There are so many people in the comments here who don't realize people in their mid to late 30s are actually just the oldest Millennials. lol We've been infantilized for so long that people think Millennials are still teenagers when that's actually Gen-Z. There's been several times since I turned 30 that I've had younger people respond to my dissenting opinion with nothing but "You're 3 " (whatever specific age I am at the time), as though that's a valid response to negate everything I just said, even when the topic was how pointless it is to be toxic to strangers (which you'd think life benefits of how you act would be something an older person would be qualified to speak on out of life experience alone). It's idiotic and only tells me the person isn't worth conversing with anyway, and the same goes for anybody who pounces on physical appearance instead of substance. It's like... okay? Go ahead and act that way towards me, you're only making yourself look stupid without me actually having to engage you. Thanks for saving my time for me? apple is 50 design fagotry 50 designed obsolescence.it's a scam company doing scam product to scam dumb customers who care more about fashion then usability and who apparantly have more money then brains.I am offended by people who are such bad consumers! idiot consummers who dont punish bad behaviour do not belp drive innovation the advancement of humanity as a whole.capitalism does not work when a significant part of the population behaves like a bunch of retards!dont buy from price gougers like inteldont buy from comapies that manipulate test results to bias their product unfairly like intel, gefores, Volkswagen etc..dont buy from people who promote propriatary technology line nvidiam microsoft xbox etc...give your money to companies that give you good value for money, promote open standard and don't try to artfically manipulate the market so they can compete by means other then actually improving their product.Also don't feed the patent trolls. This method of undermining a person’s argument is called ad hominem. I’ve seen it be used against dozens of people, including politicians that focus on others instead of themselves. It’s a logical fallacy that you have to call out to hopefully break. When I mean hopefully, I mean that you have to show to the audience that just because someone acts/talks in this way does not mean that whatever points or thoughts they tell are valid. The same is for perfect, flawless looking people. Just because they are skinny and sound as suave as a slick blade does not mean they have well constructed or valid points. Watch the words, not the speaker.	Skinny	Physical Identity - Physical Features	1/113	0.885

It has nothing to do with stereotypes Rich, or even age for that matter. But more to do with people who have no moral or ethical values because their parents taught them to hate the world. Call it whatever you like, but its flat out harassment, and unfortunately Google empowers hatred on Youtube by allowing it. Unfortunately, this is what happens when you have a system where there's virtually no rules of engagement, people will crap on each other. It also doesn't matter what one's opinion is, hateful humans will always find a reason to preach more hate, its all they know. Just last night I expressed my opinion for the issues surrounding firearms in the U.S, and one response was literally laced with profanity and threats. What I don't understand is why Google is so adamant on demonetizing the most harmless of content, yet they allow harassing and threatening users to flourish. Its beyond irrational. ReviewTechUSAYou also discovered Rick Beato his channel, I discovered his channel a few weeks ago and I subscribed. It seems to me that Rick Beato is young at heart, despite his gray hair. He knows a lot about music and he's got a nice studio in his home. He shouldn't care about idiots saying dumb things, age is completely irrelevant with regard to knowledge, insight and intelligence, somebody who is smart and knowledgeable learns more when he gets older. I would say that Rick Beato has gotten smarter after years of buying too many Apple products when those weren't good enough. I am not sure if you understand it, those who thumb up such dumb comments - same as with your health problem - do this because they have a low self-esteem, they want to jump on somebody else to be distracted from their own problems. There is some truth to " ageism ," at least on the extreme side. Lack of experience on the younger side of things and older people who are out of touch, comfortable in their own bubble is a real thing. However, I never understand the argument of someone 30 or 40 being too old for a lot of things. Do these younger idiots think they have a better grip on technology and video games because they've been doing it for maybe 10 years, vs someone like Rich who has been living and breathing it for 30+?? If any argument was full of holes, it's pretending being younger, dumber and less experienced gives someone the edge over someone who has been living it for in a lot of cases 3x, 4x longer. this, by definition, is what you call "Expertise." I feel like a lot of things like racism , sexism and such are bigger problems than ageism ... Like even in a lot of really terrible countries ageism isn't that big of a thing I don't think... Besides, I feel like no one takes ageism seriously unless it is kind of valid which unlike racism and sexism it often is more valid... Not supporting it, just saying it's not common and hardly a problem.. i honestly think taking away the headphone jack was good and bad in many views. just like how they switched to the new lightning port, a lot of people hatted it, but it benefited in a long run because it took up less internal space and apple could use more of that space to boost hardware performance, it also kept the phone on the doc because the previous charger had issues with it coming off and sagging. just like the headphone jack, it allowed apple to expand more internally. the most dumb argument i have heard of it is that "what if i want to listen to music and charge my phone?" how bout you phone addic farts get off your phone for once in your pathetic life!!! jk, but seriously, apple included an adapter at least, plus bluetooth headphones are starting to be the norm, but i think it is way too early for apple to switch to suddenly. It's like that because "Adults" used to be almost completely out of the loop on video games. And so back in the day, it would make sense to some what discriminate against people who were older than you. And on the weight issue it just leans on the idea that fat people are fat because they are irresponsible in life, which is why they are now fat . And somehow that means they don't have as much credibility as someone who is thinner. I can see where both arguments come from, but they are both flawed. nightshadow I've quite frankly never heard or saw SJW's do that, You need to remember that SJW's are good people it's just that they radicalise things and take it too far, For example they want fat people to not be insulted but they took it to the point of saying " fat is attractive" which is not to most people, And please never ever listen to any of those Anti-SJW guys because they also take things too far and many times they would unconsciously (if that is a word) would actually become the racist bigots that SJW's claim them to be, What I'm saying is don't listen to either side and stay neutral, Judge a person for him or herself not by the group they are in or anything like that because by doing that you might fall into the big mistake of "GENERALISATION", hope my advice was good. Ad hominems aside, the people leaving these comments should know that they're missing out on a great source of experience with tech and consumerism in the videogame industry. As I've grown older (mid 30s at this point) my standards for games and other products have gone up, as the industry seems content to start taking steps back again. I'd like to think that in the long run demanding quality will benefit everyone. Brand loyalty is ridiculous and it's okay not to blindly like everything a company does. With this all or nothing approach consumers just shoot themselves in the foot, and I'm thankful that people like Rich remind us of that every once in a while with a critical look at these issues.	Nothing	Age - Youngsters	1/123	0.813

53 years old here and I hear you, Rich. I have been in tech and gaming long before a lot of you young whippersnappers, so us old folks know a lot more stuff than these egocentric kids you describe (whether they want to believe it or not). Many times I have run into the young "know it alls", and they very quickly find out they don't really know as much as they think or pretend they do. So this is what you call an "ad hominem". It's a type of logical fallacy, or lapse in logical thinking, such as but not limited to contradicting itself, or being about something not related to the topic. An Adhominem fallacy is when you attack the person and not their argument, this can be their age , weight, personality type, etc. In a formal debate, the first person to resort to an ad hominem is labeled the loser. Well I just turned 60... So if any tech doesn't cater correctly for me, or is not intuitive to use, then my opinion is NOT invalid because of my age !So here is a 'Life Hack' that I have learnt from all those years of life experience: Whenever I am in a debate with someone and the other person is proved wrong, the correct response is to graciously acknowledge that, just as I would. Or agree to disagree and move on. However, if the other party realising they are in the wrong starts to use personal insults and abuse... I immediately lick my forefinger, chalk up a huge check mark and say 'ding' for the win! Because as soon as they realise their logic no longer applies and resort to insults and abuse in a desperately pathetic attempt to justify their groundless position in the argument - That is the most blatant psychological signal to use, in admission of having lost and run up a huge white flag in defeat! Ignorance and undereducated people, or just haters and trolls are the ones that says or think things because of someone's age , physical appearance, gender , sexual orientation, or socio-economic status and disregard facts and opinions without any consideration and legitimate rebuttal as to why they think otherwise. There's no need to argue with such individuals since that's just how they are.Let them be. Hopefully such individuals will learn and better themselves...eventually. Don't waste your time. Not surprisingly, most are late born millennials born in the mid-1990s 2000s. As a 20 year old dude, I can say that I believe most stereotypes are rooted in some form of honesty/truth. Ageism isn't necessarily a good idea or philosophy to live by, but when older people come and tell me that me and younger generations are so lazy, playing video games, and pushing aside real responsibilities, then I understand what they're saying. The point is that this is sarcastic and the ones Rich is complaining about are people who post this and believe it makes sense so they are right. I haven't seen any indication that AsianMammoth believes this to be true. I swear you, unlike Rich, are looking for something to complain about when he had a point. Not every single thing needs a disclaimer, explanation, etc. when they are straight-forward jokes that anyone can figure out are nothing more than that. If they do, I don't know what is more true, that we are growing dumber as a species and seeking social justice that goes beyond acceptable actions or that I have some super intelligence that allows me to use what to me is common sense to figure out the purpose of things which completely changes how they should be viewed. I don't see why if you understand the purpose of this is different from what Rich is complaining about you try to say that it is the same exact thing when it isn't. Have some faith in humanity to understand that this is different before you make me lose what little I have left in you and other people. Yes there are some idiots in this world which is why this video exists in the first place but not everybody is like that and I don't see why you should be offended by good intentions to get someone to laugh and in a good mood.
