Mrs Frogzilla I was out nightclubbing behind closed doors in a Dublin gay nightclub in the early hours when the news of Diana’s death in Paris broke on Sky News and everyone there thought it was a wind-up at first, but by sunrise as the stories kept coming in, the reality of it started to hit home and there was an increasing sense that a dear friend had died, as Diana had been very kind to so many gay men during her lifetime, especially to those gay men living and dying with HIV/AIDS	Gay	Sexual Identity - General, Sexual Identity - Male homosexuality	6/93	6.452
I can’t believe they gave King George a lethal dose of medication just so it would make it to the papers in time. Why would they do that to the queen in this day and age ? Also what crown Jules get placed in her coffin? Not all of them right? I mean they have crown jewels from hundreds of years ago.	Age	Age - General	1/61	1.639

Daniel Saint All you will see on the royal web site, which by the way is not done by the royal faily or its house hold. The web site show you how it stands to-day to royal accession, Charles is alive so long nothing changes William will follow prince Charles, the web site do not tell you what happens should prince charles dies before the queen, for that information you will need to read up on heredity accession and what have happen in the pass history. Well I bet that codeword has probably changed by nowEven so, having grown up only ever having known Liz on the throne, and so have my parents It's hard to imagine a Britain without her as queen, but it will happen eventually and with each passing year, her longevity feels more and more like tempting fateI've always wondered though, if she does manage to live to 100, what that party is going to be likeUsually when someone reached 100 years old in the UK, they get a letter from the queen congratulating them, so it'll be interesting to see what celebrations she has for herself One thing for certain, though. When she dies, there will be memes.	Old	Age - Over 65s	1/120	0.833

The reason it is called London Bridge Falling Down is due to LOVE from those in country, commonwealth, world - A moment when an instant experience of human emotional connection will be shown in unity, like no other. Then a process of real grieving throughout all those stated. She isn't simply loved for her position, she is loved for protecting us ALL like a Mother from the establishment, like that of our own for decades. Oversimplified Games Sigh! So easily you presume people to be left winged with a single comment. You need to get your brains checked. After presuming power, it was her moral responsibility to apologize for the things that happened under her family's rule. When was that done ? The German Chancellor apologized to thr Jews in the 1960s or 1970 for something he was not even involved in. Secondly, if today's Englishmen are really sorry for their past or have nothing to do with it, why are they spending so much for the upkeep and maintenance of the Royal Family. Why in this video has the video maker said that urgent emergency will be put across the country when the queen dies as she is the last one to be associated with the glorious English empire. Whilst I wish we'd abolish the monarchy already, enough people still care about her for her to be a massive tourist attraction to the country stillMillions of people visit the UK and London specifically to see Buckingham Palace each yearThere's a giant market in the US in terms of tabloid journalism on royal news, more than I usually see in the UKThe yanks love the queen. It's weird honestly. They're obsessed with the Royals in a celebrity way, and for everyone else, she's one of the most well known and famous monarchs still alive and keeps us on the map.So yeah, people still care. weefski why India is still technically part of the commonwealth nobody knows, i dont think any indian feels any loyalty to the queen. But besides that, pretty much everyone knows who Donald Trump is too, that doesnt mean people will or should care if he drops dead tomorrow. Let me make one thing clear, i do not dislike Queen Elizabeth, she seems nice enough but i dont know her personally so i cant say anything for certain; I do deeply respect her service in WWII however, and that speaks a lot to her character. But I dont have any personal connection to her, or my own countrys royal family. Blimey, what will be the cost of all this? Do The People agree to paying for many days of unnecessary extravagance like this when so many are struggling to eat, keep a roof over their heads and pay the bills? 'The RAF will be grounded'? Sounds like the perfect time for terrorist attacks... Personally I think there should be no monarchs (unelected rulers) now, it's an out-dated and unfair system of inherited privilege and duties which are pointless. We are already sick of paying for her many enormous houses (mostly unoccupied) and their staff and her trips abroad when so many are homeless; give Queenie et al a two-bedroom (that extra room for guests to stay) flat or terraced house, that would be fair. And the Professsor (her personal doctor, paid for by us/the NHS without our consent?) will help her die peacefully and with dignity by injecting morphine (and cocaine?) when she's close to death = lucky her, I want that too when the time comes, as do those asking, begging, for help to die quickly when suffering extreme disease, it's only fair. That stuff about protecting the church in Scotland, surely her omnipotent god can protect it himself? Come on UK, we don't want or need and cannot afford a monarch any more now we (supposedly) have equality - but so many are living below the poverty line. Charles: do the decent thing and rule that you/king/monarch 'job' is now redundant - maybe go and try to sign on at the Jobcentre, try live on the money you get, see how it feels and GET REAL. No more kings & queens = no more demi-gods!	Terrorist	Religious Identity - Muslim	1/277	0.361

Me and my whole family are so used to having the queens face on money. It be so weird and it feels wrong in some way. I don't hate her but I don't like her. She has been a good queen and I am sure it's hard for her and how much she had to go through to rule at a young age . But I really hope she outlives her son. I don't want to see him on the throne, after what happened with Diana. Prince Philip is kinda the same as his father too since they both cheated but I can't really judge what they would be like as king. So I hope they ain't assholes. Jenny Hughes Common misconception. The monarchy costs the taxpayer next to nothing . The Sovereign Grant comes from the Crown Estate revenue, not the taxpayer. The surplus from the Crown Estate is paid to the Treasury, about £300 million pounds a year. In fact, The Queen gives money to the taxpayer. Not something that the media likes to publicise because they like to stir up trouble. The National Audit Office will supply the exact amount if you ask. Seems a little pointless to me considering someone as great as a queen or king would want their country to keep moving forward after they pass. A truly great leader would never want someone to bow to them, they would want them to consider them to be equal. These people are the heroes that don't ask for recognition, and the people we should honor by continuing to live but mourning over their death at the same time. To respect someone, you never have to stop living; instead, we have to do something in honor of them. If I died I wouldn't want a bunch of people to stop what they're doing for a month, I would rather them do nothing because that is not true respect. True respect is doing something extravagant in there memory which requires you to move on past their death. Sometimes we forget to move on and I personally would never ask anyone to stay behind in my grave, because that's useless, and it would be like my death was ultimately meaningless. I don't know how Queen Elizabeth looks at the process, but I'd imagine she would be okay with it just because she was raised to be okay with the formal life of being a queen or king. If she had a chance to realize what true heroism means, (by no means am I saying she isn't one) then she may think a little differently and may recognize that the amount of time allotted is a little ridiculous but may still think it's okay for everyone to take a day off of work. Again, I'm not saying what she would actually say because it is impossible to predict such things, nor am I trying to be disrespectful to the queen or tradition; I just think that the whole country coming to a complete stop for a month is not only unviable and unhealthy, but to me personally would be almost like a slap in the face. I think that the future of the U.K might be uncertain but will happen with the following. The U.K republicanism movement might rise more than ever before, abolition of the Monarchy might be seen as a possibility to the U.K to end Monarchism, the Commonwealth Nations that the King/Queen are still head of state might finally break off to have their own heads of state aka full Prime Minster control or a President once the queen is gone, as for the Brexit issue then that'll be another part to the U.K sadly falling to the ground. The U.K might come to an end one day but for now, will have to wait and see where it'll go from there. Yeah, whatever. What will happen is, finally the Republic Party will have there chance to have a vote on becoming a Republic Government, which will mean the potential removal of the Royal Family in effect, unless the general public decided they wish the next King or Queen to be head of state. It will be upto the people to finally choose who their head of state will be, under a Republic Government. Well in this day and age , the English Royal Family is vulgar and highly unacceptable in reality. Tax payer pays them in the region of £400m+ per annum in security and upkeep costs. Again unacceptable considering millions of people in the UK are struggling to make ends meat, yet the English Royal Family continue to live in the style they have, due to their tyrannous past and thieving?. Do not hear that being discussed in many places, but oh well, truth is always a big WOW. So they need to be removed, because they hold the UK back from being powerful. They hold the UK back with their own Government within a Government, so the House of Lords. Again, the vote should see all of this go, in exchange for a forward thinking UK that is not held back by Governments within Governments as I call it.So that is what is, not perhaps, but is going to be voted upon. The Republic Party have constitutional right to do this :). Again, my guess is, you had no idea of this, because you are all so wrapped up in all the BS that gives them a lifestyle that only 1 have. Duchy of Cornwall produces around £25m income for Prince Charles and that I have no problem with. It is this £400m+ odd spending paid for by the tax payer that I think is ripping you all off.So this, Prince Charles comes to the throne. I dunno if that can viably happen once Queen Elizabeth II passes, sorry to be a bearer of grim news, but the Republic Party will demand a vote, and the UK Government has too accept it, end of.Thanks :). I like Queen Liz, but this all honestly sounds like nonsense you'd hear coming from North Korea after their dear leader kicks the bucket like his pappy a few years prior. And the coronation of Charles? You'd expect to hear about a monarchs coronation from somewhere like Bhutan, but a supposedly western and advanced nation like Britain should be doing away with monarchism after Liz, it wouldn't be one last moment in the prestige of empire, it'd be looking like a backwards medieval kingdom crowning the clown that is Charles. At least push the monarchy way into the background of everything, like the other European countries who most people probably don't know even still have royal families. The queen is currently 93 years old , her mother lived to the ripe old age of 101. Taking into account modern advances in Medicine and the fact that she receives the best health care planet earth has to offer. I'd say she has 20 more years. She will die somewhere between age 110-115. I assume her husband (who is 98 years old) and has suffered some ill health as of late will pass before her. I have the utmost respect for the Queen. She has been Queen for as long as I can remember. For decades she has represented a great nation and history at it's best and worst. She has been the one constant in the entire world. She is indeed and shall all always be the greatest of women to have ever graced this planet. She didn't have to represent a strong woman by wearing a vagina or inane protests...she did it with quiet grace and loyalty to her people and country. She has always been steadfast and represented silent, strong power. She is indeed a lady above all others. God bless and save the Queen! issa boi I live in Belgium :) We have this weird thing that if a king/queen passes their throne to their heir while still alive, they will keep their title of king/queen. One of our past kings died, he had the Belgian royal bloodline, so his heir (brother, because they couldn't get kids) became king, but the widowed queen still held her title of queen. So then we had 1 king and 2 queens lol. When the widowed queen died, people were kinda glad because the government would give 1.5million euros to the widowed queen every year, which obviously upsets many people. The royal family still gets about 36.5 million euros annually (this money all comes from tax payers of course), so people just want them gone entirely, because they only have a symbolic value in our country, and don't really have much say in what happens. With the advantage of having the very best medical care, the Queen will likely live another 5 years, though she may not reach her centenary as she is frailer now than her mother was at the same age . Charles is 70. He also receives the very best of medical care and inheriting the longevity of his father, mother and grandmother, he (barring accident) should live to 90. The British Line of Succession normally forbids the passing by of the Prince or Princess of Wales in favor of others – so don't look for the Duke of Cambridge to be leap-frogged into Buckingham Palace ahead of his father. BTW, the Queen's private secretary will NOT be informing Theresa May of the monarch's passing. The sitting Prime Minister will be the first government official to be informed. Mick WagnerNo sorry to dissappoint I have a very loving husband and four amazing children who all have a great deal of intelligence unlike your silly self making silly uneducated arse type statements and name calling . Clear to all reading this that in your view its ok for you to say the Queen is going to hell but sure has annoyed you to read that I have told you that if so, you will meet her there. However on second thoughts maybe not you would probably be having a relationship with the Devil himself rather than burning in so called hell .I understand it,s pretty hot there . so you certainly wont be cold	Mick	Nationality - Irish, Religious Identity - Roman Catholic	2/116	1.724

To me its just a sad death of a sweet old woman , adored by tons. She's kind of is a figurehead, but her death will have little impact in the grand scheme of things.It is a very tragic thing and people should be able to pay their respects, but things like mandated mourning periods were something i only heard of in north korea.I don't see a reason to ruin a few weeks of everyone's life in the UK. After about 7 minutes of watching my brain started doing this:10:42 - "...In every scenario, the queen's body returns to the throne room, mostly intact. On D1, the day after the queen's demise, the flags will go back up, and at 11am, Charles will be proclaimed the king at the entree room of St James palace. He will carry out the first official duties of his reign by swearing to burn Scotland. The national anthem will be played on drums wrapped in black cloth, and trumpeters from the life guards will step outside to give three blasts - [LINK] - The proclamations will only just be getting started. Britain will be getting a new king for the first time in 66 years, and the world will be watching. This will be the time Britain will be at its most vulnerable, and Russia will strike. There'll be no fleet of bullet-proof limousines and fancy card on the streets, rather, there'll be horses shitting everywhere and a bunch of cock-hats riding them.A group of men dressed up as characters from some Shakespeare drama, will go by carriage to the statue of Charles I and read out the news again. A 41-gun salute will be fired from Hyde park, decimating the Queen's coffin; heralds with trumpets will then go around spreading the pieces around the country. High sheriffs will stand on steps of town halls to announce their excitement, as per local customs. People will be capturing a glimpse of the might of the Gurubashi Empire, glued to their latest smartphones; things will be very new to everyone, even for the ones doing it. This will be the time for Anduin to go out and meet his people, a four-nation tour by the new king will immediately kick off. He'll stop by places to attend services for remembrance of his mother, and meet the leaders of the nation. Lots of it will be done walking around, and not being hit by a car.On D4, that is, the fifth day of the queen's demise, her coffin will be taken from the throne room in Buckingham palace, to Westminster hall, to lie in direct sunlight for public viewing, for 4 full days. The procession from Buckingham palace will be a huge military parade, expected to "accommodate" a million starving homeless on the streets of London. It's planned that the parade reaches Westminster hall, just on the hour, so that big Ben's last remaining bullets start to chime as the wheels come to a stop.14:04 - "Football stadiums will be open to parade the queen's bloated body if necessary. Before the dawn on D9, the funeral day, the jewels will be taken off the coffin and cleaned in methylated spirits. It will be the day of great laundry. People will wake up to a day off, the stock market will not open, shops will close and go to bankruptcy, and day traders will display their true colors as they brawl in the streets. At 9:00am, big Ben will strike, his hammer will then be covered in a menstrual pad and will ring out the heads of unruly day traders in muffled tones."15:15 - "When the coffin emerges again, it'll be placed on the green gun carrier, and fired into 138 junior sailors of the royal navy. From Hyde park Corner, the hearse will go 23 miles by road to Windsor castle, where the queen's body will have landed. The royal household will be waiting to catch their queen, standing on the grass."	Black, Nation	Ethnicity - Black, Nationality - General	2/592	0.338

all of this is so absurd. so your country will come to a standstill when the queen dies? she is literally just some rich old woman who is in that position because her ancestors were dictators. how do British people not realize this? the only logical argument i hear about how the royals are a good thing is that they bring in tourism revenue. even so, its insane to keep these offspring of tyrants in a position of power. the queen or king may not be in control of the country but they certainly hold immense power if the country basically shuts down when they die. the whole thing just makes no sense. its like people have forgotten history and just praise the royals. its as if the North Korean Kim family eventually converted North Korea to a democracy, but for generations the Kim family still held some form of power and the public still praised them like gods. its literally the same exact thing. root Umm....I'm American and even I know the basics of your country more than you. You realize that Ambassadors and other official diplomats can't be charged with a crime while in another country either, right? It's not some kind of rare, super privilege that only the Queen of England has. Besides, she's 92, I wouldn't worry too much about her starting a crime spree. Also, she can declare war, but if Parliament disagrees they can do a vote of no confidence and if the vote goes through this would change the government and block the declaration. Again, I highly doubt your Queen would have a reason to randomly declare war on a country just for giggles. She can dissolve parliament on her own and force an election of all new people, but it wouldn't affect the Prime Minister or the Cabinet and would never happen because it would more than likely cause the people to riot in protest. Banning parliament from discussing anything to do with royal matters is common sense since the Royal house has their own lawyers/public relations team/organizers. There's no reason why Parliament should even be discussing Royal stuff in the first place. It's like if our Senate started talking about personal matters of the President and his family. Rose C The Queen can never be charged with a crime in her own country - that is not normal to a "democracy".I'm glad you agree that she can openly declare war against anyone without any approval of Parliament.Of course she can just dissolve Parliament, but that would NEVER happen - just like Brexit , right?It's truly disturbing to see an American talk about how Parliament should be censored on certain topics unrelated to national security (e.g royalty). The richest woman in the world (take that, Oprah!), she's ever so classy, polite, and dutiful, yet starchy like her mother and grandma – just the right combination of faintly-absurd English quaintness and German steel. Her death during the Brexit fiasco – and what I believe would be a back-chambers succession struggle that would end in Charles's refusal to accept the crown, in favor of his eldest son – would only serve to further tank the country. Let me tell you, all of the countries that have Queen Elizabeth II as there queen, would fucking care.Let me counter (in my opinion) all your fucking words that I disagree with in your BS of a sentence, I've never seen someone this dumbfounded before.1. No human deserves to have this much attention.Are you out of your mind? This is a QUEEN we are talking about. Of course she is gonna get a lot of attention, especially A DEATH OF A ROYAL. She is queen of a lot of countries, and you saying that "she doesn't deserve this much attention" is just utter bs. 1mancheeseburger apocalypse She is very important for foregin relations and diplomacy, instead of having a changing face every 5 or 10 years Britain has kept the same for over 60, The queen provides a politcally nuetral rallying point for the nation to gather around rather then a politcally divise one. The Royal family's patronage keep many extremly valuble organisations going such as the royal society (an incredible collection of British scientists that are respondible for the modern worlds technoledgy today). The royal family also serve to uphold British traditions, show them to the rest of the world and provide a link to our past. She serves as a link between our former dominons Canada, New Zealand and Australia in being their heads of state too and make relations with those nations and easier task. The loss of the monarchy would be a slippery slope towards Britain becoming just another purely and totally globalised nation with nothing to set it apart other then its language. Uncle Crusty You know the Queen is only the representative of the country right? She doesn't make any law, nor does she dictate the path the country goes, either diplomatically or economically. The situation the UK is in now with Brexit and everything is not the queen's responsibility, and y'all still have to vote for your politicians (prime ministers etc.) periodically. Your point is therefore moot.	Brexit	Nationality - European or anti-Europeans	1/66	1.515
Cuong Pham none of what I have said relates to the office of prime minister witht he exception of diplomacy however I pointed out her value for diplomacy, and you underestimate her power, the queen has an incredible amount of soft power with her wealth and ownership of a vast amount of real estate in Great Britain, you brining up the current poltical situation is an irrelevant point. Also the polticians govern in her name. Evidence that consitutional monarchs like herself still have power would be that of Juan carlos the former Spanish king who radically changed spain after coming to power from the Francoist state to modern spain. Just because she is a representative does not make her impotent with her influence. Also she does have a measure of influence over the law making progress as she apoints lords who enter the house of lords and can reject legislation put forward by the house of commons. So I'd say anyone who argues that the US is a British proxy has had something put in their food.And at any rate, there will always be someone wanting to exploit other countries, so the end of British colonialism simply opened the door for other powers to step in and assume the role of overlord, be it the US, the Soviet Union/Russia, or these days China (who is on a massive campaign to subordinate African countries through economic investment). 25 seconds in: 'London Bridge is down!' - said over a clip of Tower Bridge. London Bridge is just west of Tower Bridge (the famous ornate one with the turrets). It's a considerably less flamboyant structure :) In fact, some time back, a wealthy American wanted to buy Tower Bridge (but called it London Bridge). We sold it him. He was expecting delivery of those beautiful mock-gothic towers and Victorian ironwork. His delivery contained hulks of rusted old industrial iron. Hard way to learn you got a Bridge name wrong. Very nicely presented and kind words of what could happen. There is, undoubtedly, plans on standby for the inevitable day, but no-one will ever know for sure, exactly what will happen. Well, mabee the queen knows, but then again, she should know, it will be the biggest event ever in British History, and one that will possibly never be repeated in anyone alive today's lifetime.To me, the Queen represents exactly what Britain is about, and as far as i'm concerned, i can only imagine she will not give up the UK to the EU, not on her watch anyway. Unfortunately, she cannot change the continental tectonic plates, so we are bound to europe weather we like it or not, in a landmass way. However, we are not bound to this made up bussiness model of hypocrazy and corruption called EU.Ahhh damn it, bloody EU, always gets me ranting on about it...lol. This is not about the EU, nothing British is. When she does go, and i really hope she stays for as long as she can hold on, that could very well be the end of anything British. I must agree, we do need to move on and change from empire, but i have a strange feeling that when charles gets his turn....the EU will pounce and hit us hard....again. I'm not sure what to think of charles....but i do think it should skip him, cut out the middle man, and go straight to William. At least then, it will bring the monarchy up to date and a new fresh look, and hopefully save the UK from disaster.	Nothing	Age - Youngsters	1/270	0.37

There have been games played in England involving running with a ball or spherical object around villages and kicking the shit out of each other since medieval times. Don't copy our whole fucking act and try to sell it back to us as yours, you div. When Gridiron was invented, it wasn't called "American football" it was called Rugby football, because it was invented in Rugby, England.You guys are so retarded, you did not update your rules, like the rest of the world did, not just the inventors of the game, who isn't you, you dumb fuck yank laughing stock of the world. Osucros and american football WAS NOT called rugby football when it was invented. You know nothing about the origins of our game. The first games of American football were closer to soccer than they were rugby. You had 10 games and played until a team scored and they tried to kick the ball through a goal without using their hands. If a team scores then that is the end of the game. The winner of the most games after 10 wins the match. We added rules from rugby to that foundation, but american football started out as neither. Absolutely no one calls it gridiron except for annoying Europeans. You also do not get to get pissy when we call a sport by the name you invented, like soccer.	Nothing	Age - Youngsters	1/128	0.781

If you think that, you have a very limited understanding of Britain. First, the Empire lost its luster well before the EU was even thought of. Second, the vast majority of British people despise Trump, and though we have our fair share of stupid politicians, an imbecile like him would never have made it past the first stage of an election. Thirdly, and with regard to the EU, the United Kingdom is primarily made up of two nations, Scotland and England. The former is pro EU, and has voted to remain, the latter is traditionally insular, and has voted to leave.It is more than likely that the Scots will vote YES in the Indy2 referendum, and England will finally get its own parliament, so ceasing to be Europe's biggest stateless nation .Lastly, under Trump, the rich-poor divide in the US is greater than at any time before. He has polarized the US like no other President, and will likely go down as the worst ever.So, in the short term, Britain may end up with Boris Johnson as PM, but even that blond buffoon has some degree of morals. Elizabeth is Illuminati and part of the NWO that has plans to build The Fourth Reich which like Hitler's Third Reich plans to united the whole of Europe into one state. Her son Harry has openly worn his SS uniform and Philip the Greek has stated world population must be reduced to 500 million with most of these being slaves toiling for the Illuminati - just as Hitler and his gang lived in luxury with stolen art in magnificent mansions. They took a great step forward in this by making the EU into the EU Nation with its own National Anthem!They also opened all EU borders to flood all the EU countries with slave labourers from black and brown nations but these are intended to suffer the same fate as all the slave labourers the Nazis gathered up as they expanded. BREXIT seemed likely to upset their plans just as UK and Russia stopped Hitler's Third Reich and fifth columnists of the Fourth Reich has done every trick to try stop BREXIT !When Elizabeth dies there will be a few days of sycophancy foisted on the British but it will not be the true sorrow we all felt when Diana was murdered by MI6 to prevent the Illuminati bloodlines being contaminated with Muslim blood as the Illuminati is fanatical about maintaining the SEED-DNA bloodline that they trace all the way back to Satan and his gang of fallen angels and their Nephilim children. Euthanasia, you know? There's no chance of saving a dying old man (or woman), and if he or she is suffering, it's better to just end the misery, no? As for the fact they inject morphine and coke, it's 1930s, they thought coke was a medicine good for health, just like radium. Well, it began to decrease in the late XIXth century, but Coca-Cola supress coke in his recipe only in 1929 for example If they give a fatal injection to Elisabeth II, it will probably be more a few mgs of a complicate-name substance	Old, Woman	Age - Over 65s, Gender - General	2/98	2.041
innosensecal This is done more often than you think. I work with many doctors across many hospitals and i have been told that it is not uncommon to administer a large dose of morphine/fentanyl/etc. to an old a frail patient that they know will pass soon. This dose is for pain management/palliative care - but they "know" that it will end the patients life. This is not spoken about openly.I do not know if this happened to my grandmother who passed last year - but as an example of where this would be fully "acceptable". She was almost 98 years old . She had lymph cancer - untreated for 4+ years, as she was too old /frail for chemo. Nearing the end - the tumors in her neck had grown so much they had displaced the trachea (windpipe) so much that she could no longer breathe naturally and had a stent inserted in her throat for breathing. She was almost completely blind . And when she felt ill near the end she was put on observation and the hospital - and she "looked like dying" - she looked very different. Hollow like. In a situation like this - there is no point to extend life, even if hospital machines can do so. But i would not be surprised if a doctor would give her a slightly larger dose of fentanyl than "safe" for an elderly woman in her state. And it is the sane thing to do. This is just plain embarrassing for the British. Hopefully for all the taxpayers of Britain & all the taxpayers in countries who pay for these mooches to holiday in, this archaic and pointless institution will start disappearing with the death of someone who actually still expects people to bow to her. It's a disgrace that in 2019 these people are paid to live a billionaires playboy lifestyle when there are millions of people homeless or starving and 100's of good causes that deserve that money more. Britain really needs to get out of the past they're still stuck in. Other than bringing slack jawed fools to gawk at the money pit lifestyles the monarchs live the monarchy is pointless. Not to mention that they are the result of terrible people(their ancestors) who were nothing more than dictators who took power usually with a sword & at the cost of many lives. They've killed 100's of thousands of people by many different cruel ways over the centuries. The only 1 of them that doesn't act like a pompous ass and seems to be fairly normal is Harry. This video was interesting, but just a bit melodramatic, I thought. When Queen Victoria died it was the end of a transformative era, and no-one ever saw the like again. I wonder if people lining the streets of London as the cortege passed its grand way ever thought of that because not just not much more than a decade later, their world turning upside down. Their future, our history, was of two horrible world wars with 30 years of relative social and economic stagnation. . Since the end of the last war, we've had another era, for those in the West generally it has been a benign and enriching era characterised again by momentous change in society and scientific knowledge, which society is having difficulty keeping up with. When Queen Elizabeth dies, those attending her funeral and everyone else should understand this too will be just as momentous as when Queen Victoria died, perhaps even more so. That benign era is just about over, and history will look back on her times as we now look back to Victorian time, as a strange old world, where social norms and behaviour and the institutions that organise them are no longer appropriate, i.e. nothing less than a revolution. This new monarch, in King Charles (though he may not call himself this, as a previous king by this name didn't fare too well) , along with his subjects, will be face a future of existential difficulty, and for the first time in history, the whole of humanity is going to have to leave all the old ways behind, and invent something entirely new and long-lasting, or the new King, and we, are going to be enjoying, if that is the word, a very difficult and very turbulent world indeed.	Nothing, Old	Age - Over 65s, Age - Youngsters	3/296	1.014

Funny that a COLD, humorless, ruthless, remote woman who wanted to deny a grieving world of a few morsels of ceremony when Diana, Princess of Wales, a magnificently tender, warm, humane, approachable, beautiful woman was killed, will receive (if anything, from Britain—I predict that in this fragmented world most of the rest of us will simply stop for a moment, pay our respects, and move on——she has, literally (yes, we can be cruel) lived too long for any real sorrow to be felt—we ALL HAVE TO DIE too——) all this POMP and "circumstance". She does not deserve it. BUT, the whole world KNOWS that Elizabeth was humiliated by the submission she had to forcibly be made to play when that terrible moment came, and we know too that she KNOWS that Diana changed the monarchy (and thus, to whatever extent, if only inwardly Elizabeth as well) in irreversible ways. We can "thank" Diana for the beginning of the end of it all (but she is NOT to be blamed)—it cannot last another hundred years—it is USELESS and parasitic....But one thing Elizabeth knows for CERTAIN: the world will not be crying in a magnificently extravagant display of emotion for her as it did for the woman for whom she was PRESSURED to offer tribute to...Her obituary's highlight, she KNOWS, will be, ironically, the DEATH of Diana—and her mismanagement of it.....May she rest in peace...She has probably been a good woman , deep down inside...A part of me admires her tenacity, her focus, her discipline, her carriage..... So what you're saying is that Good Old Lizzy will be Euthanized when her health becomes too poor. Well that's not creepy. So overdramatic and unnecessary. If she was murdered, maybe it would make sense to shut everything down and gather the government. But we have the super-detailed line of succession with all variables accounted for. This should not be a tragedy or a national emergency. She came to the thrown the year my father was born, but I doubt I'll be too crushed when she goes. Everyone has to die someday. Monarchy is rubbish and they should all be abolished and disbanded.	Old	Age - Over 65s	1/103	0.971

Bear Jew I'm aware of that. Irony obviously lost. She's more than a human being, she's a special human being. A bit like cricket is more than a game, liberty is more than a concept, a British Army cap badge is more than a piece of cloth or metal, a black and white photograph of a family member long dead is more than a chemically developed piece of photo sensitive paper, Niels Bohr was more than a physicist, a pint with your best mate is more than 365 millitres of watery fermented grain with another carbon based life form that happens to co-exist with you in this particular moment in spacetime. These are sensible preparations, not insane. Also, a couple of things you didn't mention. 1. The new face on the coins will face the opposite direction to our monarch today.2. Don't assume that the new King will be King Charles III. The new monarch can choose their own name. The favourite is George, which would make him King George VII. The final chose is his alone.3. The 'Personal Standard of the monarch (last seen in 1952)', will come out of retirement and cover the coffin, as well as fly at half mast over all Royal palaces, as a mark of respect, as well as all home nation flags. Diane Benzler I'm sorry to hear of you being so sick. When your body gives out you will be able to look down at your now useless body as you float upwards not sick or in pain any more. At 6 yrs old that's what happened to me. I could see my body in a hospital bed. I found myself in a smokey white light going upward at a very fast rate of speed but without the gravity pull downward. I could see through the white haze and it was pitch black but with bright lights like stars. This nice sounding male voice was heard telling me that I would have to go back & that there were things I had to do, that I was loved very much. I wasn't scared at all. Then in a flash I was back in my hospital bed my parents were there crying and a doctor and nurses were there. They didn't believe me when I tried to tell them what had happened. They said it was because of having such heigh temps. But they couldn't explain how my temp. was normal, I wasn't sick any more. All I know is that 'that's' what happened to me and I was told to tell other's about it. The maybe 'painfull' part of 'death' we all may fear but after that...all I know is that I felt no pain. I would like to meet that 'nice voice'...person...sprite again some day/night. (in human's terms) Was that Jesus? I don't know, but I can't wait to bow before Him one day. While going though a nice quiet and pretty cemetary I saw a headstone I'll never forget. There was an incredible wheelchair & this little boy had left it like floating up into the sky with such a look of joy on his face. From that one could picture a poor very sick wheelchair bound child while the child was alive but the parent's pictured their child now being free, no longer sick. It made me cry because it was so beautiful at the thoughts the parent's had that their son was no longer sick any more and he would be well cared for and that they would see him again. I will pray for you.	Black, Old, Wheelchair bound	Age - Over 65s, Ethnicity - Black, Physical Identity - Physical (and Mental) Impairments	3/379	0.792

Les BrownI agree with you! Royal women all have long track records of longevity ... while the men do not. I think it's quite possible that Her Majesty will live to be 103 years old ...That's 10 years away! And in doing so she may well outlive the Heir Apparent. Well, we can only hope! While Prince Charles is known to enjoy a clean diet - and I can't see him tolerating Ol' Stinky Drawers' second-hand cigarette smoke - he is equally known to enjoy a tippie OR TWENTY on a regular basis. His overindulgence is so very obvious to anyone who has even glanced in his direction! That red , ruddy complexion we see is caused by the broken capillaries which are a result of excess alcohol consumption. And that's just one outward indicator of excess alcohol consumption, with fatty liver and heart disease usually being in advanced stages by the time badly broken capillaries become so very obvious. Camilla covers her up with six inches of makeup, but her turkey-neck and décolletage are just as red and ruddy as Charles' face is! So those two obviously get pretty messed up every night!! So I do hope that the Queen outlives him .. not that I would wish the pain of losing a child on Her Majesty (even if he IS a drunken old git who'd rather be a tampon!), but it's better for us that she suffers a little personal sadness now rather than Charles gets to become known throughout all of history as "The Tampon King!" Dan Cooter Identity counts for the square root of bugger-all. As you are happy to quote the United States, Texas has an identity, that doesn't make it a country. To be a bona-fide country it needs at least a couple of things.1. International recognition - England has none. England is not recognised by any other nation as an independent sovereign state. England is not represented in it's own right at the United Nations, nor does it have ambassadorial representation overseas. England does not issue passports. 2. It's own legislature - Again England does not have it's own legislature. You argue numbers above but that is irrelevant, the fact remains England has no government of it's own.Face facts, England is no more a country than Texas or Bavaria (both of which were independent nations more recently than England)	Nation, cooter	Nationality - Chinese, Nationality - General	2/139	1.439
