I've seen studies that say it probably is biological/instinctual. It's definitely not good, but as I've come to understand associating with similar "clines" is natural and is in fact rooted in tribalism. Humans with different features (no matter how insignificant they seem) feel more comfortable with people that look or act similarly. So there is an aspect of culturalism that plays heavily into it, but that's more conscious than sub-conscience. It's why someone who may by all account be racist, can still cheer for a different ethnicity if they represent their culture, for example sporting events or in times of war. So this is a great video about conscious racism, but there is sub-conscience racism which is much more difficult to fix. All we can do with that is to ensure our actions are not racist. And we have to understand that the sub-conscience racism can and does surface in different ways. For example, my neighbor's son was in daycare with all white students, elementary, all white students, but when he went to high school, there was more diversity and then I noticed that he didn't have any white friends. Over dinner, the subject came up and I asked him why, and he said "I just feel more comfortable with people of my own race." So even though environmentally, he'd only experienced "white" culture and it's all he was familiar with, he immediately gravitated to something else when the option presented itself. There's a lot of variables in this particular situation I'm sure, but that seems like an instinctual/biological influence more than a conscious decision.	Ethnicity, Race, Racism, Racist	Ethnicity - General	7/265	2.642

Racism is natural, though it is more tied in with tribilism and our nature. If you saw another race for the first time, your instincts give you an uneasy feeling. Racism is natural. Embrace nature. Some races are superior and inferior to others, and that is completely fine, it was how we were made.	Race, Racism	Ethnicity - General	3/54	5.556

all humans have 99 of the same DNA...ok... humans and Chimpanzees have 99 of the same DNA. that obviously does not diminish the evident differences in genotypes and phenotypes seen in different races today.-Homo Neanderthalensis interbred with homo sapiens in Europe. Most lighter skinned humans have Neanderthal 2-5 in their DNA...Africans do not have any. Also, South Eastern Asians interbred with Homo Denisova and have 3-6 of that unique DNA. - Race is used in Forensics: bones determine race & sex -Obvious Regional variations: from isolation and adaptation, groups evolved differently –Inuits have genetic variations to support their diet and produce brown fat . -Tibetans have genetic mutation that help them regulate hemoglobin levels in the blood so they can survive better at high altitude. Keep in mind there is no workable scientific definition for species (see the species problem) This is why she never specifies what threshold a race or subspecies should meet, because there isn't one. She just tosses out irrelevant points out such as, there is no clear genetic boundary between different races when there is no clear genetic boundary anywhere in nature. Sorry I'm really confused . When there isn't a link between race and biology, why are forensic-anthropologist capable of telling the race by looking (or whatever they do) at human remains? I mean I get it, we are all humans but there must be something to categorize this. And i don't think that would be racist . It's only racist when we make it racist . I hope this does make sense. I'm really confused . Please only scientific accurate answers. Thanks!	Race, Racist	Ethnicity - General	5/80	6.25
