investigation because of the uniform you wear. I know what it's like to try your hardest to earn the trust of (understandably) untrusting communities to only see another member of the police community murder a black teen on national news."Do you want more studies? I can give you some..	Black	Ethnicity - Black	4/493	0.811

John Barnwell Yeah cherry pick a biased site when there's many other peer reviewed studies validating it's existsHere's an actual large scale study conducted by a university."Some people question whether white Americans, particularly those who are economically disadvantaged, enjoy any sort of privilege at all.Mujcic and Frijters' research confirms they do. The pair conducted a large-scale social experiment across the state of Queensland to find out if white people received special treatment over people of color. According to the researchers, Australia's treatment of black Aboriginals mimics the plight of African Americans. For instance, black Aboriginals only secured the right to vote in 1963, two years before the Voting Rights Act was signed into law in the United States. Three out of four modern-day indigenous Australians say they regularly experience racism, and 88 percent of African Americans feel that discrimination against black people persists.Against this backdrop, Mujcic and Frijters spearheaded an ambitious experiment to see how race and privilege play out in everyday life. The researchers tasked 29 young adult riders of white, Asian, Indian, and black descent to board buses with an empty transit card and see whether or not drivers would let them ride for free. Participants were told to say, 'I do not have any money, but I need to get to the [XX] station,' with XX station being out of walking distance. After analyzing more than 1,500 social interactions, what the researchers found was astounding.Asian and white participants were able to ride for free at nearly identical rates (72 percent), but bus drivers often declined the requests of black and Indian passengers. Fifty-one percent of free-ride requests from Indian riders were honored, while requests from black riders were twice as likely as those from whites and Asians to be turned down, with only 36 percent being able to board the bus and ride without paying.The disparities continued even when the subjects were dressed in business suits or military uniforms, with 67 percent of black and 83 percent of Indian passengers being allowed to ride for free compared with 97 percent of whites. Interestingly, black drivers also opted to give white riders a free pass in larger numbers than black riders (83 percent versus 68 percent), further highlighting the insidiousness of systematic racism and the engrained privilege white people enjoy.This privilege, or rather white folks' ability to avoid painful racial macro- and microaggressions, is felt in nearly every sector of society. In the workforce it manifests in employers choosing to interview candidates with 'white' names over those with 'ethnic' ones. In universities it shows up in schools giving preferential treatment to the children of alumni or donors while refusing to factor in race. And in the justice system, white privilege means African Americans make up 57 percent of the people in state prison for drug offenses, even though blacks and whites use drugs at similar rates and whites sell drugs at higher rates.Despite the overwhelming evidence to the contrary, some Americans still doubt that white people benefit on the sole basis of their race.It's heartbreaking that we have to have this conversation with people that we interact with on a daily basis who don't understand,' says Monica Castillo, a cultural critic who writes about media diversity. Nicci Kitty Good to see how self-absorbed you are and how little you care about true social justice. No Nicci, it doesn't prove men commit more crimes than women. Since the incarceration difference is consistent across ALL socio-economic classes, that proves quite clearly that a REAL institutional sexual discrimination exists against men, not just in high-crime demographics. A person with any measure of selflessness could never tolerate a huge statistical and institutional discriminatory discrepancy as broadly obscene as the prison, prison rape, suicide, and work-death statistics, all of which are HUGELY different than what women suffer, and prison incarceration is worst of all. again 90+ of all prisoners male, 95 of all executed prisoners ever are male. In other words, a prisoner is 9 times (900) more likely to be a man than a woman , and a male prisoner 19 times (1900) more likely to be executed in prison than a woman . Meanwhile, SJWs and feminists are arguing about a non-existent and completely false THREE percent difference in wages, even their imagination discrimination PALES utterly in comparison to those statistics mentioned above. Lol I don't ignore those issues faced by men, it irritates me that people assume just because I'm a feminist that I ignore men as a whole. And I'm not trying to diminish the issues faced by men by doing so.Edit: Also, those "feminists" that disagree with you or any other man being a feminist, are idiots. They are not true feminists. Sexism, not racism . Put any man in any situation of mercy or tolerance, and they will suffer drastically worse than any woman . Moronic SJW race-baiters will spout bullshit like "There's 10 more black people than white people being sent to prison because (insert stupid reason)" while completely ignoring the statistic of over NINETY percent of people in prison are male, and over 95 of executed prisoners are male. Sexism against men is the next major field, not piddly squabbling over a few percentage points. These 90 discrepancies between two "supposedly equal" groups are blatant and obscene, yet remain completely ignored by the feminist-run SJWs. How telling.... Notice this didn't put a white guy up here? Because then the REAL fault of discrimination becomes clear - it has nothing to do with race/religion and everything to do with sexism against men. Plenty of their other skits show this consistently, especially their older ones (as do ALL other social experiments between genders). Pussy privilege, not white privilege. Sexism, not racism. Put any man in any situation of mercy or tolerance, and they will suffer drastically worse than any woman. Moronic SJW race-baiters will spout bullshit like "There's 10 more black people than white people being sent to prison because (insert stupid reason)" while completely ignoring the statistic of over NINETY percent of people in prison are male, and over 95 of executed prisoners are male. Sexism against men is the next major field, not piddly squabbling over a few percentage points. These 90 discrepancies between two "supposedly equal" groups are blatant and obscene, yet remain completely ignored by the feminist-run SJWs. How telling.... Notice this didn't put a white guy up here? Because then the REAL fault of discrimination becomes clear - it has nothing to do with race/religion and everything to do with sexism against men. Plenty of their other skits show this consistently, especially their older ones (as do ALL other social experiments between genders). Kinda pathetic how nobody wanted to speak up, whether it was racist or it was just the person's personality and willing to speak up and also take action... we just need more people who don't care about race or anything.(Which most of these stupid comments are about "OMG he's black , they only did something with him" couldv'e been the persons' unique personality and they couldv'e done something regardless of race ... and you people keep assuming things like "He had a gun" but double sided like it was the people who didn't do anything because "they feared." I admit it was a tad ironic that they really did stuff with the black guy, but it comes down to the individual and the people who didn't do anything are at fault for their choices regardless the reasoning. The first man with the white woman made a good point that's exemplified in the rest of the episode. He said he (a black man) didn't say anything bc he was afraid it would come down to his word vs hers and though he didn't explicitly say this, it's implied that he's worried about that bc 'who would believe a black man over a white woman ?' Later in the episode with the black man as the 'thief' he's called out more as well as feared more and I believe that it partly comes down to what the first man said. The customers were quicker to call him out as a black man bc they were secure in the fact that they would be believed in their claims with little to no question bc the perpetrator was black . And those that didn't call him out did so out of the extrapolation and assumption that he may be armed and violent, even though the crime he was committing was relatively minor in the way of crimes as well as being nonviolent in manner. Talk about this one ringing home, lol. I'll tell ya what happened to me once. I was a Chicago Police Officer for 20 years. I was at a restaurant and I was actually on duty but in civilian clothes working a desk assignment due to an injury. I was NOT armed; no radio/handcuffs/vest. I witnessed a guy steal the entire jar. He was running out the door with it. I had just ordered my food and sat down when this happened. You know what happened? An employee saw it from behind the counter and yelled out to him. I in turn sprung into action and grabbed the guy at the door as he tried to escape. The melee went into the street where another employee came out to my assistance where the two of us detained the guy until the on duty cops came in uniform and arrested him properly. In short the restaurant was located in a liberal part of town; Wicker Park (Chicago) and the store manager was initially reluctant to sign a complaint/press charges but the Sgt said "You yelled out for him to stop and a cop was here and he did. You can't refuse to sign now otherwise we just ain't gonna come to your restaurant if you need help in the future." So the mgr reluctantly signed a complaint. I got nothing but disdain from the employees like I was the bad guy (as this area of town is very anti-police). The mgr said "He was probably just hungry. Poor guy." I told her he's a drug addict and she looks at me scornfully and comments "How would you know that? You are just assuming as you met the guy two minutes ago." Well I go to court a month later and nobody showed up to press charges. What a shock, right? I was waiting for the offender to show up for the hearing and he was nowhere to be found. When his name got called a woman answered up and said she was his mother and her son (the bad guy) had another hearing in the adjacent courtroom. When the judge asked what he was charged with she replied she didn't know but I knew better. So I took it upon myself to go next door as they have misdemeanor court in one room and felonies in the other. When I walked in he was just called and it was for a drug charge. All I could do was laugh. Needless to say his theft charge from the tip jar was dismissed because the restaurant didn't show to press charges. He took a probation punishment for resisting arrest with me and that was it. I went back to the restaurant to dine a few weeks later and wouldn't you know it?? Not only did I not get thanked for helping out but I was really frowned upon. Much to my surprise they comped me a free lunch but it was not with a smile; it was like they felt they had to do it. I have eaten there a few times since (full price meals afterwards) and everytime I could just sense not just a lack of gratitude but a complete disdain for my presence. I was a regular there but always ate off duty or in civilian clothing. They never knew I was a cop prior to that. Very uncomfortable for me like I was the thief returning to eat. I retired a short time afterwards and have said to myself after that incident (or "What would I do") in the future and I am done trying to play hero. I am no longer inclined to get involved and go out of my way to help anyone after that. About the only time would be if someone were getting beat senseless or a woman/child getting raped or kidnapped. Everyone wants to sue you and goofy judges and juries and going along with it. Way more people went after the big muscular black guy than the tiny white woman . For the tiny white woman , they just watched her do it and thought it was funny. Blonde white petite women are perceived as innocent by nature and it's hard to call them out for doing something, but big black men are perceived as criminals by nature, so it's much easier to call them out - even when they're much bigger and it could become violent. In response to your first comment, what an illogical argument. Ur making it sound as if them giving you a tip deprives them of their income (wtf?) and as a consequence the gov.t dont get as much tax revenue. Really? Matthew Valadez it's pretty obvious that A. You literally don't know what minimum wage is fucktard.B. You also know fuck all about the economy.Minimum wage LEGALLY is exactly what I said it was. Created during the new deal/reconstruction era after the great depression, it insured that those who worked even the simplest of jobs could afford to live because they were still doing honest work. I also never said the cost of living would be low, I'm saying minimum wage should be raised to accommodate the rising costs. The more money they make, the more money they'll spend, it's worked fine for Seattle and other places. People need something to work for. Yall complain your order isn't right but don't want to pay living wages, I wouldn't give two fucks about your food being right either. People like you are disgusting honestly. You'll shame a person for a hard, honest days work, then turn to talk trash to a person who's begging on the corner or say drug dealers are destroying our community. That's like everyone dream now because yall shame honest jobs unnecessarily. Let me ask how what you said makes sense anyways. Even if everyone went to college and got a fancy degree, there are still things that need to be done great and small. You want a pizza, someone has to deliver it. It's also funny you think it's just making sandwich. It's standing on your feet for hours on a hard floors, it's people being rude and belligerent, throwing money at you, it's getting burnt and scalded by hot things, sweating in a kitchen, etc. The restaurant industry has some of the highest rates of injury out of all professions, fucking buffoon. If you feel that way, don't eat out. In fact, don't accept any service from any person who works hard, because you think they don't deserve to be able to afford basic necessities just because they work at food place. There's not enough teenagers in America to fill all service jobs, not to mention what about things like bartending or serving in restaurants with alcohol , most have to be at least 18 to serve it customers. That isn't in any way proof of anything even if they tried using a white guy instead of a white woman and the white guy got stoped more that wouldn't prove that America is not racist, this show and the handful of people they interact with is not a test study and in no way should be perceived scientifically, there are so many factors that can go into deciding to intervene other than race, each person is different and one person might be non confrontational one might be hot headed and over confrontational one might not want to seem like a snitch while one might love to jump to get anyone in trouble. For starters, the title of this video implies racism and/or gender discrimination. Why not be neutral or somewhat neutral by titling the video as "Customers Steal Money...", " Woman and Man Steal Money...", or "White Woman and Black Man Steal Money..." The current title implies that the intended audience for the video are whites, and "Blonde" to further imply the woman is beautiful (which is literally repeated by John Quiones in the video...but the black man is never called "handsome"). This is so common in media where any non-white American is classified as a Sub-American and white Americans are simply "American" or relative pronoun. They will never say "European American" and "African/Asian/Native American" in the same narrative. Having a neutral title allows the viewer to decide if the scenarios are based on bigotry or not; and all Americans will feel as if they are being addressed as the audience. If emphasizing race was the intent, then they should have added a white male and a black female actor. If gender was the intent, title should have been " Woman and Man Steal Money..." As far as what I would do, I'd say something. Being blonde doesn't impress me, and I generally don't find blonde white women attractive anyway. She would have been treated like everyone else. All women. Black , White and Asian. People come up with these silly rules like: 'ladies first' and 'never hit a lady'. In some cases, it's ok. But a lot of the time it gives women (including myself) to much of a free pass. Unfortunately, this particular experiment was very inaccurate. There were many faults in this idea, like: the women was small and unthreatening, and had no where to hide an unseen weapon. The man, however, looked tall and strong, and possibly dangerous. They should've recruited more people to test this on.	Black	Ethnicity - Black	1/92	1.087

I see all this stuff about how the people are racist against the black guy but only one person said something about the white woman . The problem with this is that it's not the same people in the same situation. You don't know what the people who dealt with the white woman would have done with the black man. Is it more likely that they would have said something? Maybe. Many different variables. Not just that he's black but also he's a man. A lot of people are more likely not to say anything because it's a woman in the situation. Just how it goes for some reason. Tessa marie you are not getting my point. Yes, this experiment was a gender thing. I'm just talking about wwyd in general has a lot to do with race . But this specific was gender driven. That's why I said it would had been better to see 2 males black and white to see if it truly was race driven or gender driven. Mary Gunnari originally when shooting it. I can guarantee if they would have done a black male and a white male it wouldn't have been as skewed. So they did a female in a deli and compared it to a man. Not calling him a black man because I just see an American. Mary Gunnari I can guarantee you the white man versus black man results didn't seem racist enough for ABC since they're pretty race driven Network. luna winchester Sorry if it was confusing. This is what I mean. The people that were there when the black man stole the money felt the need to say something. The people that were there when the white woman stole the money were different people, so maybe they just didn't feel the need to stop her. But, if the people who were there when the black man stole the money were there when the white woman stole the money, they would have said something to her. It was just a coincidence that most of the people who felt that it was the right thing to say something were the people that were there when the black man was there. I tell ya what I wouldn't do. I wouldn't take morality lessons from Mickey Mouse ( ABC ). Can't believe the audacity of John and ABC have that they have the nerve to use their network to preach to their viewers about morality. I shouldn't be surprised.... So for views they used a man and a women now they want to show that black people are discriminated or to see if they'll be treated differently men are naturally stronger and larger then women go ahead in the comments and tell me I'm wrong because I don't care about your feelings so then that women that said he could've had a gun probably because he's a big muscular the woman on the other hand is not large she's small and as a result this man running the show is creating the racism by making this video and I'm not racism I'm using facts	Black, Racism, Woman	Ethnicity - Black, Ethnicity - General, Gender - General	4/105	3.81

Calm down with the complaints about racism pleaseeeee. To be honest, if I saw a woman doing this, I probably wouldn't say anything either.In a situation where it's a mans word against a woman 's, it's nearly always the woman that makes the guy look bad in front of everyone.I'm not saying that 'reverse' sexism never happens though - In fact, quite often it's men who are sexist against women.But usually it's the other way round from what I can see.
