You know you shouldn't vote for hiliary because her and her husband are genocidal people that should be in mental facility.	Mental	Physical Identity - Physical (and Mental) Impairments	1/21	4.762
The amount of people that actually do are incredibly small and mostly cancel each other out, i.e. those that only will vote for a man = those that will only vote for a woman . Cenk is just a dipshit who likes to focus on these "issues"	Woman	Gender - General	1/46	2.174
Cenk should we also factor in that a woman lost to Trump. Voters may be wary of sending in 2 in a row and risk Trump being in office another 4years	Woman	Gender - General	1/31	3.226
Yeah, a woman lost to Trump so obviously no woman can beat Trump. I mean the last election proved it, right?. Sad. America is getting and will continue to get what it deserves!	Woman	Gender - General	2/33	6.061
But everyone told me that it wasnt her gender , it was cause hiliary was a bad candidate. So now all women are bad candidates, hmmmmmm	Gender	Gender - General	1/25	4.0

You may have a point about the female candidates. I would vote for Tulsi because I think she's serious about the USA kicking the "War" habit.Full disclosure, I haven't fully researched all of the candidates. And I saw a long interview with Tulsi.I ALSO like Yang. His main theme, "Freedom Dividend" is inspiring. It "kicks it up a notch". But if we want a future for our planet with us humans still ON it, we have to stare down our so-called enemies and not start killing folks unnecessarily.I'm backing Bernie right now. He's been consistent for decades. "Unyielding"... But he listened when he was asked about the need for African American participation and full citizenship (BLM). My main concern about Bernie is his total accumulation of calendar years.	African	Ethnicity - Black	1/131	0.763
Bernie - Warren, practically the same to me. The troubling part is that a well known misogynist and racist has a chance of getting re-elected! Sad. America is getting and will continue to get what it deserves!	Misogynist, Racist	Ethnicity - General, Gender - General	2/37	5.405
Yes and no, when it comes to creating the expectation for a gender it is typically the other gender that is doing it. However, when it comes to enforcing these rules it tends to be the same gender that does it. So woman create the expectations then men enforce it on one another, and vica versa. This said, this doesn't mean that every individual of either gender has those expectation of others. It is just a broad generalization to illustrate the large picture of actions.	Gender, Woman	Gender - General	5/85	5.882

kstock Yeah I tend to believe Women when they say they had been assaulted, and what is at stake for a Corrupt Pres. and the weirdo repubs, that have way too many secrets and vile things they feel the need to do, so they ram a Judge through that is accused of some vile shit! Yeah I do believe her Sorry for you...	Weirdo	Physical Identity - Physical (and Mental) Impairments	1/63	1.587
MultiSpeedr so you believe women without evidence? wow. I'll believe a woman when she has proof. Her word like everyone else's isn't good enough.	Woman	Gender - General	1/24	4.167
systematic101So what was Kavanaugh's proof exactly? She said he did it, He said he did not, So the Woman needs empirical proof but your repub fake judge does not?...I was looking at the fact that she came under death threats and having to go into hiding many years after the fact... Kav. Threw a temper tantrum and Collins got paid, where exactly is the political conspiracy? Looks like it is one sided...so please with the bullshit...	Woman	Gender - General	1/76	1.316
MultiSpeedr exactly! you wouldn't need to prove you didn't steal it. Yet you wrote "So the Woman needs empirical proof but your repub fake judge does not?". Just like you wouldn't have to prove you stole it Kav doesn't need to prove he didn't assault her.Nice little twist with the whole women in my life thing. That BS won't work here. If there's a woman in my life then it means I trust them. If I trust them then they have given me reason to trust them. Everyone in my life knows I will stop being friends with liars. If you're a liar then I can't trust you. If I can't trust you then I can't be friends with you. This applies to even family. Thus if someone within my circle accused someone of sexual assault it would carry more weight that a stranger but it still wouldn't mean I automatically conclude the accused is guilty. I still need proof. Not automatically believing the accuser isn't the same as defending the accused. I hope you're able to understand the difference.	Sexual, Woman	Gender - General	3/181	1.657
systematic101 I wrote what I wrote as an answer to your bad analogy, and now any woman in your life is no lying because you trust them, twisting in the wind, again I believe Dr. Ford because of her actions, Kavanaugh just stating he did not do it does not negate what Dr. Ford did in the face of death threats, so you proved my point, you like Kav. so Dr. Ford is lying, and a Woman in your life could not possibly be lying because you trust them... o.k.??? And my answer to your money nonsense is just that, you feel if Kav says he did not do it that is enough, therefore if I say I did not do it that should be enough for you, not me... I was trying to get you to see it is one and the same, but you believe Kav... gtfoh...	Woman	Gender - General	2/149	1.342

MultiSpeedr The analogy wasn't bad. It was to point out how ridiculous it would be to expect the accused to provide proof they didn't commit a crime. My analogy was an exact copy of the Kav situation just replacing the people and he crime. Why do you not need to prove you didn't steal the money but Kav needs to prove he didn't sexually assault her? Kav doesn't need to negate anything she says. She has to prove what she says is true. Much like I would have to prove you stole the money. How are you not understanding burden if proof? Why is it people like you completely disregard burden of proof when it's a woman accusing a man of sexually related crimes?Go back and read my comment. I didn't say the women in my life can't be lying. His is why I said I would still not automatically conclude the accused is guilty with just their word. I said their word would hold more weight than a stranger but it wouldn't be enough.	Woman	Gender - General	1/176	0.568
systematic101 Lol, I trust my instincts more than I do yours, because again, I will trust a woman who comes forward after death threats to testify, much faster than a wayward frat boy who is an elite and knows he will get what he wants, he was shielded all the way, the fbi was not allowed to fully investigate, and the Repubs. Probably you included have a history of smearing women who are accusers of powerful liars...but hey you inadvertently supported my points and did not even know it, it will be eye opening when the women you say you trust explain to you that they do not need your trust for you to believe them...lol	Woman	Gender - General	1/116	0.862
MultiSpeedr also how did I support your argument. Your argument is she's a woman so believe her.	Woman	Gender - General	1/17	5.882
systematic101 All I said was I believe her, no argument in my mind, you said you did not believe her, sounds like you are calling her a liar, you know people have committed murder and have gotten off, but they still did it, they just had skilled lawyers this Woman comes forward from a long time ago, and her testimony was credible, and also a sacrifice on her part, and of course you feel you need more proof other than that she was there, of course you are calling her a liar, and again as I said her accusation is exactly the same as his denial, and I believe her not the whiny frat boy who's Bill's just got paid mysteriously by slimy repubs.. you can think what you what you have proved as much as I have except you back someone who has a few accusations of sexual misconduct following him...so again gtfoh...	Sexual, Woman	Gender - General	2/154	1.299

MultiSpeedr my god you're dumb . When did I say I back him? Oh so she said she was there. I guess that's undeniable proof. Just like I said I was there when you raped me 3 years ago. I guess that means you should be convicted. How is it you don't understand burden of proof? Her accusation isn't the same as him denying it. An accusation needs proof. A denial of an accusation does not.	Dumb	Physical Identity - Physical (and Mental) Impairments	1/75	1.333
I hear what you're saying Cenk. And I have thought about this too. A woman would be great for this country as presidentAs a woman , I feel really bad about thinking this way . But I'm focused on getting trump out of office .. And I'm voting on whichever candidate can do that. . If it was against anyone else , I would take the chance and vote for Warren she is smart and her policies are real good .she would be an amazing president esp if dems had botg house and Senate ...but I'm afraid that so many in this country , because of sexismwould not vote for a woman that was the main reason trump won. Some men are just freaked out by a strong , sn art woman ..They can't handle it. I don't know why . Maybe they didn't have any sisters growing up ? MoonShadeStuff i believe in gender roles. Maybe some would consider that sexist. Men and women were created differently, just the way it is.	Gender	Gender - General	1/23	4.348
Drew K you should read up on Amazon times. Yes, there were Amazons and in general they lived peacefully. Women, as leaders, are far superior. Also, on a scientific note, men function at the same level that women have to deal with prior to their periods. You can't handle a woman right before her period? Guess what.....this is how men behave all the flipping time. Be smarter Drew.	Woman	Gender - General	1/68	1.471
Drew K no, let's not kid ourselves, you not only believe in gender roles, you are acting like no women could be fit in a position of authority. That is sexist by definition.	Gender	Gender - General	1/33	3.03
MoonShadeStuff woman is not supposed to be in authority over a man, it is not natural. Only failed or failing societies allow women to exercise authority over men. Sorry to burst your fantasy world bubble, but this world is a cruel and heartless place. Only the strong survive. Women were not created to be the leader, they are created to be the helper.	Woman	Gender - General	1/63	1.587

Drew K See I'd rather just not have my own opinion be above what people who are more intelligent than me found out. There are gender roles and they serve a purpose, but me for example I'm a man with a strong feminine side. I've still studied CS but I'm more emotional and sensitive than your typical man (and you or other people can make fun of or criticise that fact, but I've accepted myself and wouldn't want it another way), so there are certainly females who have the kind of personality that makes them perfect in a leadership position. I think there is nothing wrong with opposing gender roles, if this is what makes that person happy and fulfilled in life - and people should not tell them how wrong it is for them to be who they are or want to be. The people who then say, no you can't be a leader because you're a woman, well... it seems to me that what's between someone's legs isn't the most important thing in determining their skills. If she is a good leader, let her lead. If not, there are actual arguments besides her gender on why someone is a horrible leader.	Gender, Nothing, Woman	Age - Youngsters, Gender - General	5/203	2.463
MoonShadeStuff well, i will have to admit that there are exeptions to everything. We do all have our own personalities and for lack of better terms "quirks" hahaha. Genetalia is not the sole determining factor of a leader, but it is important for many reasons that may not necessarily be fair. A leader is a distinct postion and it is not a role even most men can handle when it comes to leading large groups. But the thing is a leader does have to possess the ability to assert dominance in the proper situations or else a stronger group will just basically roll that said group over and conquer them. Sexism is just basically a neccessary evil, but a feminine man or a masculine woman is not a subhuman and still deserves respect. So good luck to you, just remember life is not always fair, but i am sure there is a position for you in life where you will excel greatly.	Sexism, Woman	Gender - General	2/162	1.235
Just found out about sexism... Damn that sucks bro.	Sexism	Gender - General	1/9	11.111
Sexism exist, no shit Sherlock. Walk a thousand miles in my underwear. Woman work, run homes, raise kids generally alone. Yeah they can handle government.	Sexism, Woman	Gender - General	2/25	8.0
Bitch Pudding if men are constantly "abandoning their children" why do women continue to lay down and have children with multiple men outside of marriage? Being used for sex and then abandoned is not an attribute of a leader or a winner. This just shows lack of impulse control and poor decision making.	Sex	Gender - General	1/53	1.887
Drew K married men abandon children too. It is not a fault of the woman when a man deserts his children. As much as you'd like to make it out to be. You don't blame the parent that sticks around	Woman	Gender - General	1/41	2.439

Drew K so what? Divorce doesn't even factor in here. Parents don't have to be married to parent their children. It is a failure on the part of the men that once they no longer get sex from the mother, they stop caring about their offspring with that woman again, you are blaming women for sticking around and doing their best.	Sex, Woman	Gender - General	2/62	3.226
Bitch Pudding ok, number 1: the number of dead beat mothers is steadily increasing. Number 2: if a woman divorces a man and takes everything, generally she uses the children as a weapon and keeps them away from the father and then calls him a deadbeat. Number 3: it is irresponsible for a woman to allow men to have sex with a man outside of marriage, also it is irresponsible to enter into a marriage and then leave. Look a lot of these modern day women are a huge problem and rather than accenting responsibility they would rather slander men. I see this happen to almost every man i know, also i know many single dads (my self included). Very few of us run out and find a new "mom" for our kids unlike a lot of these women that feel it is some other mans responsibility to be the dad. Of course all men are not good, and all women are not bad and blah blah, but all the real life statistics and facts point to the fact that women make horrible leaders, and anything led by a woman is prone to destruction.	Sex, Woman	Gender - General	4/194	2.062
Drew K you sure are projecting a hell of a lot here. I'm sorry your kids mom doesn't want to be with you anymore and you can't find anyone to put up with your shit and raise your kid for you. Boo fukn hoo. I'm sure you gave her ample reason to not want you around. But go on, blame every woman on earth because YOU made bad personal decisions and chose a mate poorly. Own your own shit. Your poor mate selection does not speak on women's ability to lead. That's what you need to understand. You surround yourself with women of poor character then try to paint us all with the same broad brush. Nope. Not going to work.	Woman	Gender - General	1/121	0.826
Drew K but lets dissect your 3 point. 'Women let men have sex with them'. So men can't control themselves at all? Women should be in charge of sex and say it's only within marriage? So we ARE good at being in charge and leading. You are relying on women to control the flow of sex , because you claim men are unable. You betray your own points. You're a hurt little boy, looking to blame all women for your broken heart. Transparent. I'm a leader and don't buy your shit for a second. Go whine somewhere else. Whining isn't what leaders do.	Sex	Gender - General	3/102	2.941

Bitch Pudding ok, name me an era when men didn't rule the world? Are you implying we don't rule the world now? Who carries babies and breast feeds? What gender is naturally stronger almost always? Its just like the bible said thousands of years ago when Eve was tricked by satan: God told Adam and Eve that "the woman will desire for your husband and he will rule over you". So i guess it is natural for a woman to desire to rule over men, unfortunately it will never be a reality. facts are facts, you can speculate about me all you want and assume i have a broken heart, or assume i have personal flaws if you like but it will never change the way things are.	Gender, Woman	Gender - General	3/129	2.326
Drew K women and men being different biologically doesn't make one better than the other or more suited to leadership. Those are personal qualities that aren't attributed to sex . Yes, there are women leaders. Great ones. You saying they 'shouldn't be leading' is just your wish. They are in fact doing it. So it disproves your assertion that we can't lead. You are the one who keeps trying to use anecdotal evidence to prove your point. You have rambled about so much. Your baby moma left, got a new man, you can't find a new woman = women can't lead?? You ARE projecting. I'm not insulting by saying that. It's stating facts. You have let your personal experiences give you biases about women. And you want a world where women aren't leaders. Well, too bad. You don't get it that way.	Sex, Woman	Gender - General	2/141	1.418
Bitch Pudding hahaha. I broke up with my x like 13 years ago hahaha. Im pretty sure i have been over that for a long time. Anyway we both know what i am saying is true, you keep taking one thing i said (that i said in rebuttal to your comment of men abandoning their children) way out of context. I think in your mind that my opinions are based out of bitterness, but the fact is most real men will not allow a woman to be their leader. But who cares being a leader is over rated, and just because someone is a leader, does not mean they are more important than a non-leader. So in conclusion to this long drawn out conversation I will ask you to look deep within your heart and remove the jealousy and hatred you harbor towards men. We cannot help that our role in life is to dominate.	Woman	Gender - General	1/155	0.645

Cenk, please glance at the comments to the video you posted about the Working Families Party's endorsement of Warren and listen carefully to Ana's implicit criticism of Warren. After you have done that, ask yourself first whether sexism might be at the root of the vitriolic response of many of your viewers to Warren and then, please, seriously consider the possibility that that response might be inspired by some unconscious bias expressed in your videos and whether you and your team should discuss the ways in which sexism informs your representation of, for instance, Elizabeth Warren in your videos. People are animals. The sexes are different for different purposes. These are primal no matter how we try to alter or keep them at bay. Most Women feel complete by being attractive and or bearing children. Men feel complete by screwing or screwing over. This has kept the world going forever. We have blindsided natural selection by using outside resources and technologies. We now live in a world where the most liked or connected gets the promotion instead of the most qualified. This practice over centuries has unraveled everything we created to bring us where we are worldwide. I think women have a conflicted time, now. They want to be equal, not equivalent. And they don't react well to these inner conflicts. Just look how often Ana gets so overheated compared to Cenk. Though I thoroughly respect Ana, like many women their inner heat gets the best of them . They have a hare der time channeling it effectively. They don't value their powers. This affects their attitudes toward themselves and causes them to turn away from their primal nature. They want respect instead of family. All the while, willing to find sexual partners who are strong(willing to screw over). And passing n men who would help them fulfill their primal needs. Yes women have sexual needs too. But the need to be attractive is mitigated by the looks of the men they sleep with, not the ethical merits. Any wonder all the men accused in the 'me too' movement were unattractive. If TomBrady was running Weinstein, the story may have played out a bit differently. I have two pretty sisters & they knew since day one, to be extra careful not to put themselves in those situations, no matter their desire to get the job, position, vanity movie project. Men are tired of women pretending their sex is a commodity to be traded. That ship sailed in the seventies. They have internet porn and. We live in a world of instant gratification. Most Men don't want to jump through hoops now that good women are not a prize to win or earn. Women have destroyed their enigma. Everybody wants to be king. Does Warren really think she needs to be president over Bernie, when she could just support him & make sure he gets elected! But only women can have children so that's is the most important function for humanity, and they don't value it at all.	Sex, Sexual	Gender - General	3/409	0.733

That large margin of votes that accounts for Warren loosing to Trump is not solely comprised of sexist men. To imply that is shallow minded and dishonest. Everything you presented was anecdotal and hypothetical as to the implication of sexism being the reason for the discrepancy in votes. So are all women who don't support women cannidates sexist against women? And Hilliary won the majority vote and she didn't loose that election because of sexist men. Hillary lost that election because she was dishonest and democrats abandoned their own party in record number because of it. For more anicdotal – most women I knew were the ones protesting her character and voting independent. A vote of independent in that election was a vote for Trump essentially. Also, why don't you mention that in the 2015 New Hampshire polls Hilliary was neck and neck with Sanders and beating all other MEN cannidates? Brandon Cuckler Just want to point out that women can be and sometimes are sexist against other women. This can include things like holding women to a higher standard than men or being more critical of women than men. One way in which women are perceived differently than men in politics is that they are often seen as more liberal, regardless of what their policies actually are. But you're right that sexism is probably not the only reason for the different poll numbers between the candidates.	Sexism	Gender - General	1/86	1.163
geistjagerin I would certainly not deny the existence of sexism being predicated against women by women – I'm simply stating that to imply sexism is the root cause of a female candidate not fairing well on the political stage in 2019 is absurdly incorrect and is completely harmful to the social fabric of our country. I think the premise Cenk is working from is not exactly spot on. Just because people favor a man over a woman for president doesn't mean they don't think a woman can run the country. They just may think a male candidate is more electable. Electability is a big reason why many people support who they do in this election. If you support Elizabeth warren then you are saying, in an election where we have to beat trump, I want a candidate that shares the policies I support, but also will become the first female president on our history. Disappointing? ?? Most certainly! ! A surprise? Certainly not, and especially in the US where most men have been raised from infancy to learn that they are not supposed to play with dolls, not supposed to cry, and not supposed to display feelings that are associated with the opposite gender . They are supposed to be men, for crying out loud, whatever the hell that means. In the meantime, women have taken a backseat for years, and sorry to say, haven’t made nearly as much headway as necessary. Hopefully, women such as those in ”the squad” will reverse this horrific wrong.	Gender	Gender - General	1/100	1.0

I overhear ignorant things everyday working within an affluent conservative neighborhood (here's a few examples):Two guys drinking after their wives had yoga practice "Why doesn't anybody make fun of Elizabeth Warren? I fing hate that woman !"A man from South Carolina joking to a female schoolteacher paying for her drink "Just like you liberals, you want someone else to do the work for you"Off duty female cops talking to male off duty cops about having to go to work the next day "I dont care about listening to how black people are are oppressed by white people, yadda yadda but we're never included about what we're going through"A country singer before singing 'Family Tradition' "If you got a problem with my country, I got something in my truck that can help you leave"Obviously I am some stranger on the internet so you take what I say with a grain of salt, but I will honestly admit that this is what I overhear on a regular basis at my job and its simply out of the fact that the people in my neighborhood are beneficiaries of the way income distribution presently works and these people get to easily grief inconveniences they feel about other socio-economic groups having problems which they feel they have to fix because they believe they're more honest, harder working, and under appreciated. By being incapable of understanding outside of their own scope what systematic problems effect these other groups, they are far too rigid to believe open minded women are too naive to understand the conservatives' need for material economic gain as a bottom line is the only thing worth considering for policy, and if other categories of people being (Native Americans, immigrants, LBGTQ, etc) a victim to their process, it is an obstacle and interferes with their demographics ownership of the American system. Gender equality isn't about if men or women are better at managing stuff. I've known both men and women who were both good and terrible at what they did. At this point in history, we've had women politicians (including heads of states), CEOs and several other jobs and some of them were terrible at it, while some others were good at it, just like men can be good and terrible at their jobs. Looking at this from the point of view "men are better" or "women are better" (or an opposite, "women aren't good enough" or "men aren't good enough") is absolutely ridiculous. Gender equality is about letting people, regardless of who they are, rising to the level they want in life.	Gender	Gender - General	2/122	1.639

Women see subtle signs of sexism every day, and for most of our lives, we give into it, we enable it because we don't know that we're doing what we are doing. You don't really find out how you've been playing along with the system until you are about 45. It's so ingrained, and it's so institutionalized, that I believe often that black women who believe in certain situations that they are being discriminated against for being black are actually being discriminated against for being women, but because they have those two major things that they can be discriminated against because of, they can't make the distinction between one and the other.We are taught not to notice it and in fact to covet male approval from a very early age . Usually, approval based on things that are exterior, subjective, and that no human being gets to keep.	Age, Black, Sexism	Age - General, Ethnicity - Black, Gender - General	4/148	2.703
So true. I remember being a tomboy as a kid, desperate to differentiate myself from what most boys thought of girls. I used to feel like that one "cool" girl for insulting others of my gender , or for denying that women had it rough. We keep hearing these days that men and women are equal here in America: and believe me, I am so incredibly grateful for the freedoms that I'm afforded here, as compared to less fortunate women across the globe. But when there are men who make shallow excuses to dislike good female candidates, or that blatantly admit that they won't vote for someone on account of her gender , it makes it baffling to me that the existence of sexism is still up for debate. Bryna Waldman yes of course, you are the one talking about property, while I discuss the etymology of feminism, I recommend you find a history & sociology book, this is not the first time and place women have had abundant, even excessive rights, but feminism is new. I won't label women I admire feminist out of respect, I prefer to call the 2 women I mentioned capable. you see I won't belittle their accomplishments by implying it is because of their sex or ideology related to gender . They are compassionate, courageous, and dedicated, qualities anyone should aspire to possess. As to the dictionary, lol, feminism suffers from an unfortunate phenomenon of language and culture. It's usage caught on because of the association with women, with the struggle of women. Thus it accidentally tells the truth. It is for and about women, to the exclusion and submission of men. The only place you find the word equal in the rhetoric is in the dictionary and in the equal pay myth. Leave that aside for the moment, consider the ideological propaganda war waged for 40+ years to demonize men. The problem for both sides is that we are currently a binary species, slowly abandoning the appreciation and art of working and living together. Whatever form we choose it to take it should grow from mutual respect and appreciation. Militant feminists reject this simple ethic. I recommend the language of humanism instead, inclusiveness and mutual responsibility. The problems facing women are human, thus important to men. men's problems affect women, thus ought to be important to them also. Our problems, rights and responsibilities belong to us all. I do think it is a small minority that wouldn't vote for a woman . There are all sorts of reasons why people voted for Trump. I was watching Professor Richard Wolf. He is probably not the first to say this, but he believes a lot of democratic voters felt betrayed by the Democratic party because they were not working for them. A lot of them were Obama voters. There may not be enough to turn the tide for the presidential election but many Trump voters no feel they did the wrong thing by voting for him. Wolff said this is the same reason people voted for Brexit . It was a big eff you to the labor party. As I said there are other reasons Trump was elected. Voter suppression. Beverly may I say something, hopefully without offending you? But first I understand what you are saying and I can see why you are frustrated. It is obvious overall that both sides seek to exploit African Americans for their votes, and once the elections are over they get thrown under the bus, time and again. Many non-African Americans think they can stereotype them and speak for them, and this has to be irritating. I acknowledge that sad fact, and I wish it were not true. As a biracial Hawaiian-white kid who looked very white, I had to deal with racism a lot from my fellow Polynesians, growing up in Hawaii. At many points I was the only Caucasian looking kid in rough schools and had to deal with almost daily assaults, and the constant insults. So at an early age I truly hated bigotry in all forms. Bigotry is perpetrated by miserable cowards who hate themselves and turn that self-hatred and low self-esteem on innocent people. They are cowards and bullies. They secretly fear that the people they hate are better than them. They are social cancer. When I joined the military, it was my first opportunity to have African American friends, and I discovered that overall, they also hated bigotry and bullying. And that African Americans tend to be fiercely loyal friends who would have my back no matter what. Perhaps because of the racism in our country, my African American friends were often the ones to stand up to oppression and not back down. My friends defended people who were picked on. Yes, I know we have good people like this from all races and backgrounds, but these traits of loyalty and courage against oppressors, is much stronger in any oppressed people. So, I believe many non-African Americans are confused when people whom President Trump has maligned and mistreated, support him. One example are the "Muslims for Trump," group, despite that Trump stated "They hate us," in an interview, and he made up a big lie about them, saying thousands of Muslims were dancing in the streets during 9/11. Trump also put a defective Muslim ban in place, blocking Muslims from nations who never attacked us, yet allowing Saudi open access, when they funded terrorism and 9 of the 10 who hijacked our planes were from Saudi Arabia. It's the same with African Americans. Trump lost a lawsuit in New York for discriminating against African Americans and he referred to African countries as "Shit holes," while saying he wished we had more people from Norway. Several of his former employees are in record stating Trump often insulted African Americans intelligence and trustworthiness. In one of Trump's rallies, he pointed to the lone African American and said "He is my black." It's the same with poor whites. Why, many liberals ask, do they support and vote for someone who is only helping his fellow wealthy friends, and making things worse for them. Trump mocked them and said he likes "uneducated people" but will be appointing "smart educated folks." More simply, he told them to their faces he would only hire the Good Whites, and not white trash like them...and they cheered him on. Therefore, with the positive stereotype of African Americans being civil rights champions and the defenders of any oppressed group...many wonder why people such as African Americans, poor whites, Latinos and Muslims would support and vote for a

If Racism and Sexism are such a huge problem in America, why are there so many brown-skinned people and women, at a disproportionately higher ratio compared to whites, immigrating to America? Even more so since Trump became President. China's economy was booming up until recently, yet we never heard about a massive surge of whites or blacks (or even other Asians) immigrating to THAT country. I would love to have a first female president but Warren seems compromised. Tulsi Gabbard would be amazing and is the only women running that could get my vote in the primary. Trying to claim that Bernie and Warren are basically the same is very disingenuous. Warren is weak and will bend to the establishment as she has many times in the past and did recently with her vote to increase military spending. You literally made a 10 min video a couple years back about how she was acting different and siding with the establishment. Also, Andrew Yang comes off as more trust-able and has built a lot of traction and to claim he polls better because of his gender is stupid and irresponsible. Maybe it is because she is a weaker watered down version of someone else in the race . Yes sexism exists but you have literally no evidence for your claims. As a black lesbian woman , I can assure you that sexism has been the least brutal form of discrimination I've encountered. Sexist people know women are necessary for the continuation of mankind. They want women to exist if for no other reason but to be of service to them- sexual service or otherwise. With homophobia and especially racism , you're dealing with people who'd prefer a world where you didn't exist. That's a special kind of disdain and ruthlessness. To be seen as a collective stain on humanity in need of cleansing and removal... Furthermore, women of racially marginalized communities overwhelmingly voted for Hillary Clinton. The majority of white women did not. They (not all, but the majority) chose to side with their privilege (Trump and his racism) over their disadvantage. That signaled to the rest of us (women) that for white women- sexism isn't quite uncomfortable enough. One might even say it's tolerable- tolerable enough to elect. karen kelly for sure. I'm not saying sexism can't be or hasn't been violent. I'm simply stating it doesn't compare. You'd be hard pressed to find a black woman who'd disagree. Can you point to a genocide of women? The female infanticide in China comes the closest. Pick a continent, pick a century (spin a globe and stop it with your finger) and I can show you a correlation of racially motivated genocide. White women- individually, collectively need to do the work and search their souls as to why they felt compelled to elect this man. Even those who voted third party or chose not to vote at all. I told my white female friends who were voting for Jill Stein that they were coming from a place of privilege. I said that to them before he was elected. I knew then that Trump's racism was a greater threat to me than his sexism was to them or to me for that matter. CJ Detroit You do know that sexist women exist? Sexist towards their own gender? It's called internalized sexism, they are brainwashed, too far down the rabbit hole. You know how many women who voted for Trump think that women shouldn't be presidents, and that women should be housewives just like them? Women are more tortured than men. Men aren't shamed as much and in the way women are, of course that includes black men. Who do you think gets more respect from white men, black women or black men? Black women are the most oppressed group in the united states, not just because of the skin color but because of the gender too. Black women have to deal with more hardships than a black male. Black men got the right to vote 50 years before white women did and black women got the right to vote last. Black men aren't seen as property, while women are, of course not everyone sees women as objects but just go and open up any porn site and you'll see the objectification. It's still a tradition that when a man and a woman marry, a woman takes the last name. Just imagine if that would apply to a race, so a person a and b are getting married, person a is white and person b is black, and the person b has to take the last name of the person a, has to do the household chores and take care of the kids and has to be the submissive one. There is a lot of sexism and homophobia in men's culture, black and white men. You mentioned that homophobia is worse, homophobia is related to sexism, without sexism there would be no homophobes and homophobia, and don't act like black men aren't participating in the hatred of gay people, I actually think there are probably equal amounts of homophobes between black and white men. At the end of the day they are both men, one is black and one is white, but they are closer in thinking than people and media portray and pay attention too. One more thing, sexism and homophobia are also more open and less shamed than racism, for example, Trump is labeled as racist although we never heard him say anything racists(correct me if I'm wrong, but as far I know), while Kanye West literally said during a meeting with Trump, that he wasn't rooting for Hillary because she is a woman, when he thinks of a president he thinks of a man and not a woman. ---	---	---	--------	-------

Ark Basik you're preaching to the choir... sexism is bad. And I agree, the homophobia I encounter most often is from men who are rejected by me. The hardest part of homophobia for me is the feeling of isolation from my family. Additionally, sexism in the black community stems from racism. Black men being made to feel like less than when they're out in the world then come home (physical home or metaphorical one) and express their frustrations over the one class of people they have privilege over. Hurt people hurt people. That's why we all need to be in constant search for new depths of our soul. I will ignore the Kanye referenced. I mourned for the loss of that man's sanity like his sanity was a first cousin on my mother's side . With that said- Trump has said far more consequential things regarding race. Defending his call for the execution of innocent black men, labeling Mexicans as rapists and killers... This man is the President- not a rapper. I agree that it is all interconnected in ways which is why an injustice against one is an injustice against all. Babies are still in cages at our border! Racism put them there. Sexism may cause the young girls further harm. Homophobia could do further harm to any young boy should he be guarded by someone who preys on the defenseless because they're too cowardly to live their truth out loud. I was simply giving my perspective... my blackness has the least amount of allies. CJ Detroit I'm not excusing any bad actions by whites in general, I'm simply pointing out the ridiculous culture that exists in much of the black community. At no point during the decades trend of rock n roll from the 60s all the way up to the 90s did you ever hear of rock stars busses getting shot at, but that's something you can find on a regular basis for rappers. Watch a modern rap video, all they do is dance around with uzis and machine guns rapping about killing opps etc. that behavior is NOT because of systemic racism . Why is it blacks in the 60s had much worse circumstances, yet seemed like respectable educated and responsible people? The democrats forced the father's from the homes of black people after Jim Crow in order for mothers to get welfare thereby negating the presence of any male role model, and kept them dependent on government for the folllowing 60 years. That is almost as bad as slavery if you ask me. Black Wall Street is an example of what happens when black people don't depend on government and form their own economies and it's a shame what happened there. Richard Vining do you know black culture or do you just know what you're shown??? Even that is by design... and gang culture and some forms of rap music have become connected because some gangsters became rappers and some rappers employ gangsters and so on and so forth... Gangster rap, like gangster movies, is quite successful numbers wise so that became what music companies invested in, then they marketed their investment{s). But what you're speaking of is gang culture. Black culture is all together different. If I thought you were coming from a place of genuine concern, willingness to learn and an eagerness to understand- I'd list for you some websites and social media platforms about black culture. CJ Detroit cool story, but it still doesn't change what I said. Also I'm not 'propagating your value' whatever the hell that means. There's a history of horrible racism and violence against black people, I don't and will never deny that. There's also a problem with police harassment as well. The problem I see though with people who think like you, is you fail to place any responsibility on your own communities. I can see the fault of my community, but you turn a blind eye or make ludicrous excuses for what continues to go on. Richard Vining I place plenty responsibility people who fail do better. I'm harder on my people than you will ever know because it's not your business. They're are plenty of racist rock bands who cater to the lifestyle of the white men i. The backwoods shooting assault rifles, practicing for a race war. Does that make that white culture??? Just because something became mainstream doesn't mean it represents the totality of a people or even the majority of a people. Luckily for the white people in middle America and rural America who suffer from the opioid and meth crisis, there's a new, more compassionate 'war on drugs' that sees them as human beings- victims even. Too bad, the black victims in urban centers didn't receive the same compassion during the crack and heroin epidemics. You see- your privilege allows you to move through life untethered to any mistake you may have made. Simultaneously- everyone else has to go through life with the cloud of mistakes/poor judgements made by people who look like them. I think everyone is accountable for his/her actions. I also know a lack of opportunity, fair playing field, poor education etc. plays a role. It's called systemic oppression.	Black, Race, Racist	Ethnicity - Black, Ethnicity - General	3/201	1.493

Alot of people look at warren and see weakness. Just on a visceral level. As you said harris despite being terrible is polling better than warren against trump because people think she is strong. So this is really an issue for warren not females. The democrats who wont vote for a woman because she is a woman is probably due to a conditioned perception of weakness. You think the poll would be the same if it was Tulsi against trump? People see tulsi and they see strength. They see warren and they see weakness. Archeon Wanlorn First you said it's an issue with Warren, not women in general. But now you say that women have to appear strong to overcome SEXISM . So which one is it? Is Warren actually weak, or are some people seeing her as weak just because she is a woman ? Just look at the comments and you'll see that quite a few people are blatantly biased against women. I think you are one of them, you're just trying to hide it more. Perhaps you won't even admit it to yourself. Let me put it this way. If there were a man on the stage who said exactly the same things as Warren, would you view him as weak? I doubt it!	Sexism, Woman	Gender - General	2/121	1.653

magicsofa you dont seem to be following the conversation. People in reality are sexist. Electability must take this into account. If as a woman you cannot appear strong to people they will subconsciously or conciously shy away from wanting you in a leadership role.Warrens inability to appear strong is her problem because society right now makes it a problem as it has a preconcieved notion that women are weak as a general rule. It isnt fair, but that is a hurdle she will have to jump over higher than her male counterparts. Harris’ ability to not appear genuine is her problem because society wants genuine and this comes less from her being a woman and more from her being a politician and people dont trust politicians as much. So she has less of a hurdle to overcome than warren.The democratic poles showing off how favored warren is to harris just goes to show how much better warren has done connecting with people kn the primary. The general wont have the same handicap for genuine players unfortunately.	Woman	Gender - General	2/178	1.124
Archeon Wanlorn I am following, I obviously agree that women face an uphill battle. I feel that you are assuming the point of Cenk releasing this video is to say, the ONLY thing that can be done to help a female candidate is cry sexism. And when you explain your view, it makes it sound like the ONLY thing to do is appear strong despite sexism. Can’t we call out sexism at the same time that female candidates are out there trying to break the stereotype?”Electability” is a mantra that deserves questioning. It’s just like the swing-voter paradox. Let’s say 100 people are voting on candidates X, Y, and Z. One person really likes Z but doesn’t think they will win, so they vote for their second choice, candidate Y. But what if the other 99 people were split evenly... 33 for each candidate. All of a sudden, the swing voter’s logic fails because whoever they voted for would have been the winner. So they elected Y, but they should have voted Z.In the same way, voters can potentially convince themselves that Warren will lose, while in reality their full support could secure a win. But, by pulling their vote, they fulfill their own prophecy. Hillary lost by a very slim margin, and yet people continue chanting ”electability” as soon as sexism is brought up. Even people like you, who are willing to agree that sexism exists, but seem very resistant to the idea of calling people out or investigating its presence...	Sexism	Gender - General	5/254	1.969

magicsofa where in my post did i say anything about not calling it out. I think you are just looking for something to rage at without having a rational discussion.Warren in every interview she gets hit by a question or statement she doesnt like ends up shocked like she isnt sure how she is supposed to respond. Whether its in reference to being called Pocahontas or being challenged about her foriegn policy. Why do you really think she avoids interviews with networks that would not "play nice" with her?She does not handle mud slinging challenges well... not even as well as hillary. Hillary has a million more problems than warren or course but we are trying to be objective here and one of her greatest weaknesses is being unable to take the nasty bullshit of the plebian mudspeak well.There is nothing wrong with calling out the bullshit as you see it. The problem is that a lot of people dont care if it is mean spirited or sexist. In their minds a Leader, (or someone who they are giving control of their life) needs to appear like a larger than life human. Warren does not pull this mantle off. Which i would bet is a majority of why her biggest support comes from well educated people that arent looking for a larger than life leader and just looking for someone to legislate.	Nothing	Age - Youngsters	1/235	0.426
Archeon Wanlorn I suspected, I didn't assume. I'm sure I'll never really know the answer. Just seems redundant if the whole point of your argument is that women face extra challenge because of sexism ... cuz that's the point of the video. Cenk, I love you for being upfront about this but you need to realize that sexism will not be completely rooted out in the baby boomer and gen X generations (I'm gen X woman) because it has been "normal" for all of our lives that many men don't see their actions as being sexist because it was never taught to them that their behavior is sexist! Every man did it and women who complained were seen as whiners. To this day and for years to come doctors will take women's complaints way less serious than men's. Ignored illnesses kill thousands of women because they were not taken seriously. That is not going to change any time soon. It is the way it is. We WILL keep fighting but I'm not deluding myself in thinking it's going to improve overnight. We can fight in wars with you, work in construction like you, do all the things you do but still we are seen as weaker, less intelligent, hysterical and living incubators by the ruling class. The sad thing is that all the women in the world can't change this alone. It unfortunately takes a man to do that. That is also why America is not yet ready for a female president. Everything that isn't to the liking of the ruling class men will be blamed on the fact that the president is a woman and that will undo any progress we have made si far! Americans need to learn to think more strategic but unfortunately they tend to run to far ahead of themselves and that is why Europe has evolved but America is still stuck rock solid in the 1950s. Observe and adjust, don't go out guns blazing and try to force change on these old fashioned people because it will terrify them and make them even more extreme.4 years of Bernie Sanders will change everything in a positive way, 4 years of Warren will undo everything. Cenk, this is not a great video to make because it is based off anecdotes and not a lot of facts. So, you cited a poll in New hemisphere that had Warren losing to trump while Sanders and Biden are winning. Okay, that is 1 poll and there is probably a trillion factors to take into account. You state that Warren and Bernie have similar positions so it doesn't make sense. When, for a really long time.. Warren' voters 2 choice was Kamala Harris, and Bernie's 2 were Joe Biden. So, sometimes voters don't make sense. I'll also cite you another poll to demonstrate this. Late August, there was a poll that had Warren beating Trump by +6 in Michigan whilst Sanders beat him +4 tieing with Kamala. Now, This makes 0 sense because we all know Sanders is the guy who opposes all the trade deals, yes Warren does as well but no where near as vocal or has a track record of it like Sanders. Also, this is the same state that Sanders beat Hillary in 2016 even though he was down like 15-20 in the polls. Also, why is he tied with Kamala when going against trump? She hasn't been that vocal against the trade deals at all or any major policy that would affect a state like Michigan. There are just way too many factors to simply say majority of the reason is sexism	Sexism	Gender - General	1/238	0.42
Well Dude you come from reason and I like the way you think BUT there are factors you take in to consideration which is problematic. While all the things you mentioned may have an effect, there is no way for example that people there are fully aware of Andrew Yang's policies. Kamla harris is drowning in corporate money and refuses to stand against very problem you have mentioned about Elizabeth not voicing very loud as Bernie. Now personally, I believe sometimes people don't want to believe that a problem exists so that they can breath somehow and continue their life because the truth heart and it hearts very bad. The bias you have is not intentional but is there. Dude this is 2019 and we are yet to have a women as a president and you still want to argue that sexism is not a factor?? Are you serious?!! The probability of people voting for a criminal in US as a president is higher that a Woman dude. It is crazy to think that we don't a face a huge problem regarding trusting a woman. It is crazy, painful and sad but it very much EXIST. What we SHOULDN'T do is Bury our head in to sand man. This is very true and we need to deal with it. We really need to educate people specially women. I always say that Mothers are the key here. They should teach this to their children at first then of course we have to work on the dogma men are facing in their lives.	Crazy, Woman	Gender - General, Physical Identity - Physical (and Mental) Impairments	4/261	1.533

Kaveh Zarrabi Let me be clear here, I'm not saying sexism is not real or that its not major factor or there is no one in America that simply doesn't vote for Warren or Harris because they are a woman.What I am saying is that it is insane to suggest that sexism played a massive role in these numbers UNLESS you have statistics to back that claim. Also, this is 1 poll and it is emerson (same polling company that says Warren and Biden are at 21 and 23, whilst Bernie is at 13, which is 100 bs compared to most polls so I wouldn't trust their polling too much).Also, the argument that "Well, we don't have a female president yet so how can you say sexism doesn't exist" is like someone saying "Well, Obama is black and he got voted into office so racism doesn't exist anymore".Sexism does exist, it is a massive problem and needs to be resolved. My issue with the video isn't the conclusion but the way he got there. If he argued "Hey, theres still a massive pay gap, theres no paid maternal leave yet" etc... I'd be on broad with it.However, saying "Well, I talked to some cab drivers and I saw one poll so now it made me realise how big sexism is" is just insane to me.If you dive even a little bit deep into the data, you realise that voters legit make no sense at all with this kind of stuff. I wish it was something as clear as "They think women make bad leaders so they wont vote for Warren" or "They value progressive ideas so they vote for Bernie" but it never is. Some will say they want corruption gone, but they'll vote for Biden. Others will say they want moderate ideas, but still vote for Warren or Sanders.	Black, Racism, Sexism, Woman	Ethnicity - Black, Ethnicity - General, Gender - General	8/315	2.54

This is the result of me searching just ONE website. This information is a matter of public record. Educate thyself! This list doesn't even begin to cover historic female leaders that came before them like Queen Victoria or Catherine the Great. These two women ran England and Russia, respectively, which means they were leaders of men. Catherine overthrew her own husband to claim Russian leadership. That is not the mark of a weak woman . Emotional, maybe, but not weak because of it.Russia and England are not small, insignificant countries. When you say that women cannot be effective leaders, you make yourself sound straight up ignorant. At least do a little research before you pop off such a comment.There are leaders who are suitable to run countries for reasons aside from military prowess. That's what generals are for. Countries need to tend to internal affairs and a lot of male leaders are more concerned about sticking their noses into matters outside their borders than taking care of business within.Women CAN run countries; America will not let them. But I know that there were many people in 2016 who voted for Trump because they didn't think a woman could be President (including my grandma, for example). I think there were many deciding factors in 2016, any one of which COULD have flipped the election to Hillary, and sexism in America was definitely one of them. (Another was her terrible policies. Another was Republican voter suppression. Another was foreign interference.) But anyways, we need to recognize the reality and strive for better.	Sexism, Woman	Gender - General	4/119	3.361

Example: all the people that voted for Hilary over Bernie, and falsely called Bernie a misogynist . The truth is women have a big role to play in misogyny . Unlike real minorities, women can elect their own (they make up 51 of the population). Personally I have a massive bias towards women. I would rather vote for a woman than a man. Robert Johnson Its not overblown, its not nearly blown enough. Women are underrepresented in positions of power, be it economical or political, 3 to 1. Gender economic inequality is very real. There is a 20 pay gap, women make 27 of the top 10, less than 17 of the top 1 and 11 of the top 0.1. Women make up 63 percent of workers earning the federal minimum wage and represent only 5 percent of CEOs at Fortune 500 firms. They also hold only around 1/4 of the seats on congress (senate and the house) and thats a record from 20 before 2018 elections. In many other ways women are not receiving the same consideration as men. In healthcare, women are more likely to receive misdiagnosis or have their symptoms dismissed, have to wait more for painkillers and are less likely to receive them. Sexism is very much widespread. Everyone is a little sexist to some degree. Everyone, or else sex wouldn't be a social thing. The mere act of recognizing sex is evidence that we think differently about people of the other sex . There's nothing you're going to do to change a person's (man OR woman 's) mind who doesn't want to see a woman running the country. It's out there, so what. It's never going away either. The right thing to do is to teach your little girls and boys that they will have to grow a tough skin to play this game, that you have to be okay with not everyone liking you, that you can't be everything to everybody. But what does the left do? It constantly whines about this thing out there that will never go away; you will inspire something better out of people just by you yourselves accepting the presence of other people's stupidity instead of bemoaning it all the time. Do you think a President should spend his OR her time lamenting the stupidity of people? You'd get someone who would never take any action! That is one of few areas where women are favoured rather than men. And those inequalities need to be addressed, but women are by far the worse off when you take society as a whole into consideration. Wages, job opportunities, physical autonomy, political representation and imposed conformities of body image and beauty.Look at your own example. You state matter-of-factly '...the poor bastard that worked to buy them.' Why do you assume that the man did the work and the woman did not? It's because that's the likely situation, as men earn more for the same work and get better opportunities for advancement. I see how you conveniently forgot to mention the people in public that say it is time for a female president, all the people who were saying that in 2016. You forgot the disingenuous people who used sexism to hide Hillary's flaws. Kirsten Gillibrand wouldn't have made it to the first debate without bra burning. Sexism in the minds of some, plays into it certainly but it can work both ways and it's hard to quantify it the way pundits tried to quantify the Bradley Effect, which was proven to be a flat concept when it was Obama-vs-McCain too. You want to see real sexism ? Go to Japan. Women are raped with impunity. They have been brainwashed and shamed into acceptance since they were born. The only women who are allowed professions are those with good family names. Only pretty women are allowed to be stewardesses. When in a restaurant, the woman 's wishes are denied. The man decides what they are to eat. If the woman displeased the man, she gets nothing . Japan is a woman 's island prison. The best a woman can do, if she's lucky enough to live in a port city, is run off with the first US serviceman she can find to escape Japan. I think it is not really sexism , it is a response to the recent escalation in feminist misandry . Men see that women are allowed to be sexist, and many women treat men that way all the time with no risk of social punishment. That is in sharp contrast to what happens if a men is openly sexist - yielding immediate social penalty.If some men in the USA think that feminists would go absolutely berserk with misandry if there was a female president, I have to agree with them. Understand that it goes both ways, Cenk. Bernie knows the wrath of the Hillary Misandry Cult oh too well. Bernie was a victim of gender identity politics in 2016 (also known as sexism). Despite Hillary being a horrible candidate, she won the Democratic primary female vote 61 to 37. Clinton won 55 of the popular vote and Sanders won 43 of the popular vote. 58 of the voters in the Democratic primary were female, therefore the gap in their voting decision ALONE more than covers the gap in the popular vote outcome. Interestingly, women leaders tend to wind up in positions of power only after things get really bad. When people get so sick of the side effects of machismo leadership, the primal instinct to seek out a maternal, nurturing leader to fix the problem becomes a force for change. Subconsciously. Whether we realize it or not. The good news is that the women leaders in this position tend to be so much better, in hindsight, than any other man. So, think about how messed up Trump has made things. Then vote for a woman! It's the best way to fix the damage done by Trump to undermine US internal agencies and international relationships. "Whataboutism (also known as Whataboutery) is a red herring version of the classic tu quoque logical fallacy - sometimes implementing the balance fallacy as well - which is employed as a propaganda technique. It is used as a diversionary tactic to shift the focus off of an issue and avoid having to directly address it. This technique works by twisting criticism back onto the critic and in doing so revealing the original critic's hypocrisy. The usual syntax is "What about...?" followed by an issue on the opponent's side which is vaguely, if at all, related to the original issue. An old favorite of the Soviet Union, the strategy was originally used in the form of "And at your place, they hang black people." In recent years, whataboutism made a comeback in Vladimir Putin's Russia (since the Russians seemingly learned all the wrong lessons from the Cold War), and has also seen a rise in usage by Donald Trump and his support base. Simply put, whataboutism refers to the bringing up of one issue in order to distract from the discussion of another." Cenk, this is aimed directly at you as one of the best known non-politician leaders of the progressive movement. I have had a problem with you ever since I started watching TYT, although I watched you on MSNBC for a long time without ever seeing this problem. I am sure it existed then, I simply didn't notice it. We are all human, and as such, are imperfect and in one way or another, all problems that can exist in humans exists in every one of us. Racism, sexism and every other "ism" that exists can be found in every one of us to some extent. Around the time that I quit watching MSNBC (before you left that network) I was beginning to teach using this "mantra" as a guiding principle: "If you cannot be honest with yourself you cannot be honest with anyone else."That kind of self-honesty is largely lacking from both you and Ana, and as a result from the entire organization and its followers. I find it very grating when you or Ana say, "But we are progressives so we don't do that." All too often that statement either follows or is followed by some act or statement of blindness where you do just that, but not quite so openly. Unfortunately, because of the claim made that we do not do that, the act or statement is considerably MORE egregious than what the Repelicans do and say so openly.Yes, Sexism, along with racism and ageism (something well demonstrated among the Young Turks this past week by Emma and John) are much worse than any of us realize, but it is because we refuse to recognize and acknowledge those traits in ourselves. Emma is very definitely ageist. Don't bother denying it. The comment she made is true, but she made it only about OLD right-wingers and not right-wingers in general, including many who are younger than her. John is ageist too. He did not notice Emma's remark and how offensive it was, and allowed it to go without comment. You lost some listeners over that if the comments are to be believed. Yet such ageism is not the defining characteristic of either Emma or John, and it is unfortunate that this gaffe has diminished your organization against this age group."Unless we can be honest with ourselves," means that we much ALWAYS look at ourselves, both individually and as a group (tribe) and say, "What am I doing or saying that shows this is a problem in me," and, "What is the group to which I belong doing or saying that proves it is a problem in us." Until we do this and address the problem within rather than deny it, hide it, bury it deep within, we neither have the moral right to address it in anyone else, nor will we ever have any understanding as to just how serious the problem really is.Maybe you don't have a problem with sexism or racism or ageism or any other ism because of good education at an early age or having learned otherwise from honest observations later in life. After all, you are a repentant repelican, as I am. But just because you have overcome these sins does not mean they are totally eradicated from your life and does not mean the rest of your group had had that epiphany. BECAUSE you have not been honest with yourself about any of those "buts" you have not been really honest about anything else or with anyone else.You are on the right track with this new understanding. Keep on keeping on. That is what really makes us "progressive" Myron	Age, Ageism, Ageist, Old, Racism, Sexism	Age - General, Age - Over 65s, Ethnicity - General, Gender - General	14/611	2.291

Sean King Yes, Mr. Trump. Everyone believes they are perfect and everyone else is the the problem, and because Putin insist he didn't do it you believe him too, even though the evidence of your own investigators appears to prove otherwise. I don't need to prove Emma is Ageist . Her own words proved it in a moment when she was unguarded in her speech. She doesn't only stand for Warren; she much prefers Sanders who is older still. I said it is not her defining characteristic. Her rationality overrides the faults. But like you, Trump, she is not admitting them, she lets them show and she offended a lot of people (some of whom NEEDED to be offended) as a result.I know you don't care. Most people don't because it is easier to claim you are perfect than to admit your shortcomings and deal with them and their aftermath. You can be as dishonest with yourself as you wish and not care at all how inherently dishonest you are, but don't expect me to sit back and not call you on that dishonesty. My comment was public, but is addressed to Cenk, who is mostly honest and is publishing this video dealing with a matter of his own lack of self-candor and the lack of honesty among the rest of the progressives and other democrats. It took awhile, but I realized that America is far far more sexist than racist , the female glass ceiling for the presidency is going to be much tougher to crack than the race barrier. We could be at the beginning of the Veep era of women dominating the vice presidency but denied the nomination for at least a generation. For all it's talk of tolerance and equality the Democratic party has quite a misogynistic streak it it particularly strangely among it's younger members. Bernie Bros, Bernie appearing on Joe Rogan, and Dems who if they can't get Bernie would actually change their support to Biden or even vote Trump rather Warren or any woman . ”First, it is necessary to consider aspects of the male gender role that might make men more likely to be homeless: for instance, men’s greater likelihood of being veterans, or the tendency of men to not seek treatment for their mental illnesses and substance abuse. Looking at it without the gender lens risks missing important aspects of gender.Second, it is necessary not to erase the existence of women who are homeless. Even though men are more likely to be homeless, homelessness is a lot more gender equal than a lot of people present it. The primary causes of homelessness– poverty, lack of affordable housing, unemployment– affect everyone, regardless of gender. A large percentage of the increase in homeless families is probably caused by the recession: unemployment and lack of affordable housing were the two most commonly cited causes of the increase in homeless families.Third, it is important to note that there may be reasons why women are more likely to be housed than men that still don’t mean the women are in a particularly good situation. For instance, women are more likely to participate in survival sex in exchange for housing. ‘Survival sex or homelessness,’ however, is one of those dilemmas that really leaves no one in a particularly good situation.”	Gender, Mental, Sex	Gender - General, Physical Identity - Physical (and Mental) Impairments	8/213	3.756

Cenk, I see and hear you guys talking up Warren more in the last few days. I'm a woman , there are women I would vote for (Nina Turner rocks) , these are not them. Mostly on policy, some on trustworthiness. It's hard to compare any other candidate to Bernie cuz heads and tails above in terms of character, trustworthiness, being able to count on what he says, honesty, integrity, not getting wishy washy about things like healthcare -Warren-, and most importantly he's got the best policy positions and I have to say, I don't believe she can stand up to 45. In the street brawl that's coming she will be run over. Not because she's a woman , but because she, the person, can't play at that level. Also, she's got the Hillary scent all over her, who, yes I believe she would have been an ok president, but most of the issues we face would still be the issues we'd be facing even if she had been pres. I don't believe Warren will go to the wall for many of the issues, she'll accept half measures and I don't think we can change much even if she won. For me, its not about women, I think women rock everything they touch, but it is about each person and their suitability for the job.	Woman	Gender - General	2/223	0.897

I have no problems voting for a woman as long as they are fighting for the same issues I care about but will not vote for a woman just because she is a woman just like I won't vote for a man just because hes a man. I voted for Jill Stein in the last election and will vote for again if the democrat party does voting fraud again. I care more for intelligence than for brute strength but some men still want to vote for brute strength leaders. I understand why other men would never vote for a woman . Deny it if you want but people are still animals and still have instincts. When a young lion, wolf, gator, elephant, deer, bear, or any other animal that fights and stays in a pack challenges the current leader they fight it out until one gives up or one gets killed. No pack wants to be lead by a weak leader. In the animal kingdom its always been a male challenging another male. In mother nature there's no discrimination and only the strong survive. Another reason is women haven't paid their dues. Women want the top powerful jobs without no representation on the dirty undesirable jobs at the bottom. How many women do you see working for waste management that pick up trash, road kill, clean out and rehab sanitary septic tanks, clean out livestock pens, any jobs that deals with thick sludge build up of poops, blood, pee, foul odors, and work in the hot sun. Its rare to see a women doing one of these jobs. Women would gain more respect from men if they see the same amount of women doing those jobs and not just try to go straight to the top. To women, that type of interaction is like, duh. This is the type of shit we deal with on a daily basis,. It's been like that for centuries in this country and millennia around the world. For the longest time, men didn't listen to women about the subject of sexism . A lot of the time, a lot of guys still don't listen, or even consider the idea of listening to women about anything. I think the times are changing though, because some men have been becoming more woke in the subject of sexist discrimination towards women. It's these woke men that can talk to other men about these issues, and get them to actually listen. I think the more woke men talk to other men, those men that wouldn't listen before become woke themselves. The more woke men we have, the more they can enact real change. I know it's a bit late to see this real problem, but the fact that Cenk can be open on the issue, and can see how bad things are, gives me hope because I think he can make a big influence, and is the type of ally that we need. What shocks and worries me is that I know women that say they would not vote for a woman , both are older and both are Democrats! The scary thing is not that they would consider voting for trump, but are likely not to vote at all. I know plenty of men that mention Warren as being "overly ambitious", "pushy", "cold" ...really? Similar to what we heard towards Hillary (...on top of her corruption). These are not terms I hear being applied to Male candidates. Hillary was her own problem mainly, but I believe if she were Male she still would have won...probably not even close. The same gymnastics the right made to make Trump palatable, would have have made Hillarys flaws more palatable to a lot of moderates and democrats if she were Male...I fully believe that. Its not because of Sexism that people think low of Warren. Even though her policies are similar to Bernie, she didn't endorse Bernie in the primaries in 2016 but supported Hillary. Yang is outspoken and bold and is willing to stand up against authority, unlike Warren who is unwilling to standup strongly against the Establishment, although she stands up against the Wall street bankers, but that's where her strength ends. Kyle Jones I couldnt disagree more. Tulsi DOES have plans that address those subjects and more... and her plans will become more defined over the next several months. With the election more than a year away there is still plenty of time to develop those plans. Furthermore, what candidate already has finished detailed plans for all of their platform this early in the race ? That is ridiculous and unnecessary! Many things could happen between now and the election that may change what is most important to focus on and again Tulsi DOES have plans for her entire platform and will continue to define them over the next several months. Most importantly.... Elizabeth Warren is BORING... She is NOT an interesting candidate and is NOT ELECTABLE. She is NOT inspiring and would be destroyed by Trump in a face to face debate or in a national election! Tulsi will CRUSH Trump in a face to face debate AND in a national election. Let's put a woman in the WH to prove we as a country are over that stuff'. Newflash, it's not going to get people over it. And in fact, throw shade at me all you want, but this underlying prejudice is one of the reasons why, unfortunately, I don't think Elizabeth Warren should be the nominee at this time, because it WILL weaken her. We are long past the point where we can afford to play games in pushing social justice reforms. We're in a fight for our lives right now whereby if we do not get the money out of politics and dismantle the establishment we're all done for. I think that sexism is a problem that is societal in nature and that it needs to be addressed. That being said political strategy would dictate that female candidates are disadvantaged by this societal sexism . What matters first and foremost is getting Progressive policies implemented and having someone who we know for sure will do it I office. Their gender is only a factor when trying to appeal to voters at a surface level, and is only in truth strategic concern. The fact is Warren has a strategic disadvantage when pitted against male candidates of similar positions and that needs to be accounted for when calculating her chances of winning the primary. That being said it also matters how awful her opponent is on policy and personality. Warren is way more likely to beat Trump than any of the other female candidates and that's something she has earned with her record and her presence as a Senator known for reprimanding Bank CEOs on National TV. She's strong and playing into that is the best thing she can do to mitigate gender stereotyping done by people with sexist tendencies. In fact, playing into strength and being bold is the best thing any candidate can do at this time in politics, provided they have policies that are broadly appealing to the vast majority as shown in polling, and most Progressives candidates do. He was one note away from getting us in war with North Korea, he is getting us into a war with Iran! For No reason! That was not John Bolton, it was all him! Trump seems like he will get us in a war with Canada if we aren't careful!Then you got the other people where they are stanche Biden supporters but Bernie is their second choice... Why?? HOW? That makes no sense other than name recognition! I would assume they would be more likely to be Harris or Klobuchar supporters, I guess not! (That could be more name recognition because you also would think they'd at least be Buttigieg supporters)I just think, clearly it isn't everyone, but there is a significant percent. It's a closet sexism, and you can smell it out and be suspicious of it (just like closet racism). I guess I'd be a fool to think that it would be less among general low information voters, it's probably much worse... but I won't let that influence my political decisions because that is how we've held back so many minorities and minority issues in the democratic party (in addition to obviously women's issues), and yet we still were able to elect Obama. It's not exactly the same. Electing a woman as president of the US would break a glass ceiling, it would mean something, mean that women can achieve the same as men, even in the US (since some other countries understood this since a while) Once that ceiling is broken, I don't think so many would say 'I choose her because she's a woman ' and those who will still be saying this will then be indeed as sexist as those saying 'I won't vote for her because she is a woman '. But the first elected woman would be a symbol of achieved equality somehow. But what a candidate would bring is indeed very important since it's for the whole people. I'm not American, so I didn't vote but during the Obama vs Hillary, I first rooted for Hillary since she was a woman and as a woman myself, I would like that finally a woman could be accepted as president of the most powerful country. But seeing how she was over the course of the primaries, doing dirty things and all, I preferred Barack Obama. Then Hillary vs Trump, both were corrupted but Hillary seemed less racist , so I would have chosen her even if in the primaries I would have picked Bernie. Now you have more decent choice in the women candidates but it's also two men that I prefer, Bernie and Yang but I still think a woman elected would break a ceiling. If you're not over 50, you won't get it, but let me try to explain something. Growing up Elizabeth Warren did not grow up with computers and internet, DNA tests, or even a push button phone. You got all your news from news papers and if you weren't poverty stricken (which Warren was) you might have been lucky enough to watch the local news at six (in black and white).Kids used books called encyclopedias to look up information at a library. In other words, info was very difficult to come by. In those days we passed on family information by word of mouth (a habit formed by thousands of years of practice) over coffee at the kitchen table, or shelling beans on the porch. If your parents or grandparents said it, then it was true. That was the only way TO do it. You learn something young and it becomes ingrained in you. It may never have occurred to her to doubt it. What kind of proof did the colleges even ask for? To assume that when someone is wrong about something, they are liars, is harsh and unrealistic. You wouldn't want to live that way. No one should have to.	Black	Ethnicity - Black	1/201	0.498

Neurotic Nation I am over 50. I never pretended to be a Native, and and I sure didn't put it on a professional certificate in a time and place when token diversity hires with as little diversity as possible was fashionable and lucrative. But you want to contend that she's ok because she "didn't know," right? Well she hadn't a damned thing to say of any value on any Native issue from the day she claimed she was practicing law as a Native in the 70s til she avoided the hell out of Standing Rock (but found plenty of time to kiss Hillary's ass). I'm pretty sure we had over 20 years of internet by 2016, and she was still listed as "Native" professionally. Your next dodge will have to be something along the line of "interested in other issues, like the CPB," right? But she spent the last campaign season backstabbing progressives and conspiring with 3rd Way princess Hillary. She is consulting with Hillary this season. The problem I have with Warren is that she'll take a career move over a moral one far more often than not, and it looks very like she is making the same kinds of deals Obama did. That might get her a super delegate nomination despite being a less popular candidate (remember 2016??). But what happens after? She'll be beholden- more insufficient measures on helathcare, education and the environment to protec rapacious corporations and their billionaire overlords seem to be the pattern.You are talking about a candidtate who gave Trump military increases beyond what was asked for and who gave a standing ovation to Trump in a pushback against Bernie over "socialism." Why do you think that it was all about Hillary's unlikeability. Real meaning of being unlikable translates, to she's a woman . Because no one can get away with the excuse that she's a woman , they have to hide that fact in her hair, her clothes, she's unlikable. When they went over her reasons for loosing, no one mentioned it was because she was a woman . The reason a lot more men went for Trump in such a frenzy way, is because they were out and out afraid that a woman president, would emasculate them as men. The frenzy that they took to Trump was off the charts. Fear does that. The fear of woman having any power can make a man, swim in an alligator infested lake, just to get away from a woman with power. It's sickening. Please men, grow up, so we can finally have an equal life together.	Woman	Gender - General	6/151	3.974

This is what I have been saying for months and one of the reasons why I have argued that Warren is wonderful, but I am scary about another 2016 happening due to the sexism and misogyny that exists and is our American culture. On the other hand, I really love her and find her passion genuine and agree with her policies. I was going to vote Sanders in the primaries (I did in 2016 as well), but I think this time I will need to vote for Warren in the primaries. Many people really don't actually understand just how bad sexism is in this country until they are truly faced with it. Males are not often faced with it, so they do not entirely understand it from a woman's perspective. They genuinely don't realize just how bad it is. I am glad you saw this as a learning opportunity, Cenk, and a way to use your voice to let others know what you have heard and seen. I hate that this is still a thing but it is! My Mother who is 73 and my Mother-in-Law who is 90, will not vote for a woman! Our own mothers are for the very patriarchy that holds us down with lower wages, lack of maternity pay, and sexual harassment. My mom was able to stay home and raise 6 kids whereas none of her 3 girls could have even if they wanted to because you pretty much have to have both parents working just to have the basics. My mother has always babied my 3 younger brothers, made us girls wait on them and clean up after them. It's not just men who keep this going. I really think we're going to need a female to be Vice President before she'll ever get a chance to be President because people are so stuck in the male dominated society even in this day and age! I believe Elizabeth is more than capable but I fear she just won't have a chance because she's a woman. I hope Bernie wins it and that he has Elizabeth for a VP, and then things will change. What you described is not a society dominated by men, it is a society dominated by mothers. Daughters are raised almost completely by their mothers, fathers usually have almost no say. Sons are usually raised equally by both parents. Mothers teach boys to protect and benefit women, and to separate sexual and business/public behavior. Girls do not learn anything even remotely similar. I have never seen male sexism at work. I see female sexism every day, constantly, and it goes on without any punishment. If I told my female colleagues one of the things they tell men every day, I'd be fired immediately. Do you understand that women are the ones who have to act in order to stop gender conflict now? Maybe you don't recognise when it's being done to women.	Sexism	Gender - General	1/67	1.493
Li Macnaughton Maybe I don't. But it is absolutely clear that you do not understand that men and women manifest sexism differently. Sexist men act directly towards sexual encounters with women they like. For men, it is a "numbers game". Women's sexism manifests as the inability to treat men regardless of their physical attractiveness under any circumstances, with the goal to remove unattractive men from the society, and maintain only attractive men in their social circles, so that only those men have a chance to approach them. In other words, in case of women it is a "control game". Both of those modes of sexism are purely biologically driven, a part of the basic reproductive strategy. Men are simply predisposed to approach as many women as possible. Women are simply predisposed to remove insufficiently attractive men from their surroundings. I hear and see women harass unattractive male colleagues, or flirt unsolicitedly with attractive colleagues especially superiors, many times a day (and no, most men do not like that, especially if dealing with subordinates). That is sexism too, and it is never punished, even though the rules are supposed to apply no matter the gender. If the rules were applied equally, all several hundreds of my female colleagues under the age of 40 would be fired in a week.	Age, Gender, Sexism, Sexual	Age - General, Gender - General	7/218	3.211

flashpeter625 Sexism isn't JUST about flirting, sexual relationships... In fact most people I know (both men and women) have a deliberate policy of never flirting at work. I know people who, if they are interested in someone from work they ask to be transferred BEFORE they attempt to persue a relationship. Most workplaces I have been in have direct polices that ban that kind of behaviour in the workplace, in fact that kind of thing is a sackable offence in most workplaces.You actually have a fairly warped view of society if that's your focus, and I can tell you for most women - relationships with men (except for extremes) aren't based solely on physical attractiveness, it's based on personality, men are the ones who (even if you look at the differences in erotica preferred by the different genders) are more visually oriented. Light And Shadow JThough you got loaded questions a-plenty, and you're taking a simple analogy I made about a movie and how I don't feel superior to it just because I don't like it/agree with it, and you're running with it all batshit crazy like. It's obvious that people liking pizza over the murder of their fellow human beings is nowhere in the same galaxy...but then again... that's something you just can't read between the lines of or something that attributes to your loaded questions. (Which is a pretty weak sauce way to try and draw out a response, because since the question is loaded, no matter how someone answers it, it's still going to delve into another loaded question. As you are doing now). Certain personality types are attracted to certain parties and affiliations. That includes being completely confused between the difference of pizza and murder as a personal preference. Aware or unaware of your projections, it's still unbearable. Pick your poison. I'd rather pick none, because I want nothing to do with the self aware or the ignorant on the right. But since you have shown evidence that you indeed know you are projecting, that little "I may or may not be aware" trick falls flat on it's face. If you were ignorant, that would imply that you just don't know any better, but the manner in which you replied to my OP, you do know better. If I have a paradigm of "sexism/racism/homophobia/greed" is that qualitatively no different than if I have a paradigm of "equality/multi cultural understanding social justice sustainability and deep self reflection"?No, because the former tears people down while the latter benefits everyone. If you want to be a proud, horrid slab of a human being fine, but don't expect others to take it or stand for it or be quiet about it. You can cry about how they might "thinkyourbettern'me" all day long, but then again, there's that projection again, and you just admitted. Oof. =. =Yes, a paradigm is but a set of ideas or a way of thinking, and though the two sides have their own ideas, the idea aspect is where the similarities end. Pizza over murder or not.Exactly what triggered you about me being against racism, sexism, greed and no compassion? Then that says a lot about your character. I get it, going by tons on online posts and other people from the right who talk to me on a daily basis, it doesn't make you exactly popular with society at large, and you may have suffered from isolation or loss of job or something because you did/said something you really shouldn't have and could have totally been avoided. Possessing racist, sexist or discriminatory, divisive blowhard traits doesn't generally make you a likable person, and people have all right to get the heck out of dodge. Not because they think they're "superior", it's because people deserve to live in peace and without a hateful, chaotic little spud ruining everything, and making everything awkward and sowing seeds of division just because they can. If you are a terrible person, relish in your isolation and people avoiding you. Gather up the like-minded friends you may have found and stick with them. The Red Sterling Mc'Bae Have you been up voting your replies to me?"I don't see myself as superior, but my comments are so superior to yours that I'll up vote them"? "Oh and you are projecting! Not me."	Red	Ideological and Political Identity - General, Ethnicity - Native-American	2/39	5.128
Light And Shadow "Have you been upvoting your comments to me?" Wow, assumptions and a not-quite-so loaded question. No, I have not. But just for that, lemme go ahead and one up my comments just for the lols, because clearly, your one-upping insecurities and vanity is all you have to go on now. You're not even going to talk about anything else, and those one-up's play into your "youthinkyoursbettern'me" status perfectly. XD What, the other one-ups I received are in some "superiority" conspiracy against poor little old you? Are you going to get on them for daring to like something they see as oh-so "superior" as well when it's just a matter as simple, elementary agreement? Oh no. Not that. No one's ever voiced agreement with someone before. Oh no, it's just got to be a superiority fest. Hey, I just gave something on Yelp 5 stars and another service/item on Ebay 1 star. Oh! Guess I think I'm superior to that seller on Ebay now. But here you are insisting that I think I'm still superior to you. Like, really, really want it, that's like the entire underlying pulse of this whole thing with you. Not once, twice, thrice but four whole times. Look, I understand if you're into the whole "humiliation/submissive/inferior" kink, where you are in some desperate need to have someone say how "superior" they are to you over and over and over again, and you're just frustrated I'm not delivering the goods, so you turned to the loaded questions, but I can't help you there, because I don't see myself as superior to you. I don't know you and thankfully, never will. I would say stop playing the victim, but it seems you've invented your own victimhood and projections from thin air. That was your fault. I suggest getting help for that and not getting so caught up in your fee-fee's, matey. Yes, you are projecting. Glad you finally came to terms with your affliction. Knowing is half the battle. The Red Sterling Mc'Bae Are you not projecting?	Red	Ideological and Political Identity - General, Ethnicity - Native- American	2/8	25.0
The Red Sterling Mc'Bae That isn't my view.By the way, my very first comment to you was pointing out what I considered to be projection by both of us.So my position is not "no, yous".From the very first message, my position has been "Yes, obviously I am ignorant, and look at that, it seems you are ignorant in some similar ways!"You seem to have missed that, and you seem to have assumed that "right wing" is a reasonable label to describe me.I think I'm likely further left than you on a bunch of issues.	Red	Ideological and Political Identity - General, Ethnicity - Native- American	2/99	2.02

Light And Shadow Nah, the very first comment to me was you being facetious about me thinking I was "superior" to Republicans and Conservatives who showed sexist/racist/homophobic/greedy/empathy-lacking tendencies. It's not "ignorant" to point out that fact. It's like you have a thing against people pointing out the obvious. If me saying how many people on the right wing obviously operate triggers you, then I can't help you there. "Yes, obviously I'm ignorant, look at that." No, as I said earlier, pointing out the problem, and pointing out that you are indeed self aware to the problem, then doing it anyway doesn't take away from the situation or even make it a trump card, a revelation or "deep." It's still bad. Me being against those horrid traits doesn't make me "ignorant in similar ways." So pulling the whole "we are alike" thing just doesn't fly. I didn't miss anything here. You were just being facetious and littering bated questions everywhere and it didn't exactly go according to plan. If you are indeed more "left wing" than I am, and are trying so much to prove that to make me "feel bad" or something because a person who views racist/sexist/homophobic/empathy-lacking traits as a-ok, and so happens to be in the left-wing party. If that's your goal, then it's futile, because not everyone in the left wing party is clean from those negative viewpoints, but the people on the right wing certainly got that in spades. No party is perfect, but I am very much for the Dems/left wing. Those are my people. If you are "more left", that's your business, just because you may have tried to pull a surprise "reveal" (not really) doesn't mean we are alike or have to agree on the same things. It doesn't mean we have to go linking arms and feeling "superior" to those on the right, which you have so graciously dubbed as "them". We all know what you meant by "them." The antithesis of the left. please don't play dumb, it's not becoming of you, and it's insulting. But don't think it's of any real shock or revelation to me. So I'll advise you to find another tactic outside of the old "we're not so different, you and I, even if I am ignorant, we're all ignorant here." Your response alone was a reaction to me being against negative attributes that negatively affect everyone. If you are indeed against them as well, great, if not, and you're just here to try and play Topsy Turvy, Backwards Opposite day, then I don't got anything for you. I get it, the right wing/libertarians needs to pull a few tricks to make it seem like they are not "so bad" in order to appeal to the left wing... even telling Dems and left wingers that they "really aren't left wing" in order to make a point. I will admit the new school is making vast strides and cover ups to appeal palatable to those on the left who might be swayed easily. But it's not going to work on me. It's too bad they failed to check their negative traits they revere so much at the door.It's not about feeling superior to the right, or the "supposed" fellow people on the left. If you feel you are indeed more left wing than I am on some things, just how does that add or take away from my original post? It doesn't.	Dumb, Old	Age - Over 65s, Physical Identity - Physical (and Mental) Impairments	2/575	0.348

The Red Sterling Mc'Bae You think it was the reference to "sexism/racism/homophobia" that I was responding to in my first comment.When (at least from my memory), this was the part I was responding to:"Must be hard trying so hard to hide their nature while denying it at the same time."It was me saying "Yeah, I really resonate with the idea that I am self aware to my own nature and don't deny it. However, since it bugs me when other people believe things which seem self evidently incoherent to me, it very likely means that I am just projecting onto others my own disowned lack of coherence and uncomfortably with my own shadow."You said "not everyone in the left wing party is clean from those negative viewpoints".I think it is not possible for a human to exist in 2019 and be literally "clean" of those viewpoints (sexism/racism/homophobia etc).Just like it isn't possible for a human to literally be "clean" of things that religion describes as "sin", or to literally be "clean" of things which modernity describes as "irrational".People with traditional values are trying to jam reality into a relatively simplistic set of values that are not sufficient for modern life, let alone a networked global society. The tools are not up to the job though.Likewise with modern capitalistic/scientific values. They are more sophisticated and nuanced, but insufficient.Likewise with postmodern/progressive/equality/compassion/multicultural based values. They are another step up in complexity and nuance and degree of love and acceptance. However, they too are insufficient for the challenge of solving the global scale problems that humanity now faces.For example, it is absolutely self evident that in some fundamental way, Bernie's method of "being a human" is superior to Trump's method of "being a human". In a way that isn't just different, it is qualitatively better.But it is better in the sense of letting go of the need to be better. "I have no need to be better than another person", is, paradoxically, a better way of being a human than the explicit hierarchies in fundamentalist judgemental religion, or competitive capitalist hierarchy.To me, it is self evident that this paradox is at the core of the postmodern framework, including concepts like equality.In a very real sense, only a relatively small percentage of the world's population can comprehend what "equality" means. It is rare to be able to say "I don't judge people, I don't participate in the social hierarchy". The contradiction, is that such people have traveled quite high on the hierarchy on what it means to be a full human being.This is what I was responding to with my first comment. What I consider to be an inherent contradiction where people need to deny and reject any concept of "superiority", in order to grow more compassionate and loving and move society forward.All the while, hopefully developing a human society which is authentically better than what it is replacing.That paradox needs to be denied and hidden, otherwise the "whole party would fall apart". I think it is just a much more nuanced version and sophisticated version of gay fundamentalist christian who is unable to cope with the cognitive dissonance of his worldview clashing with his "true nature".I am under the illusion, that it is possible to have a coherent and non contradictory worldview.However, it also seems apparent that humans are not coherent creatures.So	Gay, Red	Ideological and Political Identity - General, Ethnicity - Native-American, Sexual Identity - General, Sexual Identity - Male homosexuality	4/609	0.657

Light And Shadow You think it was the reference to "sexism/racism/homophobia" that I was responding to in my first comment. Not at all. It was a primary focus in the order of my first statement, while it's clear that the "Must be hard trying so hard to hide their nature while denying it at the same time" was not even the secondary focus. It was more a closing. Because people with unfavorable intentions are finding it harder to fit into polite society, or dealing with most people out there wanting anything to do with them. They have to hide, minimize, However, it's obvious that stuck out for you, it's just That's further made evident by the fact that the first thing you responded to me with was a facetious, "not like those "other" unenlightened, inferior losers, amirite "fellow" leftie?" It was a baited question designed from the ground up to get me to agree with your "hopefully" unified claims of superiority with another "like minded" person. And as soon as I did, you'd go "a-ha", and pull a whole "we're not so different, and feeling superior to others isn't so bad, now is it?"*When (at least from my memory), this was the part I was responding to: "Must be hard trying so hard to hide their nature while denying it at the same time."*You don't have to remember anything. You pressing the issue of superiority over and over again is right there all over the thread. Which leads to something else that explains it later. It was me saying "Yeah, I really resonate with the idea that I am self aware to my own nature and don't deny it. However, since it bugs me when other people believe things which seem self evidently incoherent to me, it very likely means that I am just projecting onto others my own disowned lack of coherence and uncomfortably with my own shadow." Being self aware, acknowledging the issue, yet continuing to do and support the issue or questionable nature anyways with no intent to do something about it isn't a solid endpoint. It excuses nothing, and it doesn't soften the root issue any less. It doesn't really matter too much if it bugs you that people point out harmful views and actions, or they point out the "poor, misunderstood" people who see the most basic modern human decency as "incoherent. " Not only that, you set your first answer up to have some kind of faux comradeship in being superior to the "others", which is clearly what you have been all along by the things you say. Oh, and you honestly don't think I've seen what you had to say to others in the comments, and the nature of your other statements before and after you replied to me? Because I've read just about everybody's comments in this fairly new and low comment video. Really now. I wasn't going to say anything about them, but you continue to literally claim and feign ignorance. We are not on the same side, so drop the act of pretend, drop the act of not understanding the "paradoxes" of basic "fundamental things such as fair behaviours and confusing equality", and I'll ask you for the last time to stop insulting my intelligence. We aren't on the same side, and trying your best to make sense of your disbelief in equality or non sexist/racist/homophobic people This is beyond just simple self depreciation in a vague attempt to pull an "oopsie daisy." Light And Shadow *For example, it is absolutely self evident that in some fundamental way, Bernie’s method of ”being a human” is superior to Trump’s method of ”being a human”. In a way that isn’t just different, it is qualitatively better. But it is better in the sense of letting go of the need to be better. ”I have no need to be better than another person”, is, paradoxically, a better way of being a human than the explicit hierarchies in fundamentalist judgemental religion, or competitive capitalist hierarchy.*No, there’s nothing noble in deciding to be an asshole because you’ve had some epiphany one day to make up for your natural tendency to be a dick. ”I have no need to be better than another person.” Now, if you are an underachiever and want to perform the bare minimum in life, fine. If you want to extend that to how you treat others, fine. I’m not the one in your company, and most people aren’t going to settle for that. No one who isn’t an alien or just weird wakes up and says to themselves, ”hum... how can I be better in character than another specific target person?” They strive to be good people for themselves and for the benefit of others, and true goodness and kindness does so without thoughts of reward, attention, rubbing it in people’s faces or to brag about it. I’m not a believer in religion, but I am a business owner and I am very competitive. Capitalism may not be perfect, but to date, it’s the only system that has worked better than all the others, and my living is made from the needs of others who have no time or knowledge to make the goods they seek for themselves. Yes, I am 100 for capitalism, I grew up in a rich family, but I’m not greedy. I use what I need and give to others frequently. I have all the money I’ll ever need, and because of that, being greedy at this point makes no sense to me. But you have people richer than me who just want more, more and more. I’m all about making money, but I’m also all about sharing. *To me, it is self evident that this paradox is at the core of the postmodern framework, including concepts like equality. In a very real sense, only a relatively small percentage of the world’s population can comprehend what ”equality” means. It is rare to be able to say ”I don’t judge people, I don’t participate in the social hierarchy”. The contradiction, is that such people have traveled quite high on the hierarchy on what it means to be a full human being.*If you don’t dig equality, or you think most people don’t know what equality is, then whatever, you chose your path in life. If all people of all sexes, races and creeds having an equal shot at the slice of the pie, and being treated fairly and with respect, and are held to the same standards, even if they chose to break from the traditional mold is troubling to, then it’s clear to see what side of the fence you’re on. I’m not that way. I want everyone out there to be treated fairly, justly, given a sporting chance, and handled with the same level of respect, kindness, recognition, decency and human rights all innocent and peaceful, non chaotic, non destructive and divisive human beings on this planet deserves. I will never settle for anything halfway, disguised as something else, or less. If you think that’s ”rare”, then I truly am sorry. *This is what I was responding to with my first comment. This is silly. As if you (Cenk) were simply desperate for something to video. Anecdote is right. It's also bs. Right now, in this election, it has more to do with quirky - very quirky timing. Tens of millions of us would welcome a female pres. Without a thought as to her sex. Unfortunately, the creepy people and history we've all been subjected to in recent decades (everything from WMD...I did not have sexual relations..."Yes We Can" [fraud of all frauds...]...to the Chump of all chumps...) has left all of us...ALL OF US vomiting over anyone who's feckless nature shows; whether from 'under their skirt' or from behind invitation only ridiculous neoliberal/neocon money/donor whoring. Therefore, many of us have become - not "purists," but "...you are either 100 legit - and you have the receipts - or you ain't get'n shit from me - and in fact you're fair game for complete political annihilation by any means it comes about: whether man or woman...There are the extremists on both sides to be sure. But in general, it's not "hate" of a candidate because of their genitalia. It's just raw - carpet bombing hate of everything we've come to expect of 99.9 of these massively flawed persons(have had proven to us). And if you could see inside peoples' central nervous systems, it is why Bernie Sanders has the remarkably deep-seated embrace by so many. And it's super easy to prove that such embrace is unique to that of others:Because unlike virtually any leader since the likes of Mandela and his ilk, Sanders's loyalist stay with him year after year after year. They grown in number. And they grow in clarity of their understanding of "the times," and quickly see how Sanders stands out because he stands firm...resolute...transparent.In other words, it is precisely because of these very "quirky" times that we are all living through right now that (ironically) also "exposes" Sanders's "true colors" where virtually every other "leader" eventually has their fatal blemishes show from under their "make-up" or their "plastic surgery or false teeth" and their simplistic ideas around handing out money, etc.So while there are clowns in cabs you catch rides with that obviously have some OBVIOUS unmet needs - and thus some OBVIOUS perverse ideologies, the greater truth is simple: No woman Mandela is among us at this moment. No female Gandhi is proving transcendent.No woman is saying: "I will lose to bring a true victory, before I will win to deliver a false one."Today, the only "leader" among us who even deserves to be mentioned in the same sentence as the aforementioned icons, is Bernie Sanders. And thank God for that. Because absent him, it'd be a shit-show on a scale that would leave an entire country suffering from PTSD.	Sex, Sexual, Woman	Gender - General	5/469	1.066
---	--------------------	------------------	-------	-------

mmmm, not so much. Tulsi Gabbard definitely does represent the political nobility of present female candidates with prominent merits to be considered a female iconoclast. I understand your disclosure is subjective towards your own beliefs and perception but that does not mandate an affirmative recognition from "among us" on behalf of "the only" array. Taking the narrow-minded steps to procure the connotation that there are no "woman Mandela"s or "Ghandi"s, doesn't warrant a "greater truth" because that is a biased narrative constructed upon an individual's values as they relate to those prestigious figures; much more the fact that there are no male icons to fill those roles currently today either; so by that comparison, there aren't any exclusions to pick leaders by sex affiliated world renowned models. Bernie Sanders certainly doesn't do it. Though it may not be known by the majority or maybe just not acknowledged, Bernie Sanders has played his card in undermining what some perceive to be the most important subject of their voting, reparations. He's not only diverted his rhetoric away from the subject but he has taken so much of an aggressive stance to remove people who bring up the subject. Between the two(Tulsi & Bernie), it is objectively pronounced that Tulsi represents a more surreal case of loosing to bring a true victory, as her experience with life and death for the sake of protecting others' freedoms and lives proves this; a caliber that Bernie Sanders has never experienced and cannot represent. In addition to the fact that she is currently being hushed by whatever exploitative forces currently acting to keep her from her victory, yet she pushed on; and through her pursuit of victory, she has yet to falter to dismissing subjects that are paramount to a considerable amount of people yearning to be uplifted by the next national leader. Tulsi Gabbard, nearly by her own oratory, has projected the concept of "I will lose to bring a true victory, before I will win to deliver a false one."; she may the candidate who has done it the most.	Sex, Woman	Gender - General	2/346	0.578

Caleb Fowler Actually there is a lot of psychological research on this, and one can start by observing children. Toddlers, in unisex clothes, will always separate out into gender groups. The boys find other boys and the girls find other girls. Little boys, left to themselves; make heirarchies and follow the orders of the boy in charge. Little girls left to themselves make a network, and consider the needs of the group; it is the network compared to the heirarchy, and in society it is custom compared to law. Anthropologists now know that hunting gathering societies are gender equal., and use custom not law, and use the network, not the heirarchy. Civilization invented sexism , heirarchy, and law.The research, when it comes to social ethics, comes from Maslow, for the 1950s stuff with a patriarchal bias, and the feminist research which threw away Maslow's theories on ethics (he only looked into heiarhies and had no understanding of networks), was done by Kellog. Go do some reading. You might just learn something.	Gender, Sexism	Gender - General	3/171	1.754

Light And Shadow I'm not exactly sure what you're trying to ask with your comment, but I think it's something along the lines of why do I have such a reaction to people claiming women can't competently lead when compared to people saying that women would be the only competent leaders. The fact of the matter is, I have never had a face to face interaction with anyone who actually feels that women are the only ones who could competently lead. Not one person I have ever met has even eluded to the idea that men can't be good leaders and that women should run everything. Would I encounter someone like that, I would probably have the same reaction though, as I am aware of many women who have abused their power for personal and political gain or just failed outright to do a decent job regardless of how competent they initially seemed. More so the former than the latter, as more often than not women don't get the chance to lead if they could even be perceived as incompetent when compared with their male counterparts.A good leader isn't defined by gender . They aren't good leaders in spite of it either. A good leader is someone who can do the job well, full stop.	Gender	Gender - General	1/215	0.465

There are reasons not to trust women. Look at what a greedy woman named Debbie Wasserman Schultz did to Bernie in 2016. Women have a weird sense of justice and want power over all men. It was very clear in the 2016 election. Harris (R) is another good example of how women deal with power. Warren (R) is another example. She will take corporate PAC money in the general election proving how corrupt she is. Women with the exception of a few are hurting their own gender when it comes to politics. Yeah, there's plenty of examples of women leading their countries throughout history, Cathrine the great of Russia, Queen Elizabeth I and Victoria of England, Mary Robinson and Mary Mc Aleese both were president of Ireland, McAleese succeeding Robinson to become the 2nd woman to hold the position. If that doesn't do it for you then here's another list (curtasy of another commentor) CURRENT Female world leaders: Angela Merkel, Germany , Halimah Yacob, Singapore, Jacinda Ardern, New Zealand, Brigitte Bierlein, Austria, Mette Frederiksen, Denmark, Katrin Jacobsdottir, Iceland, Sheikh Hasina, Bangladesh, Erna Solberg, Norway, Kolina Grabar Kitarovic, Croatia, Ana Brnabic, Serbia, Saara Kuugongelwa, Namibia, Bidhya Devi Bhandari, Nepal, Hilda Heine, Marshall Islands, Aung San Suu Kyi, Myanmar, Tsai Ing-Wen, Taiwan, Kersti Kaljulaid, Estonia, Mia Mottley, BarbadosPaula Mae Weekes, Tinidad-Tobago , Sahle Work Zewde, Ethiopia, Maia Sandu, Moldova, Zuzana Caputova, Slovakia, Salome Zurabvishili, Georgia. Before you try to use the Strawman arguement that it doesn't matter because USA is bigger than all those countries or whatever incel bs argument you want to pathetically hide behind, you clearly don't understand how governments work and are clearly petrified of strong women in positions of power because for whatever reason you feel inadequate in comparrison and as a result you lash out decrying women as a whole and I'm willing to bet that WHEN a woman leads America as it's president it's not going to be the end of the nation , sure she might not be the best but it's not going to be because of her gender after all every time the economy has crashed or another war is declared (or "military action" when whomever is in power wants to circumvent proper procedure) it's been a man in the big seat, so why not give women a shot to show what we are capable of, that is if you're not a complete misogynistic little chicken shit. Logan Skiwyse I understand what he says though and there certainly is some truth to it based on what I see in American media (I'm not American). Like what happened with Hillary, people didn't want to vote for Bernie or Trump, because they so desperately wanted a female president after having a black one. And you see this EVERYWHERE. In movies, especially. Look at everyone hating on a movie if it stars a white male and the praise when it's a non-white female.Where I'm from, we're way passed this for decades, so I don't know if we had this phase too. Socialism is successful in far more countries then it is not BUT I and no one I see running for office is actually socialist. They are promoting social responsibility. Not the same thing. Every time the far right claims it is they put another vote in the far lefts pocket.Take the recent ad against AOC. I find it deeply disturbing that the women running this ad has forgotten it was the illegal black ops under republican president that put the socialist (totalitarian) group in power that committed the crimes she is blaming the far left for. Kissinger's war. She is literally running with the party directly responsible for those crimes because she doesn't understand social responsibility vs totalitarian socialist government.Carl Marx got far more wrong then he got right, and the reality of Communism proves that. Forget the fact that if a black teen is caught smoking a joint you throw his ass in jail. That's ok he is black.Do you really want me digging more in to the history of the far rights crimes against US citizens or have you had enough to realize their grandstanding on abortion issues and gun rights and religious rights (where they have also violated the Constitution) is ground to tolerate this chit. Before you go ranting about socialism on the left, take a hard look at what the far right is really going for. A totalitarian government where you have no right to vote unless your white male. Is menopause a myth in America, even among women?Besides, testosterone is every bit as 'dangerous' as any female hormone could be. For every case of PMS-induced violence there are many, many more cases of violence by men against women. Just look at the rage monster Trump was and still is... and so many other male politicians... and non-politicians.Heck, while we're at it you can point to the Y-chromosome as a potential disqualifier for political candidacy given the gender differences in crime rates, especially violent crimes, large-scale crimes and repeat offenders. Sorry men, the fact that I'm a man won't stop me from speaking that statistical truth.I get why men can cling to discriminatory and incorrect beliefs about women, but why other women? Why do American women have such archaic and just plain false attitudes towards other women? Is it just a case of politics overriding sense? As a career woman , sexism is very real. I've lost jobs or not received jobs due to it, nothing more. I am childfree to boot and these men (almost always white men) HATE women like me. In their mind, women shouldn't be in power, or even working, they should all be stay at home moms. I don't even really like babies or anything stereotypical female. I know people who told me they would never vote for a woman , and it scares me if the nominee is a woman .	Nothing, Sexism, Woman	Age - Youngsters, Gender - General	5/88	5.682

shortafroman4 This isn't just about Warren or any specific woman . At the very beginning of the video, he gives two examples of men saying they didn't vote for Hillary not because of any policy positions but BECAUSE SHE IS A WOMAN . Then he uses Warren as ANOTHER EXAMPLE OF THIS. But this isn't about either one of them. This is about how there are still many people in this country who are immediately dismissing women as candidates because of their gender , which is deeply wrong.	Gender, Woman	Gender - General	3/85	3.529
Elle Joy Seems you didn't notice the slight of hand. He framed the first example with a anecdote of that reasoning for not voting for Hillary.He then only pointed out the fact that Warren's numbers aren't strong, and extrapolated the same reasoning as his anecdote.The poll didn't ask "would you vote for Warren, or will you not because she's a woman . " Gotta catch those sly misdirections.Also, he specifically only notes name notoriety as a difference between Yang and Warren. And that's his basis for "Okay, it's clearly because she's a woman ." Really bad logic.	Woman	Gender - General	2/98	2.041
shortafroman4 I completely agree that his framing of the Warren anecdote is faulty. Your original comment focused entirely on one aspect of his point, missing the message altogether, that sexism still runs deep in some people & affects who they're willing to vote for. He has no direct proof that sexism is at play in New Hampshire regarding Warren - agreed - but the overall point of his message has truth to it & it's worth looking at.	Sexism	Gender - General	2/78	2.564

Elle Joy See, thereinlies the issue. He should have provided a good example of said "proof" if he wanted to be convincing. But instead, he makes a weak argument.That's the extent of my original comment. His argument is unsubstantiated.I could care less if you said something that's true, or morally correct. If you don't have a backbone of solid reasoning behind it, it's just thin air and it will not convince anyone.Most importantly if he's wrong, which is entirely possible if this is the best he can do, he's insulting a ton of people who don't care for Warren for reasons other than her sex . And worse, he's assuming so many people's reasoning without evidence outside of his memory-anecdote.	Sex, Thin	Gender - General, Physical Identity - Physical Features	2/122	1.639

"Everything you see and use were built by men" That's because for thousands of years, women weren't allowed to do those things. It's not because men are some intrinsically better life form, it's because our species is half retarded and subjugated half our population to irrelevancy. Also, any sociological study of poverty will tell you that the empowerment of women in any given civilization is a net benefit and raises society as a whole. Not hard to imagine when you consider what we're essentially talking about is encouraging a whole other half of our species to participate in society; the benefits are common sense.	Common	Social Class - Working class	1/104	0.962
Space and Time "women weren't allowed to do those things". No, it's because women do not have the capacity or interest to build and maintain civilization. Women have all the same rights as men do currently, so when am I going to see a city, skyscraper or electrical grid completely built and designed by just women? The answer is, never. Female biology and psychology are designed to birth and nurture children, not labour themselves 24/7 like men are designed to do. Men are the dominant sex , period. Also, "women weren't allowed to do those things" is admitting that women are weak and at the mercy of what ever men allow them to do, which further proves my point that men are the dominant sex . Your argument is essentially the same as Divine Right, kings were born to be kings as sons of kings because it was god’s will, not luck of the draw or due to anything resembling merit. God’s will made it right even if they were grossly unqualified and the entire court knew it. Bad model in the past, worse model for the future.Even if one were to accept your premise, they would have to accept that men are also responsible for all the problems in the world today — poverty, corruption, crime, violence, war, pollution, etc..Men have had control for thousands of years because of the old boys’ club and brute strength, not because they were better at anything of value in leadership. When women had a chance to rule they had to overcome the barriers put in place by the men and male institutions around them. For example, Poland had a female King because it wasn’t legal for a queen to rule. In most countries a distant male cousin had greater claim to the throne than a legitimate daughter had...Divine Right was invented by men and had provisions to keep it male.Oh, and besides that you’re premise is also wrong. ---	-------	---------------------	------	-------

Andrew Cash so that goes to my point about those titles and positions having as much "power" as you're willing to give it....I don't respect "world leaders" or politicians for the very fact they believe they have a legitimate authority to rule over you and can tell you what you need or what's best for your life. It takes a special type of narcissist and sycophant to want to take a position like that and I refuse to respect them.....Theresa May has held up Brexit because she didn't like the outcome of the "vote", Merkel Opened the borders which led to the Köln disaster and a growing issue with immigrants there, the new Zealand PM literally not too long ago told her people "owning guns is privilege not a right, and it's the job of a "responsible government" to restrict access to certain things and change "problems" with more legislation".....now regardless of how you lean on those issues this is no better or "caring" than what any male would've done. They're just as tyrannical and dangerous in my book.....Facebook, Google, yahoo, cool they're "inclusive" by hiring females to certain high positions but these companies STILL contribute to certain nefarious activities can we agree? So the gender has had no "better effect" when it comes to leading people into a better future.....and the biggest issue I have (and I told this to a feminist in a convo I had considering equality and wage gaps) why do we ONLY see this fight in Air conditioned jobs? If they're "just as capable" then show us, and apply for some of the most dangerous jobs. Logging, roofing, even underwater welding and sanitation....NONE of these fields where the danger level is higher (which also pay damn good money) and contains real physical labor do we see the same energy when it comes to "inclusion" and wanting to be represented. Only the positions where there's an authoritative title that "gets respect".....this is one thing that typically goes unaddressed. So many people (men and women) want the "respect" and "accolades" but don't want to EARN it. I'm sure you'd take issue with a male believing he should be "owed" a certain position or level of respect because of genitals or title, I'm just applying that across the board, if you want the respect then you have to earn it, don't claim victim and "shame" people into getting what you want....those female "leaders" you named all earned their spots and they're JUST as shitty as any other politician so if more women want that then more power to them but remember those 3 women you also don't hear "because I'm a woman" coming from them either. There's a level of entitlement here that they don't have in Europe that turns many people off and claiming "sexism" is a way of avoiding the truth	Brexit, Gender, Sexism, Woman	Gender - General, Nationality - European or anti-Europeans	4/475	0.842

With another 10 years of evolution on the topic of sexism , Cenk might realize that the sexism is towards treating men as agents and women as objects.Which works in men's favor for positive, and works in women's favor for negative things.Eg, the same dynamic of "Men are in X position because of their own decisions" works against men in the criminal justice system. You will virtually never see progressives saying "The facts show that white men are in more danger of being killed by the police than black women, because gender is an even bigger factor than race ". Noni R That is obviously not what he said. He is just pointing out that sexism isn't just always positive for men and negative for women. The topic is more complex than that.	Sexism	Gender - General	1/33	3.03

Noni R I'd find political discourse more satisfying if it was more fact based.People generally view sexism as analogous to racism/civil rights/one sided power dynamics.Instead I think it is more analogous to the dynamics between military and civilians, where there is a tacit agreement to a complex set of interdependent relationships where both bimodal groups both experience various forms of power and powerlessness.The whole paradigm of how sexism is generally viewed, is insufficient. It can't get the job done by itself because it is too narrow.Activists usually focus on the "black" part of black male in terms of systemic discrimination in the criminal justice system. The facts suggest that the "male" part is much more relevant in terms of systemic injustice.Society can ignore men's issues for a while, but they can't ignore them forever, because eventually a bunch of marginalized men get together and flip the monopoly board by voting in Trump.Cenk is representing one small piece of the truth, in a fragmented mess, where lots of different small pieces of truth are represented by different people. Most of them not realizing that it's a zigsaw puzzle, where a lot of different pieces are needed.	Black, Sexism	Ethnicity - Black, Gender - General	4/201	1.99
Noni RYeah, that's kinda my point.It sounds so awful, because it is so jarring to think of men as being discriminated against in some significant ways."Around police, men have it worse than black people?"That just fries progressive circuits. It does not compute.The idea that white men need more help than black women, is so confusing, that it gets turned into "So you mean we should achieve parity by making lives worse for black women?"No, the (idealistic) point is to improve all people's lives based on need, and in terms of police violence, the statistics suggest white men have more need than black women.
