This is backwards in some areas. Obviously people who can't hear well in old age need to be spoken to louder. And people who are weak in old age obviously need someone to help them.	Age, Old	Age - General, Age - Over 65s	4/35	11.429
Its so sad. 30-50 year olds think they are really intelligent and hate on other ages. As a kid so many people thought I would be horrid and noisy but really I wasn't and they were so suprised when I was polite. Many old people are thought to be stupid although they are so much more intelligent than adults. They are not racist or bigoted unlike adults and are equal to everyone. They treat racism equally against everyone not just so called minorites	Old, Racism, Racist	Age - Over 65s, Ethnicity - General	3/83	3.614
Is this why some people don't like to say their age ? Because they think the other person will be condescending towards them just in case they're older?	Age	Age - General	1/27	3.704
Umm.. honest question: I helped an older lady who seems to have her hand full and walks slow with getting a shopping basket at a supermarket, am I an ageist now?	Ageist	Age - General	1/31	3.226
It's so unfair. I'm 12 and even I think age laws are dumb . I mean, I understand the "Can't drive till 16" law, but you can't get a job until your 14? That's just pure dip shi. I mean, girls are way more mature than boys, and at age 12? IMAGINE HOW MATURE THEY'D BE, AND THEY'RE NOT MATURE ENOGUH TO GET A JOB? BOYS ARE VERY MATURE AT AGE 12 AS WELL. AND NO PERSON UNDER THE AGE 14 CAN GET A JOB? PURE DIP SHI. AND DONT COMPLAIN ABOUT MY GRAMMAR JUST CAUSE IM A KID OR ELSE YOUR JUST ANOTHER ONE OF THOSE STUPID AGEIST GOVERMENT SHIS. i call bull on this because old people don't go through ageism ,in fact people respect old people that even cops won't ticket them for doing wrong,now young people on the other hand gets the short end of the stick just look at how society is treating young people compare to old people	Ageism, Old	Age - General, Age - Over 65s	4/52	7.692

Being old is not a disease, but many elderly folks think of themselves that way. And most young people look at them that way. Rise up old folks! Your video is wonderful. It's very well done and informative. If you fix the typos it will be perfect. First, fix "assistance" in the slide citing the Age Discrimination Act. Then fix the word "gereatric." It is spelled "geriatric."	Age	Age - General	1/39	2.564
Being 50+ and a top segment programmer or coder doesn't mean anything if you see yourself losing out to young coders who not even possess one quarter of your experience, just because your prospective boss thinks you couldn't possibly know about the latest languages or are not able to learn the new ones. This ageism is especially rampant in Silicon Valley.	Ageism	Age - General	1/61	1.639
Okay, seriously? What is wrong with helping old people move heavy things? It is not an "assumption" that they are weak, it is true! Yes, of course, some old people have kept up with fitness, so they are unusually strong. However, from personal experience in seeing my grandparents age , they are, in fact, getting weaker. It happens. Atrophy increases as people age ; it's science. So, it is not assumption if it is true. There is nothing wrong or " ageist " about supporting and helping old people, especially the ones you love.	Age, Ageist, Nothing, Old	Age - General, Age - Over 65s, Age - Youngsters	6/90	6.667

Exactly, I'm young and every time I've been discriminated based on my experience it's because I don't have any, being just 20 years old. Honestly, I think that as young people we shouldn't be whining about age discrimination because we're still far from reaching the top of the income ladder which is during our 50s. What I usually see is people that could continue working and become even more productive being set aside because they're seen as too old and unfit for the job. Society has to realize that not every person's income has to peak at around the ages of 50 some people are extraordinarily healthy and would fare better as employees if they had the possibility to at least prove they could extend their income gains up until around they reach 70. Top executives are able to prove to society that they are better workers in their 60s than in their 50s and 40s but most people don't even have that possibility, that is ruled out for most people who don't belong to the elites. Donald Trump is 70 and I don't see age as being the reason that would make him unfit to be president of the USA, maybe other reasons may exist, but not age because he walks well for someone his age and he reasons the same way he reasoned about issues when he was in his 30s so he doesn't have any form of dementia. But still, the media promotes the belief that politicians should be young and energetic, and people prefer to be represented by the younger and less experienced politicians. But why? Do people want to do physical exercise with their young and also the sexiest prime minister ever (media), Justin Trudeau? I generally think it's risky to put very young people who haven't proven themselves in very high positions, particularly in investment banking, for instance, which is what's happening nowadays. For for-profit corporations, investment advisories and the like being young, energetic, and educated at an Ivy League shouldn't even be seen as an asset, rather they should be seen as a risk factors. It used to be that way, just look at what happened to Stroh Brewery after a Harvard brain with no experience and "notebook" notions of risk and management took over his family company. As a young person I've always been weary of taking a job which I know it will be very difficult to significantly start climbing up the income ladder when I'm 30 because I know I wasn't educated at an Ivy League institution, thus I'll never have the possibility of landing a 100k job even with relatively little marketable technical skills like it happens with Ivy alumni nowadays, but still I want to continually learn and become more productive. Also, I know that when I reach an older age I'll probably be healthier than most people my age so I'd want an employer who knows how to calculate employee productivity so I could extend my income ladder gains to match my productivity gains. Ideally, we could live in a world in which everyone retired when they wanted or when they were really unfit, but we don't live in a world like that and the main fault is people. My paternal grandfather is 80 and semi-retired though he only really retired at around 75, when he reached the peak of his career, being very competitive I've always wanted to be like him when growing up, but that's next to impossible if you're not self-employed or already in the top of the income chain. I can bet with anyone that as more and more people in their

Ageism to older people? Seriously? In a society where its completely legal to pay someone under 18 a lesser wage... omg... You can't be serious. Even on welfare older people get paid more LEGALLY!!! That is Age discrimination toward younger people is written into LAW. If one of these young people were to speak out against this no one would bat an eye simply because no one respects the opinion of a "kid".... Age is nothing but a number? Most of the people complaining about ageism are older people and people listen because they are old and people take their opinions seriously. Young people complain and no one cares smh... And im 33	Age, Ageism, Nothing, Old	Age - General, Age - Over 65s, Age - Youngsters	6/113	5.31
+Michael Gibson I am absolutely serious. And I agree that it goes both ways, against the young and older alike as I already stated if you read what I said. I experienced the same bullshit 20 years ago with the lower pay when you are younger. But my point really is that this society does that to youth and then turns right around and displays the same sorts of attitudes toward you once you get older as well. I'm not talking 80 years old here or even 60 but 40s-50s primarily. This isn't an ;older vs younger issue with me. This warped society does not look at merit and ability as much as it does age whether that be younger or older. Think about it, you get it hit with it when you are younger and then hit your 40s-50s and people as well as employers etc begin hitting you with it again. Not always in the same categories but it is an attempt to marginalize and limit you just the same.	Age, Old	Age - General, Age - Over 65s	2/172	1.163

+Michael Gibson If you would like to hear more about ageism towards younger children rather than elderly citizens, i suggest you look up and research adultism. I think it will provide you with what you seem to be looking for. Ageism CAN mean discrimination against young people, but it is generally regarded as discrimination against older people, as to separete them into categories. Ageism against the elderly is very much a problem, and it is your opinion if you believe that adultism is more of a problem. In MY opinion I would agree with you if that were the case. I DO believe that adultism is a bigger issue, but ageism is very much a problem that needs to be dealt with. AS a thirteen year old boy who deals with adultism on a daily basis, it is not a surprise that I would have a bias towards abolishing all forms of adultism over ageism . I hope you have a great day man, and I hope i helped you in any small way that i can. Much love, bro <3	Ageism, Elderly, Old	Age - General, Age - Over 65s	7/180	3.889
ageism is so bad it happens even if your 26, there a lot of cases where a yunger person with just a few years looks down on me, where is the world going ?	Ageism	Age - General	1/34	2.941
Well can't say I didn't see this term coming feminists are going to have to use this in a different way to combat the men that do not want to marry women that either put sex , have children or jobs and waited until they were 30/40 to marry. At the end of the day with our gov in work men only need sex and comfort in a relationship. Both can be obtained through other ways.	Sex	Gender - General	2/75	2.667
This is very well made. Do you mind if I show it in my presentation on ageism ?	Ageism	Age - General	1/17	5.882
People do not necessarily naturally create these stereotypes but rather iyt is the culture that chiefly government and media have fouissted upon us and beat into our minds on a daily basis, multiplee timees a day. Radio, internet and TV. I believe thiss has been and continuess to be hardest on those in their 40ss and 50s. Often people at this age can sstill do things much the same as they have always done because unless they have abuseddd themselves, they are often not age /health limited in theeirr functions in life. But we do not accept them doing so, thuss they have to artifficially give in to what society says it will limit them to. You might, for example, even feel too old at 85 to do certain things and that is okay, but whaat off the man or woman at 40 or 50 who is still physically healthful? Are they to stop living as they see fit simply because society says they are too old ffor this or that? Yes, really these are the group who I believe are quietly the mmosst negatively affected by ageism . At that age range you can accomplish or bee healthy enough to ddo thee ssame ass any otherss but are literally harrassed by merely doing so. I am 38 this year and can already see theese attitudes approaching in people around me in this country. Very strange world we live in. When you are young they tell you that you cannot do this and that and once you get older they tell you the same thing. Youth and the elderly are the focus of the ageism issue when in truth, it is those within the 40-60 age range that are in the middle and are the real crux of the problem. Would we live in a more merit based society, it would not be an issue. If you could do something, then it is accepted that you can no matter your age . However, we live in a system based society and we have been inculcated that whether you can actually do a particular thing or not, the focus is not on your ability but rather your age . There's also ageism towards teenage individuals. Me and a group of friends decided to go shopping at a local grocery store a few months ago, we were all teenagers. An older-aged adult lady stomps up to us with her loud high-heels as we walked through the door and rudely asked us if we were going to shoplift or rob the store, and threatened to call the police if we didn't exit the building. We weren't planning to commit a crime, either...This is the same thing as a racist thinking a black man walking into a store is a thief. TheBarracudaDriver13 I believe you because I have experienced that sort of attitude as well. However, think of the times you yourself have probably acted similarly toward someone older. I don't even mean elderly . Just whenever you yourself have expressed the attitude that someone older than you should not be in a certain place or be doing a certain thing, simply based on their age . sorry but kind of angry, because you adults think of us as inferior pieces of walking meat with no ability to use their brain. I have plenty ability to use my brain, and my dream is to stop ageism and give equal rights to people of all ages. Abraham Lincoln, Martin L. King, Cesar Chavez, John F.
