With all of that it makes you realise just how dangerous the white race is and how much damage they have done on a wide scale to the black human race . Anyway, my folks, this is the least; it is your soul that you should be worried about because inthe end that is what will be held accountable for everyone and the soul has no race or colour. The last laugh is on them. The stupid human race of most.	Black, Race	Ethnicity - Black, Ethnicity - General	5/80	6.25

This is heartbreaking to watch but it's also forcing the kid to make a decision one or the other If you gave them the option to say neither they would Probably go for that option. or probably not But when you give them an ultimatum "like pick this one or pick that one" they're going to follow your directions and pick one of them. They may even possibly pick the one in favor of who's ever giving The orders or asking the questions. Not all children are smart enough Or brave enough to make a relay the conscious decision to say they're both pretty or neither of them are evil . If you put the same dolls and instead of an adult speaker have children within the same age or younger asking these questions these kids my try to To go on the defensive or change their answers to exact opposite of what we just saw. Such a nonsense to deal with such a thing and to confront the children with such a thing! By this question, the children are only put under pressure. Surely there was a white person in the room who asked the question. No wonder then the black children then mostly on the white doll show. Because they feel pressurized. One could have asked the questions to white children with a black person in the room. How would the result have gone then? The global media's job is now complete; they've done a number on young people and now even black children do not see the beauty in themselves. A once powerful people from varied civilizations, from lands of kings and queens, the mother of all races and civilization, is now reduced to everything that is bad. It is sad but it will continue until Africa begins to write it's own history books and black families insist on schools teaching 'fact' based history or home school their children. This experiment has been replicated since the 1970's and the results has not changed. It will likely not change in my life time and I've come to terms with that already. This doesn't feel right to me the subjects aren't fit for this. The questions sort of bait the children into picking either one or the other. Asking which one of them was pretty is all fine and good. But when it comes to asking which one is ugly it makes them automatically think the other one HAS to be ugly. I also find it odd that the black children picked the white dolls. I don't blame anyone for this , I don't blame the white for their hatred towards black people and I won't also blame the black if they hate them back because one thing is acceptance, when everyone keeps quiet on racism because it has to do with a particular people and no one is even ready to put an end to this, I see is very interesting and sweet for us all including the black and white, because if something is not funny , is not good , we all should make an effort to end what started from the past , but I see alot of persons like it that way because they are possessed by demons and they continue to carry out what their master told them to do, because the devil wants to bring confusion, destruction and pain, depression, shame, trauma, war , tears on mankind and racism is one of his handwork so let those little demons continue because certainly all white are not racist some have brains and also refused to be used by satan on this issues. You can continue hating until you become depressed or rather get one incurable disease and then you ask for people to pray for you. Racism is a team sport and this is something we can't seem to grasp as Africans. At its core racism is ONLY about competition for finite resources and that is business, business is warfare and all tactics utilised are fair as far as our opposition is concerned.It now comes down to the question of whether we as Africans are capable of evolving (not all but those who matter in terms of creating a critical mass) into a united offensive team. I say offensive because currently we are organised enough to be a unified defensive team, however this position is still reactionary.In order to be most effective to the people we serve ( African people) we must isolate our advocacy efforts to exclusively benefit African people and African interests and only then will we pool all effective representation from our community to form an offensive line capable of not only defending our community but decimating any violators of said community.Competition is about Power and Power can only be acquired by competing and that is how we create parity. It's high time we Black People (exclude the lighter ones for a moment) the Dark skin Melanin filled people; It's high time you realize no matter how integrated you become with society, the World will never like you. They don't Love the sight of a Black Person. Never have they, Never will they. It's high time Black People unite and it were really better if we never integrated with the rest of the world. As a Black parent, you can do all you can to love your child but once she/he goes to school and meet with other children who believe Black is ugly and a curse from God, psychologically, it will affect the child. It will have mental scars to the little child. Unless the little child is not easily persuaded by what other children say (which in most cases doesn't happen) unless that child has a mind of her/his own to fight the predicament of being called 'you're ugly' (which often times, children don't!) they'll suffer in silence and the pain and resentment of their own skin will haunt the child even into adulthood. Therefore Black people, think twice! Society will never love you. It's all a pretense. Therefore, Unite Blacks and love each other and heal the wounds within. Mr Logical Africans HATE African Americans I'm black and I wouldn't want to go there. Africans started slavery in Egypt and they sold their own people to the Americas until Europeans got desperate and started to take them. They only reason race was invented was to identify slaves that's it. If your kingdom got conquered and you were a citizen then you became a Slave to the conquerer. It wasn't until Europeans came to america that race was used to classify people. Ben Roddick no but you see the thing is that they have already been exposed to it in main stream media. From what they see in the media white is beautiful and black isn't. I suppose that's why people are trying to force diversity all of a sudden when it should come natural. We need to apologize to the children of America for exposing them to it so young we give them bias and prejudice at a young age . Ben Roddick I can't give you an exact example but I can tell you its subtle and since no one is born with racism it is taught. Its a learned behavior, prejudice, if you think about it. JonBenét Clarke 30 years of research on race differences in cognitive ability. by J. Philippe Rushton, Arthur R. Jensenextract part 1 Conflicting Worldviews A prevailing worldview throughout history has been that economic, cultural, and other environmental forces are the preeminent causes of group and individual behavior. Modern social science has typically taken this perspective and promoted the idea that all babies are born more or less equally endowed in intelligence and learning ability. It followed therefore that inequalities were the result of social, economic, and political forces. This worldview generated many strategies for intervention in the home, the workplace, the mass media, the criminal justice system, and even the entire social-economic system. Some have been effective and are almost universally accepted, whereas others have failed and produced only shattered expectations, resentment, and interethnic hostility. The major policy implication of the research reviewed here is that adopting an	Race	Ethnicity - General	1/148	0.676

I'm black . When I was younger I loved baby dolls, it's all I ever asked for. I always wanted the white ones, with their pretty blue, or green, or brown eyes and their beautiful red , blond, Brown, or black hair. My mother always insisted I got the ones that looked like me. I didn't want to. Not because i don't think its bad, or ugly. I just liked how colorful the other ones were. But Brown was always brown. It was boring. If she gave me brown with blue hair id be satisfied. If all the other dolls that werent brown were all the same color as their skin I wouldn't want them either. When the kids think the black doll was bad I would say so too lol. Its like in a cartoon you always know who the bad guy is. I'm going to tell you how I learned about racism as a white person. As a child I suffered bullying at school from Gipsys. I didn't understand why they hated me so much. But now I know why they hated me it was because I was white and blonde. Gipsys have a darker skin color and were always miss treated and rejected from society. They were mean to me because they felt rejected. I grew hating on gypsies for the things they did to me but now as a grown up I understand it. So I don't hate them anymore. I think people should be more understanding with each other. Now I understand why Gipsys hated white people because we rejected them and we were unfair to them. They never had the same rights as white. They have their culture and way of living and it should be respected. Anyway as a white child I grew up feeling guilty for being white. Because I was always privileged or the favorite compared with kids of darker skin and I never felt it was right. I always had friends from other skin colours. For me in my eyes they were my friends but I did see others liking me more for being white. And I always felt bad. Anyway. Let's love people equally. We are all humans. Don't treat anyone bad for their skin colour. Enough of white favoritism. Even though I don't like white favoritism that doesn't mean I agree with racism against white. Of course in a literal sense a person's race has no effect on their behaviours and views.However, demographically, races/ethnicities can share certain cultural values, (theocratic) ideologies, views and thus ethics that cause them to do good or bad in society. For example, statistically speaking you would be safer in a room full of Icelanders (Iceland being one of the safest nations on earth) than being in a room of Afghanis (Afghanistan being one of the most dangerous nations of earth). That isn't a racial attack , it is a cultural value attack, views, (theocratic) ideology, political, social attack.	Race	Ethnicity - General	1/99	1.01

If you read the info at the beginning, they are recreating a test done many years ago, and the children in the vid were as honest as the ones in the original. It's a sad reality, however, it's a well done test to see how these children perceive these dolls, based on today's racial issues. The children are not forced to pick only one doll, they could have said 'neither' or 'both', but being small they answered in a way that was genuine. Even their reactions towards the end is important. It shows us how damaging a child's perception of race can be towards themselves or others.	Race	Ethnicity - General	1/107	0.935

Nancy golf4life there is no truth in this 'test.' Kids use the color system to base negative and positive feelings. Adults do it as well. Darker colors are considered evil, scary, and dark natured. Hence why they are saying the black doll is bad because it's 'all black .' Then when asked why the white doll is good the girl responds with 'because it has blue eyes.' Light colors are considered happy, tranquil, pleasant. When you paint a babies room do you paint it black , brown, dark green, or any other dark colors? No you don't. There is a reason for this. Different colors give off different emotions. This stupid test has nothing to do with racism . So obviously it's you who needs to 'accept the truth'	Black, Nothing, Racism	Age - Youngsters, Ethnicity - Black, Ethnicity - General	5/126	3.968

If you are white is normal to choose the white one. It doesn't mean you're racist . You just picking the one you indentify with. AnimangaGirl no, that IS racist . You're assuming one is a better person than the other because of its skin color, that's what racism is. That's exactly why this test is stupid as hell and shouldn't be used as a credible experiment these days. The kid is forced to choose which of the dolls are good based on its color, which would make the child in the wrong no matter what their decision is. If you choose black , you're assuming the doll is good BECAUSE it's black , therefore you're being racist to the other doll. IsaVlogs The thing is, when kids are that age and someone tells them to pick one, they will most likely do it. It is a trained behavior. For example, mom asks "which veggie do you want with dinner,corn or peas", kid says "i dont want veggies", mom says "thats not a choice, pick one". sound familiar? Most of it comes down to nurturing. If parents say rascism is everywhere, thats what the kids will think and they will never see the good in people. If dad is a deadbeat and mom complains about him all the time, little boys are going to think thats what they are destined to be, and little girls are going to think they can never trust a man. We have to break the cycle.	Age	Age - General	1/129	0.775

Attention: To all emotionally controlled from the left. 1. Slavery is dead. 2. Racism vs prejudice.. Whats the difference? RACISM . 99.999 of All Americans are regular people, including myself. We are not racist against ethnicity or religion. The USA is all color and all religion. We are not anti-semitic, anti-muslim, or any other category. ALL exploitation of racism in the USA is 100% pure political propaganda and LIES. The small fraction of actual racism that exists is reserved for the socio-psychopaths. No sane man/woman is capable of hating another human stranger based on characteristics. NOT HUMANLY POSSIBLE. Now we have PREJUDICE: However, prejudice does exist. Its not hate. Prejudice are conclusions based on experience and categorized in forms of things like ethnicity and religion. 100% natural for human brains to associate their learned experience with categories. Racism and hate is a higher level. The terms are used loosely in society for emotional persuasion and is propagandized for political power. Sociology. CAVEAT: Pretending that any one human brain has not formed any prejudice is a lie. Scientifically proven. example: Blue collar, midwest, White Americans drink Budweiser beer. Mexicans drink Corona. 100% natural association. May not be true.. But our brains naturally make the connection. Black	Ethnicity - Black	2/47	4.255
blackygunzz Ray Ray Why would anyone identify themselves to any jesus regardless of colour? Also I'm pretty sure society has settled on the fact that jesus was black , seeing that at the time jesus was around black people were essentially seen as non human. They wouldn't have any chance of being publicly recognised back 2000 years ago.	Black	Ethnicity - Black	2/57	3.509

Eli McNamara: why would one NOT compare themselves to Jesus when your made in the image of his father, just as he? i know the truth today but i was born into a lie that was in place before my existence and it took time deprogramming myself as i reprogrammed at the same time. Honestly, no matter where you search, Christianity is the only religion on the planet that sees biblical characters and Jesus as white, or, European. btw, In my opinion, God nor Jesus don't care about color because in Righteousness the spirit is nourished by truth and the spirit of a evil black man is no better than the spirit of a evil white man. blackygunnzz Ray Ray I'm not saying I have a problem with black people I'm saying I'm pretty certain jesus is white	Black	Ethnicity - Black	1/21	4.762
Eli McNamara: it's only because of the evolution of mankind/the caveman or in other words, the European race . even in Genesis ( short for Gene or the beginning ) God said, "Let there be light!! the light came from within triple darkness, void, nothing . then later with the creation of the first "Human" ( Hue man ) God said, "Let us make man in our image and likeness. now, who is us? us is plural meaning more than one. there must have been others there to witness this making of man because God said, "in "OUR" image and likeness. now, this man and his woman /companion ( Eve ) was given a special ability by God. this ability is the ability to create multicolored races. it's been proven by scientist and the best technology of today that the black man and woman are the only one's that can do this hence the saying, "we bay bay kids, we don't die we multiply. it was done so that we ( Blacks ) could live forever and so could God through us. with this being said, the black man and woman are the mothers and fathers of civilization and humanity. so, God created the human and from the human came all of mankind. Mankind is close to the human in likeness. he has two arms, two legs and a head ( Arm, Leg, Leg, Arm, Head acronym: ALLAH ) but he lacks the property of "Hue" ( which is Melatonin produced by the penile gland giving you melanin color ) and surely a man of logic know's that you can't just give yourself an attribute that you don't possess. the European/mankind being able to withstand certain rays of light better today than in his days of cave dwelling is do to his knowledge of black genetic make up and of "HIMSELF". now food, water, ozone layers and many other things are used and developed by him in his struggle for survival. By not being a natural man, nature is naturally against him and vice versa.	Black, Nothing, Race, Woman	Age - Youngsters, Ethnicity - Black, Ethnicity - General, Gender - General	7/342	2.047

blackygunzz Ray Ray So now you're saying white people are unnatural.. which is ironically racist . And 2000 years ago is not when Adam and Eve came around. 2000 years ago paintings have proved that it was a male white society and black people were seen as slaves, deemed useless for anything else. These days it's different. Racism is scarce and it still exists to white and black and Hispanic and Asian people. No where near as much though. The difference is society sees everyone the same, it's just the small number of people who ruin it all for everyone.	Black, Racism, Racist	Ethnicity - Black, Ethnicity - General	4/99	4.04
Eli McNamara: yes, the white man and race is unnatural. He's the only living thing in the universe that goes against nature and nature goes against him. he wasn't made with all the elements that's needed to fight natural germs, bacteria's, sun rays etc that also uses earth as a platform. he needs to discover remedies on his own because his genetic make up doesn't have the ability build a defense against these and other things. the only thing that can hurt the human is those things made in laboratories by him deliberately or non-deliberately to hurt earth and it's Inhabitants ( trees, animals, air, water etc ). He's not happy with his position when he compares himself to the human so he ( the white man ) destroys history, kills the character of the human. He understands that it would be better for him to live a lie because the truth is not within him. he has destroyed or tainted everything and everywhere on earth he's been. he is the natural enemy of all living things. 2000 years is nothing to a God made by the Almighty God/Gods. the white man has no history prior to the stone age . when he had no language, sleeping next to the dead, dwelling his caves living in his own urine and fecal matter, eating raw meat ( because he had no knowledge of fire ), drinking from dead animal skulls, parasites living on his body etc, the Egyptians on the other side of the world had master mathematics, carpentry, tool building, astrology, the wheel, language to communicate, signs and symbols, mummification ( which is doctoring and surgery procedures ). there's just no comparison but in the white man's mind he wants to be as good or if not better than God and this is do to his lack of connection to the universe and God himself. Everything God says not to do the white man says it's okay and makes a law that says you can yet wants others to go by Gods words as though he's exempt. God destroyed Sodom and Gomorrah because of homosexuality. the white man knows God is not happy with this yet he makes a law Approving men to marry men and women to marry women yet claiming to be Christians...smh. Arvind Emmanuel: i totally agree with you. and what makes it so bad is that the original "Human" has taken on the ways of "Mankind." most say ( and think ) well, same thing. mankind is just a way to say all humans on earth making up mankind as one but no. I beg to differ. Mankind is close to the human in likeness. He has two arms, two legs, and a head ( Arm, Leg, Leg, Arm, Head, acronym: ALLAH ) but he ( mankind ) lacks the property of "Hue" and you can't just give yourself an attribute that you don't possess. this is one of 3 of the most hidden secrets to the world that's right in our faces. the Human is the only one that can produce multicolored races. This is not just by chance. God did this so that we could live forever and so could he through us. Mankind does not have this ability. It's really depressing to see how kids point at black doll saying it's the bad one. Just because it's darker. Even worse is seeing them knowing that they are looking alike (if we're talkin bout skin tone). Each person is beautiful and the colour of the skin doesn't define the person. Of course, it all started with the european people travelling to find another lands and then to get slaves for the rich people. But we're not Living in those years, where having a slave was great and being darker skin tone was telling people that you are a slave. We're Living in the times when we should know, that we're all equal. And if the kids start thinking like this "I'm black and i'm equal to the white guys, i'm as beautiful as them, cause we all are" then they'll tell the same thing their kids. Y TY. O O Maybe you understand better what I wanted to say with this analogy: Bitch is commonly used as a swearword, and for it to be a swearword, it doesn't matter if the one using it, is male or female. It does matter however, with what intention and in what kind of context it was used. I'm aware that the meaning of a word changes with the context, for example among friends, certain swearwords might not be used as actual swearwords. But to draw the line not by social context and intention, but by skine tone of the speaker? That's kind of racist . And begs the question, how dark must your skin tone be, for you to be able to use this offensive word without being considered offensive? Is it gradual, like the darker your skin the less offensive the n-word suddenly becomes? Maybe it's because I'm not living in the US and my social environment cares less about "race", but using offensive words and yet being upset if others do as well, seems hypocritical to me. If you consider a word offensive and don't want others to use it, then don't use it as well. It's not like it's an important word as well, it's fairly easy not to use it. I am Asian but I know something about racial discrimination it's sad that children are forced to have a mindset of that in skin color just because of the never ending society insight about it. Its not just racism , black people usually live in low economic places while most high economic places have majority white people. And we are grown with that custom of low economic places being filled with criminals and black people and high economic places with lower crime rates, I feel like we are grown to that custom of life. Wow. I think what should be done is parents need to express that everyone is good, beautiful and pretty no matter what color/ race they are! No one is born bad, that too should be addressed by parents! To children, they look to their parents to teach them what is correct, what is good, what is bad, etc. When i started having children it was a priority for me to explain how everyone is beautiful, good, kind, etc and color/ race doesn't matter!!! I see every human being, every race , color or creed as beautiful! It is how we are raised (by our parents or the system) that makes us different, divided, etc. If racist parents bring their children up to be racist then that's what you'll get. However, if parents that have no racism in them bring up children without racist crap then you will have kids that do not see differences in color or race ! Bad people become bad by what they see, usually by the parents. Yes, it is the parents responsibility to raise their children rightly! Amen!	Race, Racism, Racist	Ethnicity - General	6/179	3.352
Mother Phoenix Black parents have nothing to do with that you want to know why? although this is an unfortunate video the description it provides ruins it, as it says that the kids are treated differently because they have a different skin color and they are immigrants which itself sounds plausible enough but those are only a few things, and the children could've chosen a skin color that's good or bad possibly because of their backgrounds like their family ideology or their past experiences and not only because of racism as many other things could've affected their choices, second thing is that they just did this on a few children and using the small amount of data they have representing an entire group of people, third is about the description which seems to push their idea that we should allow immigrants from unstable and third world countries to live among them	Racism	Ethnicity - General	1/136	0.735

Octavian Blackthorn They're talking about skin colour, which most people have. If the dolls weren't related to people, the kids wouldn't have been so uncomfortable and upset about answering the question - but I'm sure you already know that, and just don't like having to think critically about race . But I mean, it's Kinda setting them up to a racist answer though. "Which one is bad" and "Which one is better". Erica Heap Well:A) it Sets Kids up to have a Racist answer. No matter what they say, it's gonna be racist and it's gonna reflect on the video's Point.B) Dolls Are Toys. Picking Which doll is your Favourite does not reflect on society. Like my example, it's just like forcing kids to pick a light blue t-shirt or a Dark-blue T-Shirt. Its Flawed imo.	Racist	Ethnicity - General	2/66	3.03

Octavian Blackthorn okay well I see where you're coming from, and it does seem like a set up to ask them which doll is "better". but the point of it was to see if they had internalised racism . so they would give their answer based on what society has taught them, which is that the dark doll is ugly. also, I see how you mean that we can't compare humans to objects, but in this case it's a doll, the purpose of which it is made is to resemble a human. dolls look enough like humans so that the kids will be able to recognise it with the racist stigma that they have been taught, yet not human enough that the kids would be embarrassed to give an answer. which is the point of the video, to show the internalised racism taught to kids and how their minds are taught to hate their own skin. t-shirts don't resemble humans, and blue isn't a skin colour so it wouldn't entire make sense in this whole prejudice thing. It does kind of feel like a setup to ask the kids which one is "better" when ideally they should think that neither is, but the point of the test was to see if kids had internalized racism - since they're going to give the answer they think they're expected to, and don't know enough to lie about it. Jane Doe The experiment makes a point about how easily children will accept the idea that one of the dolls is bad, and how many of them will assume the black doll is the bad one. Renin is Ready Yeah, that's exactly the point! Most kids that age have almost certainly been exposed to the idea that it's good to say nice things about someone, and not good to say hurtful or mean things to them; children are constantly encouraged to be kind and non-judgemental of others - and yet, as soon as the interviewer asks them to choose a "good/bad" doll, instead of being confused that they've been asked to do something which contradicts what they would've learnt from most of the adults in their life, the kids all immediately know what they think the interviewer wants them to answer with, whether or not that reflects how they personally feel. They aren't getting the idea to do that from their own imagination.	Age	Age - General	1/127	0.787

Racism is one of those unusual things which seem to escape the understanding of clear and to the point definition. Racism is a system of racial discrimination and prejudice. The concept of race as classifying people can be seen as misleading people and prejudicial as far as it’s involved in the quality of human life. The term race has been quite confusing because of its four principle connotations. 1. Physical anthropologists have called races the various subspecies of the human race characterized by certain phonotypical and genotypic traits. 2. Laymen have profusely used the word race to describe a human group that shares certain cultural characteristics such as language or religion.3. ...show more content... Racism is never pushed to the side. For example when a white law school student at Georgetown reported that black students were not as qualified as white students, it made a big controversy about racism. If the student would have murdered some one it would have caused less attention. Racism is an obsession. Universities are always on top of it, newspapers and politicians reject it, churches are against it, and America is strained with it. Asking to chose a bad or a good doll is what leads to racism , because aside from the skin and eye color both doll are exactly the same, so you are forcing to chose a bad one based on color. Why don't they ask "there is a good doll?" "There is a bad doll" "There is a pretty/ugly doll?", that way the children may have said "none" or "both". Also, if you put 2 identical dolls (2 white or 2 black ) and ask the same questions then kids should have chosed based on different aspects aside from skin color. Linto P Thomas what are you talking about. That’s not true at all, seriously. That whole paragraph is based off of stereotypes that image only true in some living condition. And not all black men are gay . Like where did your knowledge come from. Like you have no idea what black people go through everyday. This makes me cry, I can’t believe that in 2018 racism is still present, I can’t believe that the government doesn’t do anything to change, but on the contrary keeps on feeding hate and diversity is seen as danger and something to stay away from, diversity must me an enrichment instead.I hear people insulting people who have different colour of skin, I hear the news saying that a ' black ' person commited a crime, stole things, raped someone...but when it is a white person doing that it doesn't matter, the fact lasts less then the act committed by a black person, which lasts forever and it is generalized on the whole black population.STOP doing that, they are human, everybody is different from the other, bad people and good people can be found everywhere. Bad people are not those who have a darker shade of skin, but whoever affirms that.Let’s make a change, come on isn’t it heart breaking what we just saw and listed to? this experiment as i see is a very negative and not good for children that age . Although racism plays a huge role in this world.. the more people point it out all it is doing is just triggering the negativity in our human brain. No matter what people will have there own thoughts and views in what they believe and nobody can really change that. when you tell young children this it's just gonna teach them the same thing and that's how racism doesn't stop.. bc us as humans keep pointing it out,, and we can't accept the fact that there is negativity in this world. and the fact these people bring in these children into a video to point out what society wants them to say and do is absolutely horrific bc now these kids think poorly of themselves bc they actually had to think of what our world has become rather than showing the positivity of what we have brought. it takes more energy to hate rather than to love and forgive and that's what we as people need to realize. I came over to my little cousin's house one day, and had found out she had gone to the store with her mother- and gotten a doll. When she showed me, I was a bit suprised at the fact that it was a black doll, because that was the only one of it's kind she had, plus she usually picked out the white dolls, because thats all you'd see in the toy sections of stores.I ended up finding out that her mother let her pick out a toy because she had been good that week, and when they were walking through the toy section, the dolls caught her eye- and it didn't take long for her to gravitate to the black one. She told her mother she wanted that one. Her mother asked "Are you sure you want this one ? You don't want a different one...?" she had her sights set on the one she picked. Then her mother asked "Why do you want this one ?" She said "Because she's pretty." Then her mother asked "Well, she's different then the other dolls you have, is that okay ?" She replied with "Yea! It's okay!"I was so proud of her. <3	Black	Ethnicity - Black	2/204	0.98

That would be a good idea for representation of all races, however, this study was designed to assess how black children are affected by systematic racism . The study may have to be altered or the questions reworded to accommodate for white children to participate (research is complex as hell). Additionally, researchers typically don't conduct studies with populations where they already know the results. How many white children would deviate from their systematic racial "superiority" and say that the black doll is the good one? It is fairly reasonable to assume that if minority children think that black dolls are bad, they've learned this from their peers, white, black , Asian, Latino, Native American, etc. We live in a society (that carries across various cultures) that prioritizes white culture and light skin. Because of this, there is little need to assess if white children believe they are less than black children. The systematic racism that has manifested over hundreds of years is still very much the reality for schoolchildren. We can only hope that one day these kids will say they are both good until proven otherwise, but that day has yet to come.	Black, Racism	Ethnicity - Black, Ethnicity - General	7/192	3.646

kaylabcorley3 how do you know there doing it because of colour the girl said that she thought that the white doll was pretty because of her blue eyes not white skin. By asking these questions especially in this sort of position makes them feel uncomfortable your basically interrogating the poor things when they want to go run around screaming or talking to there friends so of course there going to look sad. Its cruel and It's clear that they where just trying to say the right thing by the fact that a) half of them had to think about it before they answered and b) that boy lost confidence in himself half way through and started changing his answers. By asking them these questions your putting ideas in their head that there is something wrong with them. Stop it! Is this not a test for black 'Americans' if it isn't then I apologise for this next point but black people make up about 13 of the population in america so surely its more likely for them to see white kids and therefore theres a higher chance of seeing a white kid that they think is pretty than a black kid. Why would you have to reword any of there questions? Are you suggesting that there is psychology to the questions specifically for black children and therefore would be tricking them into saying the racist thing? Linto P Thomas You should look up epigenetics as it relates to slavery and its effects on African Americans. And also it'd be great if you could stop calling them "the blacks" like they're that thing over there that you don't wanna look at, as well as stop generalizing an entire race into very offensive stereotypes that have only come about as a result of our (white people's) systematic oppression and use of them for our own selfish gain. If you don't think you're racist , 1. Realize that all white people are basically racist until proven otherwise because of how much we benefit from white privilege, 2. You need to open your mind to the reality that a cruel society is to blame for much of "their own shit" and 3. This comment makes you seem like a racist . I hope you're not. Person: Which doll is beautiful ?Me: BothPerson: which doll is bad ? Me:both Person: which doll is good Me: bothPerson : why chose both two times ?Me: there's no difference! Look this kids learned from their parents how to act when someone asks them to choose one of two kinds of people. If they would ask me to choose which is more beautiful I would choose the black own and I'm a white person and I am sick and tired of this color . When I was little like 6 years old I had a friend . When we went at the park I met a girl that she was black and we started talking then when my friend came told me : " don't speak to her " and I was like "why ?" Then she said "don't you see that she is black ? " "sooo where's the problem?" "she is dirty" "Uhhh I don't think so, she smells really good "then she said to me "ugh I didn't mean that I meant that because of her skin color she is dirty " then I said " SERIOUSLY NOW!Did even asked if she likes you ? She might feel the same way about you! If she started to bully you because of your skin color would you like that " and she was like "uhmm..... no... I guess" " then DON'T DO THAT TO HER SHE IS A PERSON NOT AN ALIEN " then The other girl hugged me and started crying because no one has ever said something to encourage her. So guys don't bully other people because of their skin color! We all are people!+1 If you agree . StylesFN plays I am sorry to bring this up but.... black kings and queens had a large part to play in the slave trade almost as much as Europeans . If you do not believe me in several African countrys children are taght as part of school curriculum of the part their own people had to play in the slave trade. most Europeans never even set foot into the hart of Africa until the 1870's. a grate deal of Africans and African politicians know and accept this fact that they are just as guilty as the whites for the enslavement of their own people! and African Islamic moors also invaded colonized and raped southern Italy (Sicily) and southern Spain for 800 yrs until they no longer stood for it and took their country back with the help of the Jewish population who were willing to fight and push the moors out and back to northern Africa! Do not get angry at me this is historical fact! and slavery is found in every culture of humans white or not . Europe is not the same as the united states culturally socially or historically . In america we need to get over slavery all of us white or black and stop feeling guilty or ashamed. the institution of slavery has been committed to our past for the last 153 years( in this country at least) if we want to move on and progress as a society we can not keep squabbling about what has already past and we need to stop appropriating history either to suite the delicate sensibilities of bleeding hart leftist liberals and ultra right conservatives ! have a nice day . Okay, listen up everyone. We are all human, right? So why does it matter if I can bear children or if I help create them? Why does it matter if I'm a little lighter or a little darker? We all have a voice, and we all have beautiful minds attached to our bodies. So, let's put it to use. Stop describing people as black or white, or boy or girl. Describe them as smart, funny, creative, kind and more. If you want to explain their appearance, dont immediately describe their race . And one more thing. It's not just white supremacy that is a problem. African-Americans have used that as an excuse to hate on us, and blame us for our ancestors faults. So why can't we simply all just be glad to be alive, and spend our lives joyously and lovingly, instead of living them hatefully and having to make videos like these. Me having lived in Italy for most of my childhood, I know how racist some kids can be in some country side areas because they're not used to differences and also because of how parents are used to them too.When my cousin was four we all went to the nearby city center and as we were walking she pointed at someone and said with surprise, that persons black , and I remember just thinking that she said that just because she didn't know, and I told her 'yeah and?' And because she probably didn't remember her life so well then she just said 'I've never seen one before' and I felt really offended, even if I don't have a dark skin tone, because my mind immediately imagined being that random person who had walked passed is being pointed at as if being at a zoo.I just wanted to share my thoughts so please don't hate on anyone, my cousin didn't know basic empathy then Everyone's beautiful	Black, Racist	Ethnicity - Black, Ethnicity - General	2/167	1.198

This test doesn't even give accurate results. To tell a child that they must name one as ugly and one as pretty doesn't mean that they think that one of them is ugly and the other one is pretty. If a black child grows up in a culture where primarily there's only black people, they're going to feel more comfortable around what they know and have seen more people that are pretty that are black . Same goes for any child that is white that grows up in an area where primarily white people live. They'll feel more safe around white people. Of course there's then the mixed cultures where loads of people live no matter the colour of there skin (which shouldn't have to matter anyway.... because it is literally just skin) who probably don't know what to pick because they have to define one of them as definitely 'ugly' and the other as definitely 'pretty' This test is just to make people lose further faith in the world despite the only thing it does is give inaccurate results. It would be far more better if you just simply asked their opinions on each doll or made them rate each doll on an 'ugliness' scale and a 'prettiness' scale.	Black	Ethnicity - Black	3/209	1.435
lkr. This test is thinking in black and white. If one is ugly, than the other one must be pretty, if one is bad, than the other one must be good. Mi45 Met45 What? Don't like the fact that im not standing for only buying a black doll? Okay, stop this ignorance. I was not snotty to the creater of the comment, infact I was just stating that black skin is pretty, but white and blacks are equal. Its not my fault you were raised to think racism is just whites being rude about blacks. Racism is also blacks being rude to whites. Its just that racism to whites doesn't happen as often as racism towards black . So stop acting like its bad to buy black and white dolls, because whites are not better than blacks, but blacks are no better than whites either. We are equal. Getting somebody just a black doll won't teach them anything. Getting somebody just a white doll won't teach them anything. We have to teach kids that black and white are equal. Lerato Moroane dude that's like saying 'okay this is what we should do white parents. buy a white doll for your daughter. teach her to love herself and appreciate her bright skin and long bright hair. cos white is beautiful ' its no different. Laura dux You're missing the point that's already been illustrated by the video, which is that kids don't have any negative view of white people. They already believe the white dolls are good. Children are so inundated & constantly surrounded by media and by social norms that prioritize white people that even the ones who are not white themselves are more likely to see those dolls (and those human beings) as the "better" ones. So no, you really don't need a doll to help children appreciate white people; society already does that for you.  Not that I think the type of doll you give to your kids is going to be what makes the overall difference on how they treat others - dolls are just a good way of revealing what attitudes kids absorb from the world around them - but please take a moment to think about how you sound when you hijack a comment made by a black woman encouraging other black parents to teach their kids how to love themselves, and try making that post about you. Sometimes it ain't the parents. Living in a society where western and white beauty standards are imposed on us doesn't help our self imagine. Most parents don't tell their children that dolls are bad because they are black or white. Toys are toys. But how many play dates have you been to where the dolls are all light skinned. I always picked the white Barbies. I wanted their hair. Their eyes. People always tell people how pretty their kids will be when it's a lighter person, mostly white, and a colored person together. The notion that we have, conscious or unconscious is that anyone looks better with European features added to them. While it's not that this is never said to other couples, have you not noticed the abundance of those comments around interracial couples, especially when one of them has straight hair, interesting eyes, lighter skin or euro centric features. The analogies one could use to describe other colored eyes are endless, yet for some reason as society we tend to consider brown eyes common or boring. To associate lighter and brighter with good and clean is just the way the human mind works. For example.. if they would have used shoes instead of dolls and one pair of shoes was white and blue, and the other pair was all black .. Most of the kids would have answered the blue and white shoes as the "good" shoes or the prettiest shoes...Or for an even better example.. let's just say if they would have used only 2 White dolls in this experiment, and one doll has black hair and brown eyes, and the other has blonde hair and blue eyes even though both dolls are white most kids are going to pick the black haired, browned eyed doll as the "bad" or "ugly" doll simply because they see darker colors.The interaction that the human brain has with dark and light colors is just a natural reaction. White supremacy is real. I remember long ago, I was a waitress at a restaurant. A mother ( African ) mother and her daughter was sitting in a booth, the little girl was playing with a white blonde haired blue eyed doll. A white woman was looking, basically staring at them. She FINALLY WALK OVER to them and said, oh my what a beautiful baby doll you're playing with.. The mother grinned and smiled and directed her daughter to thank the nice lady for the compliment. After they were leaving she (the mother) walks over to me, tips me and says I get so many compliments for this doll. She said you have a daughter I said yes, she said you should get your daughter one, I said no, I don't teach my daughter to hate her self. All my daughter dolls are brown. She got mad, said I don't teach my child racism , I said I didn't say you were. But self hate sure seems to be the lesson for the day. I told her I don't teach my children in order to love yourself you must hate someone else.. But I do teach them to be proud of yourself, to embrace and treasure the beauty God gave you. To be strong enough to call yourself on your own Bullsht. Never lie to yourself and expect others to be truthful. The world is ironic. Even pathological liars wants to be told the truth. Even murders wants to live. And even thieves wants honesty. To hate someone you do not know, you are PROJECTING YOUR OWN SELF HATE UNTO ANOTHER.. You can only hate yourself because you don;t take accountability, responsibility for yourself. Your actions, who you are. . She got real irritated asked to speak with my boss, I went and got my husband. LOL Sorry but yeah Im doing the boss. Instead of saying this is sad, does anyone ever ask why these kids think this way so early on. It's the fault of adults and corporations. It's because of the images they've been fed through imagery. I think the reason why most white people...well, not all white people...but i think they hate or at least hated almost all black people because they think black people are ugly. Let us just admit. Please don't lie. And some black people have been made to think they are ugly and useless and that is why they try bleaching...whatever. But that is no reason to hate anyone coz of what they did not choose to be but they are anyway.I also heard the news that black people were cursed coz they betrayed someone, you will know who. I heard that they are the true Israelites or Hebrews but they don't know it. That to me means that someone changed history and made it upside down. You know that means that Africa is Israel and one of these other continents must be the ancient home of the Egyptians. So today's known Israelites are the Egyptians, and the modern Egyptians were the Israelites! This means that today's Egypt, the country, was Israel, and today's Israel was Egypt or something. Am not completely sure about this but who knows? Nobody knows. Even if they prove that from the bible, most people do not believe the bible is true. You know that means the bible was written by Africans but the white people took it and made it their own, imagining that Jesus is white, drawing His pictures appearing like a white angel, even when the same bible says do not make any graven image on earth or in heaven and worship it, then they came back for the gold, diamonds and slaves and returned the bible coz. I don't know. And these people say you know the Israelites were slaves in Egypt, Jesus had eyes like fire, skin of bronze, hair like sheep's wool...so he was black...or brown...whatever. then they say it is written that the Israelites disobeyed God, and so He cursed them to be slaves even in their own lands and in strange lands they would be taken into while being spread all over the world, serving and singing to their masters, their wealth taken, changing names, children killed, wives taken or raped...whatever, maybe they are forcing us to bleach so that we appear like them too, I mean look at the salons, straight hair, wigs, weaves. You know i think the bible is right, but i am not sure if it is talking about black people coz there is no word black in the bible...or maybe it might be there to represent the devil. I don't know for sure. Black ppl might be the first people on earth, you know, not the way Darwin puts it, but look it this way, it is evident that black people are the most disunited race people unlike other races, and that is seen in the bible where people unite to against God and build the tower of Babel, and later on disunity comes in between them, God changed their languages, they couldn't understand each other. Which race of people do you think these people are today? Who are the most disunited ppl today? I mean, look at all these tribes among the black people, look at Africa, in my country, Kenya, there are at least 42 tribes, what about the whole of Africa! There must be thousands of tribes and languages. But now look at the united races, i made it look like an organization didn't i? The UR, or United Races. You know the white people, most of them just speak English, French...you can count the languages, not more than fifty, and that is one thing that kept them united besides the colour. Rasism shouldnt be spread among anyone! Let alone children . Like kids these takes white skinned people as beautiful. My 8 yr old brother is an example of that! Days ago, i wanted to test if he's rasist or not ! ( i know he's a kid but his choice or decision might affect his future) so, i asked him what kind of people looks beautiful to you ? He answered, fair skinned , pretty face and all that! I was shocked by his answer! I explained him about rasism . Plus , one day when we were watching tlc , he called a back , healthy enough lady ugly! I couldn't think of anything else! Not just that , things like this also runs in my family ( not everyone though). I don't understand why people judges others by their looks, race or religion?! Not tying to offend anyone or come out as racist but since the beginning of time for humans darkness was evil/insidious and white was pure/comforting. It is human nature. We evolved an uneasiness toward dark colors due to most predators being nocturnal and black/grey being associated with many diseases and rotting corpses as well as unclean foods. While white was seen as much safer due to us being not nocturnal. Also white usually signifies that something is cleaner and will not cause harm to our body if consumed. Ben Driscoll I know it was messed up I hated myself for being black but you know you grow up and learn no one is superior cause of their skin color. I stopped being insecure after going to a very diverse school that was mostly Haitian, Cuban and French while at my elementary school the majority were white (and rich not to mention) I was jealous of that so I though my life would've been better if I were white. I was also effected by what I saw on media. But you live and you learn.	Black	Ethnicity - Black	1/96	1.042

Rypäleleipä , Black people,for example, have had to fight for almost four hundred years just to be seen as human beings...but often beaten or put down like dogs regardless of our guilt ,aggression, or lack of either. That same narrative that you often hear causing someone to hate or fear black people... black people also hear causing us sometimes to hate or fear each other. We must reconcile the great community and neighbor's we see every day with the fear we are told we are supposed to have. Who are you to redefine what being italian or (any nationality ) means? being a nationality has nothing to do with race mr. genius .... it is about what you believe in , where you grew up, what culture you are identify with. your race is irrelevant . last time I checked all humans came from Africa it is not because u now have a whiter skin that you think you suddenly entitle to question their nationality because they look different. The only country those kids probably know very well is italy stop acting as if it is up to u to decide whether they are true italians or not . that is not up to you and it will never be. culture is not a race but an identify you acquire from your environment. Race scientifically speaking does not exist... all these categories(white , yellow , purple...) we create are just stupid ways to divide and convince ourselves that we are more special than other human beings when in fact There is only one race and that is the HUMAN RACE . Chase Change..... That example is not based on an assumption, it's based on facts. I am pointing out that just like different species are not interchangeable so are human races but from a societal and cultural point of view. For starters the most basic definition of a culture is: "the social behavior and norms found in human societies" - WikipediaDifferent groups of people or races have different cultures as a whole. There are of course the occasional outliers that can easily assimilate in a western society but that is not the case for the group as an aggregate. For proof of that you don't need to look any further than American blacks, they commit far more crime than whites, they have significantly less economic output than whites, they don't believe in the values that have helped build the west etc. They simply don't have the same culture as whites despite the fact that they have lived in the USA for hundreds of years. They are the perfect example that groups of people are not interchangeable.As for your example of the British and the French both being Canadians, I would agree that this is indeed true but that is the case because they are very simmilar ethnic groups and so the differeces between those groups are much smaller than between the races. Therefore assimilation between them is much more plausible.	Ethnic	Ethnicity - General	1/231	0.433

No, it's not. Institutional racism cannot possibly be from black to white because white people in most European and North American countries control a much larger percentage of the wealth and positions of power. If you feel like white people are suffering from institutional racism then it stands to reason that it is not the black person doing it to you but the person who controls the greatest number of institutions in your country. A black person might tell you-you're an asshole, but that won't get you arrested and shot by a cop for standing somewhere unarmed, that won't get you forced out of a job for being white, that won't get you denied loans, that won't get your children kicked out of certain schools because their hair is different, that won't make all of the people around you assume that you are on welfare, that won't get you pulled over for the crime of driving a car and harassed. Sure it might upset you a little bit, but overall it won't actually hurt you one way or another. If all of the things I mentioned stopped happening to the black person that called you an asshole for being white, for a long enough period of time to rebuild trust then they probably wouldn't call you an asshole at all. The fact is it is still happening and people are still being defined as a skin color and not people and it's not because of " Black People" that that is happening, as long as it does happen however people will be angry at you because you are no different than any other white person according to a society run by people who are obsessed with those labels. Therefore you are to be blamed for the crimes of random people you don't know who happen to have a vaguely similar skin tone as you in the winter. There are some people who cannot see this test as a racism test.Okay,So here's the thing.When the kids watched tv shows, cartoons movies,they probably brainwashed that white people are the prettiest,the best.While black people are bad because they played bad roles in the shows.And when they wanted to buy a doll, there are limited black dolls and a lots of white dolls. Take Barbie for example, it's hard to find a black Barbie.And then they are brainwashed slowly.They want to be as pretty as their white doll can.They started to hate themselves.And by doing this test,we can see,if the children think the white doll is the best,the good one,the prettiest while the black doll is the bad and the ugliest.And see if they are actually proud of their skin colours or not.And well,as you can see,a lots of them adored the white doll and the last girl feel offended by the words ' black people'.So,if you still don't understand after all this explanation,just check up with someone else. What is worse than racism ? Double standards. "White people are so racist " f*ck whites" "white people should all go to he'll" etc etc. is often seen under videos like this and not seen as being racist because people of "color" are "oppressed" BS. In reality a very small percentage of the U.S. population is racist . And there are reasons people are racist . They take the bad (often what they experience) from a race and generalize that race based off of the bad. What is the difference?! I get that everyone sees everything different but even when I was growing up down in NC I never questioned our differences even with my grandparents talking down about people who are different or threatening to disown me if I dated or married someone they deemed unworthy. We're all people. We all breath oxygen. Some of us are straight. Some of us are gay . Some of us are pan. Some of us are pan. Some of us have dark skin. Some of us have light skin. Some of us are born normal. Some of us are born special. Some of us have special talents while others can't get anything right. Some of us are boys. Some of us are girls. But we are all the same. We're all human. Living, breathing beings who feel, speak, and think.The only major difference is the way we view our world and go about living in it. For the world to be a better place we need to become better people and open our minds to the possibility that maybe, just maybe there's nothing that separates us from each other but our predetermined opinions and our gudges we hold close to our hearts.My youngest brother was born special. At the age of six he told me after picking him up off the bus that he was grey. Not white but grey. He seemed determined to prove this point to me. I asked him why and he said "I looked in the mirror and I was grey. We're all grey." Now he's eight. He isn't colorblind be he too doesn't notice the difference between people.If a six year old can do that, why can't we? i am a white turkish girl, therefore i never met dark skinned person. My first doll was a black baby it was a gift and it was my only doll i carried it around everywhere with me covered in my blanket. Sleep with her in my arms and treat her like a real life baby. As a grown up i always thought girls with dark skin are more beatiful with their skin spotless clean no acne no purple dark circles and curly gorgeous hair. Even when i was a kid i always think my doll is prettier than everybody elses dolls. Therefore i think the kids choosing white babies is not racism its just the fact that they played with white dolls and they got familiar to white skin even they are different from how they look. Idk how to feel about this "test". First of all, an amount of 4 or 5 children has absolutely nothing to say about racism . How do I know it's real and not scripted?Second of all, what if there are other circumstances, that made the kids choose a certain doll? What if e.g. the favourite colour of that one girl is blue and she pointed at the white doll, because she liked her blue eyes more than the brown eyes of the black doll?Idk I don't think this test has anything to say about racism . Marissa Malik I know what racism is and have well experienced it and white people can experience racism all of the time. You wouldn't know because you're not white. I wouldn't know because I'm not considered white. My point is that every race can experience racism and saying that white people cant is giving them power but is also racism . Just to let you know... those comments where you called me a WHITIE... guess what, that's racist . And that can really offend people. iShmae iShmae lol sry but your comment really didn't make sense to me. In fact it sounds so ridiculous 1st of all i need to tell you what is racism - Racism means discrimination against PEOPLE from othe races & NOT for dark COLORS It's All about only Humans but according to your comment you think everyone who don't like dark colours is racist . Disliking dark colours and disliking dark people are Whole different things, you can't call anyone racist for disliking dark color, that's totally nonsenseAnd tbh you can't deny the fact that brighter colors gives positive vibes and darker kinda negativeFor example 1 can paint whole house in white and bright but no 1 Would normally paint whole house in black cause it will just make you feel like negative, Night or scaryI'm sure if i gave you option to choose 1 house from 2 in which 1 is fully white and another is fully black then you'll definitely like to live in white 1 ( please be honest ok) Everyone will find dark house scary but that does Not mean they all hate black peopleYou and most of these people are just getting confused between Dark colours and Black peopleI hate dark colours too, my closet is completely pastel but I NEVER ever disliked black people and i have many black friends so If someone called me racist just because i don't like dark colours then they must be Insane	Black, Racism, Racist	Ethnicity - Black, Ethnicity - General	11/248	4.435

In my opinion I think this is kinda Bullshit. With such questions as "Which one is ugly" they are forced to pick one so either way it seems like they are racist . Especially with the question "Which one is bad", like these questions make you look bad or seem racist no madder which one you pick. This actually pisses me off, if a kid thinks the white doll is cuter great, if they think the black doll is cuter great, whatever doll is cuter is the kids opinions so who cares. The question which one is bad is just so ridiculous though, in a way doesn't the kids saying the black is bad mean they are racist ? i kind of agree. children don't understand racism . these kids aren't intentionally being discriminative. if i was a child and was asked the same questions, sadly, i would probably give the same answers as them. now that i am older, i am educated on racism . obviously, if you did the same test on adults, they would know what is right to say. there is a reason children are tested in this video. young children are one of the purest life forms on earth - they are not full of malice. they simply have no understanding. i am sure that when they grow up, they will come to know what racism is. I believe that most modern television is filled with people with white skin, such as superheroes or things that the kid would look up to. Maybe a cartoon with a nice white family. The thing is, is that there aren't as many if not at all the near amount of black inspiration or faces on television portrayed as much as white people are. So, when a kid at school is black and everyone else is white, they think they're the ones that are different, and aren't good or cannot fit in with them as seen on social media. (Mainly television and commercials) Some of the white kids make fun of the black child simply because they aren't like them, probably because of said social media. Kevin the Cat thank you!!! Its also because they chose only two skin colors as well, black and white is alsop associated with how some kids are afraid of the dark and are more settled in day time where its light. And movies as well, lets take the disney Hercules movie, Hades was in the dark dark underworld while the hero and his good family was up in bright light colors. Hades was bad and was in a dark enviroment plus his clothes and looks were dark and Zeus was pure white heavens and stuff, and Hercules beat hades to try to get into Olympus so in that movie the colors sceem was light = good dark = bad. Even though in real life its not like that. Again thank you for saying this bc i bet no one else would tbh.	Black	Ethnicity - Black	1/142	0.704

Kevin the Cat I'm sorry you have to deal with all these people lmao, if they can see kids as racists there must be something wrong with them. Like you said most bad things are dark and black , in almost every superhero TV show the villain wears black clothes or darker ones when the heros wear light colors. And also what people are not pointing out is any choice the children make is racist . If someone said that all white people are bad it would be racist too. But people are so one sided the true answer is pointing in the middle since there are many bad people of every race .	Black, Race, Racist	Ethnicity - Black, Ethnicity - General	5/111	4.505

That is precisely the point. Black is seen as bad white is seen as good. The black baby is bad, the white baby is good. Labelling a person as bad or good simply from colour, or their slanty eyes, or their obese genetics, their unsightly features.Is this not discrimination at the most basic form?I'm not saying these kids are evil, I'm indicating to the question as to exactly why we as a society have come to think this way and i think the answer isn't as simple as "OH WHITE IS NICE" "AND BLACK IS CREEPY" "SUPER HERO MOVIES GUYS!" like most people want it to be.You're saying kids are not able to understand the concept of racism , but here they are pointing out the black doll as the bad one. The Asian kid identified himself with the black doll after claiming its the bad one, because he doesn't consider himself as the social norm (white) He thinks hes different, and society makes sure he feels different, I say this because Asian kids are the most likely to be bullied in western cultures.You think this doesn't have any implications? Won't that effect these children's way of thinking in all sorts of ways as they reach adulthood?Oh btw, I have no issue with white people so don't misunderstand what I'm saying, I'm just an Asian boy who's experienced discrimination throughout his childhood. Dismissing this idea is simply not the solution, and I think to a certain extent this study has some implications, although I would have carried it out a little differently. How is calling someone black being racist or offending? Its in your pigments, heritage, DNA and blood. So white people are white... But we have to say different names other than black , to describe someone as black ?	Black, Racist	Ethnicity - Black, Ethnicity - General	4/37	10.811
There is no racism , lol.They just choose doll that exact race because the grew up in the society where most people are that exact skin colour.They think the opposite doll is bad since they have never spoke to black person, by nature all people are passive or aggressive to something they not know that good or see for the first time. Black kids are just drama queens in this videos, they choosing " black " doll when someone asks to point at the ugly one, because they want more attention and caring. That's basics of psychology that you go through if you study.	Black, Race, Racism	Ethnicity - Black, Ethnicity - General	5/100	5.0
"they have never spoke to a black personne" do you really think that a black girl never spoke to another black person? (her family...) there are black persons in Italy so it is very unlikely . Moreover I don't think that these kids insulted themselves by saying the black one is ugly just to be recomforted they said what they thought nothing more!	Black, Nothing	Age - Youngsters, Ethnicity - Black	6/63	9.524
I was talking about white kids, because when I was in Italy-I've seen like 1-3 black people on the each street.I can't decline that they have seen black person, all that I'm saying is that they are drama queens who's choosing doll the sane race for attention.	Black, Race	Ethnicity - Black, Ethnicity - General	3/47	6.383
wha do you mean do not know that good or see for their first time? their mother and father are like this, the people who they've learned to love and trust and you tell me they are not familiar with black ? they are clearly biased with stereotypes.Basics of psychology is to be afraid when introcuded to something unfamiliar, not when introduced to something that looks like you and your beloved ones. So stop acting like you are a pro , this is a social experiment that has been conducted many times and studied by real proffessionals and it addreses a well rooted problem of humanity. Stop acting like you know better.	Black	Ethnicity - Black	1/111	0.901

I share your skepticism, this is obviously an attention peace to make people cry about racism and feel outraged, the methodology of this experiment is deeply unscientific and its results beg for further analysis.Furthermore, maybe there is a damn good reason why this study was made in 1940's and why it should not resurface given its useless nature. I wonder if prejudice against most things black is genetic within us. I know we have some negative biological association with the color black such as death, decay, disease, danger, etc. Most primitive humans wouldnt venture too far out at night and we strayed away from black rotting food and vegetables. So i wonder if it's just innate with us to naturally associate dark with negative. Not that it's ok for us to do it, I just wonder if racism is, to an extent, genetic. This would give us insight into why it has spread culturally and why it's hard to shake off.	Black, Racism	Ethnicity - Black, Ethnicity - General	4/103	3.883

Bebe Ziegggy Yes they are horrible people, but I think your over simplifying it. There's a mental and logical reason for almost everything people do. Mental	Physical Identity - Physical (and Mental) Impairments	1/58	1.724
I wouldn't say it's genetic. There are studies done on much younger kids and they usually won't care, or they'll be confused, it's more due to history, and experiences. Once you grow old enough to start school an venture out you hear things and learn things.	Old	Age - Over 65s	1/46	2.174

Obviously it is there for a reason this natural fear or hatred of " black "	Black	Ethnicity - Black	1/52	1.923
It's probably more of a power thing. Maybe because in history a different skin colour or religion would show you're from somewhere else, and you'd want to overpower them. Like how Jews have been abused by Christians throughout history. Jews never did anything wrong, but Christians wanted more power over them. The same could go for people of a different race . Omar Morales Luna What's your point? Are you saying we should be treated like shit just because we have a little more tan than white people?	Tan	Nationality - British	1/26	3.846
Ahmed Gilani a biomedical scientist wouldn't know about this anyways. You have to think that we weren't always as advanced as we are now. Our ancestors were taught to stay out of the darkness because that's where the danger was. Now children are subconsciously scared of the dark because of this. This association to darkness strengthens racism .	Racism	Ethnicity - General	1/57	1.754
Bombo Animations Ummm no? Where do I imply that it's ok to treat people like shit. I said that it may or may not be somewhat genetic, but our culture adds a layer that can allow us to act differently. For example, the amount of testosterone a man expresses can dictate how aggressive he can be or stressed he can be. That's genetic. The glands associated with the release of that hormone are established genetically, But if he finds ways to calm down he won't trigger those glands to release hormone. Get it? So maybe, I may be wrong, if we have a genetic basis for not liking things black ...but if we take the time to get to know one another personally we'll realize that color doesn't define how well you like someone. Omar Morales Luna ok Omar, first I'll tell you that racism is a learned behavior. If you ever have a chance to see toddlers of all different races together they will play and interact with out any concept of race . That being said, heterosexual white males all over the world have an ingrained fear of men that are darker colored .(Generally speaking) If you would take some time and research world history this would present itself over and over again. Think about all the dark skinned indigenous people all across the world that were invaded by white men. Was it fear or conquest? Racism self hate or hating others is a culturally learnt behaviour, set of beliefs. You have to understand and believe this before you can unlearn it. Eugenics, Racism	Ethnicity - General, Physical Identity - Physical (and Mental) Impairments	2/52	3.846
Your theory completely relies on a genetic (biological) thesis which then absolves modern racism of any moral culpability. Racism is 100 learnt behaviour, whether this racism is internalised by people of colour, or projected and collectively endorsed by Europeans. There is no epigenetic explanation for hate. There is no back door escape for hate. Ok a quick explanation for those who might not know.Humans are naturally attracted to lighter objects. Red, yellow , blue, white and the such. There are many reasons and supposed reasons for this. Some believe that it's due to ancient humans that were nomadic and scavenged for fruits and berries.As you should know, a dark fruit is usually a sign of either rot or damage to the fruit , so they are worse then lighter colored fruit .Many cultures idolize lighter skin color as a sign of better breeding. Asian cultures usually had their women color themselves with white powder or paint, even before white Europeans made contact.The same is true in other cultures, even those in Africa. We shouldn't have to separate the human race into "races". Biologically, races don't even exist among humans. It's a social construct. Furthermore, we shouldn't refer to skin colours as " black " or "white". Come on, no one has completely black /white skin anyway. Instead we could say "dark or "light", thus getting rid of all the symbolic "bad vs good"-associations. Finally, no one is better or worse than someone else because of their skin colour or ethnicity . It's simply stupid to assume the pigmentation of one's skin determines one's personality, intelligence or worth as a human being. I'm sorry but this was stupid. It's not racist just because they said what they said. I mean, they HAD TO choose between two dolls and it's okay if they choose a doll that looks more like them. It's normal. And that one girl said that doll was good because of the blue eyes not because of the white skin. Why are you giving this tests to the kids anyway? (sorry for bad english I'm from Croatia)	Racist	Ethnicity - General	1/77	1.299
Raquel Paterson Ikr! It was so stupid! Like, she IS black . Why would anyone get offended if someone sayes that he's black or white? She literally said that she doesn't like her skin color if she finds that offensive.(sorry for bad english I'm from Croatia)	Black	Ethnicity - Black	2/46	4.348

Raquel Paterson I have the answer for you maybe: cause 'nero' (it literally means black in Italian) is often used as an insult here in Italy, cause using color to define someone it's not normal here. You can't go around saying 'hey, black' 'hey, asian' or 'hey, white' cause ppl will assume you're a racist. We're really far from the U.S.A. where ppl use 'black' 'white' or 'asian' to proudly describe themselves (And honestly that's something i understand now that i'm studying American culture). If i say 'you're black' to an American person that's probably not an offense, it's just who they are and how they identify themselves, but if someone says the same here... well, he/she is racist and he/she is saying that your color means you're different (bad), they probably think you're poor and something other stupid things racists people think (i'm not racist, so everything i said, it's something i heard before). The thing that makes me cry as an Italian woman is that, that girl thinks 'black' is bad. No. Black is not bad. She's beautiful. But She doesn't want to be called 'black' cause she knows that that guy is making a difference between her and him. She said she doesn't want to be called black cause kids made fun of her before. And that's the problem. She's just a kid who wants to be like everybody else around her. She doesn't want to be called black because she doesn't want to be seen as different compared to other kids. I'm not saying we need to use words like 'black' and 'white' for everything we do like Americans do, cause we still think it's weird and it's not in our history and in our culture to do something like that, but we should tell our kids that yes, we can be white, black or asians but it doesn't matter cause we're all humans. Sorry for my english, i'm trying to learn it . P.s. I still don't like the American typical conversation where people will say something like ' So, you're white and you probably like this/that'... that's offensive and weird to me, but i repeat, i'm not American so it's just about cultural differences. In the U.S.A. ppl seem to have many stereotypes about being 'white', 'black' or 'asian' and i honestly don't like it.	Black, Racist, Weird, Woman	Ethnicity - Black, Ethnicity - General, Gender - General, Physical Identity - Physical (and Mental) Impairments	11/391	2.813

U KNOW WHAT? In my opinion the kid who said that the black doll was the ugliest between the two and the kid who said the contrary are like the exactly imagine of what everyone look alike when it comes to make choices like the ones in the video.Let me explain you why....Well ....it's more easy to define the black colour like the one who's in the bad side than the white one...because the black colour it's related to the darkness...,and when u think at darkness u think at bad things...in effect when they named the black doll like the ugliest I think...that they were too littler to make racist stereotypes but maybe they were unconsciously affected by the logic of seeing the black like the bad side and white like the better one	Black, Racist	Ethnicity - Black, Ethnicity - General	8/181	4.42
Interesting, you may have a point. Also i wonder what race the person asking the questions is and how that affects the results. Remember children are just as intelligent as adults they just lack experience and a base of knowledge of possible outcomes.	Race	Ethnicity - General	1/67	1.493
You guys are fucking stupid. Literally. Everyone that ever does the doll test. Anyone who puts kids through this. Giving them self conscious and creating discriminatory actions, just by making them do this test. Those kids will always have shame and self doubt, but more with this test. This is not a Racism test or have anything to do with discrimination.. AT ALL. You fucking fake fucks..This is a "light vs dark" Aspect in basic child development. EVERY fucking kid is afraid of the dark. Every fucking kid, likes the light. All this test does is reach into that primal fear aspects of their internal psych. Ask what one is bad. Has nothing to fucking do with the "DOLLS, People, Race , etc" . Has everything to do with darkness, fear, unknown, etc.Do the same fucking test with sheets of paper. You will get the same results. All this test does, is show how stupid psychology has gotten over the years and how stupid the creators of the test were. They didn't think about the primal fears of Humanity and the mind set of a child. They only wanted to make the results show that " racism exists". Racism doesn't exist - only discrimination and biased does. But leave that for the races to figure out. This video is so powerful, to understand how the mind of a child works we must first understand our own, all the children said positive things about the white doll, and all of them attributed negative things to the black doll, yet when the interviewer asked "which one looks more like you" all of them pointed to the black doll and they all had the same look of shame in their faces, what then does this say about you? about the children? about us? about society as a whole... this experiment has some much depth and sadness at the same time, my soul is crying, parents please ask yourselves what their answers say about you as a parent, we must remember that although we do not have control over the things they hear and see everywhere else outside of the home, we do have control of the things we teach and say to our children inside of the home. Amanda Reed I can't believe some people think that this is not true. YOU better wake up and get that crap out of your head saying white women are perttier than black women. Everyone is beautiful in their own way. Psychical beauty is one thing, but it's INNER BEAUTY that matters the most. We as people always tend to look on the outside rather than the inside. It doesn't matter if someone may have better clothes than you, better hair than you, better body than you, heck. You don't even know how they got it. Comparison is the thief of joy. If you compare yourself, you will never be happy. And I believe that's something that we deserve, happiness. But how can we have happiness when we be acting like fools, cussing ppl out for no reasons and just disrespecting ppl with hurtful opinions. We talk about unity, but this is what we get. Guys, we need to stop fighting. I'm sure your getting tired of all this mess. It's 2018, and we be acting like smart-asses and being racist . Racism shouldn't even be a thing. Would you guys stop with this whole "oh because they that the black doll was bad so they are racist " I can give 2 reasons why they thought the black doll was bad1. When you think of a nice color be honest with yourself witch color comes to mind black or whiteand now think this as a child when 99 of you are afraid of the dark wouldn't it be natural to like white more than black ?2. This was based on what skin color they were either way! When the kids chose what doll they liked they usually picked the color they are most familiar with.For example: statistics show that black men marry black women more then white women and white men usually marry white women more then black women so I can make a guess that most of these kids have same race parents. So a white kid would probably choose a white baby over a black one because that's the color they are used to	Black, Race, Racist, Witch	Ethnicity - Black, Ethnicity - General, Gender - Female age and physical appearance	11/171	6.433

GalacticSlayer Did you watch the fucking video?No one is talking about romantic preference, these kids are judging the dolls based on their skin color. Nobody mentioned dating preferences.	Nobody	Age - Youngsters	1/29	3.448

GalacticSlayer So what? Because if kids are very easily influenced by what they see on TV they can carry their judgments on to other people because of it. When I was little I was one of the few black people in a primarily white school. Kids were very quick to judge and isolate other kids who look different from them. I was only 3 years old I heard other black kids including myself admit that they hated being black in that they wish they were white like other kids. I get that left wings are radical and all but that doesn't excuse you from devaluing racism as if it isn't a problem because it is. Believe me when I say this, children are not born with this mindset, it is influenced by the people they see on TV and what they normally see around them. Preferences are preferences but preferences are not like sexualities. You aren't born with preferences, and as you grow preferences change based off of what you are used to seeing. While the results of this study are indeed disturbing, it's important to keep in mind that it is not without flaws. First, black has traditionally been associated with evil in most societies, while white is associated with goodness and purity. (Even the Bible uses darkness as a symbol of evil and light as a symbol for good.) This association is not so much race based as it is of color psychology and the values that different cultures have assigned to colors. Likewise, dark colors are traditionally associated with negative feelings, especially sadness, while light colors are associated with positive feelings like happiness or excitement. It is easy to see why someone who doesn't know better may, at first sight, assume that black people are bad and white people are good based on these color associations. Second, the researchers seemed to make the kids choose one doll or the other for each category. If they had been given a choice for whether to answer the questions and had been allowed they had no preference, the results may have been much different. I, for one, did not consider either doll to be especially pretty or ugly, good or bad (and FTR, I am white.) If anything, it is more racist to make kids choose a "good" or "bad" doll simply based on the doll's race , since there is really no other visible measure of difference between the two of them.Does experiment outcomes like this demonstrate internalized racism ? Possibly. But it could be for a million other reasons as well. Let's not jump to conclusions until more detailed research can be done. The experiment seems to have the same results everywhere and at all times in predominantly white societies. Would be interesting to perform the experiment in predominantly coloured societies. I suspect, that you would get reverse results. Explanation: Most people are more comfortable when part of the majority because they want to belong.Belonging to a minority is naturally perceived as undesirable with many mammals. They want to belong to the pack, tribe, flock swarm, group forming the majority. And physical appearance - including skin colour - is a major classification attribute. Racist or not.Minority pride is learned at a later date - typically during puberty - and often expresses a rebellious attitude against group pressure felt as repressive. Unfortunately, i doubt the result would be much different.I have Jamaican family, whenever i visit i am told 'you are so light(I'm mixed race ), you're so pretty' by my younger, darker cousins.Lighter skin is associated with wealth and class whilst darker is associated with poverty and negativity.Assimilation is a good theory but I think overall class(the 'richer' people in India where, for example, the morthey would stay inside, thus the lighter they would be etc) , colonialism and American-centric beauty standards are all factors as to why people perceive lighter as better.From Senegal to South Korea people bleach, so their children learn through example lighter is better.Whilst south africa is 79.6 Black , 77 of it's magazines have white models ect.Tragic but true. Well either way, predominantly coloured societies have suffered the effects of long term colonization by white people which effectively means that they are still going to see dark skin as dirty/bad. And since this is in Italian and I visited there and some country's in the vicinity let me give you this example. Although they are considered both white Europeans. Italians even though they have a darker complexion than Albanians are racist towards them. This "racism" developed during their flight from communist Albania Italy took many of them in. They caused a lot of havoc then robberies etc etc they were poor and desperate. Wind the clock 15 years the kids of these Albanian migrants assimilated and adopted quick now they make 30 of the top students. Most Albanian families nowadays are hardworking and honorable yet the stereotype created during those years still persists. But there is hope...I heard Italians say. "Lui he Albanese ma he una brava persona!" Not to mention the shock they get when they visit the country and get all their prejudiced SMASHED, which is golden just to see their expressions. So smth is changing. But this came because Albanians started to clean their ACT.It has nothing to do with race but with behavior and portrayal and of course not to forget the media who is constantly responsible for these kind of stereotypes.If you behave like an savage people will dislike you, stereotypes get created and than racism flourishes. AfroBlacks need to change their behavior and reject their gangster culture or they will never be treated with respect and this is detrimental for their mental well-being also because it creates an inferiority complex. This is my hopeful advice because the alternative would mean that there must be some sort of natural hierarchy and thats a dangerous thing because it leads to dehumanization and we know all to well where that ends.	Communist, Mental, Nothing, Race, Racism, Racist	Ideological and Political Identity - General, Age - Youngsters, Ethnicity - General, Physical Identity - Physical (and Mental) Impairments	7/286	2.448

This is just ridiculous and utterly stupid. All this means is that those who picked the opposite color are intelligent children. The smart ones crave the different the unexplored the other the not so smart ones pick the familiar the known. Its as simple stop making this a race issue because its not. As for the "good and bad" maybe the kids are smarter than you think in that regard too, maybe they interpret the behaviors of these groups better than we adults.In another test a Latino kid hit the nail on the head, "Because I am not afraid of white people! I trust them more." The other said "Because HE (dark doll) hits others!". This is no racial bias these is stereotyping according to behaviors they see in these groups.Maybe we should turn the attention on our-self and how we behave in front of kids rather than making this a political race issue. There are also other psychological dimensions. We accosiate black and white with the cold unknown dangerous night and white with warm clear and known security of the day. This does not mean thats because of race. And you cant beat the day the white the sun out of people no matter the skin-color. My sun loves Asian girls and Latino his best friend has a dark skinned wife we are European. Get a grip mfg.... and even IF there may be some innate bias what should we do?! Segregate the races?! Send them back to Africa?! Lower academical standards?! (we already have affirmative action, but i would never go to a black doctor) If this is innate bias than there is no way that other races would want to mix with black skinned people because they dont find em good or attractive."Best way to get rid of racism is STOP TALKING ABOUT RACISM" Morgan FreemanAll this is doing is furthering the gap antagonizing one another and giving black people a bad inferiority complex and envy. Blacks should learn to behave not only in front of kids but in every area, being poor doesn't make one a gangster. Whites should STOP making race an issue because no matter their delusions this is making things worse. Race relation are almost to the point of disaster. wrong. the thoughts were formulated from a series of programming of repetitious imagery and negative exploited displays of their race . its called self hate and it started with the arab and European slave trade and is played upon right now till this day. its easy to make a child feel infeior through bias education systems that constantly show their elders and so called leaders in compromising positions in submission to white supremacy. what do you see on tv the most white people on advertisement billboards white people or lighter skinned people playing into the programming. most biblical figures are white and when god is portrayed in a book or movie what color is god? white most of the time. when a kid sees their black people on tv they are mostly playing ganster, gay , men playing a woman and wearing dresses and shit. never in respectable positions being advertised through out history. all this shit adds to the conditioning of a child's mind to hate themselves, you dam right racism is taught and guess who and what we learned it from? white supremacy	Black, Gay, Race, Racism, Woman	Ethnicity - Black, Ethnicity - General, Gender - General, Sexual Identity - General, Sexual Identity - Male homosexuality	6/183	3.279

i think it is just a misconception. I believe they said the black doll was bad or ugly is because in kid tv shows, the villian is usually wearing dark clothing. Therefore, they apply that same analogy to this situation. They perceive the white doll to be good because the hero is in shining armor and kids fear the dark, rather than the light. Some were probably taught that blacks are that and yada yada yada, but atleast majority of the kids were probably thinking about my theory.Edit: I know it's been like a year but I saw all the 72 likes, thanks! That's what I suspect too. Black and darkness are traditionally associated with evil, and white with goodness and purity. Tommy Orr Jr no imbecile, you should listen because i can tell you exactly why this is bullshit. this nonsense test forces a false dichotomy onto the child. you are asking who is good versus who is bad simply based on skin color. we dont get to see the results of black children choosing good children of their same color do we? we only see the outlier that sad and disheartening one that feels another color is good. ask any child of this young age , " who is the good child?", and overwhelmingly youre going to get a choice of someone who looks like them or their siblings or their parents. they likely live within communities of predominantly their own skin color and so why would they choose another color? then you force them to label someone as "bad" and give them shades of color? what idiot came up with this? if one end of the spectrum is good it stands to reason that even a young child will choose "bad" as something furthest from what they identify themselves as. they have little to no concept of what they are being asked and forcing a choice based on purely good and bad identification is stupid in the extreme. even religion recognizes this with this " age of reason " nonsense. so no dipshit, listen because reason will tell you that this "test" is a horseshit attempt at virtue signalling pc bullshit instead if rational thought. my kids answered these idiotic questions after having them watch this foolishness with "why is the child bad?"how does that fit your racist narrative? now fuck off. We have to consider TV who plays in all these movies or most? Europeans have dominated TV for years, so what do you expect? This test has brought the sub mind to the fore front truth of what people truly feel not think. So when the children grow to be adults you see black men marrying Europeans and vice versa. Which bring me to my point that when black men say why they go outside is because of the black woman you know its a lie you know its a form of self hatred. Lil Kim is a perfect example of self hatred along with all these brothers.Yes it is sadI let my son watch it and he cried ( 11 years old ) he said I am none of those things and he was sad and angry to see this.I taught my son that he himself is beautiful and I let him know people are gonna hate you because of your color, but your color is life. A lot of black people fail to realize that they are life and no other people will be able to survive without us and why you ask? Tiffany Davis That is so true, and I totally agree with you especially about the TV shows and movies. The main characters shown are usually white in almost every film and if there is a tv show with black main characters, they are usually portrayed as ghetto or thugs, whether it's the way they speak or even their lifestyle. I think it's because white is seen as 'normal'. I live in a country where racism is not surprising or out of the ordinary, but I feel that many white people who also don't consider themselves racist are racist without knowing it. I wanted to be an actress but if I were to audition for a main role in the movie, they'd be forced to change the whole concept of the film because along with the skin color also comes the black personality traits that 'every' black person 'should have'. My point is, white people seem to have the power to be whoever they want in tv shows or movies, but with black people, it'd just seem odd having a black person in 'that main role'. The fact that you believe that I wear a hijab and pray to some prophet just because I am of a certain race proves your close-mindedness and lack of half a brain. Perhaps, certain races are loosely linked to certain cultures via circumstantial associations, for example, Arabs being linked to Islam. But there are white Muslims too. So at the end of the day, race does not actually equal culture. If you want to call out something, call out religion and culture on their own, but not the colour of skin. Skin doesn't have some random connection to a person's brain, and if you think it does, you're incredibly stupid. With that grammar, you've already proven that to be true. Blake Steele I was fortunate enough to grow up with a lot of different races so I was always staunchly against racism, but it wasn't until college that I learned how pervasive and insidious it really is. In Malcolm X's autobiography, he says that white people have this deep-seated racism that has been latched onto their core. I agree with him. As much as I advocate for equality, I sometimes find myself (very rarely) thinking something racist. It usually happens when I am angry, and it lasts about 2 seconds before logic takes over. These knee-jerk reactions scare me. Racism really HAS dug itself deep into the fiber of my being, and I can rationalize it away with my intellect, but I still hate that it rears its unwanted ugly head from time to time.I can give you an example of this. If I am walking down a dark street at night, and on one side there are a bunch of white teenage males and on the other, there are a group of black teenage males, I may subconsciously believe that the latter is more dangerous even though I know that this is an unfair assessment. I am taught to believe this by the news, movies, etc. I then quickly snap out of it, and remember the insidious nature of racism.You can say that I have white guilt. I sure as hell do. I hate any moment of the day that I am not advocating against racism because as long as I am benefiting from white privilege and not doing anything about promoting equality, I am just as bad as anyone who is promoting racism. That is why I now take to the streets to protest for equality. I will fight for equality when I have conversations with peers. I will keep putting a spotlight on all of the injustices that are done to minorities. I will keep educating myself on all the ways that the institution of racism confers dominance to one group while disadvantaging others.I have to keep doing this because I will feel horrible about myself if I don't. American meritocracy doesn't exist. Primary schools lie to us about history. Most white people don't act against racism because they simply don't know. They really believe it's over or solely exists in individual acts of meanness. That is what many white people are taught to believe, and I will continue to feel guilty unless I enlighten others about the truth.	Black, Racism, Racist	Ethnicity - Black, Ethnicity - General	10/415	2.41

Why would a child pick a white doll over black ?	Black	Ethnicity - Black	1/10	10.0
Yes, it can be taught by asking questions. They don't understand that this is a social experiment - they may walk away from this thinking "One doll is black , the other doll is white. One doll is bad, the other doll is good" without any other possible explanation. If the children are only offered two answers to "which one of these dolls bad" they're going to have to search for differences between the dolls, the only difference being skin color, and make their judgement based on that. When asked which one was good, maybe they picked white because their favorite Disney princess is white, or maybe they picked their own race because it reminds them of everyone in their family, but either way they formed some association with "This is the good color." They don't necessarily have the ability to formulate their own third answer, which is "Neither is bad." If a teacher, someone who they've been taught to trust and be obedient to, has given a multiple choice test, they assume one of the presented answers MUST be right. Telly Marie I am a black woman and your statement is false. When I was a child I came home and asked my parents how I could become white. Racism is taught, you're right. However, the test didn't teach children. It's asking what they think. Maybe the children were already taught this without anyone saying it explicitly. Maybe it's an implicit bias a child can have because of a school experience, from how their family talks about other children, from what children see on tv. Research implicit bias. Everyone has them. This is Psychological Programming of the pliable minds of children. Along with Mind Manipulation of the audience, not a test. Think beyond what the video editors obviously wants you to conclude. You can see the mental shift that takes place in the children, it is almost tangible. There are various methods to teaching and these "people" are TEACHING the children to identify themselves and others with the negative attributes and stereotypes they hear about and see in their story books, cartoons, posters and even the misguided adults around them. Something similar was done to me as a child and it took me years to overcome when, by GOD, I finally realized what was done to me. The children want to get the answers "right" and they take cues from the tone of voice and the facial expressions of the adult asking the questions and even the cues presented in the room, hallway and environment immediately prior to the interview which are not shown to the viewer. You are absolutely right the sensitive, trusting and sponge like minds of children quickly"pick up" on these authoritative cues. Even though the words are beguilingly phrased as questions they are actually statements and the children "pick up" on that. Similar to the way a parent states in an authoritative tone, "should you leave your toys laying on the floor?" it' phrased as a question but isn't really and because of the tone of the adults voice, the child knows he did something wrong and what the "right answer" i.e. the answer the adult wants to hear is.	Mental	Physical Identity - Physical (and Mental) Impairments	1/263	0.38

playdate i am not this video is fuckt up making black people feel bad	Black	Ethnicity - Black	1/14	7.143
Senstive little twat. More Kids think a doll with white skin and blue eyes is more beautiful than brown skin and brown eyes. Nothing racist about that preference. The moron shouldn't be asking the kids which doll is bad though. The question infers that one doll is actually bad so kids will just answer it.	Nothing, Racist	Age - Youngsters, Ethnicity - General	2/55	3.636
