I'm not convinced hate can be defined definitively. I also don't feel that anyone, of any race or religion should be protected from 'hate' outside of violence. It only leads to restrictions on free speech in my opinion. People should be allowed to criticize anything or anyone they choose rather than being silenced. We're living in the real world, people are going to 'hate' you no matter what road you travel down, it's part of life. It seems far better to understand that and barring violence, walkaway from 'hate' and do one's best not to hate, themselves.	Race	Ethnicity - General	1/97	1.031

Micheal Ruel your comment just demonstrates my point, you're ignorant as hell. The top 10 least educated, most welfare dependent and overall 'worst' states to live in are all RED states. To go even further, 97 out of the top 100 counties across the US are in the same boat - on the bottom of every aspect on education and social societal issues as being actual 'shitholes'. The US ranks 35th out of a 36 developed Western nations in a study on the understanding of the sciences. Why the US ranks so poorly is because of those RED states and counties which drag down the national margin by huge percentages. Even more concerning, Republicans are far behind Democrats with secondary education. Let alone how far behind Republicans are from the rest of the Western world. That is why you Republicans have a well deserved stereotype as being known as STUPID people across the Globe. Rep. Omar needs to be removed from office since she is Anti-American! However, do not confuse "The State of Israel" and "The Religion of Judaism". One may be against a nation's policies or support of "Israel" and not be anti-semitic. Shannon Bream, you should make that clarification between "Religion" and "State". Historically, the Nation of Judah and the Nation of Israel went to war against one another. Which nation is anti-semite there? Neither, I am showing you that a nation may rise up against another nation without being anti-semitic since we are talking about a nation's policies now. We don't want to give any nation , religion or people a free pass to commit crimes against another. I move we stop all foreign aid, especially abroad, until we are no longer in debt as a nation . Communism btw founded in the 1850s revolutions against western European monarchies- the original progenitors very much cared about the state of their countries and sought to plan and organise their countries, devoting their entire lives to changing the dreadful situation average people suffered in the industrial era. You are currently misusing the term communist and lashing out at a group of people. Who is more productive, ergo who cares more? Maybe OP could ask what he may do for his country.
