Not sure how the two things are related, I'd definitely give a pregnant woman a seat and don't think it's sexist to offer someone a seat. Is the angle that other people said it would have been sexist if they did offer Jo a seat?	Woman	Gender - General	1/45	2.222
I offered my seat for a woman on a bus from the airport, she was fuming and said 'how old do I look?' I was trying to be polite, I told her that I would give up my seat for anyone. My husband opened a door for a woman walking into work many years ago, she called him sexist. Stupid world! I hate when most men think they have to do everything for women and that women shouldn't do nice things for them or that they cant/don't want to stand up for them self's against a woman . It's just annoying. I'm a girl and I've never hit a guy just cause I was mad or cause I "felt" like it, and I plan to keep it that way. I prefer to keep my hands to myself unless someone else hits me first ( also I feel more comfortable when someone of the same gender hits me, so when I fight back I feel more comfortable)	Gender, Woman	Gender - General	2/104	1.923

Regardless if someone is male or female, it should be judged on priority. I'm a healthy person, capable of standing, and if a pregnant lady or clearly fatigued woman OR man was standing, I would offer my seat. At the same time, if there was a healthy, capable female sitting and there was a male who was clearly disabled or had difficulty standing, said female SHOULD give up her seat. I think 99 of people, male or female would give up their seat for a person in more need and videos like this are just making a meal out of nothing . One time I worked as a labourer on a construction site. Riding the bus home I was absolutely knackered from hard labour and I had become ill from the cold conditions. I was clearly in a bad state and a nice young girl, dressed formally offered me her seat. Im not a woman and I certainly wasn't pregnant, I was just in more need to sit down than her. Give up your seat to the sick, pregnant and elderly , but for the people who are saying why women don't give men seats, hear me out. You don't have to give up your seat to a woman if you don't want to, but how would you feel if a woman give you her seat in front of everybody on a train. Hayley Langman; Now I can agree with some of that statement to an extent such as men choosing those career lines and vice versa about women, but logistics state that more men have chosen to undergo the harder, more dangerous jobs like working on oil rigs and going In the army than women, I also agree with the statement about It taking both a male and a female to make more humans, also there are things that women can do that men cannot and vice versa for example; It would take half as many men to lift and move an average sized and weighted fridge, were It would take 4 women to do the same thing with the same fridge as nearly all men are physically stronger depending on their age of course. Gabriel Alvarado opening the door for a woman is called being polite. Yes of course they have legs and hands. Hayley Langman Yes it is true. All of the jobs you mentioned there have Pyscical/mental strain. Feme 'Gamers' as a job HAHAHA. Hate to burst your bubble but there is no such thing as a professional female gamer. There is entertainers/Personalities that make money through streaming mostly based off of personalty Eg pokimane not Apley gaming.Now. In regards to woman doing the same jobs. Your forgetting men simply are able to push themselves more Pyschically Eg male builders can lift more and do more and there body is capable of outputting more energy as a result the muscles and body can be more tense and painfull than the female equivalent.I know what your trying to say but it just isn't 'Equal' like you want it to be because men and women are different females doing the same jobs you mentioned are not capable of doing them as well outside of say office work or multi task based jobs in which they can exceed men.	Woman	Gender - General	1/166	0.602
Hayley Langman Women did get a choice. They decided that they would rather be stay at home mums without having to pay taxes or work a job. That was the decision Women made. To say it was down to sexism is an absolute lie.Saying women has less rights is blatantly false. The majority of men could also not vote as it was very difficult to vote usually required lots of time money and extra effort.Obvisouly this is wrong as giving everyone a chance to vote was a massive achievement towards true democracy.What I am saying is everyone has less rights not just women. And there was more tradatoon and religion that made most women prefer to not have to work.In today's world its harder for women as they are working with men who are simply more Pyschicallyy capable the response to this?Fake wage gap and women are now being payed the same as men for doing less work and working lesser jobs. Jemima T - H No, the world, the west in particular, has become extremely hypocritical. While complaining about sexism against women, women are openly misandrously sexist against men. This imbecility is promoted and encouraged by the governments and all of the media.	Sexism	Gender - General	1/42	2.381

Hayley Langman 'Can' and 'should' are two different things. The balance of the natural order has been turned upside down deliberately, by some of the most evil people the west has ever known. The more subtlety used, the more evil it is. Never has their evil been so subtle or so many people been so taken in by it. So many men see no hope in society. Their jobs, good character, financial security, and finally, their dignity, have all been taken off them and given to women. At the same time, women are encouraged to deprive men of their children, home, jobs and again, with all of that always goes dignity. THESE are the reasons the despicable TV panel lead discussion shows deliberately ignore, and patronisingly say 'poor men' without helping in any constructive way. Feminism and the misandry that ALWAYS goes with it, and gynocentric biased law systems are DESPERATELY EVIL. In countries where abortive murder and even live abortion is legal, these things are not surprising. These things are also the real reason for the very high numbers of men's suicide. And some of these females probably went clubbing the night before and were on their feet for hours dancing, but I'm supposed to give up my seat so they can sit because they are female? As an example, I think it's ridiculous for a 40-year-old man to give up his seat to a 20-year-old woman just because she is a woman and would be considered "physically weaker." She's 20...she can stand for a great length of time, I would imagine. ESPECIALLY women who are into fitness, work out and are athletic. Unless the 20-year-old woman has a physical problem standing, there's no reason why a man should offer her his seat just because she's female. I found this because I was looking for a video in which a young woman argues that women are victims of sexism due to the LACK of shows and movies depicting women being shot in the head. Again, she has a huge problem that women are just TOO rarely shot in the head for our entertainment.	Sexism, Woman	Gender - General	2/56	3.571
That's the conundrum. They complain about that but if we had lots of women being shot in movies they'd claim it was showing violence towards women and still sexist. Feminists are obsessed with being viewed as perpetual victims of EVERYTHING. Honestly feminism is ruining gender relations and if we don't nix it soon I fear society with have irreparable damage. Since the incarnation of modern feminist beliefs in the 70s women's happiness has plummeted while men's has stayed relatively consistent. Feminists are ruining the western world and they're mostly ruining it for women.	Gender	Gender - General	1/93	1.075

I don't believe there should even be a debate about this. Anyone who has any manners and was brought up correctly would offer an elderly , disabled or pregnant woman (or elderly gent) a seat without a second thought! The word 'sexist' is just an excuse for those without manners who are boys, lads, gents and not gentleman, just as there are girls, babes and ladies who lack the same respect for elderly men, the disabled and so on. It appears that this word is whipped around all too easily whenever PEOPLE (men and women) are expected to display basic manners..(I witness unacceptably bad mannered people (80 are our youngsters and college goers) on the bus very often in Bristol). It has absolutely nothing to do with being 'sexist', it's about simple manners. Let's not forget that it has been a traditional display of good manners for centuries for men to stand up for a lady or the elderly but that is not to say that women shouldn't have a responsibility to offer up their seats to those in need also...any lady with any manners does offer their seat...I know I have done on many occasions with young students seated right next to me! Finally, how a pregnant woman carrying a tiny gift within her wasn't offered a seat today, is beyond me ... a sign of the times and how badly mannered our own government really is. How disappointing indeed.	Disabled, Elderly, Nothing, Woman	Age - Over 65s, Age - Youngsters, Gender - General, Physical Identity - Physical (and Mental) Impairments	9/240	3.75
