Then why is marriage desired mostly by women? And marriage is only inherently sexist when it's religious because religion is where the customs of purity comes from. But if you aren't religious and you wanna get married you're allowed to do it however you want! Some husband's even take the wife's last name. Not every construct is an oppressive. Not every word is racist or sexist or hateful you just choose to preceive it that way because you're selfconcious or scared of the truth.	Racist	Ethnicity - General	1/84	1.19
I'm getting married in less than a month. I would give everything I have for her and she for me. We both waited to have sex until marriage and we will both wear a ring as a sign we belong to someone else. It's called love and it's the most oppressive thing you'll ever experience. go and live in your own planet, hating men so much there are amazing incredible husbands. My aunt is an example she is a chemist engineer with a master, a super educated woman , and feminist who married my uncle also a chemist almost 50 years ago, until now she says ' marry your uncle is the best thing I did in my life, I basically was born again the day of our wedding,' she always work and did as she pleased with her career and children, my uncle was and still is absolute support to her, my dad also is incredible he supported professionally my mom always, They divorced but my mom was not in any way oppressed. He still cares about her and tries to protect her constantly and they are old people now. Denny Y no if women were oñ there own the human race would have ended.Men love women and women love men. My partner is the most precious person in the world to me. Men were hunting and providing for our female partners over a hundred thousand years ago.And this century the tampon and birth control pill was made by men and that improved the lives of women. I do not understand this world that you live in. My Gran and Grandad were together 70 years and had many children. I've been with my partner 7 years. Maybe you haven't met the right man. Or maybe your reading too much feminist sociological theory and it's stopping you from living reality. Look it's not perfect but we are here together and I'm telling you it is to love each other. I think you missed the point of the video slightly - at no point does she say you should not get married; only that it should not be assumed as 'natural' as it is deeply rooted in patriarchy ! I agree if you want to get married you should! But the acts in themselves of giving away the bride wearing white symbolically are products of the patriarchy and you should by mindful of that :)	Patriarchy	Gender - General	2/74	2.703

Izaiah Florés I am speaking about the dads more so. A husband cannot control a wife. She is an equal adult. I don't know where some women think they have to lose their voices in marriage. As far as a woman thinking her dad is supposed to walk her down the aisle, that's sick.and so wrong. She is not owned by her dad or husband. Besides, this practice is not cute. Her mother needs to stop being so weak and wobbly. She need to be aware of what her daughter needs from her.	Woman	Gender - General	1/93	1.075
My grandpa married my gran in the late 1940's - they had my dad and not long after that, my gran started losing her sight, leading her to become completely blind . My grandpa never complained, just carried on loving her and protecting her as he promised in his marriage vows. My gran , in turn, did her best to adapt, and supported her family. It was not "branding" or any other disgusting thing this woman is saying - she must need some counselling, carrying around this amount of hate and suspicion. in actual fact, marriage gives equal rights to each other, as goes the old saying ”i belong to you and you to me”, its a mutual symbiotic relationship, good and bad marriages exist in all eras and there were many happily married couples in all eras, because even the women at those times agreed that their primary role in marriage was raising children, yes EVEN the suffragists which are generally lauded as securing political rights for women.they didn’t want to be men, they just wanted the ability to make being a woman EASIER and motherhood given its proper respect.its the cold hard truth, and falling global birthrates shows what happens when traditional gender roles get abandoned.and guess what for everything you say about what horrible things a man does to a woman , i could to many women who do the same thing, but they are usually let of the hook, because that could never happen right?the survival of our species depends on it. we need more babies!! Marriage is what each person makes of it if we are privileged enough to live in a society where marriage does not equal losing rights involving physical safety. Unfortunately, laws often fall short on a global level of protecting equal rights and even safety for married women. Would I want to get married in a country or state where it wasn’t legally possible for a man to be charged with raping his wife? No, no matter how wonderful my husband is, and he is, I prefer all of my rights and safety intact as much as possible. No, I was not given away by anyone. I’m not an object. Yes, my husband and I did have a fantastic wedding, our version of one. Did my husband or I change our names? Why would we? It’s a complicated mess of paperwork. Now how being married or not, as a woman , in particular, alters how I am treated in the workplace...oh the list could go on.	Woman	Gender - General	1/164	0.61

As a feminist, you're wrong. Marriage WAS about men owning women, and often still is - but that's the point, we're trying to change marriage so it is seen as nothing other than a legal loving bond between two (or more) consenting adults. If your marriage is based upon female oppression (or any oppression), it's not a marriage worth saving. We want to destroy marriage based upon sexism , that's all - plain and simple, if you have a problem with not being sexist your opinion is not worth being heard. Marriage benefits the female, not the male. Look at family court. It is not a court of justice or a court of law, it is a court of equity. A female should not be entitled to half of a man's assets simply by saying "I do." I think I must be missing the point feminists are trying to make when they say its oppression to take the man’s surname when they marry. When they say giving up their name do they not mean giving up their fathers name? A surname is simply a practical way to identify a family group, a surcoat is a coat that covers all the under garments, a surname is a name that covers all the names of the family to put them under a group heading. What is the feminist alternative, Jane Smith marry’s Jack Jones, thinks she is oppressed if she drops her fathers name so becomes Jane smith Jones. That seems fine but then she has a daughter Jenny Smith Jones who marries a man who also had a feminist nutter for a mother and he his called John Brown Johnston. Better hope little jenny isn’t a feminist nutter like her mum or she is going to have to change her name to Jenny Smith Jones brown Johnston. Does anyone else see the problem here?I think you’ll find surnames were not invented to oppress women but as a simple practical solution to identify who little Tommy’s mum and dad are.Also when a father gives his daughter away it isn’t him giving his property away, it symbolizes him passing on the responsibility of the protection of that which he holds most dear to another. It isn’t him selling his property as you so kindly put it, it’s him saying ”this is that which I hold most precious, you had better lover her and protect like i do or i will descend on you like the wrath of of god”It’s an act of love not an act of oppression.Luckily for you though it is unlikely that you will get married so changing your name or being given away will not be an issue. That’s not a remark based on your looks by the way it’s based on the fact your personality comes across as rather vile.For the rest of us though most women cherish their fathers walking them down the isle and for most fathers it will continue to be the proudest day of their lives.Oh and by the way wedding dresses are not white to represent virginity you clown, blue is the traditional colour that represents purity. White didn’t become popular until Queen Victoria wore it and the widely published images made it popular……. I think they call this fashion. If you’re going to manipulate history to portray a fictitious view centered around female oppression at least get your facts right. If you are going to be a nutter don’t make yourself look like a stupid one, that’s what I say.	Nutter	Physical Identity - Physical (and Mental) Impairments	3/457	0.656

Marriage, as Christianity says, is a bond between two people where they share their love for each other and they threat one another as equals.The fact this definition was twisted over centuries of history is another topic. Anyway, I'm very surprised - well, not so much - about the ignorance in this comment section. People talk about patriarchy and feminism as if they know better, but they don't even know the definition or the history of these terms. This is a very intellectually flabby video.First the assertion that the institution of marriage is a tool of patriarchal oppression. It is not good enough to make this as a blanket statement. It may be a fair point in the forty seven countries stated that the legal rights of women are diminished or negated in marriage. The hudood laws in Pakistan are particularly egregious. Making this statement however in relation to all marriage regardless of nation or legality is nonsensical. Marriage in western nations has rendered men little more than chattels who may be discarded and disposessed on the whim of wives and in nations such as the U.K with the financial and legal backing of the state though mercifully state legal aid for divorce has reduced the gold rush of the dregs of womanhood from this mendacious money making scheme. Secondly to state that a woman being given away by her father is a matter of oppression is also erroneous in Western societies since the legal status of this act has become purely ceremonial like trooping the colour or church rush bearing. The legal status of women has been elevated to beyond parity which renders laughable the argument of Ms. Bindel.The likes of Ms. Bindel attack men in Western societies simply because we are sufficiently reasonable and tractable on average for this to have an advantageous result in many instances as evidenced by the rights and freedoms enjoyed by women and taken for granted. It is however notable that those who week to campaign for social justice (a term which has become horrible corrupted since we should surely all want to live in a just society) dare not speak about the flagrnat injustices carried out in some ethnic or social groupings for fear of appearing prejudiced. This is a rather difficult dilemma to overcome so white anglo saxon men continue to take a pasting on behalf of the sexist elements of global manhood. Yeah but these things are traditions. If your father gives you away, it doesn't imply that he owns you. We are (in most countries) past that. Neither does having your husband's name imply that he owns you. Let me also say that no one is forcing the woman to have her father give her away, or to take her husband's name. These are choices that she made. And, even if these things were anti feminist (which they aren't), I think it's a bit ignorant to say that marriage can never be feminist. What if, say, the woman kept her maiden name and was given away by her mother, or no one at all? Would that marriage still be anti feminist? Although thanks to feminists movement people realized that there is something wrong about the norms of society that should be changed. But shrugging of marriage is being irresponsible. Marriage is Family, Family is being Human. Though could not be said "nature of human", it is system or yea institution that both gender raise children doesn't matter who's the provider or the one's taking care of their family at home or both provides rather than where you sow future generation. Mic Drop maybe in a old days. In my house, my mom goes to work 9-5 while my dad stays home and works from home. My mom makes more money than my dad, yet both provide for their three kids. As for maintaining homes, my mom and dad mow the lawn, clean the house, cook etc VERY equally.	Old	Age - Over 65s	1/58	1.724
UnNamed Beast yes of course, that is if they have kids. But that responsibility isn't placed on the mother all the time, as this comment suggests. Women are finding themselves and working outside of the home while their husbands do the same, and don't think we should reverse that. If a woman or man chooses to be a stay at home parent, that's great, but they shouldn't be pressured into doing so because of what history says. They also shouldn't be pressured into having kids, a lot of people don't want that.	Woman	Gender - General	1/92	1.087
Mic Drop what you described here isn't true. Open your eyes in reality the majority of stay at home mothers have some kind of addiction ex( alcohol ,pills,coke) a stay at home mother is such a depressing thing if you think about it. Also the odds of a working husband cheating is pretty high. In the end this scenario in reality is just sad for both people.	alcohol	Behavioural Addiction - Alcohol	1/65	1.538

123fort andbree I don't think he was implying that a woman should do those things. We're in a day and age where it's okay to not have children or even relationships. I think the main take away is acting like if a woman willingly chooses the traditional life of the husband providing for her while she cares for the home and/or kids, that she shouldn't complain if that is the life she chose in the sense of acting like he's oppressing her when she chose to be a stay at home parent. It's one thing if the guy forced her to do it which is wrong and shows they were never compatible to begin with. But I mean take yourself for example. If you're wanting to work in a field that you're passionate about and don't want to be a stay at home parent, that's fine but if you were to have kids, would you be okay with your husband being a stay at home parent? Would you be okay if in the situation where both parents decide to keep working, you'd just hire a full-time caretaker for the kids and in turn, giving the kids less time to see each parent since both would be working full-time jobs (if you have any kids that is)? It's more about things like that though if you don't plan on having kids, this isn't even an issue in the first place.	Age, Woman	Age - General, Gender - General	3/239	1.255

Ashton Nichols I think, culture is something we make - and it changes all the time. Marriage is a two person team, yes, but it is always surrounded by a certain culture (in progress). In some cultures women do not have comparable rights. In some cultures their only "chance" is finding a man... and then this man automatically has power over her. Please don't say that it's new to you. And what do you mean with "away from men". It sounds as if men where the center of the universe.Humankind is a team. Men and women should work together. Sierra Jackson I’ve worked in a medical rest home that catered to people at the end of their journey. The saddest was seeing people who never had family, because your ”social circle” is now old and being taken care of by their own children and grandchildren. Friends are great, but at one point they will be old and unable to visit or take care of you, and they will be busy with their own family lives. I’m sorry, but it is a mundane reality. Baacally, we have children so the twilight of life is more bearable, and so we can have a chance at dying peacefully, knowing you’re leaving a good family that has learned from you or your life, and that your stories will be passed on etcIt was very sad to see men and women alike who were dying, with only paid workers or volunteers like me who felt sorry for them and didn’t know them at all. Skosh Tolsen By the way im in no way opposing marriages. There are in fact married feminists and their partners are fully supportive and campaigning in the feminism movement .i’ve seen it worked with my very emotionally stable and secured female friend (She used to be President of my cohert back in my schooling days and is a PHD holder) so i believe she is smart enough is sift out the fake male feminists from the real ones.I am not against marriage , just the ones that are led by partriarchal beliefs. First off most of these women who goes by it are either insecure, lowly educated or have tons of daddy issues. I’ve seen it all around me without fail, the more chauvinist a man is, the more insecure, lowly educated the woman is. And what is the real root reason that you non feminist males would you want that other than To feed your fragile ego?	Chauvinist, Woman	Gender - General	2/159	1.258

Andre L totally, I am also against super religious people. I agree that in some shitty places and people and situations, there are horrible marriages that rely on oppression, stunted education, ridiculous and rigid gender roles etc. I just think it's silly to point at a very common practice and declare that it is one thing for everybody. For some people, marriage is freeing and not oppressive. And as a younger married person, I am just pointing out that most acquaintances I have in the ages of 30-40 are always asking to be set up, complaining about how they're not meeting someone special, and being sad about not having kids or a home life or a partner. A lot of the time, these acquaintances were women in their 20s being heavily sold the "empowerment" narrative that says "you don't need a man in your life!" Ok fine, but as life stretches on, and good looks gradually fade, it seems to me that having at least one partner who's got your back at the end of the day is positive for most people. If you're a lone wolf, fine, but I'm just making a comment on most people I have met and known and generalizing. Plenty of marriages shouldn't have happened, but that does not negate the fact that in general, humans are happier with a person who loves them back. Maybe it's an absolutely insane idea and everyone would be happier going to bed alone after rush-eating take out food.	Common, Gender	Gender - General, Social Class - Working class	2/250	0.8

You'd be foolish to have a women's march in sharia countries. Women in western countries are the most privileged in the world. Double standards. Women hit men all the time, but when a man hits a women, it's abuse, or sexism , while there are women who literally dont have rights across the globe.This video also goes to show how determined modern day "feminists" are to destroy the family unit.In the West, women can vote.In the West, women can work.In the West, women are represented in our governments.I really don't see a problem.The institution of marriage is not oppressive. Blurg96 I understand that perhaps some feminist may come across too harshly and aggressively , but i could only say if you were able to walk a day in the shoes of a female , you would understand and be equally mad too.We are not blaming men, it may come across to you like it since you are a male, but for change to occur , it is indeed necessary to point out on issues that we find discriminatory against solely based on our gender which is an attribute that we are born with and can't change. Yeah it definitely isn't your fault for something that happened 80years ago , but to continue on the traditions today and be neutral in such situations , one have actually chosen the side of the oppressor .I don't think it is quite right to determine as to what jobs we would be happier and better at doing based on genders, life isn't all black and white. Some men are good at sewing and cooking, some women are good at hands on labor and would love to be in combat, other men love the color pink, some women love the color blue . There's also a common belief that women are bad at math, but is it true? From what I know the valedictorian of my cohort is a female.. It is such prejudice beliefs that stunt the growth and beliefs in many humans, potentials that they could otherwise have. When half the population is held back, is it benefiting society as a whole? If society told a child she is weak and a damsel in distress her whole life, would it be of any surprise that she grows up in that direction? Andre L you see this is we're your argument falls apart, as you don't know what men think. Men don't care about last names or women working and being managers, we don't care what you choose to do with your lives. Just stop with double standards and if women truly are as tough as you claim to be stop playing the victim when things go wrong. If a man touches a women it's harassment, if a women touches a man it's just fun. If a man suffers from abuse he needs to toughen up, if it's a women suffering well the man needs locking up.Feminists claim women are tough but stop anyone from joking about them as it could hurt their feelings seems odd. In the case of this Video it demonises marriage saying women are men's property, in the past maybe so but in today's world it's to show that two people actually love each other. To me saying to women not to get married is just putting another barrier between women and men. Instead of constantly putting men down (remember we had nothing to do with the past so how can we help it) why don't we work together to make a better future. Let's start with men and women getting married having kids and raising them to not be untitled brats. drops mic	Nothing	Age - Youngsters	1/228	0.439

Blurg96 Back in your good ol' days when women were back in the kitchen, the issue with prehistoric men is that they did not view women as humans with feelings and needs. This is where they made a mistake, they misused the power and privilege that was given to them and now they are paying the price of yesterday.If prehistoric men had a reputation of being kind , respectful , loving and loyal towards their women I believe women today would be more than happy to kick back and have the status remain as that. Who wouldn't with a partner like that.Put yourself in the position of the woman how would you feel if a person who claims to love you were to "drag you around by the hair?" I'm sure you would kick up a huge storm as well. Unto to others as to unto to you. And remember the hand that rocks the cradle rules the world, i presume prehistoric women were sure to have warned their daughters of the road that may lie ahead. We do not want history repeating itself. That is the reason why feminism is on the rise. Every time a woman gets mistreated at the hands of a man, feminism will just increase in popularity. Let's learn to be respectful to one another simply because we are all human beings with feelings . And no, I do not agree that anyone be it male or female should be abused or harassed in anyway, it's not funny.	Woman	Gender - General	2/255	0.784

The Western world has degenerated rapidly since granting women suffrage. If you pay attention to statistics, you will notice that females overwhelmingly vote in favor of things like open borders and welfare, while simultaneously supporting a never ending parade of progressive social behaviors. In Europe, it is primarily women who have welcomed Islam in.In America most women vote Democrat, while most men vote Republican. Obviously both parties have their flaws, but it is only the Democrats that are actively calling for the abolition of border security and the revision of the Constitution. So I think it is fair to say that a majority of women are responsible for undermining the civilizations that they live in.The liberal world order (democracy, globalism, and unalienable human rights) is slowly dying, and will most likely be replaced by the end of this century. When that happens, women (and the limp-wristed men who enable them) are going to be in for a rude awakening as they are stripped of their agency in favor of the greater good.I see this all as an inevitability, more than anything. Ancient Rome and Mesopotamia both practiced variations of feminism near the end of their reigns. When the empires collapsed (as empires always do), hardline patriarchy returned. Anabel It doesn't matter. As male/female relations continue to deteriorate, marriage will be the first thing to die. Even now it is incredibly unpopular with anyone under the age of 40. Eventually cohabitation and long-term relationships of any sort will disappear, as the last traces of goodwill between men and women vanish.The modern world is self-oriented. Women woke up to this fact first, but men are slowly coming around to it as well. My father told me how he had always dreamed of having a family, and how putting the women in one's life first was a man's greatest responsibility. I understand how he came to hold those beliefs, but I personally reject them. Family life is the death of male sovereignty, and women no longer behave in a way deserving of special treatment. I treat women the same as I treat men, and I treat most men as competition.Feminism has opened the eyes of countless men, and for that I am grateful. If tomorrow every woman in America decided to denounce feminism and become a good little trad-wife, I wouldn't care. I have seen beyond the veil and know now that femininity is little more than a mask. It's time for society to start treating women the same way that it treats men. You know its far left wackos like you who are the biggest problem in this world. The only thing that will happen in the end if we follow your advice is will sink into a new dark age . Marriage has existed across all cultures and across all of human history which indicates it exists for a reason, and that reason isn't to keep women down. I'd like to think that if a woman wishes to succeed at something in life marriage isn't going to be the thing to stop here. If anything marriage and family would likely be a source of strength since many are willing to do far more for those they care about, but I guess that don't matter to someone like you, someone as weak and childish as yourself. In the end thats all you contemporary feminists and progressives are the way you act to your interactions with others. It has all the hallmarks of an undisciplined child. You seem to be forgetting the practice of Dowry. Parents still loved their daughters back then and wanted the best for them (if they were good parents). They gave small fortunes away to ensure it. Dowries were practiced on nearly every continent. Now I don't agree with arranged marriages but I can see why the practice came to be. Women were married extremely young. Life expectancy was short. People grew up way faster in past times. If you got to pick your spouse at age 12 or 14 do you think you would have made a good choice ? Either way it's a crapshoot. Like I said, I don't agree with it, but if you put yourself in those antique shoes you can see why it happened. As far as marriage today. I'd say that my wife and I have a very equitable share of power. It's true that, according to our faith, the man gets the say if absolutely no compromise can be reached. Luckily that almost never happens since we work hard to understand each other and compromise. In fact I'd say she is responsible for 80 of the decisions we make. You can not boil down marriage to "a tool for womens opression" A bond between a man and a woman is the only viable condition for children to be created and raised under. Sure, if the world was just about young adults life could be a playground of short term relationships. But adults have to be responsible and have a good life long marriage if they want to have kids. You cannot cut children out of the picture here. Do you expect kids to be produced in factories and given to whoever is willing?	Woman	Gender - General	1/94	1.064
While I agree with many of your statements, marriage does not have to be a tool for oppression. If you look at the facts, you will see that religion is what paints a picture of male dominance. The bible oppresses women in many way, such as selling your own daughter as a sex slave, a virgin who is raped has to may the rapist and women are property. These are all from the bible and other religions share the belief that men are better. If you truly want equality, look to the athiests. As an athiest, I know my girlfriend is equal to me. I am a welder and love my job but will easily tell anyone that my girlfriend who is learning to weld will most likely end up welding even better that I do. If we were to get married, it would not be so that I own her. It would be because we want to be married. Her taking my last name upon marriage, from her own words, would be because she likes my last name better than her own. Besides, name is nothing but a word that we give power to. The women can divorce the man and take the kids at any point. The man rarely ever gets the kids. He then also has to pay child support. Women must be ruled over completely by a man in a patriarchal system. No one wants to say it because it does not fit modern beliefs. The early Roman model is excellent. No female should have rights. All of them should be the property of a patriarch until the day they die. He should have the power of attorney over her. They should be permanently banned from voting, political office, owning real estate, businesses, stocks and bonds. Female education and a jobs should be the patriarchs option. The patriarch should literally be the king of his home having undisputed power over wife, daughters or any female in his care. Anyone that enters his property without his express permission or to undermine his authority should sued into poverty or dealt with harshly. His authority and property must be inviolate in all circumstances. Anyone in society that indirectly tries to undermine patriarchal power or portray men in an unfavorable manner should be sued into poverty or dealt with harshly. Such as the following. Anyone that attempts to make a movie or tv show with a Homer Simpson type character or that shows a woman in a bare knuckle fight with a man and she wins. A drama where the father is evil, the home is broken and the children insult their father. Anyone that advocates a revival of family courts, child support, alimony or feminism. I think under these conditions marriage would be safe, children would be happy and society prosperous. Just like early Rome.	Woman	Gender - General	1/253	0.395

I have no wish to insult you.....or anyone. So I, as a man - and with my wife's support - am going to use us as an example of marriage. We are very happy. We, TOGETHER, have created a nice life for OURSELVES!! Neither of us dominates in our relationship, we discuss and decide TOGETHER. But, then again - more often than not - I give in, unless it is something I feel so strongly about. But she knows me so well, and understands my reasoning on the very few times I do 'dig my heals in'. Again it is all about discussion. My respect for her knows no bounds, and she feels the same towards me. I am nothing without her, and she agrees from her side. We are far stronger as a couple than we could ever be as individuals. Together we are a force to be reckoned with. each others strengths compliment each others weaknesses. And we are ALWAYS there for each other, through thick and thin . AND our bond grows stronger all the time, and with every obstacle in life that we face.....TOGETHER!! Actually one more thing: In May my mum passed away from cancer at the age of 75. My father is so out of his depth in life now it's untrue. I actually expect him to 'go' at any time. Feminism is the equality between all genders. If both the man and the woman , man and man or woman and woman want to get married they can. I'm a feminist and I know for a fact there is respectful men out there who won't think their partner is their property. And although I believe you should marry who you want, some people ask for arranged marriages and that is okay. Feminism means men and women should be able to do what they want and express themselves how they want, if they want to get married Good on them	Woman	Gender - General	3/98	3.061
Like this lady is serious?....how can the traditions of OTHER COUNTRIES be compared to marriage in the US?...or the UK?....CHILD BRIDES!?....where the HELL does that happen in the United States?...or in the UK?.....that's called PEDOPHILIA...and its ILLEGAL!?.....Why oh why do these feminists just grab some facts from "elsewhere"?...and try to infuse them into modern society? Yes it might be legal in "other places"...but not here in the US. I thin these feminists have just reached their event horizon.....there's nothing left for them and now they'll just grab ahold and say anything to make themselves look good. So sad. I think personally that a lot of feminists MUST have had some event happen in their pasts that has caused them to grow this hatred for men. I know for a fact that my wife does not feel this way about our marriage because gasp I do my fair share around the house, in the kitchen, in the yard, at the grocery store, and on and on and on. Just because God played a dirty trick on you and installed male parts on a female chassis doesn't mean every woman feels that every man is out to get them. I told my wife on our 2nd date, "I'm not sure where this is going, but if it goes somewhere, I want you to know that I will never expect dinner to be waiting for me when I get home, I'll never expect the laundry to get done or the floors be washed. I'll never ask you to do anything that I don't ask of myself. I will never put myself before you.". That was 14 years ago, and I'm still true to my word. There's no " patriarchy " in our house. Come to think of it, none of my friends laud the " patriarchy " over their wives either (and I have lots of friends!). I'm sorry that you were born in the 3rd percentile of physical attractiveness, but you have to be honest with yourself. You encounter these "feminist" problems because of (a) your "everybody is against me" attitude, and (b) you are painfully unattractive. Well The Guardian, this woman ( whilst I acknowledge her contribution to the early feminist movement ) is wrong, for a couple reasons. Now first off, about the bride being given to her husband by the father, this is commonly what many people don't think of when they see this image. The symbol commonly symbolizes moving from one family unit to another, and going from being a daughter, to being a wife, and the patriarchal figure of the household entrusting the safety of their daughter to another person. Now whilst the conservative imagery may seem a bit disconcerting, this imagery has nothing to do with the modern interpretation of the ceremony. Second of all, the "virgin equals purity" aspect. This is wrong because ( unless you live in an ultra conservative environment ) this is commonly not how practice is seen, it commonly ( in the modern age anyways ) is seen as a beautiful dress meant to be the uniform for the bride, and did I mention how not all marriages involve brides in white? Third, the ridiculous assertions that child marriage is the equivalent to consensual adult marriage. This proposition is simply too simple minded to even pay attention to. Shame one you for making this ridiculous assertion. Anyways, in short, The Guardian, please refrain from making these half baked idea videos, they are really hurting your image. Please consider this comment. Sincerely, someone who has way to much time.	Age, Nothing, Woman	Age - General, Age - Youngsters, Gender - General	3/241	1.245

Although I agree with each individual point, this is still the dumbest thing I've ever watched. The traditions associated with marriage have always made me uncomfortable, but at the age of 31 I chose to marry my partner of 11 years as there are legal benefits for BOTH of us. I wore a burgundy dress, there was no aisle to be walked down as there was no church, no garter, no cutting of cake and I kept my name. No declarations of an act of feminism or otherwise necessary. Marriage is about love, trust, and mutual consent. That is the modern definition, and the Bible supports this vision as well in the book Song of Solomon (one of my favorite books to read because it is all about love). The Bible also says "Husbands, love your wives, as Christ loved the Church and gave himself up for her" (Ephesians 5:25, ESV). It is true that there were traditions such as exchanging dowry and remaining a virgin until marriage that put certain interpretations and views upon marriage, but those traditions don't apply in the western world much anymore. When I think of marriage, I think of finding that one man in my life that I love and respect, the man who I can't nor want to live without, and the man who feels the same undying love for me that I feel for him. The reason I'm choosing to stay a virgin until marriage isn't because he would think I'm worthless if I didn't, but rather, a) I want sex to mean something more than 5 seconds of euphoria, and b) we BOTH decided it was the healthiest thing for our relationship, so we could base our compatibility on our emotional, intellectual, and spiritual compatibility. Essentially we are waiting to add the physical aspect that often blinds couples from the flaws in their relationships until after we've bonded more and worked through some of the kinks in our relationship. I also think it's absolutely absurd to think of marriage as enslavement or a prison in today's western society. We have all the freedom in the world (or at least the western world) to choose whether to commit ourselves to a man or leave him. No one is telling you that you have to get married. So why do you have to force this agenda down other women's throats, saying they are just "brainwashed" or "blinded"? Is it wrong to be in love with a man? Is it wrong to want to commit yourself to the one you love? Is it wrong to want to save yourself for that person, rather than give your body to just any man you think you could get a good bang out of? Marriage is a beautiful, wonderful gift from God and if a woman expects a man to be committed to her, she needs to be willing to commit to him and give him the same love and respect she desires. God Bless.	Sex, Woman	Gender - General	2/409	0.489

Some valid points about the horrific ways some other cultures use marriage as a means for oppression and inequality, but it's those examples that need to be considered, not the modern British marriage. I've spoken about marriage with my girlfriend and suggested we keep our own names, but she was adamant that she wanted to take mine - she said that we are a unit together. I understand the fact that she is taking MY name is indicative or perhaps even representative of an older, more unequal form of marriage, but it carries none of the same practical appliance today. You're right, this and also being given away by one's father are archaic, but in a modern context they don't seek to unbalance the relationship as they once did - they simply offer a sense of quaint tradition and an outlet for a specific form of heterosexual love. On the other side of the coin, there are plenty of women who are made uncomfortable by these ideas and choose to avoid them, and that's amazing and admirable. Also, I don't want to be 'that' guy (I broadly regard myself as a feminist) but I think many women (not all) look to men for a level of security and protection perhaps on a biological level, and it's upon this basis that some of these paradigms still remain (I've not done the research there, I'm happy to be debunked.) I think it's wonderful if a woman doesn't want to fit with the structures of the past, but it's not wrong for an active feminist to be motivated by their love for someone else or seek that unique sense of protection. Maybe it wasn't your hideous looks (although that probably has some bearing) but your hideous attitude towards men that drove you to solitude and this just further kindled the fires of hatred that you feel for men. Maybe if you would've set aside your naive and petty feminist ideas you could have possibly found someone to enjoy your life with. It's like every conspiracy theorist and paranoid nutter took up residence in this thing's head and threw a party. And who'd want to marry a virgin? Not that there's anything wrong with it, but if a girl has made it to marriage without any sex , there really might be some issues there. I like my women confident with themselves, including their sexuality. Most men do. Unless you're getting married at the stroke of majority age (even then a real stretch), it's daft to expect your partner to be a virgin. What tripe. Literally no one in the western world expects to marry a virgin, wether be it boy or girl.It can happen, but nobody expects it! I come from a very strong catholic family and nobody would give a shit! But i know who only wants to marry virgins, where woman have to go to surgery's to pretend they are. These are your little radical and even not so radical muslims, and that happens here all the fucking time! You are completely nuts, you take all the shit that they are literally doing now, that western society did a very fucking long time ago, and put that shit up! I cannot hear that any longer. Anabiel men are killing themselves because of the lack of purpose in life. We are not women. We will never be women, just as much as women will never be men. We don't look for flattery for instance – we look for respect. We don't need to be flattered because we know we're not perfect and we got some parts of us that need improvement. A woman on the other hand will find it hard to poke fun on weight, figure, and aging issues. We can poke fun at ourselves for being elephants. Men and women have different needs. A man that sees no worth in the life he lives is a dying, suicidal man. A man who sees purpose in himself and finds that his life is worth living, has meaning, and is beneficial to himself and to everyone around him is a happy, thriving man. Let men be men, and less men will kill themselves.	Woman	Gender - General	1/157	0.637

BEHOLD THE IDEAL WOMAN !Hey kids! Don't you want to grow up like her? Doesn't she look happy with her life choices?Who wants to stop working at 25, spend your days shopping and playing legos with your children, watching them grow, being a part of their life. At around 5:30 your husband comes home, after a log day you are both happy to see each other as he holds you in his big strong arms. Then as a family you all have dinner and a conversation together talking about how everyone's day went. Later on you put the kids to bed, and with the new found privacy you inevitably get a bit frisky before falling asleep in each other's arms.Nah screw that. That's the lies of the Patriarchy ! No you need to get student loans for a Gender Studies degree that makes you a less employable and more unpleasant person than you were going into college. That way when you come home from your 9 hour shift serving overpriced coffee to rich commuters you can come home to your studio apartment and tell your cat all about how you got "Sweat Shamed" on the bus ride home. Then after watching half a season of Sherlock and pounding a fifth of Jack, you can lie alone on your futon trying to ignore the smell of cat piss and boiled ramen seasoning long enough to black out.And yeah maybe marriage is as bad as you describe in the countries you listed. But here in the western world, with our horrible capitalism and post enlightenment egalitarian values, things aren't as you describe. Lucky me that I don't want to be a feminist, but somehow they always try to tell me that I would be part of their cult just because I want gender equality. No, not their victimhood narrative based equality, but actual equality that also takes the drawbacks men have to deal with in society. Marriage is a contract between two people, it always has been and always will be, and I don't care what feminists or MGTOW say about it (both are about the same in my humble opinion), and like every contract both parties have to bring something to the table, that means it never was and never will be a one-sided thing. i find so much wrong historical and factual 1. most if not all of those 47 countries are not WESTERN and is still living in ISLAMIC rule so it isn't phariseeism it's ISLAM FFS 2. Historical it's never been oppression even after marriage women spent their day watching over their children and trading in the market while the male worked 12 hours in the fields wearing on his body or go to fight a war to protect his wife.3. Christians weren't really happy over child marriage so it was rare in the west it's another story in Islam 4. And marriage isn't your father giving you away it was you and the man you were married too to stay together in love 5.and 5 sec on google i found an interesting article about snoop dogg [LINK] so you can say you're a fan of Feminism and Dogg.6. I think that speaks volumes and the fact that, that views not listened to does too. Children aren't accessories they come with natural human needs like a Mum and Dad. Who is your audience for this video? Citing a number of third-world and non-western countries where a woman can be raped by their spouse in a video aimed at westerners in western countries simply shows that you only wish to shock people in the shallowest way possible. Your aggressive shallow and biased opinions are not only offensive to the majority of the population of every western country they are also utterly uninformed and incorrect. Marriage is not in the day and age that we live in a system put in place by men or fair to them in any way (again in western countries....again who is your audience for this video?)When marriages break down for any given reason with or without children the systems put in place greatly favour women. From a complete lack of equality when it comes to access or custody of children to the dividing of assets regardless of ability or earnings during the marriage or spousal support these systems are geared to be biased towards women. Is Today's Guardian truly such a rag that they will let anything be published under their name with no oversight whatsoever or are they simply fishing for views with deliberately toxic content? If for whatever reason this video was published for the women who live in those countries mentioned then I hope that a concerted effort was made to promote and publish it in said countries. Joannot Fampionona , Oh for crying out loud. In our modern society we don't need any more feminism. We've already and long ago achieved equality! What modern feminism seeks to do is make women superior to men, which is wrong. It's destroying our society at this point. We have women now who find men obsolete and instead prefer to be married to the government rather than the father of their children. Places which actually need some feminism are ignored by ya'll. Seriously, go to Saudi Arabia, go to Africa and fight for the young girls who have their genitals mutilated. Be the force to be reckoned with that ya'll claim to be! I think feminism means something different in USA than Europe, as in Europe it only means fighting abuse and subjugation of women. Such as women didn't have as many rights and were less represented in their own country. It wasn't until recently women had the right to not be rped by her husband. In USA it seems to be a word those annoying men use, who spend too much time online being angry they can't trap a woman in an abusive relationship with no confudence so they spend a lot of time online being angry, swearing and calling women names, spending their time searching out examples of idiots who talk nonsense to say that's all women who want rights against men like them. Funny how they spend to much time online whinging against women, filling comment sections no matter what the subject as an excuse to whine on against feminists and saying what women should want, but no woman finds an abusive misogynist who feels threatened by women who have rights against them to be a turn on. I think men and women dislike each other more in USA than Europe. Such as women in USA who tell men they're disgusting if they haven't been circumcised doesn't do much for gender harmony, and also it's easy to find examples of idiots talking nonsense there because they think they're only country with free speech, so many talk nonsense for the sake of it and they realise what rest of world does with how annoying they are, so they blame each other	Gender, Misogynist, Woman	Gender - General	4/260	1.538

Here is the major issue marriage is an EQUAL partnership. Quit making problems where they do not exist. This is why people find the whole feminism movement laughable. You run away from facts, you hinder women, and worst of all you manipulate poor uninformed people into believing your garbage. You all should be ashamed of yourselves. Men and Women are supposed to live together harmoniously instead you go searching for the patriarchal Bigfoot that doesn't exist. Why do think more and more people are calling themselves egalitarians rather than feminists? It's because you all have high jacked a once morally justified movement and somehow have turned into this punchline of society. I sincerely hope you are happy with yourselves because you and you alone are the reason your movement is gasping for air. The concept of Father giving his daughter away to another man at the wedding ceremony is an Anglo-Saxon thing, it's not universal custom. The concept of virginity seen as purity and basically a value of a bride is also changing. I mean I don't know anyone who actually expects a bride to be a virgin nowadays really. In a time when women don't quit their work after being married the claim that marriage is a legal prostitution starts being outdated (there is still a big problem of financial violence). The name change is also slowly changing. Yes, most women still change their name and those who decide to keep their own or join it with a new one are minority but I guess a new way can be worked out. I like the idea of creating a new surname that both partners would build together, but that's another topic. So all in all what used to be a symbol of oppression changes into an empty form that bears no meaning. I think there's nothing anti-feminist or pro-feminist in marriage itself, the dynamics of the relationship called marriage changes as both participants accustom it to their needs. A woman who has had sex before marriage is indeed 'spoilt goods.' That is to say, the likelihood that they will cheat on their partner is directly proportional to the number of sex partners they have had prior to marriage. It is for this reason that men across all cultures desire virgin wives. Virginity conveys a message of self-control: someone who is a virgin tends to be long-term oriented. There are many obvious evolutionary advantages to a having a long-term oriented partner. That is why it is highly prized by both men and women. Women advertise their long-term orientation through their commitment to virginity. Men advertise it through their financial security.	Sex, Woman	Gender - General	3/111	2.703

Marriage is a trade. Like a job or buying a car. It's two people exchanging things in order to increase their net value. Traditionally the wife traded sex and other liberties for financial security, and the man traded his property for children.Marriage was never about "equality"— this is a stupid meme invented by the egalitarians and MRAs alike. I am so tired of people twisting traditional values into seeming bad because they instill a sense of responsibility onto the individual. There is a controlled effort to shift the common consciousness into one of irresponsibility, emotional dependence upon group-think/identity politics and financial dependence upon the state. Nothing	Age - Youngsters	1/54	1.852
Oh Julie, so wrong on so many levels.Marriage is basically an institution in which a man hands over all his worldly goods in order to avoid being lonely. It is the man who is most at risk of being abused in a marriage, particularly financially. One specific point you got totally wrong; no married woman has a utility bill in her name. All such bills are in the name of and paid by men. This was brought home to me after my mother died and all the household accounts were in my father's name, despite the fact that by that time he'd been dead for 19 years.You say marriage can never be feminist. I'll curtail my celebration of this to point out the obvious flaw is this claim; today marriage can be between two feminists, of any gender arrangement you can think of. Is not a marriage between two feminists, a feminist marriage, by definition?	Gender, Woman	Gender - General	2/157	1.274

Neutron Cactus If you don't know why 50 of marriages fail while commenting on a thread featuring the prevalent view of marriage among women (stating marriage is bad), I don't know what to say. You know women are 50 of the population right?Fact is, most western women's minds have been poisoned by feminist theory. And those that resist it are ostracized by other women. Those that drink the coolaid get further depressed for depriving themselves of all that is natural and good.I speak from experience ( know many women from both sides of the spectrum and everywhere in between.. even married one).The women that fully embrace feminism never marry, feel profound regret in their forty's as they enter menopause, become bitter and angry by doubling down on their feminist views. And women that don't embrace feminism feel self-loathing for being anything other than the conventional view of what a modern woman should be because society tells them they are losers.Marriage doesn't work because it's being destroyed!! By exactly the kind of viewpoint featured in this video. I mean.. duh!	Woman	Gender - General	1/183	0.546
Revert Revertz Only some of them and only in some churches. Most of them aren't. The same applies to lesbian feminists.So if someone has something against listening to menopausal lesbian feminists about marriage he/she should also apply the same rules to old priests. That is if he/she would like to avoid double standards.As you pointed out there are married old priests and married menopausal lesbian feminists. So AFAIU using the logic implied by you it would be ok to listen to them?Or do you imply that because some small number of priests in some churches in some countries are married then we should listen to every priest?	Lesbian, Old	Age - Over 65s, Sexual Identity - Female homosexuality	5/110	4.545
The difference here, as PS points out, is that whether married or not, the clergy agrees on the issue. So saying "do not listen to Rev Joe because he is old and celibate and knows nothing about marriage", is not argument. What I would say is, "well, let us Fr Sergey who has been married for the past 25 years." In the East, marriage is revealed to be really sacred. So much so that some call it crowning. The man and the wife are King and Queen, they literally use crowns. So for married and celibate priests alike marriage is very sacred. So, yeah, maybe the celibate priest might not know about marriage, but the surprising thing is that the married ones have the same opinion. Now, even in the West Deacons maybe married, so this might bring the point of ignoring the celibacy moot. Regarding lesbians, well I do not know what to make of that. But it is very unsettling to see women looking for oppression everywhere, to the point it makes you wonder if there is something they lack. Maybe some sort of affection or something. PS Apples and oranges. I didn't respond because I know them and don't argue with them.I'll put it as simple as I can. Here it goes:If people don't want to get married it doesn't matter if it's good for fatherhood because they still won't do it.What is your practical solution? Would you like to force people into marriage somehow? Not to mention that marriage is not necessary for fatherhood.Your answer is "it's because feminism or liberal values in general, so after removing feminist ideas the situation will go back to normal". This is the same rethoric as feminist rethoric "blaming patriarchy". A simple and naiive false dichotomy.What if lack of marriage and fatherhood is not caused by social factors i.e. feminism (hmm, parenthood is a social construct, it reminds me something) but environmental and biological factors? And feminism and liberalism is a by-product of the same factors?Rambling about evil women in order to convince them to marry probably won't work. What you should think about is how to increase sexual and parental value of men to make them more desireable in the current environment.	Patriarchy, Sexual	Gender - General	2/190	1.053
Neutron Cactus What is important is for us as a human society to encourage good behaviors and discourage bad ones (nobody said anything about coercion). HC Mehdi wrote a treatise on this. I'm paraphrasing but she said something like "all that is good is what leads to survival along with prosperity for all and all that is bad is what leads to dissolution, death and extinction for all". (paraphrasing)Therefore we need to encourage "good" and discourage "bad" This woman is doing the opposite and therefore by HC Mehdi's definition, she's evil.It's not unheard of that many far leaning leftists yearn for the extinction of humanity. You'll even hear some of them say out loud how much they wish for this or that disease to show up in their own country and wipe out large populations. They joke about it, but it's stemming from their honest view on the world. These leftists are human-racists. They either consciously or unconsciously long for the extinction of vast portions of the population.	Nobody, Woman	Age - Youngsters, Gender - General	2/170	1.176

What is astounding is that there is not one single mention of the needs of children, and the role marriage plays in providing a safe, stable, loving and resource rich environment for children to grow up in. Julie discusses marriage ONLY from the point of view of the woman , and assumes the woman is - like her- a feminist lesbian with no intention of having children.This is like criticising hospitals as badly decorated shared houses which smell funny ..... without mentioning their primary function as places to treat the sick.This is like talking about pregnancy itself without referring the the new life being created, and instead framing it as an act where a man penetrates a woman and in doing so causes her to feel sick in the morning for weeks, and then experience massive bloating, swollen ankles and strange food cravings. Why would any woman choose THAT?Bindel - who does not enjoy the support of a husband (for obvious reasons) - has found a way to earn money by framing all men as evil oppressors of women and writing a stream of books, articles bout this. It is hard to have a rational argument with a the maker of this video, who has stated she that she wants to put all men in concentration camps and end heterosexuality, but I'm bored so I'll take a few minutes to refute each point made in this joke of a video:1. Overall, marriage is an institution that has helped on the whole (albeit not perfectly) secure physical and economic security and well being for women, and children!2. Statistics consistently show that both men and women (generally) are happier when married, not to mention it is a voluntary contract, so it doesn't "curtail women's freedom".3. Modern marriage is about perpetuating male privilege? No, it is a voluntary union that both parties have the right to end for any reason. Divorces are initiated by women 70 of the time. Courts favor women when it comes to child custody and the dividing of resources after divorce. 4. The father giving the bride away...while it may have been rooted in giving away property...NEWS FLASH...if you're a woman you don't have to do this at your wedding! Also, women would literally be the most expensive piece of property and terrible investment a man could ever make.5. Women wearing a white dress to represent purity- Men don't like marrying loose women (generally speaking), sorry, we can't help it. Biologically were looking for a woman who can stick with us and help us raise the family, we've been doing it together for thousands of years. We don't hate sluts we're just not looking to marry one; but if the white dress bothers you, wear a different color. Also, the white dress is something that is only found in a few cultural whereas marriage is virtually universal to all cultures.6. Then don't change your name, there is no requirement. There is nothing wrong with starting your own tradition with names although the current one works out just fine. Also, your current last name has been brought to you by "the patriarchy", so you already bare "the brand" If you were a true feminist you'd reject your last name and give yourself your own made up name like Bitchalotapotamus.7. Just FYI: not all feminists think this!!! I honestly think this is a bit silly and it actually plays into the patriarchy's removal of women's autonomy and freedom of choice. Marriage has evolved so much since its inception. In the Middle Ages, travelling "priests" would have couples jump over a broomstick holding hands and then declare them married. No giving away, no business transaction. And nowadays, your average wedding is totally dissimilar to the patriarchal ideal she's suggesting here.I won't be getting married - not because of my viewpoint as a feminist but because it's honestly not a commitment I would ever feel comfortable making. That's not a political statement in and of itself - she's right in that respect - but it IS a personal one. +Cody Grenzke that just sounds like when feminists say 'feminism is about gender equality, you clearly don't understand shit about feminism' it's not about the ideologies stated views but the acts of those who ascribe to it and yes mgtow is rapidly becoming as extreme and cult like as the feminists I hate the term misogyny as SJWs have pretty much turned it into meaning 'anyone who disagrees with a woman ' but there are some legit woman haters who have co-opted the mgtow movement	Gender, Misogyny, Woman	Gender - General	3/84	3.571
I remember when the Guardian was a revered name within journalism. Nowadays, as content like this exemplifies perfectly, it has become a pitiable laughing stock. The thought of equivalent content to this being under the Guardian's name 20 years ago is ridiculous. You have sold your reputation for nothing more than a few regressive brownie points. I'm glad that the suffering of your dementia will not be too protracted as new and more relevant content from better providers here on youtube will see your propaganda publication very rapidly die. Jesus man, she's not doing any of that. She actually does have a point. Why is it OK for a woman to take her husband's name, but very seldom you actually see a man doing the same for example. Those "little" things have nothing to do with masculinity, but with the idea of possession and it's those little things that affect women longterm. I do believe Bindel described herself as a "political lesbian " which I interpreted as "I hate men so much I chose to be a lesbian and now I will get up on the political stage and preach hatred of men whist being protected from criticism with minority status". FYI you're wrong, on my mums side the male always took the females name for about two generations then it was passed down out of wedlock. Just because you don't agree with something doesn't make it stupid. Creating an Ad Hominem just weakens your argument.If two people make a decision that both of them are 100 sure about and 100 fine with that benefits them and hurts no one what's the problem?In our modern age and democracy, getting married isn't sexist because people have a damn choice about what they do and don't want to do (including last name choice), its a relationship not an imprisonment for one party.I think instead of ranting on youtube people who want to see a difference in other countries where this is not true should go there and see how much just complaining gets them closer to their goal. Men have the privilege to be oblivious to the fact that the world only sees and treats them as a only means to an end.Coal miners dying in a mine? Well we need the coal. so toss the bodies and get some more miners. Women need resources for their children? Hunt down a man who might be the father and make him pay for it? Whats that? We know he's not the father? Well the woman and the child has "become accustomed" to his support. So he has to provide it anyway.And men shrug and say Meh. Must be my bad luck. Aidan Gray You wan't something, I have more and I can give it to you, here is a little something to start with, she reminds me of pro slavery slaves because she criticize a hole movement (feminism) who have helped her get her rights and her decency and who is still helping her to get the rights she deserve. but little does she knows that it's just cognitive ease working around her head: [LINK] (dot)com/watch?v=cebFWOlx848She behave this way thanks to what media is feeding her about feminism which is people who focus on petty problems like sexist air conditioning, she also behave in such a way thanks to stupid internet comment from trolls... plenty of them..Just look as what she says:"Male privilege like what? What specifically do men get in modern marriage that women don't?"What about what the video says? men often get to name his family including her wife, it's something cultural it's 'the way it is" so most of the time they get to avoid all the painful paperwork even though it doesn't have to be this way... this inherently make marriage sexist since there is inequality culturally within this institution, and this not invented just look around you to see how it works."Both can work, both can pay for the house, both can take some time off for children." did she ever looked at the society? of course they can work and if they do they can pay the rent and even take some time off from children, but in practice? it's not the same. When you look at how people actually live. ut's hard to work for the woman when a couple usually makes a baby or two after their marriage, Some jobs can't be done if you are growing a baby inside your belly. Companies know that so they'll find a way to not employ those who will probably get a child nine months after their marriage.Look around you once again it's mostly women who takes care of children, even though it's changing over time partly thanks to feminism who tries to change the way people think about couples ( men didn't just decided to help more for house tasks madmen )it's really regrettable that man are underprivileged in divorce (which is part of marriage) and I mean it, it's bad the way marriage handles money and all the problems around that. and it should be changed but feminism as a lot to carry, go on feminist(dot)org and look at the campaigns&amp;action panel. more over often after marriage, women lose their jobs or stop working to take care of children. therefore when marriage is over usually men still have their careers while women (for those who can) have to get a shitty job just to survive or go to their parents)So this is it are you satisfied? yes, this Chantelle Reed reminds me of pro slavery slaves.	Dot, Woman	Ethnicity - Asian (South-India, Pakistan, Bangladesh), Gender - General	3/490	0.612

” You are the one brainwashed by ludicrous and unscientific claims spewed by perpetual victim feminists.” could you be more mysterious? funny that i’m brainwashed coming from you! xD usually people who don’t prove their claims are the one brainwashed, please step up your game you look ridiculous! ”Step out of your echo-chamber and look up any study showing that children gravitate to certain toys right from birth and we even see this in other mammals.”I studied sociology, did you? are you saying that girl are drown to pink? because it’s utter BS, you know that right? it’s a social construct. The toys kids choose as well is a social construct.Now use your internet connection and show me that I’m wrong. [LINK] Now it looks like your just another internet troll who don’t care about shitting on everything feminist do even though they are responsible for the fact that your mother has the right to vote and is not disrespected and stripped of their decency as woman used to be a few decade ago, and even now they keep pushing toward equality on almost every part of the globe.So next time you say something that you didn’t looked up about feminism and that is completely wrong, you’ll be speaking to yourself.Just know that if you are a troll just talking shit about such an important matter for fun, you are really doing harm because you just don’t know how things are. ChainReaction! I didn't saw your previous comments, it looks like you do not disprove what I say, you only try to point out knew things and assuming what i'm not, like thinking that I think that gender is only a social construct.I never said that, and it's true but it's not complete, gender is a social construct and also a biologic fact, any dumb person can understand that when you have a penis you are a boy even though you can be whatever you want and go to the other side if it pleases you.And by the way, when technology will be good enough to upload our minds on a database or have robotic bodies, we will choose whoever the fuck we want to be.I'm tired of this anti-Feminist nonsense so I'm just going to leave you with that, if someone tells you something, don't be dumb and try to think whether it's plausible or not even if it goes toward your own belief, and if it isn't plausible, try to look for the truth.
