Men are disposable. If you are male, your value is in your utility. If you have no utility to a woman (or to other men) you are disposable. In school when we have gym, girls have to do less for the same grade. Like run 6 rounds for a 6, while men have to run 7. Now yes men are generally better at sports but: generally. In my class the largest girl (faster and has a better condition then any guy in my class, 14 yo and 1,80 long) has to run less then my conditionless 12 year old 1,50 guy friend. Makes sense right? I'm glad this stuff comes up more and more so people get aware of this, by the way where I live which is Germany, that is most likely to be ridiculed by men not women. What I often don't like about it, is the way it is played out in a competitive way against womens rights rather than fighting on the same side (also applies to all the so called 'Feminists' who turned the definition of Feminism on it's head). By the way, the women and children first thing, yeah it was basically proven by many witnesses to not be a thing in reality, once there is a catastrophe brains go into survival mode, and many brains go me first. Since men are mostly stronger, women and children don't stand a chance. That's why it was brought up I guess. I call myself a feminist (more the old style way), but I would never say women are capable of everything. I'm a very small women and very lightweight . I know that my body is not able to do certain things. That's why I cannot be a pilot, go to military, police or other forces, firewomen all not possible, even though my mindset and other skills would be fitting. And I for sure don't call this discrimination. But if you're a women that can take on the physical challanges, it shouldn't be a thing to be allowed to do it without stupid remarks. Just as a caring man shouldn't be ridiculed if he want's to work in a kindergarten or care for old people.	Lightweight, Old	Age - Over 65s, Age - Youngsters	3/263	1.141

Holy shit I got the perfect answer to all this nonsense. Do you have eyes, do you have ears, do you have thought capabilities? If you do, you are human, so you perceive things the same and do things the same everyday, therefore no difference should exist between both genders. This is true. I have tried saying at school to my friends about other sexist things against men, and how girls at school (the majority, there are a few girls who see both types of sexism) think they can do anything they want. Yeah, no feminist denies that sexism against men isn't a thing; it's fucking easy to disprove that so way to set such a low bar for yourself. Feminists, however, mainly focus on women's issue but that doesn't mean men's problems are left out in the dark. Good job completely misconstruing the feminist standpoint. It's so much easier to argue against your opponent when you make up their view and make it easily disprovable. So rational	Sexism	Gender - General	1/75	1.333

Yo okay, so I'm just seeing this now but thought I'd reply 3 months late anyway.I'm not gonna deny that the bulk of feminists focus on women's rights; it's absolutely true. But you have to understand the different dynamics that play into sexism , one main one being that it's generally women who are held back by sexism and it's usually more "feminine" traits that are looked down upon. It does effect men; I don't think any feminist denies that. When you or TJ say that feminists think that no man suffers from sexism , that's just grasping at straws instead of trying to actually refute and combat a lot of feminist arguments, generally held by most feminists (and being that "men don't suffer from sexism " isn't really a widely held feminist belief, it's kind of pointless to point fingers at feminists for thinking this very disputable idea). Also, something I want you to understand is that wanting equal rights doesn't just stop when legally, people are equal under the law. The truth is that when a society or culture has seen a group of people in certain lights, that doesn't just go away once they're legally equal.	Sexism	Gender - General	4/197	2.03

200 years ago, women were abused, and now can't open their own damn door. Now they think that they can abuse and hit men as hard as hell, and men can't do shit?! A man then lays a finger on her and the woman gasps and cries and the guy gets fucking arrested. And woman always say that men are animals, and dogs, because woman think that men are fucking shits with no feelings. One time in class, my classmate said, woman can hit men, and men can't hit woman . Guess what? Don't forget that we are stronger. I'll fucking destroy you and kill you. Last, in P.E, girls would always be loud in the locker, room, and people won't do shit. Once, we were making noise in there, and we had to run a lap in less that 1:30, and our field is pretty big. We literally run 3 laps, and that is a mile. If we didn't do it in that time, we would have to do 30 sit ups, and 30 push ups, and after we had to do an exercise of 20 jumping jacks, 15 seconds of leg stretchers on each side, 15 seconds of paper clips on each side, and 15 seconds of flamingo on each foot, and the girls were like, c'mon boys!!! HAHAHAHA!!! I will kill you	Woman	Gender - General	5/224	2.232

Don't get me wrong, I agree with so much of what you're saying and this video will help with the speech I'm writing on gender inequality toward men for my all-girl school....but the whole 'women and children off first' wasn't because they thought that men were strong enough to be left behind and women weren't, it was because women are needed to carry on the human race . There's an example i foud : there was a social experiment about domestic abuse where a couple simulated a quarrel going wrong. When the man started to fake becoming violent, people around came to stop him. When the woman started to fake becoming violent, no one at all came to help the man and people even laughed at him. Another one? This one works especially at school i think, a girl can totally come and hit a boy, and the boy can hardly reply because as far as i know boy are taught to not hit girls (and it's normal to be taught to not hit people), but if he doesn't reply he will be considered as weak because he lets a girl hit him. If he replies, it's a proof that he's weak. If he doesn't, it's a proof that he's weak.	Woman	Gender - General	1/143	0.699

When the girl is being loud and obnoxious the teacher doesn't do anything but when its the guys, she gets strict with them. This is bs. I think she's a feminist, she always thinks women have it worse than men. And FEMINISTS are always pushing women to do better than men, if we can't than something's wrong with you. The difference is, like with so many diseases, it's more visible. When women lose their breasts to remove the cancer it is believed they are losing part of their feminine self. Men don't get their ass cheeks cut off and even if they did, nobody would see it and the ass isn't something associated with masculinity. A self-proclaimed feminist teacher of mine once said that the good thing about the modern society is that it responded to the feminist complaints by establishing gender equality. I completely agree with this video, except now sexism is MOSTLY against men. Sure, in the past, it was against women. I'm not saying that's a good thing, but unacceptable sexism against women is better than accepted sexism against men. What I'm trying to say is that sexism against women is now socially unacceptable, which is good. They achieved equality. But now I'd say about half of women want superiority. If you don't agree with me just listen to this ridiculous but true law: If a women hurts a male it is perfectly fine, legal, no big deal. If a man hurts a female (even if it is for self defense!) it is illegal and he will most likely not be accepted into society anymore. If a man or a women punch a 6 year old boy it is legal. That law basically states that women are more sensitive than 6 year old boys. And some people say this is because women are physically weaker. That is considered sexist. Well, if women aren't physically weaker, that law has no logic at all. It is the same as racism . If a women needs help, she will get help. If a man needs help, he will be considered weak unless he gets out of the situation without help. The way I see it, mother nature gave women the advantage because making them slightly physically weaker (no offense) gives feminists a reason to create these ridiculous laws acceptable things in society. But not against women or children, but against men. Everyone in her class looked at her like she was crazy when she told them what she was doing. They didn't even know it existed. That's fucking insane! Men get fucking beaten up too. But when they say something about it they're seen as weak and that's so fucking wrong! Men have every right to express their emotions, just like women do. I'm a feminist and my only concern about our western culture (considering feminism) is sexism towards men. Totally agree!!! I do wish TJ talked more about sexism against men in the workplace too. ESPECIALLY with certain female-dominated jobs like education. I've seen only 4-5 guys at my teaching school; the rest is all women. At least in college there's an equal number of both male and female instructors! I'm talking about schools where male teachers are usually a small minority. Maybe this sexism is the reason why. Also I thought of this CNN video. I agree with what you are saying, however i do think you should get some clarification on what an actual true feminist is, or i might just be getting a wrong understanding of what you think it is. But many woman and even some man call themselves "feminist", yet they are very bias, sexist, and have double standards, therefore they are not really a feminist at all. Because a feminist is someone who wants equality for everyone, who wants equality between man and woman, who wants equality no mater your race or ethnicity, sexuality, religion, etc. Yet, a lot of people have the wrong understanding of what a feminist is and they think that by being a feminist you are supporting that the females should be superior then males, which is not the case at all. All a feminist wants is EQUALITY FOR EVERYONE.	Ethnicity, Race, Woman	Ethnicity - General, Gender - General	4/144	2.778
One of my biggest pet peeves is how feminism tries to paint the male as the aggressor in domestic violence situations. Statistics show that more men are actually victims of domestic violence than women. The only problem is, that's not the whole story. The problem also is the fact that there's many more, they just refuse to say anything because society has this imaginary idea that a guy is a pussy if he gets beat up by a woman. So basically, this causes men to keep quiet. So in the end, meninism should be on the rise if anything, expect I don't think most men give enough of a shit honestly to actually make a big deal over it.	Woman, pussy	Gender - General, Nationality - Chinese	2/119	1.681

Sexism against men, to some people this will sound as if I'm out of my tree because it's matter of fact to most people, but, why do women treat their girl child with the dignity and respect of clothes and treat their boy child like their own personal nudist ? boys are doing most things with clothes off while girls do nothing unclothed, besides beach and pool, it goes from potty training to peeing in public, wiping down after swimming to playing in the street, the general excuse is, it's different for boys, but what does that really mean ? boys are aloud the freedom and girls are not, isn't that part of the sexism they should be fighting and not creating ? what are the benefits of teaching your son to do everything undressed while you teach your daughter to do everything clothed ? it's kind of the worst sexist thing there is. One of the BIG things i hate is when some women say "man up" (which is bad enough) whereas if i tell a woman " woman up" (which is also bad) then i have a million people of both genders telling me its sexist, rude and not appropriate. Additionally the phrase "Man up" trains males from a young age that weakness is bad and if you have any problems/emotions then they should hide it away where it builds up, this probably contributes to the fact that male suicide rates are 350 times that of women in the uk. It's not only feminism; CHAUVINISM is sexist against males TOO.Any form of sexism is sexist against both males and females. They simply give you a positive or a negative impression about the same thing. For example: Both chauvinists and feminists say that males ARE violent against females.The difference? Chavinists tend to make you think that it's a good thing; while feminists tend to make you think that it's a bad thing. The two may agree with each other if we talk about (for example) males being raped by females. According to both, it can't happen.	Sexism	Gender - General	1/97	1.031

You see, they blame men for men's problems when it's society the reason why mens issues are prominent and why does society treat men this way? Evolutionary instincts in most humans to place women first ontop of women's hypergamy, feminisms self centered behavior and their ability to sleep with the government for funds and legislation in their favor while their "oppressors" are away at work.. We don't need feminism we need humanism the only reason we do need mens rights awareness groups is just to simply bring a balance to the damage modern feminism has brought but if feminism ends tomorrow you won't see any mens rights groups feeling the need to continue	Patriarchy	Gender - General	1/159	0.629

Okay, first of all, I totally agree with you. Male sexism does exist. But throughout the whole part where you talked about the titanic, I was confused. The reason women and children go first is because women can produce more children, which leads to a larger population (at the time, population wasn't as much of a problem) and children because they have a longer life to live making goods or whatever. The men stayed behind or went last because they are to have a shorter life ahead of them, since you know their older. They won't be able to do as much as a child would do. Otherwise, good video, keep it up.	Sexism	Gender - General	1/115	0.87

I don't mean to be a bother or anything, but with the breast cancer vs prostate cancer debate I think I have a little input. First off, it's all horrible and should have proportional representation in medical research, media coverage, ect. but I do believe that the second factor about that debacle is (I could be totally wrong) that prostate cancer is far more prevalent in elderly men opposed to young-middle aged men. So it affects less young men, while breast cancer affects people at an evenly distributed rate. I could be wrong on that, but that's where I believe some of the difference lies. While they may take similar lives, one may steal more years per life on average. Plus, everyone loves thinking about helping some woman's breasts, and not some dude's prostate. Just my thought, correct me if I'm wrong.	Elderly	Age - Over 65s	1/142	0.704

Robert Cardwell There is allot of oppression in the middle east for sure. Women are oppressed, but so are men and many diff tribes and groups. It's pretty much a cluster fuck over there. Sexism against men arguably exist's all over the world as well. Even in China, males are expected to pay for all the females in their family while the women can work and get to keep all the money they make. Essentially in many places in the world the law is for the men to pay and does not place that expectation on the women. I would say this is a form of oppression and you NEVER hear about it unless you search for these things.	Sexism	Gender - General	1/119	0.84

TheaterPup I honestly don't care (and I personally see the opposite, lots of feminists calling Muslim women weak and feeble, and it is primarily Muslim feminists who try to defend their burkhas). People should wear whatever the fuck they want with reason and standards (i.e not wearing a bikini to a work meeting).My personal bias, I just find hijabs, particularly from Eastern Muslim countries (Iran and Eastwards) very pretty, and I'd rather they not fall victim to feminism. So many other non-western countries have women wearing the same spiel of yoga pants and shirt with midriff showing that it gets boring. At least Muslim women still look different and interesting....as pretty much every woman who wears something OTHER than shirt and yoga pants....	Woman	Gender - General	1/124	0.806
Melon Lord Thing is the hijab isn't about being pretty. It's modesty to an absurd extreme; the idea that men aren't capable of seeing a woman's personality unless their body is covered up. The idea that men are incapable of controlling their urges when they see a woman . And I don't know about you, but the sight of Muslim women covered from head to toe, while the guy with them has shorts and a short sleeve shirt doesn't give me the warm fuzzies in the slightest. I'm not speaking as a feminist, I'm just speaking as a human being. The only positive to come out of this is I'm starting to see hijabs made by Coach, lol. Perhaps we're starting to see a balance develop at least.	Woman	Gender - General	1/127	0.787

TheaterPup I know exactly what the hijab is meant for, but it does have its side effects. Women should have the CHOICE to wear or not to wear it, at least a free choice protected by law. Seeing a woman covered head to toe wearing shorts and short sleeves to me is like seeing me next to a woman who is wearing something more revealing than a bikini whilst I am wearing full khaki trousers and button-up long-sleeve shirt on a hot day because I have to go to work. As long as it is a choice, it is fine by me, and if it isn't a choice, then I stop giving a fuck and go about my day.I mean, there is SOME merit in what I said about them looking pretty, considering a number of Muslim women want to wear Hijabs BECAUSE they look good (again, primarily Iranian and Indian ones). And it is really my fault if I find it attractive? (well it is, but still).	Indian, Woman	Ethnicity - Native-American, Gender - General	3/169	1.775
Melon Lord You're basically defending their right to oppress, and suppress, themselves. It's a choice, but not one to be proud of. We'll have to agree to disagree on that one. You can find it attractive but that doesn't mean you turn a blind eye to its meaning. I hope one day it does lose its sinister meaning and we can just say it looks pretty. But today is not that day.	Blind	Physical Identity - Physical (and Mental) Impairments	1/72	1.389
TheaterPup When it is only worn by choice, it loses its meaning. To someone who wears it by choice, that's the meaning it has. Think of a gun for example. Do guns symbolize freedom, or violence? Or does the gun owner choose for himself what his gun symbolizes? Does he own the gun because he wants to hurt people, like a common liberal stereotype, or does he own a gun to exercise a constitutional right (assume we are in America here)? Same, does an individual woman wear a hijab to appease a superior male figure, or does she wear a hijab to look modest in her OWN desire (or in my example does she wear the hijab because it is in itself a form of fashion and culture)? Guns are designed to be fired, that's their purpose. A hijab is designed to cover a human body, that's its purpose. What they symbolize is subjective. Just as the firing of a gun doesn't necessarily kill someone (if I fire a gun in a shooting range, I hurt nobody), wearing a hijab does not necessarily make the wearer oppressed.	Common, Nobody, Woman	Age - Youngsters, Gender - General, Social Class - Working class	3/187	1.604

TheaterPup I know there are authoritarian states that force, but explain why a hijab is objectively oppressive? Is there a chemical property that I can find in a laboratory to discover that Hijabs are oppressive? Otherwise you are basically telling someone that their taste is wrong, i.e I say "I like yellow " and you tell me "you are wrong, yellow is an ugly colour", even though admittedly Yellow doesn't appeal to a human's senses biologically like Red does.	Red, Yellow	Ideological and Political Identity - General, Ethnicity - Asian (East-China, Japan, Korea, Philippines, Vietnam), Ethnicity - Native-American, Nationality - Chinese, Nationality - Japanese	11/78	14.103
TheaterPup If a woman imposes her beliefs on other women then it is immoral. If the woman keeps her beliefs to herself, then that's fine. Also what's the double standard here? I personally don't like my legs showing, and I am a guy, so I choose to wear long trousers. Plenty of women don't like exposing too much skin, and will wear what they see fit. A double standard would be a Muslim woman preaching Women's freedom and then complaining that Western women don't wear Hijabs. THAT is a double standard, and THAT can be shamed. The standard run-of-the-mill Muslim woman that walks down the street with her purse over her shoulder is not doing anything.	Woman	Gender - General	4/116	3.448
Melon Lord The double standard is that women have to cover up so as not to tempt men, but men don't have to do the same to their own bodies. It paints women as objects that tempt men, and though it's their own fault. And it paints men as being unable to control themselves. It's primitive and degrading to both genders. I'm not pulling this out of nowhere, it's a common criticism of this practice.	Common	Social Class - Working class	1/75	1.333

TheaterPup That's the political and religious institution of the hijab. A woman who wears it for the sake of wearing it does not exhibit that double standard (though she may think it). Especially when you look in pluralistic societies like Muslim Americans, Muslim Turks, Muslim Indians, and Muslim Chinese (China is more pluralistic than Arabia and Iran, for the sake of argument), most women don't particularly care, though they will get irritated if a man ogles them. Most women do. Everyone has what they are comfortable wearing. Your argument is like someone would give to an arachnophobia: that spiders are harmless (in this case, the human body is natural, sex is natural, and sexual attraction is natural, all truths), and that anybody who feels uncomfortable or afraid should be ashamed that they are (basically people who are self conscious, not wanting others to lust them, or not wanting to get harassed for undesirable looks i.e obesity, acne, scars, etc.).I mean, you have a valid concern. Just that it is targeted at the wrong people. Aim it at fundamentalist Muslims and Muslim feminists who demand that their ideas are the best and be spread to everyone else. Not to mention that, in my experience, there is the matter of a woman choosing to wear very skimpy clothing, but becoming very aggressive if anyone ogles her (it actually isn't controllable; men will check out a fine ass if they see one, as will women, and just because it is uncontrollable doesn't make it wrong, since they have not harmed anyone). Probably very few if any why? because no one trusted women to do anything right to do more than to make and raise babies that was their sole purpose by saying "women and children first" they were essentially saying "get out of the way so the men can do their jobs" they were trying to ensure that the women could continue to do their one sole job it was sexism against women not men it just happened to work out for women as it sometimes does	Sex, Sexism	Gender - General	2/154	1.299

The argument for why it's not sexism is probably the same for why racism against white people doesn't exist. So apparently prejudice against white people isn't racism. Racism is a one way street. It flows from the dominant racial group to everyone else. That's the idea. But here is what Google gives for a definition "the belief that all members of each race possess characteristics or abilities specific to that race, especially so as to distinguish it as inferior or superior to another race or races."So I would assume that people believe the same in regards to sexism. Prejudice against men isn't sexist because men hold the power in our society. Here is how google defines sexism. "prejudice, stereotyping, or discrimination, typically against women, on the basis of sex." Typically is not the same as exclusively.So yes you can be racist towards white people and you can be sexist towards men.	Race, Racism, Racist, Sex, Sexism	Ethnicity - General, Gender - General	10/153	6.536
What happens with sexism= The male ejaculating the semen loses his privilege of being the authentic MAN and he becomes the bitch he so much hates; the female should be in charge to not allow the man to spill his birthright to any other hoe including herself. It's not that we were not made equal, it's the Ego which makes us unequal,, but ohh.. that's right the ego is animalistic and passionate on its infinite forms of I's. You see the problem with the intellectual animal mistakenly called man is that he forgets where his energy belongs, not knowing it belongs to his heart for the love of his creation be it the woman, meaning the being not the Ego, the ego is a multiplicity of personified psychological aggregates that lusts power and control in both sexes. The only way to end sexism is to end fornication and adultery but of course that's not possible because it requires a sacrifice; call it the Ego- the me, the my self, beware that women contain the the Ego mostly not knowing maybe, that's why she must sum the birth of beasts born into this world of sin through her lovely pussy, get it? So women want special considerations and privileges, but bark about gender inequality. It only matters, i suppose, when it is beneficial to them.	Gender	Gender - General	1/23	4.348
This can be associated with Race rights as well... When a black man calls out a white man for saying "You can't be here because you're black " That would be considered very racist . However, If a white man calls out a black man for saying " You can't be here because you're white" That wouldn't be as frowned upon. Now take it with men and women. " You can't be here because you're a man" or " You can't be here because you're a woman " The last one was more sexist right? Well this is why, Men created sexism a long time ago. In our human history everyone can clearly see that women were treated less and men were treated highly. Just as race too. The first huge form of racism was between White people and Black people. Black people/Women were the ones at "victim" here. So if a woman punches a guy in the nuts its ok because we think that i guess it's "payback" for Men/White people Treated them.. It depends really, women were treated worse in some regions, mostly in the middle east and the judeo Christian ones that preach that women is less valuable, but there were a lot of societies that women were alongside men, and still are, same with black people, not all white countries had slavery	Black	Ethnicity - Black	1/52	1.923
+Hatty Monroe No one alive today was at all responsible for the slave trade in America, so why should anyone alive today pay for it now when they had nothing to do with it? Same with sexism , you aren't getting back at the people who created sexism by attacking people who had nothing to do with it, as well as those who are completely innocent of it. You don't see Japanese people hating and killing Americans as payback for America nuking Japan in WWII, because none of us except old seniors could have actually had anything to do with that. fireandbombs12 I don't think you understand what I am saying. Everything you said I mostly agree with. I meant payback very loosely. We think things might be as bad as they are, so we sorta act like it.... and again it's a hard concept for me to even type and for you to understand... I know we are not responsible for slaves. But sexism and racism is still happening. Not just in America. Those people are responsible for their actions. All in all it's in our brains to not think of much when a woman says "you can't be this way because you are a man" because of our brains knowing that men have said it to woman too	Racism, Sexism, Woman	Ethnicity - General, Gender - General	4/119	3.361

There are just as many double standards and sexist policies against men as there are against women, so SHUT UP feminists!There are thousands, but im just gonna list seven:1.being a lady just means being a civilized female, but being a gentleman means serving women and puting them before yourself2. There are scholarships given to people just for being female (they're considered to be a minority) 3. When a woman is raped everyone treats her sympathetically and as a victim, but if a man is raped, everyone laughs at and belittles him4. If a man hits a woman , he is usually immediatley sent to jail and looked at by society as a monster, but if a woman hits a man and the man complains of tells the police, he is usually called a pussy or something like that and ignored5. In the media, men are usually depicted as being stupid or incompetent, while women are considered to be more intelligent6. If a woman is interesting in traditionally considered masculine things, it is considered cool, but if a man is interested in anything traditionally considered feminine, he is considered gay or a pansie7. Women almost always get the long side of the stick in divorces, they even usually get half or more of the husbands personal belongings. I found the feminist fuck. +MrElionor how does it feel to be a sexist. you basically said” whats the big deal, whats wrong with a guy shelling out thousands of dollars to save his life which a women gets for free?Also lets change this so its womenIt would be so different if the woman was asking for a free exam of, like, penis cancer (as woman obviously can not get this type of cancer) but breast cancer affects both men and women. I think that she should have gotten that free exam, as those exams are expensive and I will not deny the fact that she probably does have a cancer tumor in her breast.so whats the big deal that a woman should have to shell out a few extra bucks for his exam is that really so important?Thats enough to expose MrElionor as sexist. lelceztzWell you should know and i was being sincere when i asked my question i wanted a real explanation but all i got were responses from but hurt assholes also don’t most of those exams turn out negative? i mean breast cancer in men especially is suppose to be extremely rare again correct me if i am wrong but as i understand it those exams exist not because it’s common but because it’s deadly it’s pretty much of the worst if not the worst thing a person can get so to assume right of the bat that someone has it seems very pessimistic and aren’t cancer and tumor the same thing? Wouldn’t that make ”cancer tumor” redundant? And to circle back to my original point it seems to me (but what do i know i am just a simple sexist) that the important part is that men have excess to these tests which as i understand it they do and as long as they can afford it i don’t really see a problem honestly is there anything better you can spend your money on other then to save your life? BobTheTrueCactus what genital mutilation of men? circumcision vasectomy? what does that have to do with perceived sexism against men?	Sexism	Gender - General	1/19	5.263
I initially thought that you were talking about perceived sexism , but I'm starting to get the feeling that you actually stated your own opinion. In that case you're mistaken.I was talking about circumcision, not vasectomy. I've never heard of a case of involuntary vasectomy - but involuntary circumcision (in infants) is very common . It was often done without anesthesia, due to the absurd opinion that the babies won't feel a thing.Female genital mutilation is outlawed all over the western world and beyond. Male circumcision on the other hand is not even an issue for most people. Sexism is one of the reasons for that - but there's sexism against men in many fields. The thing is that it's usually not even a topic. It's not being discussed by society so it's widely not even seen. Same as sexism against women wasn't seen in the past.	Common, Sexism	Gender - General, Social Class - Working class	5/147	3.401

Yes. If we're talking equality. If we're saying that sexism exists, and it does. Then there's no denying that it can and does exist against both men and women. If we want rid of it, then it won't go by denying any of it. And it won't go by blaming 'Patriarchy.' It'll go by our having respect for each other as fellow human beings.	Sexism	Gender - General	1/64	1.562
Redrosewitch By common definition you are absolutely right. I have actually invested in this a bit and took a course on the Philosophy of Feminism and I got a lot of these things explained by the Feminists that have devoted their lives to applying reasoning to this. When the Feminists say " sexism ", they are referring to a technical definition. To put this in perspective, "pull" means a very different thing in political terms than it does when you and I use it everyday. We aren't agreeing on our terms when we engage and when we do we bicker about the word. It looks to be that we are fighting over exclusive rights to a buzzword because it is critical if you are going to smuggle in syllogisms. When you define sexism as "hatred of a person based on their sex or gender " then Feminists have to agree or they have to defend a claim that is impossible to make. On Tumblr, there are fewer people who understand the Philosophy itself and only see the privilege of men (Their own is invisible to themselves) and take this "Smarter people than me figured it out" approach that is rooted in practicality and/or laziness. They are usually happy to accept the privilege of their race because frankly in western society it is hammered into us to recognize the history of colonial racial oppression at least superficially. Pull that thread courteously and most of these Tumblr folks will either back off or make a fool of themselves in front of their cohorts who will either try to engage, in which case rinse and repeat or they will claim that you are minimizing them, in which case your coup de grace is to say something to the effect of "Do your concepts and arguments function without use of that word in particular?". If you are a feminist, you believe that men have problems and issues and stigmas that need to be solved. You also believe that women have problems and issues and stereotypes that need to be solved. However, according to the definition of sexism , men CANNOT feel sexism . This is because sexism is based off a system of oppression based on gender , and you cannot be oppressed by a system that benefits you. This is not says that men aren't discriminated against, because they are. But that discrimination is not sexist because of the definition of sexism . Misandry=men are greater than womenFeminism=men and women are equal	Gender, Sexism	Gender - General	5/111	4.505
Sexism, like racism , is not a two way street, and prejudice itself is not sexism . Yes, that man should have been given a mammogram because he also has breasts, but that's not sexism (and the prostate cancer argument is one huge logical fallacy. Also, you blatantly contradict your previous argument with the whole "breast cancer is a woman's issue and prostate cancer is a man's issue" spiel.). To say something is sexist against men, you are saying that men and women (at the very least) share equal amounts of power in society. Which is untrue. So, invent another word or something (I don't care) because you are using this one wrong by definition.	Racism, Sexism	Ethnicity - General, Gender - General	4/113	3.54

+Isaac Babcock It depends on how deep you go into the definition and history of sexism and racism , and how you interpret them. My interpretation is that both are systemic/institutional issues, not situational. So, while gender and race bias certainly exist against men and "whites", society at large does not subordinate them (and never has). This is in no way a defense or excuse for not treating people as equals or promoting prejudice. Also, there is no such thing as a moral absolute and things cannot be wrapped up with a neat "period"; we are not talking about the laws of physics. Well... is it sexism ? Not necessarily that cut and dry. It depends on what you think their motives were.If you believe the motives were simply because his birth certificate said Male... yeah... that would obviously be sexist.However... when it comes to asserting sexism , racism , or any other ism, perception IS pertinent.If the people were under a misconception that breast cancer doesn't happen to men, it's still ignorant, but in a different way.This is an ignorance of a medical nature. If they thought that breast cancer only effected women, it isn't sexism . It would be comparable to a person thinking that only men or only women can be stimulated anally (and I have met a person that thought only men could be stimulated that way, btw). It's just an anatomical/medical thing that they didn't know.I personally give these people the benefit of the doubt and simply accuse them of being MORONS (rather than sexists). I think a very somber mulligan is in order. I have no doubt steps will be taken to prevent this in the future. You're talking about a charity here. You're not talking about a demographic that's full of wicked motives.They just want to identify cancer early to save lives.In my opinion, people that are doing such a morally upstanding and compassionate thing... deserve the benefit of the doubt. Wow...I like most of your videos but this one surprised me. It surprised me because you actually seem to be very passionate about your belief in this. Yes, you can believe whatever you want, but this one surprised me because of your extreme lack of empathy. It's what I see from most straight,white men. (I know that last sentence probably set you off, and it was supposed to, so please hear me out). It comes off like a spoiled king sitting on his golden throne bemoaning the servants and how they get all the breaks. Male privilege is real, just like white privilege and straight privilege. Yes, people will discriminate against men, but it's disproportionate compared to how many more people discriminate against women, especially on a daily basis. You sound like a white guy getting mad because of all those whiny black people who don't know how hard it is being a white guy and all the discrimination we get. Any reverse discrimination a white guy gets is infinitesimal compared to the actual discrimination a black guy gets ever day of his life. The same can be said for gay people compared to straight people. It's also the same for women compared to men.You don't know what it's like being a minority (or a woman, who I know make up more of the population so lets not get hung up on semantics), or being ACTUALLY discriminated against. Reverse discrimination is way different then actual discrimination. Women and children first is an archaic argument, BTW, and, if you were being honest, doesn't really affect you in 2015. How do I know what I'm talking about is true? I don't. I just have my life experience. I am a gay, white male and an Atheist. I understand discrimination all too well in the form of homophobia and it effects me almost every day of my life, in big ways and small ways. I know what it's like to be discriminated against because of being gay, but, amusingly, I also know what it's like to be discriminated against because of being straight. You see, I "pass" as straight, and most, if not all, people assume I'm straight. So, very rarely, a case will come up where it seems like I'm being discriminated against because I'm straight. I can also tell you, those scenarios occur rarely, if ever. However, I can tell you I experience homophobia almost everyday of my life, and sometimes it's so bad, that it's almost crippling. If you are truly being honest with yourself, you'd understand that women are women everyday of their lives. Sexism and discrimination are a very real part of their lives that they live with EVERYDAY. You come off as pretty arrogant. You think you know what it's like being a woman in this society? You think it's not that bad and men get it just the same? Tell that to women forced to wear burkas and not allowed to leave their homes. Tell that to the girls who are murdered in the Middle East because they are trying to go to school. Tell that to the women in our country who still get paid $.75 to every dollar a man makes. Tell it to the girls suffering from the crippling eating disorders because every magazine, movie, and t.v. show tells them they are too fat. Tell that to the thousands and thousands of women who have been raped and are afraid to ever leave their homes alone for fear of violence against them.This video of yours comes off at the very least, unsympathetic and at the worst, extremely misogynistic. brajamtho757 can't give you a solid answer there lol Only conclusion i can draw that makes sense is that when the original movement was founded during a time of a huge gender divide, it made sense to call it feminism. It was fighting to make the rights of females equal to those of men. when the movement restarted, it started with the same intentions as the original, but then the actions of the few converted the many and the whole thing spiraled out of control. To fight for one side or the other is not whats needed in order for changes to be made. we need gender equality on both sides. By male genital mutilation do you mean circumcision? Cause i totally agree with you. any form of non-consenting body mutilation should be illegal.	Gender	Gender - General	2/134	1.493
Calling the fight for gender equality FEM inism is like calling the fight for racial equality BLACK ism. Even by the dictionary definition, feminism doesn't aim for 100 equality. It only cares about the rights that females have; it doesn't give a shit about the rights that men have.	Black, Gender	Ethnicity - Black, Gender - General	2/49	4.082
Charlie Turner Feminism was created to help give females equal rights to men (in the eyes of the law), therefore it wanted gender equality as its aim was to bring one gender to the same equal status as the other. Nothing more nothing less. That's kind of my point lol. People have taken the it to the extreme and seem to be forgetting that the so called rights that they are fighting to have are also ones that a lot of men don't, but they only give a shit about the female side of things.	Gender, Nothing	Age - Youngsters, Gender - General	4/95	4.211

Honestly, the world has taken a turn for the worst. The problem is, what 'feminists' don't realise is that they are NOT preaching equality. The word "Feminist," literally means someone who supports or sympathises with the natural behaviour of women. BIOLOGICALLY, women are built to be less dominant, more sympathetic and more diligent, in the sense that they are better with organisation and managing things, therefore so this is can be seen as the NATURAL BEHAVIOUR OF WOMEN. However our society has changed in recent years, so that now men and women share the same RIGHTS to the most reasonable extent, which is great, I cannot deny. Having equal rights is one thing however, but denying natural human biology is another. In the eyes of modern day 'equality,' I have the right to be a part of any club I want, and no one can deny me acceptance into the club. I also have a right to attend any school or university I want, so I don't have to be a girl to go to an all girls school because we're all have the right to be a part of anything we like, don't we? The problem is, you can only go so far as to provide people with equal rights. However, the common misconception is that equal means "the same." This is entirely false. Equal means "even," or "level." No body on this earth is the same, but the biggest physical division between people is by gender. By this I mean that there are a lot of differences between men and women. Does this mean that naturally the two genders despise each other? No. It simply means you can't compare a man to a women because they are both built very differently. Why then do we all act as if men and women should perform the same roles, and be subject to the same things. No body thinks of the way people are MEANT to act anymore. The traditional idea of the family is fading, and inevitably the next generation will grow up in a very different and strange way. We are only contributing to this problem. And the problem is that we are not recognising the things that NEED to be changed, we are creating illusions of these problems that don't exist.	Common, Gender	Gender - General, Social Class - Working class	2/384	0.521

+AJ Stevens Social gender roles have nothing to do with actual differences of genders. Sorry, but where is the evidence that women cannot act dominant according just to their bodies? Where is the evidence that they shouldn't have the same roles as men? The only and I mean THE ONLY thing that should differ women from men are their primary and secondary sex organs. For anything else there are exceptions, therefor it cannot be a legit rule. Actually, even for the sex organs there are exceptions. But what I mean is, a womans mind doesn't work different then a mans. Only because it's the norm that women do that and men do that doesn't say it is the right or the only thing to do. And society doesn't get harmed only because gender roles slowly fade, why should it? Who gets harmed if it becomes normal for men wearing make up or for women to have 'mens jobs'. BobTheTrueCactusOk that's it i tried to be nice and explain it kindly but if there so much discrimination against men why the fuck don't other men do something about it? Why the fuck do you expect women to fight for both themselves and you? it would be like Mike Tyson ran crying to his mother any time someone made fun of him you're big boys handle it yourself because there is no one of higher privilege to appeal to as a white male the buck stops with you and privilege comes with responsibility if you want to give up one you're going to have to give up the other no exceptions	Buck	Ethnicity - Black	1/112	0.893

MrElionorWow... you really do not get it. Ok, but first things first. If you want people to get your point then please keep it below 67 words per sentence.You're actually invalidating your own argument. Why don't men solve the problem of discrimination against men? Because there are lots of assholes out there that think that men have to (and can) solve all their problems on their own. They might even compare all men to Mike Tyson who of course should not start crying and go to his mother to complain about how unfair the world is.Just odd that this does not seem to apply for women. Why do men have to solve their own problems but women should get all support of the whole of society? They certainly are big girls that can handle it themselves.Just by the way... how the fuck do you come to the conclusion that men are the most privileged "class" of society? Women got a longer lifespan than men and in medicine most research funds that are spent for gender specific fields benefit women - not men. On the other hand the draft only forces men to go to the army in most countries. Oh yeah - what a privilege to die for your country or to simply waste months or years of your life.It's just not that simple. The people on the very top of society might most often be men, but the people at the very bottom are often usually men too. Look at homeless people for example. Society does not seem to regard men as beings that need protection. But EVERYONE can get into a situation in which you need help.So... why exactly should women not help me to solve my problems? I didn't say they should solve ALL my problems or that I should rely solely on them. I simply think that people should solve the problems of people and society should help to solve the problems of its members. Why should women only focus on the problems of women or men only focus on the problems of men? Inequalities are inequalities, no matter who is being harmed. And having a woman speak up for you as a man is not a shame but should be regarded as sth. totally normal, same as a man speaking up for a woman is considered to be normal.And yes: Privileges often go along with responsibilities. But while womens rights activists actively demand equal rights, they pass when it's about the distribution of responsibilities. The result of that can never be true equality.You either treat people equally regardless of their gender or you don't. If you make a difference, then you're an advocate of gender based discrimination.	Gender, Woman	Gender - General	5/460	1.087

BobTheTrueCactusPutting aside your sudden problem with my grammar as i said there is no one for men to cry to what's more no one cares that's the draw back of having the most privileges (how do i know that? I look around) and it's selfish and childish to expect someone else what's more someone less fortunate then you to solve your problems women don't sit back saying "fix it for me" why would men expect that? I agree if women were treated as equals it would be unfair to favor women but that's not the case and why do women live longer than men? What's more how would you want to equalize it? And I said they had less benefits not non and believe it or not for some people it is a privilege to serve and die for their country but do you think the draft offers both sexes the this privilege? Why does the draft only take men? It's because for the longest time it was the general consensus that women could only make and raise babies you don't think there were women who wanted to fight? Were they taken seriously? Hell no all they ever heard was "don't worry your pretty little head about it" even now a woman has to work twice as hard to be worth half as much in the army make no mistake the draft is sexist against women not men it's not that hard either women have real problems do you really think it's fair to ask them to stop and kiss your boobos? And what's perhaps most telling is despite your statement that people should solve the problems of people and the society all you have asked in this thread is for women to help men you never said anything about men needing to help women but i guess that's a given right?	Woman	Gender - General	1/313	0.319
--	-------	------------------	-------	-------

Ok, I learned something new today. Women have the chance to join the army if they wish. Men are forced to join it and have to go to prison if they won't. And that's sexist against women. Good to know.The draft is no opportunity. Opportunities are voluntary - and if it was a privilege then you wouldn't put people into prison if they don't want to go.At least in the western world women are not less fortunate than men. That's just nonsense. About the lifespan: Let's just take the example of cancer research. Research of types of cancer that mainly or exclusively affect women (breast and ovary cancer) receive multiple times as much funding as cancer research that mainly benefits men (testicular and prostate cancer). This does not reflect the amount of caused deaths by those types of cancer at all, so maybe this is a field where we could start equalizing a little and basing the funding on the benefit it would cause - not on the gender of the patients. This would automatically decrease the inequalities in this field.And you're putting words in my mouth again. What I said is, society needs to help people that are in need and to erase inequalities. Society includes men and women. So yeah, men and women are responsible to erase inequalities that affect members of society. Both genders suffer from those inequalities, both genders should do sth. about it. Together.You said:"And what's perhaps most telling is despite your statement that people should solve the problems of people and the society all you have asked in this thread is for women to help men you never said anything about men needing to help women but i guess that's a given right?"I actually adresssed that in the comment you just replied to:"Why should women only focus on the problems of women or men only focus on the problems of men? Inequalities are inequalities, no matter who is being harmed. And having a woman speak up for you as a man is not a shame but should be regarded as sth. totally normal, same as a man speaking up for a woman is considered to be normal." Support should go both ways.Dude, I'm talking about gender equality all the time. It goes without saying that this counts for both genders.Society has to enforce equal treatment. If somebody is discriminated against because of the gender, then the society should work on fixing this. Society shouldn't help because the person who is being discriminated against is male/female, but because that person is discriminated against due to the gender. The gender of that person doesn't matter, only the fact that the person had to suffer gender based discrimination.	Gender, Woman	Gender - General	8/458	1.747

And it takes two to tengo you act like women are the ones holding us back and you're making out men to be the innocent bystanders it's very easy to think you have a bias and you said "man speaking up for a woman is considered to be normal" that doesn't mean that man do it or they should do it now we often speak for women but that's hardly the same thing take abortion and birth control for instance a group of old male farts get to decide if a woman gets the choice what to do with her body isn't that nice of them? MrElionor I don't think you get how blanket statements are supposed to work. For one, a blanket statement would be more along the lines of "Everything you say is wrong." and not "Everything else you said is retarded." because for starters I can't apply that statement to anything you say after the fact. But if you want me to back it up, then I'll back it up with the fact that you're too dumb to realize that being forced to do something is not a benefit or privilege, and thus the draft is not sexist against women. Women get to join the army if they want. Men are legally obligated to sign the draft and if they don't they go to jail. That's not sexism against women, it's the complete opposite. There's also your claim that men experience no sexual discrimination, which I will refute by saying (again) that the majority of domestic violence victims are men, but whenever they want to report it they're laughed and mocked for being weak. There's also that women get far milder prison sentences than men for committing the exact same crime and sometimes they don't get sentenced at all even though there's clear evidence of their crime. Bas van de KleutIt is an opportunity it's an opportunity to do something noble the reason it's so strict is because not everyone is noble you are given a choice an alternative you may view it as a shitty alternative but it is non less an alternative punishing the wrong choice is not the same thing as only giving one choice it's a manipulation tactic and we owe the order we enjoy in our society to it and it is very selfish to put your own needs above that of the country take a look what happened this past election that's what selfishness and cowardice gets you no one said that it's going to be easy or that it has to be easy but the difficulty does not negate your responsibility yes war is hell that is why we work so hard or at least we used to work hard to avoid it so innocent people don't have to sacrifice their lives so people can afford to be selfish to be afraid but in times of war in times of crisis in times of desperation when every body is needed there is no room for individuality war is indeed hell it has many costs that must be payed if we allowed a war to happen we already fucked up but if war is such hell why do people so willingly sign up? Why do people eagerly line up for it? It could be because they want to escape their own personal hells grass is always greener on the other side after all they join for the honor and valor promised believing perhaps naively the army's claims that it will make their lives better not realizing fully what it entails that war is a meat grinder and they're the meat but ask any alive soldier if they would trade their places with anyone else if they would give the PTSD the horric memories the disabillities the injuries both physical and mental to anyone else even their worst enemy the answer would be a resounding no because a soldier is taught to value the good of others over his own to bear the burdens so others don't have to many join specifically because they understand the full implications of war that the price must be payed so they willingly and selflessly throw themselves in the meat grinder so others don't have to they brave the hell for their friends their family and their country they fight for their brethren on the battlefield as well everyone back home they are brave so everyone else can be cowards and to think that a woman can't understand this that a woman wouldn't want this that a woman can't choose this is the highest form of sexism against women	Mental, Sexism, Woman	Gender - General, Physical Identity - Physical (and Mental) Impairments	5/464	1.078

Not everyone is a goddamn b-movie protagonist, not everyone can fight or wants to fight and almost nobody has the spirit of those war heroes you like to preach about so much. The simple facts are that men are forced to sign the draft and throw their lives away in times of war under the assumption that "Oh, you can handle war, you're a big strong man," regardless of whether they actually are. i don't know of any studies that specifically talk about men needing social hierachy but this [LINK] talks about how difference in gender performance are most likely down to culture as the more equality there is in a country, the less differance there is in performance of each gender . i don't know if this can be applied to the social hierachy thing, but it's good to keep in mind. if anyone knows of any studies that are more specific to the situation we are discussing please let me know. William Baric tbh i'm quite confused by your response...it might be differences between our culture but young children where i am don't seem to care about gender roles. just as many girl play competitive games as the boys and they get REALLY into it. it is less common for boys to play stereotypically girly games but i think that's more down to society than any innate masculine urges.this is basically the nature nurture debate and there's no real way to prove either way. i personally think culture and childrearing have more of an affect on what a person does than whether they have XX or XY chromosomes. It's clear however that no one is going to win this argument so let's agree to disagree?	Common, Gender	Gender - General, Social Class - Working class	2/125	1.6
Rebecca Hartopp I'll quote your study :”in 2005, Elizabeth Spelke, PhD, a psychologist at Harvard University, and colleagues reviewed 111 studies and concluded that gender differences in math and science ability have a genetic basis in cognitive systems that emerge in early childhood. Nevertheless, the studies suggested that men and women on the whole possess an equal aptitude for math and science.”So basically, from 111 studies, the conclusion was there was gender differences, but, if we manipulate data in a certain way, we can ”prove” that there is an equal aptitude.Don't you see anything wrong with this?I just did a search on ”boys and competition” on Google and took the first link. Here it is : [LINK] I'll quote an interesting part : ” The authors then studied the speed of the children in the race . When the children ran alone, there was no difference in performance. In competition, boys but not girls improved.”Again, I just took the first link returned by Google. Almost all studies shows this. Competition is the motivator for boys.Having said that, I'll give you another study, this one about studies in psychology : [LINK] So basically, most psychology studies are bullshit. And the worse is that was not about broad affirmation like boys and girls are the same, but about specific and measurable tests.We can't do real research in psychology. We can't run experiments on children. It would be unethical.So how about you use your own observation and your own intelligence? After all, if you can be objective, it will be as good if not better than a PhD with a agenda.	Gender, Race	Ethnicity - General, Gender - General	3/275	1.091

S Brank I'm not sure I understand what you mean with "the ones from the competitive society will evolve to be better at everything". I would agree that an ultra competitive society would have an influence on evolution and favor individuals who are better at competition, but you have to realize that every societies are pretty much built upon cooperation (which of course include sharing and compassion), not competition. Being able to cooperate is essential to any individual who lives in a society and societies must absolutely limit competition to allow the ability to cooperate to evolve. An ultra competitive society will self-destruct.Do women share, have compassion and want "equality" when it favors them? Of course! They're not dumb . It's exactly the same as saying men respect laws only when it favors them. It's exactly the same as saying men will go to war only when it favors them.By the way, if you think women do not compete when they "share", you obviously don't know much about women.You say that a woman's brain is too solipsistic to realize anything? That's certainly not true. Women are obsessed with what the others are thinking. Men view structure and roles, women view individuals and relationship. But neither of them have a "solipsistic brain".As for this "winning" thing, "winning" an Internet argument is completely worthless. The Internet is great to SHARE ideas, but the only ones who'll use it as a sparring ring are losers.	Dumb	Physical Identity - Physical (and Mental) Impairments	1/245	0.408

William Baric Yeah, of course I didn't mean in a 100 competitive society. It was meant as in a reasonably competitive one.My problem with the sharing, compassion, equality, was the hypocrisy. And no, there isn't a movement of men, which claims they want one thing, which actually pushing for what they say they are against. For feminists (and to be honest women in general too), they love to dress their agenda in pretty words such as "equality", while at the same time they push for female supremacy, and male oppression. They want the benefits of being women, while getting the benefits of being male, but without the corresponding responsibilities. I've heard this statement from so many females, and not from even one male - "I know this is wrong/not right/bad/whatever, but it's right for me!" - NEVER FROM A MAN. Last time I heard it, was a couple of days ago. And almost no women find an issue with such an overall approach. This speaks VOLUMES for the female brain. And this is the female solipsism I'm talking about. Another example - why so many guys go out, meet a girl, ask for her number, she gives it, he says "I'd like to go out with you one of the next few days", she says "yeah, why not?", and then she flakes. SO many times, and I'm not talking about myself only, this is the same bullshit that men all around the world deal with, and they can agree that it happens. On the other hand I don't see many women complaining from the same issue. If a guy exchanges contacts with a girl, he is more than willing to see her again and plans to follow up on it (on average). I'll tell you why this happens - it's because women decide how they feel on the spot, do something, without looking into it in a long-term perspective, and then when they wake up the next day, they decide that "meh, I don't feel like it anymore, so the arrangement is void". They have no intention of standing by their words, if they don't currently, on the spot feel like it. To a woman it's all about how she feels right now. Read on Briffault's law. skarbuskreskaI do agree there exist a small minority of women who are competitive and a small minority of men who are caring. That's why I used expressions like "in general" and "generally".As for the argument that "no civilization can survive without the one thing and the other", my point was that a particular society structure can't be optimized for both men and women at the same time, which means depending on the societies' choices, one gender will inevitably be favored over the other.I'll take the education system as an example. Up until the 60s, schools were organized around individual responsibilities, hierarchy and competition. This environment clearly favored boys. However, starting in the 60s, feminists pushed for a lot of reforms, and the result is since the mid 70s or the early 80s (depending on countries) the education system clearly favor girls.One solution would be segregation between men and women in society, including different roles assigned to men and women, but I'm guessing you would be completely against this idea. People are dumb as fuck, women will never be equal because they wont stop at equal they will try to be better now hear me out, take black people for example they used to be slaves then everyone said why cant we all be equal, so they were equal at one point, now white people are the underdogs for example a family from Africa come to Britain and become residents after a few years, so now they can vote/get benefits/work/send there kids to school, legally in this country and I must accept anything they want to do or im racist so as a British born resident I have no more rights than them maybe even less because I cant dislike them for something they do or im hailed as racist but they can judge me however they like, but if I went to Africa and I was gay im not but if I was I would get kidnapped or my head cut off for being gay I watched a documentary on it lol, and would never in a million years be accepted by them so how is this equal, its like me giving you half my pizza and you punching me in the face its not equal, and going back to women they wont stop at equal can you ever see the day where you could punch a woman and that was just fine if not then im afraid you see my point, then whites and men will feel boxed in a corner then shit will hit the fan trust me	Black, Dumb, Gay, Racist, Woman	Ethnicity - Black, Ethnicity - General, Gender - General, Physical Identity - Physical (and Mental) Impairments, Sexual Identity - General, Sexual Identity - Male homosexuality	9/261	3.448

MrElionor So about Trump and Clinton. Yes it's a fact that Trump is racist , arrogant, etc. It's also a fact that Clinton is irresponsible with the confidential info, and maybe there's other stuff about them I haven't heard of. But when you put the two together and compare what they've done to see who is better, it's down to opinion. It's like comparing 2 movies or 2 books. You know what they're about and you know what happens in them, but you decide what you think is better based on what you're interested in and what you focus on. Clinton has made wrong decisions before but I hope she can learn when she's president. I would vote for Clinton but I'm a minor in another country, but I won't judge Trump voters as being a leader has factors other than arrogance accounted in it. Besides, expectations won't always be the same once they're a leader.And what I meant by doing nothing , America doesn't have much wrong going on now, so if you don't make any changes, nothing would really go wrong, unless there's some big riot or something, then Trump will most probably speak up, because he's obliged to, and he always does random stuff like that. Sexism isn't a male/female problem it's a human problem. While some (if not most) feminist hate men, it's not about hating the opposite gender . I agree that if it's truly a equal society, women shouldn't have more privilege than men. But every one forgets that men and women are different. While men have no need for doctors who specialize on birth, women also have no need for prostate exams. Men are more likely to die in a war than a woman , and women are more likely to die by sexual than men. It's not just about feminism because you never experience just one type of biased there are multiple types of biases. I haven't taken supplements for over 6 months either. While the "Omnivore/Herbivore" thing is always getting debated. The Omnivorous side could purely be for survival, say during winter etc. But Society has evolved beyond that. Sure I would hunt if I was lost in the wild and didn't know what to eat. But I love animals, I care about animal and I no longer need these things to survive. Beans, sprouts, lentils... A lot of fruit has Protein believe it or not. I can dead lift 200kg. I'm over 100kg. I'm also a Pro Wrestler (highly physical sporting entertainment.) While there are these you've learned a long your way. I BEG you to research it more. Because i'm living proof that not everything you said is accurate my friend. Best of luck.	Fruit	Sexual Identity - Male homosexuality	1/164	0.61
"The same sexism that hurts women also hurts men", as Laci Green puts it. What youre saying in this video is on point what sexism against men is about, that men are supposed to be the stronger sex . Men aren't allowed to be weak, they're not allowed to cry, or else they'll get called pussies. God forbid can a man be scared and take a place in a lifeboat, no, he has to be brave and save all the poor helpless women. This is basically what feminism wants to stop, and a lot of men are just to stupid to realize this. At the same time women are encouraged to be fragile and innocent, men are raised to not show weakness. What feminism is working towards is not only that women should be allowed to be strong and tough, but also that men should be allowed to be weak, to be fragile, to be in needof help (like the man with breast cancer, and all men with prostate cancer), and that gender roles are completely annihilated. Call this equalism if you want, but this is what feminists, at leat those who know what theyre talking about, are working towards.	Gender, Sex, Sexism	Gender - General	4/199	2.01

twettex Completely agree. It is horrible. I know one argument used by feminists and egalitarians is that men should be allowed to be weak and emotional and our compulsion to not show these signs is our suffering as a result of " gender inequality." However it is important that women allow men to act strong and tough and try not to diminish this part of them. This war on men or battle for gender equality has caused so much heartache for men. So much is being taken from men. I have no problem with going to war to protect the women and children. I have no problem staying on the sinking ship whilst the women and children jump on the lifeboats. It is the man's duty to protect. The day when women are conscripted for war as well is when we know this has gone too far.	Gender	Gender - General	2/146	1.37
Yes, and I dont think that anybody should stop u from being u. At the same time, other men might not be like u, they might be scared, might have dreams they want to fulfill or simply arent ready to die for someone else. Who can say that he deserves to live any less then a woman who mightve already lived twice as long as him? Meanwhile some women might feel that they want to sacrifice themselves in order to protect people they love, or maybe because they dont want to be seen as fragile, or because if theyre going to die they at least want to die as heroes and in that case gender roles shouldnt stop them. Like I think that everyone should be allowed to be the way they want to be and yes, perhaps more men would still CHOOSE to fight for their contry because of higher testosterone levels or whatever but that shouldne mean all men have to. Like, if we could just break the stereotypes and let everyone be themselves, regardless if their personality fits into gender roles or not. By the way, im not disagreeing with u, just adding onto my previous comment.	Gender, Woman	Gender - General	3/200	1.5
As a feminist, I have to say that for me, there definitely is sexism against men. Sexism not only affects women greatly, but it also very much affects men as well. It very much sucks that people think otherwise. :U	Sexism	Gender - General	2/40	5.0
Armin-Senpai ɿ Considering the underlying sexism in your 1 that exists because men get breast cancer too. That's the reason they are not equivalent actually. Also, this is what makes the breast cancer movement slightly sexist, it's not just a woman's issue, it's just an issue that mainly affects women (1 in 1000 for men and 1 in 8 for women). I think it'd be better if we just moved breast cancer into the cancer box as a whole honestly.	Sexism	Gender - General	1/80	1.25

I feel very similarly. I think with any person the situation is simply that you will agree with some of their views and disagree with others, even if your feelings about the views exist on extreme ends of the spectrum. I think people act a lot of the time like if you strongly disagree with what someone thinks, that you should feel as though that discredits them entirely, but I think that wrong. I've found people with whom I very strongly disagree with 49 times out of 50, but then there will be that one view where I think they're spot on, or they at the very least make some good points. I think it's just that it's gonna be rare to find someone who's reasoning is perfect, who doesn't have emotions and biases effecting their perspective, but that doesn't mean there aren't times where they are going to see things very logically. I think with most people you can find things you agree with. Even after understanding that, I still have trouble coming to terms with strongly agree with and strongly disagreeing with a single individuals different views, or a certain set of views with a certain label (I can find opinions of value with on each side of the sexism argument), and I don't know if that's my own issue or if it has to do with the us-vs-them mentality that's so prevalent, that makes me feel like I need to have a well defined set of views that fit in with an already established set of views. I've kind of said to hell with all of that though. Fuck the categories, I'll agree with any point that I see as most logical.	Sexism	Gender - General	1/285	0.351
This guy says some good points which tend to be missed by activists for sex equality, that while negative discrimination occurs more often against women, discrimination against men is also fairly prevalent and discouraging sexism against one sex may 'level the field', but it's not the right attitude for achieving sex equality. I don't think you are directly addressing feminism. Feminism is defined as the the belief that women are equal to men. My question for you is who? You say feminists do this and that, who are these feminists? I do consider myself a feminist but I do realize that sexism against men exists. That is exactly how I found this video, because I wondered why this issue isn't addressed. Don't stereotype all feminists, I'm 99 the people you are talking about are ignorant feminists, they have the right purpose, but incorrect education on the matter. If you would like to address the issue I suggest you do so in a less vulgar manner, that way you will receive more feedback. I agree and do believe that the idea of sexism against men is underrated and seldom addressed, however I don't agree with all of your videos. Realize what you are saying. If there is sexism against women then there is also sexism against men. Your video titled there is no Rape culture? Really? I hear rape jokes daily. By saying it doesn't exist is thereby denying part of the problem. If we have an issue called 'sexism' then we must recognize that there are two sides of that regarding both sexes. If you want your side as a male to be recognized and respected then you must start out by doing the same and work your way forward. Just a suggestion. Goodbye

UN Women Goodwill Ambassador Emma Watson has spoken up about being sexualised by the media and the importance of feminism in her first major speech. Read it in fullEmma Watson has given her first major speech as UN Women Goodwill Ambassador.She spoke in New York on Saturday, at an event launching the HeForShe campaign, which aims to improve gender equality.Her speech is reproduced in full here:Today we are launching a campaign called 'HeForShe.'I am reaching out to you because I need your help. We want to end gender inequality—and to do that we need everyone to be involved.This is the first campaign of its kind at the UN: we want to try and galvanize as many men and boys as possible to be advocates for gender equality. And we don't just want to talk about it, but make sure it is tangible.I was appointed six months ago and the more I have spoken about feminism the more I have realized that fighting for women's rights has too often become synonymous with man-hating. If there is one thing I know for certain, it is that this has to stop.ADVVERTISEMENTFor the record, feminism by definition is: 'The belief that men and women should have equal rights and opportunities. It is the theory of the political, economic and social equality of the sexes.'I decided I was a feministI started questioning gender-based assumptions when at eight I was confused at being called 'bossy,' because I wanted to direct the plays we would put on for our parents—but the boys were not.When at 14 I started being sexualised by certain elements of the press.When at 15 my girlfriends started dropping out of their sports teams because they didn't want to appear 'muscly.'When at 18 my male friends were unable to express their feelings.I decided I was a feminist and this seemed uncomplicated to me. But my recent research has shown me that feminism has become an unpopular word.Apparently I am among the ranks of women whose expressions are seen as too strong, too aggressive, isolating, anti-men and, unattractive.Why is the word such an uncomfortable one?Not everyone has been as lucky as me Emma WatsonI am from Britain and think it is right that as a woman I am paid the same as my male counterparts. I think it is right that I should be able to make decisions about my own body. I think it is right that women be involved on my behalf in the policies and decision-making of my country.I think it is right that socially I am afforded the same respect as men. But sadly I can say that there is no one country in the world where all women can expect to receive these rights.No country in the world can yet say they have achieved gender equality.These rights I consider to be human rights but I am one of the lucky ones. My life is a sheer privilege because my parents didn't love me less because I was born a daughter. My school did not limit me because I was a girl. My mentors didn't assume I would go less far because I might give birth to a child one day.These influencers were the gender equality ambassadors that made who I am today. They may not know it, but they are the inadvertent feminists who are. And we need more of those. And if you still hate the word—it is not the word that is important but the idea and the ambition behind it. Because not all women have been afforded the same rights that I have. In fact, statistically, very few have been.Men,	African, Gender, Mental, Nothing, Woman	Age - Youngsters, Ethnicity - Black, Gender - General, Physical Identity - Physical (and Mental) Impairments	15/1316	1.14

And nowadays Feminists hate that "children and women first" attitude because it's sexist. But then they want such special treatment so how the fuck should one know what they want? Well you shouldn't because they don't know it themselves. hahahahahaMen and Women are different for a reason, and should be treated differently, but within that equally. Because Men and Women have different needs to begin with, so duh, of course you would treat a woman differently than a man, but that shouldn't imply that you forgett the other gender ! The " patriarchy " doesn't exist. Last time I checked we don't live in the 1930s or earlier. It's 2015 and as of right now women are treated better than men, for one example, women get paid more than men do these days. That's right, not less than, not equal to, but more, than men. acozybunny I posted a few sources, but my comment containing them was removed for an unknown reason. But it is pretty well-established (although not proven) that women feel considerably more pain than men do. This is because a woman 's survival biologically takes priority over a male's; a woman can only have so many kids, whereas a man can have kids with tons and tons of women. Aspie OtakuAs an obvious anime fan, you should1.) Only look for women who're into anime and manga and whom are into the whole anime crowd gaming crowdand2.) Just be yourself, literally. It doesn't matter how embarrassing you act, how much you stumble and fumble over yourself, or how much you trip up your words. It'd be better to simply be yourself, your worst, immediately, than to hide your faults only for them to come to light later on when the relationship is in the middle of developing. That way you'll know that the girl that you're with already likes you, and knows of your faults and weaknesses and still is with you anyway.And in cases of sex or w/e, 3.) if you can get through the embarrassing undressing in front of your partner part, as long as you keep going even after you climax, she won't be going anywhere and will likely be satisfied. Just don't fucking cheat (unless she's kinda skanky, and in that case why did you even get with her like wtf lol)You said you go on and on and whatever, but women actually do like it when a man talks, just not when he talks more than her. Women already get enough talking with our girlfriends, we don't need a man who goes on forever too lolol.	Sex	Gender - General	1/228	0.439
