I feel like none of these people have ever met an elderly person? I know people who are 70+ who still compete in marathon, triathlon, and ironman.	Elderly	Age - Over 65s	1/27	3.704
I'm 16 and I would say you start becoming older at 70 or more. Like my dad is 54 and he had me pretty late in life and I consider him to be miles away from ' old .' For gods sake he can run 4.5 miles in half an hour. My mom is much younger than him, 44, and hopefully she isn't half way through her life. How can you possible think that 40 is old ?! The takeaway here that the video DOES NOT MENTION: KEEP ACTIVE - Take care of yourself. Obviously, these "older" folks pay some attention to what they eat and they keep physically and mentally active. If you sit in front of TV/internet all day long and eat fast food, you can soon be in condition like someone in their 80's. I've had a tai chi student once, who was in her 90's, who walked all over town, did JackLaLane vids at home, kept busy & active, and she was thin , sharp, and had as much energy maybe better than some folks in their 50's. Best Bottom Line: INVEST IN YOUR WELLNESS.	Thin	Physical Identity - Physical Features	1/110	0.909
40 is old ? Super cringe.....	Old	Age - Over 65s	1/5	20.0

I just turned 27 so younger than most of these millennials and I don't think 50-70 is old!!! I see old as when you can't do the things you were once able to do. I know people my age who act old and sickly and then my mom who is 55 runs around with my dad who is 56 like they are a bunch of teenagers! They look like they are in their 40s and I hope to look like them when I am their age ! This is 2019 let's stop putting people in categories and let's live! I have three beautiful children and I am married to a wonderful man so at 27 I am so happy and can't wait to see what my life brings to us.	Age, Old	Age - General, Age - Over 65s	5/130	3.846

Oh, California was, is, the most ageist place I've ever been. At forty and finishing a degree at UC Berkeley, which is mostly kids from Southern California, LA, trying to get away from their parents, it really messed up my exercise habits when they lied to me that I couldn't use the recreation facilities. Turned out they didn't think I was a student there. So you could say it was enforced bad aging, but what you gonna do, sue 'em in the usual California style? You know people there don't even do anything right, even their job, unless you sue them to do it. Not a very cooperative, in fact rather polarized, society, and very obnoxiously ageist . And by the way, the Apple Store (in thankfully still slightly Texan Austin) that I go to, and Apple Support, has long considered me to be a power iPad user, so it's funny when people think you might not know how to use a smart phone iOS. It's kind of nice though, to be offered a nice quaint paper option, deliciously retro and antique really, especially for those of us who remember the feel and atmosphere of other times. Watching this video evoked one question and thought : How do young people receive the information about how to think of older people ? One way is the media. Images and situations of older people through TV, movies, the medical profession, magazines, newspapers...Young people in general don't realize that you are vital and even better as you age . Flaws obtained through aging are projected as terrible things with no cures and aging in America is sold as a disease. You have so many things wrong with you, buy our products or services. It is unfortunate that aging is not honored in the U.S. That aging is seen as shameful and stricken with illness and disease. That young people do not realize their life can end at age 18, 26 or 30. Being older does not mean sickness or death or looking ugly. Americans are brainwashed by society to think negatively about aging. Younger people will be fortunate if they reach an age to be proud of.	Age	Age - General	3/166	1.807
I knew someone who was turned down for a Silicon Valley tech job because the 27 year old H.R. director said 'We don't hire people over the age of 30'. I assume that person then resigned due to old age 3 years later?!	Age, Old	Age - General, Age - Over 65s	4/44	9.091
It bothers me when millennials call people in their 50s old . But then, there was a time when I thought 30 was old so I can't blame them. Someone’s comment made me realize what it is that really bugs me about this video. On the one hand, I think it’s great to show that age doesn’t necessarily limit people on what they can do physically. But there are a slew of us in our 50s and older (and younger, too) who deal with chronic illnesses and/or disability that precludes us being able to dance or do martial arts, or maybe even just walk around the block. Still, we are not ” old ” in the sense most people think of. We still have sharp minds, we can still have a rich inner life, we can still engage with and enjoy friends, be creative, continue to grow in so many ways, ways that do not require physical prowess or strength. It’s the GROWTH that matters. As long as we keep growing inwardly, we are still ”young”. (Not that we need to define it with that term.) We are still VITAL. I think that’s the best word for it. You don’t get ” old ” in the negative sense until you lose your ability to choose life.	Age, Old	Age - General, Age - Over 65s	3/183	1.639

I’m younger than all the people in this video and I just think about age like this : If you’re 90 years old but then they changed it so that a year is 90 times longer, you’d only be 1 year old . Age is just a number.	Age, Old	Age - General, Age - Over 65s	4/47	8.511

When I was 8, I thought 15 was old. When I was 15-18, I thought 25 was old. Now that i'm in my early 20s, having learned alot about the world, I think 65+ is old. Our perceptions change as we gain knowledge and learn about the realities of the world. I think the reason why people think certain ages are old is based on false realities and stereotypes/generalized assumptions. For example, if you look at an average 45-50 year old, they are starting to gray out and become less functional, giving the perception that your 40s must be the age when you start getting "old" lol. However, this may be due to you not taking care of your health, not having enough fun, or taking on too much stress. I've met 60 year olds who look like they're in their 40s because they took care of themselves and avoid stress. This is why I no longer think anyone under 65 is old because you are still very functional and can still look young if you take care of yourself. I don't think you start getting old until you near 70, when you no longer have the energy to do as you please and your body starts deteriorating. However, I think even as you near 65, you shouldn't let this get to you and start to affect the perceptions you have of yourself. I think you should still be yourself, even if other people see you as "old" lol. Since I once considered myself to be "old" at the age I am now when I was younger, i'm sure other people younger than me may consider me to be "old" too. Yet this obviously doesn't affect me and my personality. I'll always be myself, no matter if i'm in my 20s or 50s or 70s. Forever young!	Age, Old	Age - General, Age - Over 65s	13/307	4.235
Shows How ignorant this generation is. I've hung out with 50 and 90 year olds when I was 12-30. I don't care how old you are. I'm not calling anyone old. It's disrespectful and hurts	Old	Age - Over 65s	2/35	5.714

I've always thought that ' old ' depends on the person because the word old has certain connotations that could fit a 20 year old but not fit a 100 year old so in my opinion it's about the way you live and the way you act and your mindset. No it isn't, the video is a pretty good one and shows millennials are a lot more tolerant than my generation was back in the 1960's. Us of the flower power generation of beautiful people were very intolerant of age . A slogan of the time was "never trust anyone over 25". In the early 1970's I remember reading about a young couple of 25 years, part of the 1960's California surfer scene, who killed themselves on reaching 25 because they thought meaningful life was effectively over by then. It isn't, every age has it's good points. So good luck, millennial generation, your time is now, enjoy it while you've got it 'cos it won't last forever.	Age	Age - General	2/116	1.724
My Great Grandma was 96 years old when she died. She grew up in a farm and in the rice fields. One day, she over heard me talking about work OHS, back strains and looking after one's back in the workforce. She laughed hysterically, and told me that my generation was weak. And that a good days work in the rice field would solve any back issues. She never set foot in a nursing home. She showers herself without any help. She walks with no walking aid. You're just about right there. 50's isn't really old , you're still reasonably on top of it. Things start to go downhill in your 70's. The weird thing is, though your body starts to break down, mental development improves with age . I was pretty stupid in my 20's and knew little about people and living, and I don't think that's just me, my family and friends are the same. It's amazing I managed to get this far through life (I'm 73 now) 'cos I knew nothing back then. I'm intellectually and emotionally much better suited to getting through life today than I was but the ironic thing is, I don't need it now. I needed it when I was in my 20's. LOL! Why is able body- ness associated with "good" and not as able bodied- ness called by the negative association word" old "? Along those lines, WHY does that word, in and of itself, " old ", why does IT have to automatically garner such negative associations? Being old should be something to look forward to, to revel in and to be admired. Being old should be an enviable thing. Something to be proud of.	Old	Age - Over 65s	4/70	5.714

Hi, I have been in the medical field, and live in an area where if I do not speak Spanish it is difficult to get a job. So since I need the extra income and being around the hospital scene is not a happy thing for me, I asked this bakery if they had any openings. Well, they thought I was kidding. I guess because I am not 22 years old . Really. This is... wonderful. It made me smile. It even made me a little teary. Inside each elderly frame lies the heart of a tiger. The person inside isn't who you see on the outside. You'll better understand this as you make your way through your life and see for yourself that who you are inside doesn't always match the image in the mirror. You may find yourself wanting to do more, learn more, experience more, love more... because with each day you have less time and need to grab every moment that you can. And to the millennial-bashers, please keep in mind that we were them once, too. They're young, they're still learning many lessons and trying to make their way in the world. Instead of ripping on them, why not inspire, uplift, help and cheer them on? At the end of the day, they are walking the same path that we've left many years ago. Through ridiculous stereotyping of younger people, this video is apparently attempting to address ageism by promoting ableism . You see, young people should not respect, value, or appreciate older people simply because they can "still do yoga." Some older people (as well as some younger people) may have indeed lost some or all of their mobility. So? The smart millennials are the ones who understand that age does not define a person. These are the men and women who will be successful in life. People over 45 are not invisible and are some of the best teachers you will ever have in your lives! This also goes for employers in the workforce that seem to think they only need young blood in the building. Companies that hire all ages will be around the longest because they get it! This includes all these new millennial businesses as well. It's not all about 18-35...Why not learn from people who have walked the walk of life? Yes, I'm old but I still have a lot to learn and have many experiences to teach others. +Frank Genovese I don't disagree that the ad maybe exaggerated certain aspects to convey a point, but there is no doubt our society is very youth-centric and teaches us to fear aging. Seeing the current generation parrot these views is not surprising. Notice how even the 30-somethings millennials were uncomfortable stating their age ? Oh, man, here we go again with the age thing. At first I cringed at this video, then I liked it, then I thought, well, this still doesn't really change the negative misperception of " old ", it just changes the perception of how old " old " is; and that perception is based on physical ability—at least all of the examples in the video are about defying age in terms of physical ability. There are many people, including myself, whose physical abilities are hampered by disease or other chronic illness, so we might not have the physical stamina of someone 10 or 15 years older than us. And, there are plenty of people who can't do pushups or jumping jacks or dance like Donald O'Connor, or run the NY marathon at age 25. Why do we even have to characterize " old " in terms of ability or non-ability to engage in physical endeavors? Each of us at any age has special gifts that no one else of any age has. We will truly evolve as human beings when we can reach a point of being who we are and doing what we do without having to put it in the context of " age ". +Ian Murphy There are young people with arthritis as well. I went through a really scary time when I was 22 where I had terrible pain in my joints and had to go to a lot of doctors and could hardly walk. It can happen to young people. Young people are less likely to have certain health problems but that doesn't mean that youth provides immunity. A friend of mine's son had a heart attack when he was 16. It can happen.	doctors	Nationality - General	1/82	1.22
sergemodee I didn't deny that young people were immune to it but like you said yourself "young people are less likely to have health problems" that was my point. As you age there's more of a likelihood to gain more and more health/mental problems. Even if people want to play sometimes that's just not enough because of all the factors that come with aging limit our ability to do the things we once did in our youth.	Age	Age - General	1/77	1.299

Actually, regarding mental health problems - that's just not true and not factual. You are far more likely to have mental health issues when you are young. +Eddie Falhaus no one who was filmed (including myself) knew what was going to happen, but I am pretty sure they asked the millennials to imitate an " old " person. The producers didn't tell them imitate a 50 year old . I believe these young people are no different than older people in that if someone asked me what young was, I would be saying 40! lol...it is about perception. So old to them was 50 and up. Young to me is anything younger than I am. These millennials didn't seem to create any other category in their mind. They just clumped all those ages together. hope that helped you understand. +Donna Martini When I was 12, 17 was " old " to me. Then when I was 15, 20 was " old ." When I was 21, I cried because I felt over the hill. Then 30 was old , and then 35, 40, and I now think that old is really dependent on the person. You can be " old " in your 20's and you can be "young" in your 60's. It's your mind and body and level of agility and ability and not everyone ages the same, anyway. I used to think guys who were 50 were WAY OLD but now I find myself very attracted to men in their late 40's and into their 50's. I find them distinguished and sexy. Dear, I am an older adult, not old . Sorry, but I just don't like the word, call me weird . Why put labels on people? I can possibly live to 120, so another 60 years, so, heck, maybe I am middle aged, lol. I'm just glad I have been able to grow older, as my healthy brother suddenly and unexpectedly dropped dead at 55, 10 years ago. We should just agree to disagree! Lol. I am very sorry you are going thru life considering yourself OLD . I am not in denial, I just don't consider this age to be old . And I have not colored my hair for 12 years, let the silver shine on, sistah.' However, I was single till 19 years ago, first marriage for both, and have no children, so maybe I am operating from a different mindset. Also, bc I was such a goof off, didn't graduate from college with my B.A. till I was 34. I am all about PROAGE, because ANTI AGE is all about NOT CONTINUING to live, lol, as we all age if we are alive. BUT, I just happen to not consider 60 old , We are, as Bill Mayer says, the youngsters of the ' old ' set.	Age, Colored, Old	Age - General, Age - Over 65s, Ethnicity - Black	7/132	5.303

+Allan Reford I keep thinking that I'm going to feel different with every decade birthday but while you think my age is old , for mother's day my 18-year- old son gave me a dozen EDM and other tracks he'd written so I can write something for my next CD or performance. (I've written solo and with other writers and have had cuts on major labels and TV). My husband and I are always doing creative stuff and I just got back from couchsurfing and Megabusing to Nashville where I perform and cowrite all night long. I got seriously carded in my early 40s, when I was pregnant with my kids and in grad school (I'm short, maybe that makes me look younger). We've created and tested apps and box games and are looking forward to the next Maker's Fair. Invention and creation rock and they're rocketfuel to a good good life. And we're not outliers...it may be that plenty of people who are really dynamic and youthful aren't busy sitting around moaning and telling you how old they are so you don't realize how many dynamic (chronologically) older souls are rocking around your life. Wait until you get here-if you're someone who keeps growing, you'll feel way younger than you thought you would. I used to think 8th Grade was old ....PS My aunt took classes and drove around Los Angeles (with a legal renewed license) until she chose not to at age 100. And had a sleepover boyfriend at 94...	Age, Old	Age - General, Age - Over 65s	5/250	2.0

I like this video, I like how people of different ages connect, it's beautiful. I don't like how the word old is portrayed as a bad thing. I would imagine when some uses the word old to describe an object then that's means it outdated and needs to be replaced. But I think when it comes to people old means your gown up, hair color changes, body changes, it what happens. I can be be old because I'm no longer young. It's worse for me when you can't use a word to describe someone age , it's more of an insult to me. "This person is young while this other person, is not as young as they used to be." Hearing something like that feels like in insult, it still says " old " but in a socially conditioned respectful way, which really is just condescending to me. Over wording it and beating around the bush feels bad to me. I'm writing this because of old can't be used to describe a person then there needs to be new word. I can be young, I can be middle aged, I can be old , I can be really old .	Age, Old	Age - General, Age - Over 65s	9/195	4.615

Actually this video ad is extremely offensive and delivers the wrong message. It suggests that " old " is a negative quality. The millennials revised their definition of " old " upward, but there are ninety-year-olds running marathons. In the first part they're asked to show some behaviors by " old " people; their responses seem to be mocking the older people. Since when does the ability to do pushups, burpees and jumping jacks relate to one's ability to function in strong roles in society and it's hardly a basis for job discrimination. Quite a few millennials can't do them either. What does " old " mean to these people? Or more important, what does " old " mean to a hiring manager? Some commenters suggest that " age is just a number," but this video makes the opposite point. It says " old " is bad, but there's disagreement about where the " old " begins. +SeattleCathy my mother is 77, her father 99 and both are active and young, but she said the millennials' interpretation was accurate! Many of her friends are 80 plus and act this way. I have friends who are 60 and "old." Go easy on the millennials if you can. Some are just responding to what they see out there. The point is, we need to keep moving and do and feel as young as you feel and do. :-)	Old	Age - Over 65s	1/79	1.266
+SeattleCathy I don't deem any of this discussion or video negative. The younger people didn't seem to have a negative connotation of "old." They demonstrated in the video what they perceive old to be and when they met us, they changed their mind. There is really nothing derogatory. :-)	Nothing, Old	Age - Over 65s, Age - Youngsters	3/49	6.122

I'm 72 and called the "Dancing Grandma" in the suburbs where I live. I've been free style dancing (Tina Turner style) for a decade to Motown bands. I'm on the floor when every band starts before people start to come out and every time there are many young women who approach me saying, "I want to be just like you when I'm older" People say "I love you" and hug me all of the time. I feel 40 and probably act like it, too. The thing about age is that the older you get, the more you can get away with. I don't dress age -appropriately and have many young men gushing over me. I love it.	Age	Age - General	1/116	0.862

Excellent video. Young folks say what old is. Then they find out. I can relate to this. When I conduct my Outlook or Computer Magic seminars, I love having young folks in there. I don't blame millennials for believing anything over 35 is old . After all, when you're so young time tends to move slowly; you're always waiting for a time when you're in control of your own life... and it seems to take f..o..r..e..v..e..r. But when you truly come of age , time seems to go by so quickly.If you're a young person watching this, take note and take heart. Aspire and persevere. Lay down the roots of the future blossom that you will ultimately become.	Age, Old	Age - General, Age - Over 65s	2/84	2.381

Well said. I realized how fast time went by from the ages of 15-20 and it's why I no longer consider 30-40s to be " old ". If 5 years felt like only 2 years, imagine how fast the rest of life will go.. I don't consider anyone " old " until they reach about 65 now.	Old	Age - Over 65s	2/53	3.774

I don't blame the younger people in this video for their opinion on age . It is our society - more specifically the way advertisers promote products and services to younger people and forget everyone else. Once you enter your 30's you are forgotten about. Technology is also the problem and how it is marketed, do you see older people in a smart phone commercial? No, everyone is in their 20's or even younger. I never really cared about age , it is definitely how you feel and one thing I have noticed is that I have never stopped learning. I am more curious about everything than when I was in my 20's.	Age	Age - General	2/111	1.802

+synchromorph I was in this video. It was a documentary and nothing else. We were in the dark until the last minute by the way. Exactly. I have heard some women say they feel old at 30 though....maybe it's because they have kids or are just out of shape. I hear it all the time: people 30 and above calling themselves " old ", so no wonder many people agree with them. I once knew a 19 year old who grunted when she stood up and she said "gosh I am too young to sound like that when I stand up:. She said she had the body of an old granny. Yes, people are out of shape these days and they eat crap food.	Old	Age - Over 65s	4/97	4.124
