DragonsAndTomatoes It's the context, implying that women should go make you a sandwich and stop (insert task that is usually done by a man) If you go to any video of a female doing a male dominated skill sport hobby, ect. You will see many comments saying 'go back to the kitchen' or 'make me a sandwich' now, if someone went to subway and asked a worker to make them a sandwich, that wouldn't be sexism . It's the context and the situation.	Sexism	Gender - General	1/83	1.205

Sexism is hilarious, I don't take sexism seriously it's a joke, whether it's the intended sexist joke or the obviously sexist person it's all a joke because we have to coexist for our species to survive. Lili days where do you think those internet trolls come from? they come from a place of sexism and misogyny , because their words are meant to hurt and/or objectify women. the hate comments were written by real people, real men that actually think it's okay to treat women that way. so basically, she isn't 'whinnying' about internet trolls, she's bringing to light a very significant issue that's plaguing our society, which is sexism and misogyny . I know nobody will like this comment but I'm just going to say it. Depending on whether you're male or female, not being able to follow someone you work with and friends of one of your family members on social media is sexist. +Liquid Babyright, but as she mentioned it and as it's a real thing that women experience things like this in real life as well what exactly is your suggestion then? Like, women use the internet as well and it would in fact would be great if they weren't met with so much sexism online either but you say we can't nor should do anything about that issue. I get that. What are we doing with the real life sexists though, who are most likely the same people?	Sexism	Gender - General	1/88	1.136

What I find fascinating is that there is a need for somebody to point out exactly how ' sexism affects us all.' Meaning that there are people out there that constantly hear about the things that so many people go through while facing sexism , yet they don't feel the need to do anything about it because it 'doesn't affect them'	Sexism	Gender - General	1/59	1.695
I love how many of the speakers in the TED Talks I've watched about sexism are women with British accents. They remind me of Hermione Granger, who is strong, and wouldn't let a man be sexist to her any day.	Sexism	Gender - General	1/40	2.5

So whenever a man walks up to you, you immediately assume that what they will say is rubbish, because of the actions of what you describe as a small percentage of men. And somehow, it is the responsibility of all men, and not you, to come up with a solution to you having these preconceptions? Just face it, you are a bigot and discriminate against men. You've as much as admitted to such here.And we're supposed to listen to you about ending sexism ? No thank you. It's clear you haven't a clue how to do so, since you are a sexist yourself.	Sexism	Gender - General	1/103	0.971
Societopathy Observed or a woman isn't interested. And doesn't respond as she doesn't want to lead him on. Cause ain't nothing scarier than a guy who feels justified to stalk a woman out of the bar because she ' lead him on ' and so deserves to be punished. Mens are 80 victims of any violence, 99 of nonsequal genital violence, and about 45 of sexual violence (btw in most countries mens are less them womens, with fact thet 106 boys botrh for 100 girls), 3/4 suiciders, 3/4 of homeless etc and in most countries womens have MORE law rights and much more social "rigts". So, what sex is priviliged and what discriminated? We dont need feminism - its supremisy ideology - we need equalitarism and masculism.	Sex, Sexual	Gender - General	2/78	2.564

Julia Hardy just made my day! After having a discussion about sexism and rape culture with a guy who didn't even realize that blaming the victim is really sexist. And that therefore, sexism exists. And thats just one point, one occasion:I personally am confronted with male people on a daily basis (who I like and who like me= no hate), that sport majorly sexist views without realizing it and probably thinking these views don't cause harm. But they do. I feel like men need to step down from being offended and try to walk in womens shoes for a moment. It isn't that women like Julia Hardy, who made it abundantly clear she isn't talking about ALL MEN, dislike or hate men. Neither do I but I expect from fellow human beings to not insult or degrade me based on my gender (as I don't wish men to be). Even if done without bad intention. How is that expectation hateful? Just be a considerate human being! Isn't that supposed to be normal?Online sexism is escalating in the worst ways and it spills out into the real world. Please just respect people and stop treating others as inferiors, goddammit.	Gender, Sexism	Gender - General	4/200	2.0
Online sexism ? You mean r/niceguys?	Sexism	Gender - General	1/5	20.0
Why is every talk in tedx about sexism always so damn 1 sided.	Sexism	Gender - General	1/13	7.692
I think Julia made a respectfull speech but like she said it is a very small percentage of men who are sexist, probably about the same percentage of women who make false rape allegations. It has less to do with sexism as it does the fact that a small percentage of people in humanity, irregardless of gender , are arseholes and that is something that isn't going to change any time soon. That is why 99.99 of youtube videos always have dislikes. I personally don't associate myself with anyone who is sexist for the same reason I wouldn't be friends with someone who is racist . They're unintelligent people, not worthy of even giving your time to argue against, nothing more.	Gender, Nothing, Racist, Sexism	Age - Youngsters, Ethnicity - General, Gender - General	4/119	3.361
What a respectable woman Julia is. I totally agree though, I can see why having men sexualise you and treating you as a slab of meat can annoy women. It's degrading and disgusting that some boys think this will sit well with women when it is flat out disrespectful. Julia is very logical and understandable, a breath of fresh air from all these radical feminists that literally oppose the very thing that they stand for. That's probably why this video has so many dislikes, people probably just think "oh great, another feminazi "	Feminazi, Woman	Gender - Female intelligence, Gender - General	2/92	2.174

What does being 42 without children or a husband have to do with anything? Just because you have a womb doesn't mean you should use it. Just because you can legally marry a man doesn't mean you should or are worth more than a married woman . Given her age don't you believe she is more qualified to speak about sexism seeing that she has lived longer than a 20 year old thus has more direct experience with misogyny ? shooting starz its called asking questions like: How many women recieve abuse online compared to men? The fact of the matter is this: men receive more abuse in all ways then women except profile stalking. Shes making it out as if existing on the internet as a woman will result in targeted harrassment when its simply not true	Woman	Gender - General	1/58	1.724
shooting starz if she thought it affects everybody she would mention misandry and would talk about real life rather than just the internet. Personally i think the title is incredibly misleading. I think it should be something along the lines of privileged white woman complains about mean comments on the internet	Misandry, Woman	Gender - General	2/51	3.922
321 GoBonkers Though I think she could have handled the topic better, the title still fits imo. The internet is a pretty huge place, and I see more misandry there than in real life. And even if she handled it wrong, we are all still affected by sexism .	Misandry, Sexism	Gender - General	2/48	4.167
Julia - One more thing, Whoa, you just assumed that your "Simon" is sexist just because he's a man. It appears that it's you who is unknowingly sexist for assuming men are automatically sexist, lol, hilarious times we live in. Sexism will never end unless both men and women become honest about how both behave in sexist ways under certain conditions, and the fact that you, the speaker, doesn't even admit you're sexist and how you contribute to it shows just how this issue will never disappear.	Sexism	Gender - General	1/87	1.149
Julia - Lastly, how about instead of trying to control the sexists, just be a lesbian , if that is you have some degree of bisexual tendencies. You don't have to even be around men. Something tell me you have control issues, where instead of making a career about complaining about men, you could be designing a truly innovative video game, etc. But because you're infatuated by controlling men, probably because you're sexist, you do this instead. You could help women a lot more by making your own product and company and hiring women to work with you on great games instead of making money from complaining.	Lesbian	Sexual Identity - Female homosexuality	1/106	0.943

Julia - Sorry but until women care about same sex harassment as much as men harassing women, I really don't give a f*ck. I'm a straight guy and gay men have sexually harassed me at work. I've seen it done to other men but they remain silent even though it can be scary when you're a smaller guy being harassed by a big aggressive guy. My wife has been sexually harassed by lesbians in the past. No one talks about harassment as it really is, they, like you, always break it down to a men against women issue. So until you women speak honestly about harassment, forget the help..And you go on about trolls on the internet? LOL, I've come across large numbers of man hating angry feminist women trolling it up, hating on men, I've seen many from LGBTQ do it, I've seen blacks do it, white nationalists do it, what in the world are you talking about here? Help the women to reduce straight male trolls meanwhile the world is filled with all sorts of troll including trollish women? Incredible. And sure, people can say, "but it's easier when you focus on one aspect of the issue, like women's issues". Yes, that's exactly what white nationalist who want to racially segregate the country believes. Lets just focus on race as if that's the real problem. This woman is a genius.	Woman	Gender - General	1/5	20.0
Overall very good, especially the part about women being told they are sensitive, and their reaction to it. Couple of things I wish I had heard her at least mention: sexism to women from women, and sexism from men and women towards men. It is internalised in all genders, it goes both ways, and I feel like that should be mentioned, and not overlooked so blatantly.	Sexism	Gender - General	2/66	3.03
Sounds like to me you're running out of ideas to get men to stop being sexist. I think one of the biggest obstacles is misassumptions. Misassumptions of some things that we do or say is because we devalue women. Take the guy who posted the sit on my face. If you told a guy that you want to shove his face in your vagina, does that make you sexist? Awkward, maybe. But sexist no. How is wanting to have sex with someone misogynistic? No one is saying that all they see you for, just like you aren't attracted to a guy just by looks. That is an assumption. That is one the reasons why men can't "admit" to being sexist. Because you want them to believe in something based on how you assume it to be rather than what it actually is. I know this is blunt, but I hope this helps your cause	Sex	Gender - General	1/154	0.649
Is feminism not sexism ???	Sexism	Gender - General	1/4	25.0

It is interesting how this lady claims sexism even though the gamer community is not sexist. She makes the mistake of assuming women do not say nasty things about men - they do, frequently. She takes advantage of the assumption many people make that nasty things said to women by men are somehow worse than nasty things said by women to men and other women. "I was ignorant" - yes, you are.	Sexism	Gender - General	1/72	1.389
Some women are disbelieved because of this annoying thing feminists believe with utter conviction does not apply to women, evidence and proof. The basic summation of the feminist position is, Only men lie, and are evil and bad, women never lie or display dishonesty and are universally good. A good rule of thumb for guys is, if you meet a woman depending on the circumstances, subtly find out if she's a feminist. If she is, then walk away, say nothing else. In her eyes you're already guilty and negatively judged since they view any interaction with guys through a lens of suspicion and sexism. he could say, "Gee, it looks like rain today," and sure enough the feminist will find a way to interpret it as a sexist misogynist statement. Walking away without another word and refusing to deal any further with her won't affect her, because as a feminist, as a guy you've already been charged, tried and convicted as guilty.The central point in moving on is to maintain your self respect and personal integrity against a feminist whose primary objective is to sadistically feel that as a man you're than human. Let a woman learn quietly with all submissiveness. I do not permit a woman to teach or to exercise authority over a man; rather, she is to remain quiet. For Adam was formed first, then Eve; and Adam was not deceived, but the woman was deceived and became a transgressor. Yet she will be saved through childbearing—if they continue in faith and love and holiness, with self-control. 1 Timothy 2:11-15The women should keep silent in the churches. For they are not permitted to speak, but should be in submission, as the Law also says. If there is anything they desire to learn, let them ask their husbands at home. For it is shameful for a woman to speak in church. 1 Corinthians 14:34-35Wives, submit to your own husbands, as to the Lord. For the husband is the head of the wife even as Christ is the head of the church, his body, and is himself its Savior. Now as the church submits to Christ, so also wives should submit in everything to their husbands. Husbands, love your wives, as Christ loved the church and gave himself up for her, that he might sanctify her, having cleansed her by the washing of water with the word Ephesians 5:22-33So Women should not be in a leader ship role if they are they will go to hell and burn for eternity	Woman	Gender - General	4/231	1.732
Yes Julia DON'T FEED THE TROLLS! It is that simple, the internet is global cutting across myriad cultures and legal spheres. It is naive to think that you will be able to stop trolls, to quote Alfred from Batman '...some men aren't looking for anything logical, like money. They can't be bought, bullied, reasoned, or negotiated with. Some men just want to watch the world burn.'Also falling upon Feminist dogma to explain it is utterly wrong, no they are not concerned with silencing woman or coming from a place of hate. They find it fun pure and simple, they post a silly comment then forget about it, on occasion that get some validation and further amusement if you make a response but there is no nefarious misogynistic patriarchal plan beyond that.Develop a thicker skin! Every time one of these videos comes up the comments are full of rants about how the person speaking isn't representing everyone in their speech. Do we really have to state every little thing? Is it not possible to talk about sexism against women without having to talk about sexism against men? Is it not possible to talk about racism against black people without talking about racism against white people?At no point in this video did she say that sexism against men didn't exist, or wasn't a problem. FINALLY a proper discussion about this topic. there are lots of horrible men out there, but lemme point one thing out:FEMINISM IS DESTROYING HUMANITY!!! look, this is how the cycle of hatred towards the other sex goes: men treat woman badly > women get hostile towards men > other men get frustrated and deeply depressed = few people get to have babies because woman watch too many romcoms. ok. that is a social problem and needs to be solved through videos like these. but look what happens now: stupid men treat women badly > FUCKING STUPID ASS "FEMINISTS" SPREAD THE WORD THAT WHITE CISGENDER MEN AND MOST (actually all) OTHER MEN ARE RACIST SEXIST RAPIST CHILD MOLESTING SCUMBAGS THAT HAVE THE POWER TO SEXUALLY ASSAULT PEOPLE WITH THEIR MIND > HUMANITY DIES BECAUSE EVERY WOMAN IS GAY and THAT is why i hate feminism and why i don't trust anything buzzed says even if it has a source, because every source they have is also part of the feminatzi network and none of their articles and researches should ever be trusted because they are deeply biased to the core. I think her basic points are:1. it is unacceptable making comments such as: nice ts on that2. that men who make that kind of comments are in minority3. but that because they approach women, women gets suspicious of every man approaching them4. and that is infuriating that when you are upset somebody says you are overreactingAnd I don't really see how anyone can disagree with them, 1., 2. and 4. are just common sense. Personally, I wouldn't like to be called that, am suspicious of men especially at night because of really bad previous experience, and don't like when somebody tells me how should I feel about something. It was extremely subtle, but she actually argued that people who don't think they were sexist are. She might have said "not all men", but she stressed that sexism isn't an act, but an unconscious bias. That type of message implies that you don't have to do anything sexist to be a sexist.If she wanted to stop sexism , she should have presented some clear rules about what qualifies as sexist behavior. Without clear rules, her argument(towards the end) amounted to " sexism is defined by the experiences of females", if a woman says something is sexist, it is. You are an amazing speaker. You're funny and engaging. I really enjoyed this talk and I know exactly what you mean. The one thing I noticed which you left out about sexism affecting men too is the fact that society puts men into boxes. Granted the world is a man's world and it is worse for women on the whole but there are several things that happen to men too. Men are seen as weak when they cry or express their feelings, men are seen as feminine when they watch movies like The Notebook, men can't wear high heels or dresses (although frankly why they'd want to I have no idea, I hate high heels and dresses but that's just my opinion). An equal society would be if men and women had exactly the same opportunities and could wear the same clothes and they could both lead in dance and they both could pay on the first date and they could both cry over The Fault in our Stars and there was no domestic violence of any kind from either gender and they could both be stay at home parents and nannies and nurses, I could go on, and all of this was done without the batting of an eye or any rude comment. Anyway you're awesome. Thank you for being inspiring.	Gender, Sexism	Gender - General	2/222	0.901

No one hates men as a whole, no one hates women as a whole. Oppression on both sides exists, except that women tend to see the shorter straw of that oppression. Do not forget that there are countries where a woman is just a piece of property belonging to a man, with no access to education, childbirth at teen ages, and faces a genuine barrier in perusing a career. Those of you who swat away feminist claiming "oh first world problems" that's because that's what YOU'RE exposed to. While the remaining women of the world still faces issues that are simply cruel. Maybe some of those first world feminist have spoken so much about equality that you have become so utterly desensitized, but that's also what they're exposed to. There is utter injustice in this world towards the female race , and being an ignorant internet troll doesn't help the situation. These talks are not only listened to by "first worlders" they may hopefully effect someone's thinking in an oppressed society. Two things you slowly realize on the internet; One, regardless of how you articulate yourself, people will always see what they want to see in what you are trying to say. Second, people often don't care to constructively fix the things they see wrong, but prefer to discredit the person and the argument to avoid seeing an individual as a person not too different from themselves. Regardless of the issue, most people seem more concerned with asserting their rightness on the internet rather than getting to the bottom of what the cause is. Then you watch both sides dig in their heels because the discussion turns into an ego battle rather than a constructive dialogue. Life is rough as it is, don't hate the player hate the game. Feminist or otherwise, people are just trying to hold on the best they can. . That being said, interesting points were made, there was some logic made that raises red flags, but I at least admire that she is trying to constructively deal with the harassment she receives on a daily basis. Your post is very funny to me and I actually quite like it because as you mention the irony in her speech I feel the irony in your post. I do not want to ever assume someones gender but most people who have not faced sexism are men because you have to be oppressed or unequal in relation to your gender therefore I am assuming you are male or an uninformed woman . Sexism does not occur if someone such as a male is called out. I know that every race and religion and ethnicity has delt with different bouts of oppression but as the male population in general for women to say these horrible things are happening to them is not an attack it is an opportunity for people to understand someone elses point of view. Racism still exists but as an informed person I know that it is occuring and I do not deny that fact in any form and the people I surround myself with would not either. However, denying sexism or racism or lgbtq issues is just being an uninformed person who is unable to recognize that everyone has different struggles and simply because they do not understand them does not mean they do not exist. There are a lot of levels of feminism, just like any other organization fighting for rights. There are some radicals who may hate all men, but there are some who just advocate for equality between men and women, without hatred.You're right, people have the right to voice their opinion. That does not, however, give them the right to make someone, man or woman , feel uncomfortable in their own skin. Words do carry meaning and they have the potential to hurt and create discomfort. See the video, Race , IQ, and Genetics TechnologyIQ difference is a hidden, politically incorrect fact of life, people will always associate skin colour and other physical characteristics with varying levels of oppression (racism). In fact it is IQ differences that cause people to achieve less and to be treated differently.That is why I will put a low IQ person to work making food and a high IQ person improving the design of the next model of vacuum cleaner. Eve Dorrian Your writing hit a low but is improving? You believe the myth about the pay gap? I mentioned the 100 m Olympic final before. Can't you put two and two together?Black people can run faster than white people on the average, that doesn't mean there is an unfair 'speed' gap. If I argued there was a 'speed' gap between blacks and whites, and that this gap must be eliminated, you would think me silly. Well it makes just as much sense to talk about a pay gap between males and females.The pay gap is caused by feminist propaganda. I recommend the video by Gary Orsum, *Women In The Workplace *This video highlights the difference between men and women at work.After that, the earnings gap (there is no pay gap for the SAME work) is contributed to by biology, women give birth, are are more likely to raise the children. Men have been the main protectors and providers for 200,000 years. Recent changes, due to technological advances, can't just wipe out biological evolution. This means men have more motivation, more ambition, more stamina, more perseverance on the average. Women have skills that men don't have, such as motherhood skills and manipulation of men skills.	Black	Ethnicity - Black	1/209	0.478
Just google "the pay gap myth". You will get about 2,320,000 results (0.40 seconds). Plenty of reading for you.I notice that you get plenty of information given to you but you won't look at it. Then you claim victimhood and being bullied. If feminists were interested in equality they would not be interested in being artificially propped up. They are constantly demanding special privileges. The noted public-policy scholar Anne-Marie Slaughter, in a book called Unfinished Business, singled out what she calls the 'care penalty' as a main driver of gender inequity. Here's how Slaughter sees it:ANNE-MARIE SLAUGHTER wrote:If you take women who don't have caregiving obligations, they're almost equal with men. It's somewhere in the 95 percent range. But when women then have children, or again are caring for their own parents or other sick family members who need care, then they need to work differently. They need to work flexibly, and often go part-time. They often get less-good assignments because their bosses think that they're not going to want work that allows them to travel, or they're not going to be able to stay up all night, or whatever it is. And so then you start — if you're working part-time, you don't get the same raises. And if you're working flexibly your boss very typically thinks that you're not that committed to your career, so you don't get promoted.	Gender	Gender - General	1/234	0.427

hahaha are you ignoring what i'm saying? it takes 2 to tango so when a child is born it is both the responsibility for the man and the woman . you can see the pay gap is decreasing slightly which SHOWS that there is an issue and that it is not to do with that nothing of a statment you have just produced? do you not understand that woman are doing some of the most important jobs around the world now due in part to feminist and the fight for women in the workplace, to not be put down by there gender or judged on what they wear or if they wear makeup or not. and here you are again "w oman need to be committed" we are " w oman need to work late" we do AND guess what "bosses" need to then change there attitudes about women then and hire them, pay them the same and treat them with the same respect, simple. Steve Madden ... weird the way eve can write 3 comments, all verbal diarrhoea. Claudia Goldin is a professor of economics at Harvard University.Goldin has been working on gender economics for years, and has personally done some of the most influential research.GOLDIN: I like to think about an individual who gets a degree — let's say a law degree — and it's a woman , and now I have an individual a man who gets a law degree. And they graduate from law school and they're both equally brilliant, and they both get jobs in approximately the same type of firm. By and large they're going to earn approximately the same amount when they start. Things will continue in their lives — they'll both perhaps find partners, get married, have kids. It's often the case that women will leave the very large law firms that put a lot of time demands on them and go to smaller firms or become corporate counsel, become part-time corporate counsel, perhaps, for a while. They will go to small firms where the workload is somewhat different. They may work in fact the same number of hours, but they may work hours that are their hours rather than the hours imposed on them by the firm. The woman will then begin to make — if she's the one who did this — she will make considerably less than the man. And a lot of what we see — not all of it — but a lot of what we see is this choice to go into occupations that have less expensive temporal flexibility, that allow individuals to do their work on their own time. I totally agree with her. A man saying "I want to have kinky sex with you" to a woman is so much worse than a woman falsely accusing a man of rape. Considering the very small amount of people that cry rape is incredibly small compared to the nauseating figures of how many women do get raped...I think your point misses the point. I don't know whether you are referring to a guy saying they like kinky sex to her via the very public internet or in a conversation...but if it is legit kinky and not abusive then people are surprisingly responsible with safe words, communication etc. It is still assault if you don't agree to something, and you can say no at any time and expect the person to stop. So yeh don't really get what you are getting at?	Sex	Gender - General	1/109	0.917
It's not a very small amount of people though. There are news articles about women falsely accusing people all the time. And that's everything that even makes the news.As for the whole kinky sex is worse than falsely accused of rape. What the hell are you talking about? Being falsely accused has the potential of ending up behind bars for years, whilst innocent. (I'm aware of DNA evidence and such, but lets assume the two people involved did have sex). Honestly, a women can simply refuse the stupid idea of kinky sex , whereas a men falsely accused most likely has to defend himself in a legal sense. How is that not more life ruining than ignoring a freaking comment? Yes, saying you want kinky sex is very condescending and pervy in most contexts, but the whole idea such forms of sex are some how the norm is just ridiculous talk (of mostly virgins). Porn is not the actual norm of sex and yes there are romanticised genres of porn too which are far closer to reality.	Sex	Gender - General	6/177	3.39

+Juli I do not support bullying or threats in any form and I agree that most men are not affected as much by harsh words as most women. Some are but totally ignored and would never get a TED talk to tell the world about it. My issues is that we are constantly bombarded by feminism telling us that women are the same as men. I don't agree with this statement as you seem not to. Feminism tells us that women are the same as men and can do what men can do and that they should be treated the same as men and yet somehow they should be offered special treatment because of their feelings. To be believed without evidence, to have college places and jobs handed to them just because they are women. Feminists need to let men be men and women to be women as we are not the same and then we should just live, love and work together focusing on our strengths and what we have in common . Black people are not all the same and white people are not all the same. Men are not all the same and women are not all the same. It is not right for anyone to abuse anyone else. I believe in equality of opportunity.How are black and white people different? (Other than the colour of their skin)In the west women and men are treated as equals and women are not treated as inferior or property. This is the safest and most successful culture that there has ever been.No men i know thinks that they have the right to control a women’s body but your remarks about disparaging remarks made to women are determined by how upset the woman is. So unless the man is a mind reader there is no way he is going to know if he is going to upset the women. Sure there are men and women morons out there but that is life. You cannot legislate for someone’s feelings being hurt. The impact of what was said can be greatly different depending on who is saying it. If she likes them then it is ok. If she doesn’t then perhaps it is not ok. You know that that happens. You can see it happening every night in every night club around the world.I don’t see it at all the same as using racial slang. That is aimed at a race when what we are talking about is one man talking to one women.A lot of very vocal feminists take it too far and it is they who are setting the agenda and tone of this kind of conversation. We are constantly being told that women are the same as men and just as strong and can do the same jobs and then turn around and demand that the are protected from nasty words because they are violence..... which is it the same and as strong or not??? There is, however, some validity to say that mainly men and women have certain strengths and weaknesses that make them better at certain tasks. (I speak in general terms) Women are more risk adverse which makes them more cautious which is why men will be in the most dangerous jobs and suffer the most workplace deaths (I notice there is absolutely no noise from the feminists to have equal employment in these types of jobs. It may also be why men occupy many of the highest paid jobs as they tend to be the one taking the risks. Progress is driven mainly by men. Women tend to leave the job market to have and look after children and men do not and so continue to progress their career. Men work more hours and put in more over time than womenIt is not about being better it is about as good as you can and letting people work to their strengths.Are you saying that affirmative action in favour of women does not exist?I do not know what ”actually 90 of men have those prestige, high paying jobs, and only 50 of women.” means. Stephen Catton It does make sense, actually, according to a study recently done about education and it came up in a topic not even related to women's issues, but education. Looks up the facts. Stop trying to make up lame excuses. Everyone knows there is job discrimination when it comes to women. You never really see women being CEOs, or presidents, or getting paid equally as men. You do know that its a fact the wage gap exists. Why should I get paid less for doing the same work simply because of my gender? If there's no gender discrimination in the workplace, tell me why that occurs. And come on, you don't know if she will get angry? Let me make it easy: if a random woman walks by you and you whistle to her like a dog, she will be angry. Of course there are exceptions, but we're talking about majority here. And you wonder why every woman who gets cat called is upset about it. Honestly you don't have the right to yell inappropriate, sexual things at someone. Like who are you? The minute a guy stops treating a woman like a lady, he gives up the right to be treated like a man. If you want respect, give respect. Telling inappropriate, dirty things about someone's body does not show you respect them. Here's a good rule: if it's something the general public sees as offensive, maybe don't shout it out. And in regards to the black vs. white thing, they are different because they come from different cultures, have a different way of doing things. But they are equally human. I know an African American who says he hates it when people say we are all the same, because white people don't fully understand where blank people are coming from, or their culture. It's not just about skin color. Just like Mexicans or Asians have different cultures abs different struggles, it would be ignorant of you to say they are the same as us when you don't know their culture. But at the same time, you can expect that different is good and beneficial, and we all have equal rights because we are all human. It doesn't matter if women are different than you. In the United States, we do not discriminate based on amount of Physical Strength, height, personality, or reproductive body parts. So it doesn't matter how different a woman is. She's a human being. A woman gave birth to you, so you have no right to disrespect one. Men and women can do different things that the other one can't. You forget without us there would be no people and there would be no men. You can't do it in your own, because society would be wiped out. Men need women. And vice versa too. All im saying is that if you need somebody, you better care about their struggles and what they think.	African, Black, Gender, Lame, Sexual, Woman	Ethnicity - Black, Gender - General, Physical Identity - Physical (and Mental) Impairments	11/490	2.245

Daryl Bea Lotta Payne, I can't disagree with you yet I'm a woman . I'm no feminist. I do believe women do blame men for shit they haven't even done. Though isn't that true for everyone including males? We all blame things on others to avoid that the problem is actually us. We do it to avoid the trouble, grief, or guilt that comes with whatever we've done that we can not face. So it seems like the natural thing to do: pin the blame on someone else. We all know it's wrong. I don't believe all men are good, but I don't believe all men are bad. Same goes for women.	Woman	Gender - General	1/111	0.901
It's like conditioning. If multiple people (men or women) come up to you and say things to you that you find offensive, you're going to become weary of people approaching you. By the time someone nice and respectful comes around, you're nerves are worn thin and you're going to take a preemptive course to keep the expected nastiness at bay. It's not about hate, it's about protecting yourself emotionally and possibly physically.About her "blaming men," I highly doubt that that is what she intends. When people speak, they draw from previous experiences and personal knowledge. She may have experienced a lot of what she's talking about, so when she speaks about it, she's drawing from her experiences of dealings with men. She doesn't have the experience of a man in uncomfortable experiences, and she can't talk about or from a point of view she's never experienced. She can try, but it may not be entirely accurate.	Thin	Physical Identity - Physical Features	1/157	0.637
I see two problems with the analogy.1) In the analogy, you compared a women having bad experiences with several men with someone having a bad experience with one black person.2) She talks about several experiences with men that leads someone to be weary of other men.It's understable if someone is weary about other man (black people) if they have had several (mostly?) bad experiences with them, but she's not saying it's OK to tar everyone with the same brush as per the "not all men" slide.	Black	Ethnicity - Black	2/89	2.247

Hi James, I believe what she meant was people generally react based on predetermined ideas which they have of certain people. Like she mentioned, it comes from a societal pre-program that we are often not conscious about which might have been developed from personal experiences, the media or stories from friends/family. Realistically speaking, we all unconsciously attribute certain characteristics to women, children, people who practice certain professions or people of a certain race (whether it be positive or negative) due to ideas which have been formed (unconsciously) by our experiences or the society in general, and ultimately, they will affect our (initial) response towards them. But this does not mean that any group of people should be hated because of the actions of one or a few individuals in that group, it simply explains the psychology behind human responses. This is why as a society, we need to discourage negative behaviours (towards any group) and negative representations (of any group) in the society so as to prevent/discontinue such negative reactions. Have a great day :)	Race	Ethnicity - General	1/175	0.571
Hi Richard, I do respect your opinion on this and it does reaffirm the theory that we all have predetermined ideas of people who fall into certain groups, yours being that ‘women seem to like the guys who treat them like shit’ which I presume has been formed based on your experiences, the media or the society in general therefore, you might respond to a woman in light of this reasoning. Same goes for the speaker, she also has pre-formed ideas of men (well not all men as she clarified) based on personal experiences which is what she tries to explain in this presentation. So applying your reasoning with hers, ‘men treat women like shit because women like to be treated like shit’. However, I am not certain whether this is an accurate conclusion of both sexes therefore, I restate that negative behaviours and attributions towards any group should be prevented and discouraged in the society as much as we possibly can :)	Woman	Gender - General	1/163	0.613
That’s a good comparison, but I feel that you don’t get the emotions exactly right. My guess is they don’t hate you, they are WARY of you because of the other dudes. And yes, you are entitled to feel uncomfortable around, lets say black people, if you’ve been harassed by others of that group. My guess is that very few would judge you if you have that history (and those who do are dicks, so who cares?).	Black	Ethnicity - Black	1/77	1.299

I agree with James but I guess I should flesh out why, this is too brief for a complex set of reasoning.The premise of this talk is perfectly valid. Guys have said these things to Julia and she has every right to feel the way she does HOWEVER the conclusions drawn on this emotion I have a problem with. There are a few points:- The expectation that I modify MY speech is also reasonable but a double standard (nudging it in this context towards unreasonable territory). Julia admits that she has shut men down simply because of a generalised perception built on the demonstrated negative interactions with a few men. Following these rules means:- I must behave in a manner respectful of Julia as a person (I have no problem with this, I'd like to think I would do this anyway although I accept not all men would)- Julia can interact with ME as a generalisation of the attribute pertaining to the fact I am a man. My person hood is now irrelevant in context to me.There are many industries in the big bad world where particular individuals of the female gender actually objectify themselves in order to ply money from individuals of the male gender. The exposure of these industries are more prevalent then ever before and to all people of younger and younger ages. Also the online community is ever bigger leading to more men with less interaction with real people day to day.So what you might ask. Julia uses the examples of the horrible interactions she has had with men to legitimise the generalisation behaviour of shutting them down before they talk with her. Could not these men use their experience of women (I am guessing from the disrespectful attitude that its mostly going to be from the industries mentioned before) to describe why they interact with Julia in the manner they do?I am not justifying this, all interactions should begin from a position of mutual respect in my opinion but it is equally disrespectful for me to be ignored for actions that are not my own. It seems to me that those men behave similarly but in reversed genders. They respect men and objectify Women. Julia is respecting Women and objectifying Men.- The description of sexism being subconscious whilst being oblivious to the above sexism in the form of the aforementioned double standard.- This one is inferred by me. It is circumstantial at best so feel free to dispute me on this but the perceived gender roles. Julia expects men she is interested in to approach her. Most of the preface describes scenarios where men are approaching women and during the role play Julia sets up she even states "When your a man and you walk up to a lady in the bar and say hey. ((Well I guess this is how its done))" which I infer to mean Julia does not approach men she is attracted to. I have noticed both Men and Women tend to fall into these gender roles if they do not actively keep themselves in check and maybe this is okay? Men and Women are equal but we are not the same, these two statements are not the same. 2+2=4, 1+3=4 both equate the same but are different functions, if you have to fight your nature THAT hard then maybe you are doing the wrong thing? It also leads in some respects to a particularly caustic outcome of SOME women expecting me to treat them equal except when it suits them. It happens.On a side note to this inferred statement, I have spoken to Women at bars who have tried to hit on me	Gay, Gender, Sex, Sexism, Woman	Gender - General, Sexual Identity - General, Sexual Identity - Male homosexuality	13/880	1.477

naaatsuki the right to reject was never questioned. The motive for rejection was. I have a shit day I will tell my FRIENDS to bugger off. I have that right. My reason (I had a bad day) also reasonable. If I dismiss someone because of a gender bias however is this reasonable?Females don't take rejection well, when they finally get the idea "I don't want to interact with you" they call you gay rather than accept that its my right to reject them.You are never obligated to cater to anyone. You ARE however obligated to be respectful. If the Men in Julia's video had of been respectful of Julia, she wouldn't have made this video. If Julia hadn't have been preachy about male behaviour whilst admitting being shitty to men for no other reason then they share the same gender as some other asshole (effectively making Julia the asshole in context of the new guy) and being oblivious to this as the SAME disrespect manifest only slightly differently then I wouldn't have made MY comments.You can generalise your behaviour towards men, or men as a category. When you do though you sacrifice the privilege to criticise men who have generalised you for your feminine qualities.To try to have it both ways is disrespectful of the men's rights (I can do this but you can't because your a man). I appreciate your input, but I would like you to know that as a female, being approached by a man is a threatening experience. For instance, I get approached by strangers often, like "hey cutie", "wanna go out" etc. and when these things happen, the first thing that comes to my mind is "Could he hurt me?".I am a tiny woman and if he groped me or attacked me, I could be in a serious danger. I'm not saying that those men actually attack me physically, but they attack me verbally often when I say no (calling me a bitch etc). It is really, really, scary. I would really appreciate if you could stretch your imagination a little, and those girls who rejected you might have felt the same way.	Woman	Gender - General	1/131	0.763

+naaatsuki I don't get rejected that way because I have never approached that way. The implication in the video is that all men approach this way in a bar etc, its not true. I have rejected women who approach ME this way and they respond pretty much the same, they try to make a deal with you to convince you they are worth your time, when still rejected they flat out verbally attack you. I don't hold it against them.You have to understand that being the first to move is scary as well, particularly for men. Society says we are stoic, never should we be weak, roll with the punches. That's the masculine way. You open yourself up to a stranger, effectively emotionally dropping your guard and they slap you back, you get an emotional response "whats wrong with me? Why would I be rejected? I'm not a bad guy!!!" then of course you cannot be sad, that is weakness the emotion changes to "Who are you to reject me? How dare you judge me without getting to know me!!! I don't know what I saw in you anyway!!!!". This manifests differently particularly when friends are around because you CAN'T show weakness...First clue a human is hiding weakness is that they try to bring down someone around them (putting them in perceived power, giving control, giving strength). In this situation, you put them in the weak spot, you will be the focus to let them recover...It's interesting I find that the female mindset is not much different. I have seen it first hand, they clearly went through the same transition against me, and this is why I cannot hold it against them. This destroy me for destroying you is simply human.Incidentally saying I am not interested because I don't feel safe near you is not the same as I am not interested in you because you are a man. That said if you always feel unsafe around men then there might be other issues you need to confront. There ARE bad guys out there (I wont lie), but there are levels of bad and in the western world it is VERY rare that a guy will flat out attack you.Humans are animals, so we men are animals too (as are women) but you must recognise we have higher cognitive function (just like you). Theoretically speaking if you wouldn't assault a man simply because you had the power, you must expect we are by and large the same. If you WOULD assault men if you had the power then again we might be dealing with a different problem.	Transition	Sexual Identity - Transsexuality	1/442	0.226

Obviously rape is not ok, and men are almost always very protective of women. But the word 'rape' has changed it's meaning. Legacy rape has a clear and proper definition and occurrences are rare, as mentioned in this thread. Unfortunately the meaning of the word 'rape' has changed, it now usually means 'latent hurt feelings', or something equally trivial.The Cosmonaut writes "every accusation has to be treated as if it is legitimate" A lame statement ... just stating the obvious. The Cosmonaut makes retarded statements out of nowhere, such as "rape is fine" , demonstrating very low comprehension skills - try reading the thread, then quote what you are referring to, it might stop you from making a fool of yourself. Radical feminists want accusers to be believed even when sexual assault accusations are obviously false, this is a problem for accused men. Feminist lobbyists, who want the law to favor women, have changed procedures so that charges of sexual assault do not have to be proven. This means that the accused must find hard evidence of innocence. Eg the video, 1cHZ8l44Y2UWhat we have these days are situations where many young men are being severely harmed by bogus charges from young women with a victim mentality disorder. Or bogus charges are sometimes supported by misandrist feminists who have positions of responsibility.Eg videos, QzDGv8e-Cls and 7 hBlNHvvusDon't respond if you haven't watched the videos. Logic genius: Truth is sexism is a bs concept. It's one of those things that legitimised feeling offended for things people could simply ignore all together. And I'm also going to say the sexism that's often claimed does not even really exist anymore. Yes, harassment does. But actual sexism doesn't. We've seen entertainment that has matured decades ago and yes sometimes a developer or director just wants to show sexy looks. This is true for men with exaggerated sixpacks just as much as a blonde girl with way too curvy features. There's nothing fundamentally wrong with either. Each has their place. And yes, sometimes the characters aren't shallow characters either. Even worse, some movies pretending to do more justice to females, like the all-female Ghostbusters disaster, are completely ridiculously executed pieces of crap. Not funny, not engaging and those characters feel so incredibly forced. As for people who watch porn being often more pro feminists, I highly doubt it. I mean pro feminists as the nonsensical activism. Not a general feeling of appreciating women, which by the way most if not all men have anyway. It's why sexism is a bs concept. Most men like their women.	Nothing, Sexism	Age - Youngsters, Gender - General	5/197	2.538

I've followed Julia for quite some time, and I know where she is coming from, so when I heard that she did a TED Talk on sexism , I was intrigued, as she never mentioned it in her usual tweets and all. And also many talks of sexism I had heard, I wasn't all that satisfied with their conclusions.I can't say her method is the best (the comedy thing), but her idea of understanding where that commentator is coming from makes sense. It could be the sub-conscious thing she talked about, or probably he/she(no exceptions) must had quite a bad day, or probably watched a movie with lots of swearing. There have been many times throughout my life when I've seen guys, sometimes friends or colleagues of mine say or do things that are straight up shameful and at best, distasteful and at their worst, disgusting.And in those very moments, I've called guys on it and pointed out the damage they are doing, not only (potentially to that woman), but also, potentially for any other men she meets, including us (the guys in that moment).Then there's the other side of the coin that I like to bring to people's attention: What if that woman who you're harassing or bitterly insulting in a comment was your mother, daughter, sister, friend, partner? And it was another man doing the misogyny ?Those guys would be the first to react passionately and aggressively in defence of their loved ones. So why inflict such disgusting behaviour on the loved ones of others?Just take a step back	Misogyny, Woman	Gender - General	3/154	1.948
Wow. You're a real stand-up guy, huh? That's great. It is.Consider, though, that this stand-uppishness is stereotypically patriarchal. Feminists don't take kindly to patriarchy , you know, and they're not nearly done destroying it. Paradoxically enough, they are also very, very keen on exploiting the patriarchal values they pose to dismantle, in order to keep policing others' behaviors. – As is abundantly clear in this video. – Either way, I would watch my back, if I were you.Let's take another step back.What if the disgusting behavior you refer to doesn't stem from misogyny . Think about it; if misogyny were an element, it would probably be the rarest one in the known universe. So maybe these guys react to the despicable behavior of the woman involved. Maybe the despicable behaviors of other women have already done their damage in these men. THAT, dear friend, is the other side of the coin.Since you gave no specifics,, there's no way of knowing. By the same token, we may assume that this is the case just as well as you did in standing up for these women – or against these men, I can't really tell. But I am seeing plenty of women being treated like crap and like objects or simply something pretty to look at way too much in society. Ah I see. So women are the only people that get treated like crap? Men are TOTALLY immune from that; women never cheat, file false rape or domestic abuse charges, or do stuff like clean out their partners in divorces. Thanks for reminding me that it's only women that 'get treated like crap'. Oh, and please define treated like crap while we're at it. Are you talking physical abuse? Or simply a guy simply sleeping with a girl and never calling her again? Define 'treated like crap' please. No girl wants a man to love her only for her body, cuz guess what? That's not really love. Who said that? I'm talking about sexual attraction NOT love, which for men is 99% physical. This is why men 'objectify' women, because attraction for us is all visual. We only care about your face, boobs, ass and body. Women hate this I know, because they like to think that their achievements, their personality and their intelligence make them attractive. Ummm no. Those things make MEN attractive but it doesn't work the other way around, in fact for women they are often a turn off or a hindrance. Men don't care if you are a mute, illiterate room temperature IQ burger flipper at McDonalds so long as you look good. If you want to be attractive to a man it's simple - just look good, that's all we care about. Of course in any potential relationship there's going to be more needed to make it last, but we're not talking about that - we're talking about lust. And I also see gold diggers, which is not good either. Do you really want a woman to only "love" you for your money? What happens if you lose it? You may be okay with this mentality, but you can't act like you have no clue why other people aren't. Again, more nonsense. Who said I wanted a gold digger? I said that it's common that many women objectify men for their resources. The broader point I was trying to make was that 'objectification' is a common thing for both men AND women (despite the fact that women seem to think it's just men who do it), it's here to stay and no amount of shaming men (or indeed women) is going to change that. Paulo Chan I think you've just insulted all men that exist by your comment, so if you're trying to defend yourselves, you're not doing a very good job of it. If anyone is stereotyping, it's you, because you are putting all men into a category of only liking women for their looks. Many guys I know would be insulted by that, because I know a whole lot of really great guys who actually love women for who they are. And if they saw this comment right now, they'd be offended by the way you think, because not all guys are like that. If you only "love" someone for their body, you really don't love them, you love their body, and that's not what I'm talking about here. I'm talking about actual love and relationships, not merely lust. And it's fine if you find a woman physically beautiful, but that does not mean you get to objectify her, because guess what? She is a person, not a hunk of meat, whether you like to think so or not, and that means you must at least treat her with respect on the outside, even if you couldn't care less on the inside, because this is America and we all have rights here. And secondly, you stating that all that makes a woman attractive is her body, welp, that's your opinion, and you're certainly entitled to it, frankly I don't think it's a good one, but hey, still your opinion. As long as you know not everyone agrees with that opinion, guys and girls alike. Just like I know girls who only like guys because they're hot. Thirdly, I was not calling you a gold digger, I simply said gold diggers exist. I'm not sure if you read that wrong, or you're just finding reasons to call me out. Fourthly, I know there are women who abuse men, and never said there weren't. I'm only saying the majority of abuses is men against women, and that's just a known fact. You're being willfully ignorant if you don't want to admit that. And lastly, I don't know why you find it so hard to believe I'm a Republican. Yes, Republicans can be civil people too. Anyway, I was rooting for Ted Cruz in the elections if you must know. I don't care if you believe it or not because it's true.	Woman	Gender - General	2/397	0.504
---	-------	------------------	-------	-------

Omg... Obviously if we're talking about sexuality and what makes you physically attracted to someone, then fine, but like I said, I'm not. Well actually you and me are because that is what 'objectification' is - sheer lust. So you are 'talking about it' actually, you brought it up. I'm talking about actual love. Some people want real relationships, not just hook ups. And I have no problems with being physically attracted to someone, obviously girls are physically attracted to guys as well, in case you didn't know. Once again, YOU brought up this 'objectification' horsehit, and now you've you're talking about lurve? Make up your mind. Love and lust are two differet things, but this conversation started on objectification, which has nothing to do with love. What I'm saying is that is not the ONLY reason why you love someone. If I see a certain guy, the first thing I think might be that he's cute, just like if a guy sees a pretty girl the first thing he notices is probably her looks, because he doesn't know her at all. If I'm physically attracted to a guy, that might give me motivation to want to get to know him, but if I get to know him, and his personality is horrible, I instantly become turned off. As above. You're talking about love but that's not what got you riled up in the first place. Which was, as I'll remind you now, 'objectification' I might still be attracted to his looks, because let's admit there's good looking people out there, but I don't love him and want to invest time in him. And I know all guys are not like that because I've seen guys that liked a girl because she was pretty, but then found out she was crazy, and stopped trying to have a relationship with her. Again, I'll repeat it for the 4th time - you brought up objectification and I have told you why men do it. Now, you've gone off on tangents about love. I know guys that want an actual relationship, not just a one night stand, because they've said that and not only said it, but shown it considering they haven't had a single girlfriend in two years and were pretty serious about it. Again. Do I need to repeat this for a 5th time? You get the picture. Some people still only care about looks after all that, and that's why there's porn for both genders, men and women. 6th time maybe? You can think whatever you want in your head, but when it comes to treating a girl right, you can not dehumanize her, because you have to dehumanize someone to treat them poorly. And saying women cannot actually be attractive because of who they are and men can, is a load of bull. Yeah, props to you because you're a man and you want that to be true. And I'm still not a Bernie supporter, and I know other registered Republicans who agree with me, so whatever. Keep pretending you know everything about my life to tell me who I am. If you're talking bullshit about 'objectification' then yes, you sound like your typical SJW blue-haired, ring nosed obese feminazi. Objectification is looking at a woman and not giving a shit about her personality, just sheer lust for her looks. And that how men will approach every interaction with a female, at first anyways. Now, you're not incorrect in saying that men want relationships and so forth, of course this is true. But the very first thing we notice are your looks, nothing else. If we first meet you and you're attractive, you could be a deaf dumb and blind homeless person but if you've a nice ass, face and boobs, that's	Blind, Crazy, Deaf, Dumb, Feminazi, Nothing, Obese, Woman	Age - Youngsters, Gender - Female intelligence, Gender - General, Physical Identity - Physical (and Mental) Impairments, Physical Identity - Physical Features	9/829	1.086

*Wow. Do I really have to keep explaining this? It's really getting tiring. I'm talking about objectification in actions and relationships. For example, a guy cat calls a random girl walking by, or a guy telling his girlfriend she has to eat more because she's losing her curves or stop eating because she's getting too curvy.*Again, while I don't agree with catcalling you don't seem to understand how much looks are important to men. If a girlfriend of mine wasn't looking the way I wanted I'd either leave her or tell her to do something about it. You don't have a fucking clue about how men think, do you?I only mention love because many people try to say that physical attraction=love, and they will say they love a certain girl but then treat her horrible and only care about her looks. I'm trying to differentiate between true love and lust. And I know guys certainly lust after girls, but treating a girl like she's not a human but a dog to be whistled at is not okay.Yeah I agree. I don't agree with catcalling. But I will look at women in any I please, and so will pretty much all men. And there isn't anything you're going to do about it. Suck it up, princess.There's always those people who all they want is hook ups, and then there are those people who are actually interested in real relationships.Good Lord. Hookups or not, the initial contact between a man and a woman will ALWAYS be physically orientated initially. Has this permeated into your thick skull yet? If all you want is a hook-up, fine, but you still need to treat girls with respect and know that no means no, and if she doesn't want you commenting on her body, then you need to stop because that's harassment.Since when did I mention harassment? Point out EXACTLY when I justified rape, sexual assault or harassment. They are an entirely different thing to 'objectification' and don't try to say otherwise.That's the kind of stuff I'm talking about. And you should know that not all people only want hook ups, girls and guys alike. I've seen friends who were dating for over two years and that never happened, they still were attracted to each other and loved each other. I know people who never even kissed until they were married, and they still have a really good relationship.Again, I'm trying to give you an understanding as to how men think. I've pretty much said as much as I can but you keep thinking of attraction and relationships from a females point of view. I'm well aware of how women view relationships, but you seem clueless as to how it is from our side.I suggest you listen to some Tom Leykis on Youtube to understand how men REALLY think, you'll find plenty of his videos easily if you search for him.And yes, his shows are pretty damn accurate as what men talk about when you leave the room. If you think otherwise you're hopelessly naive.	Sexual, Woman	Gender - General	2/519	0.385
--	---------------	------------------	-------	-------

Ugh. I can't. sigh No, your wrong, there can certainly be a first encounter with a guy and a girl that is not based on physical but actual attraction.Again, you're looking at it from a woman's pov. From a man's, absolutely not. A woman's personality doesn't make his dick hard. I know friends who are dating that initially, the guy did not like the girl physically, but were attracted to something in her personality, like she was really fun to be around, friendly, etc. Later on as the friendship went on, he grew to love that girl and be physically attracted to her too, although at first it had nothing to do with that. I know people who ended up dating that thought the other was extremely annoying at first and didn't want to be the same room as them, whether they looked good or not.Oh, I don't doubt that happens. Very common amongst men with little options that will end up with someone they are not physically attracted to. And I'm talking about guys here too, so stop saying oh "female perspective".Yes, because you really know how guys think, don't you? You don't have a clue, I hate to break it to you.I'm not a guyExactly. You don't have a breeze as to what you're talking about.but I've been around enough guys to know that not all of them are like that, because they have showed me from their actions. I'm really tired of repeating myself. Again, I never said you can't look at women or think they're attractive, I said you have to treat them with respect as a human being either way, which is what I've been saying the entire time. smh.No, you're repeating the same fem-centric line that's shaming men for viewing women in a physical sense first and foremost. This is how men are, regardless of how you THINK your male buddies behave. If a man says he's attracted to her personality you can best believe he's saying it to be politically correct in front of a woman. In fact, I've said the same thing myself many's a time. It means jack shit.But believe me, if you were a fly on a wall when men get together to talk about women you can be sure none of them are talking about women's 'personalities'Again, if you want to be this metaphorical 'fly on the wall' I suggest you listen to Tom Leykis. Paulo Chan Oh, I don't doubt that if I were a fly on the wall I'd hear some shady things. In fact, I don't have to be, I hear them all the time being a person out in the open. But then there's the flip side, I personally know a dude that left the room when that was going on because he didn't want to take part in it. So you're saying that all men are liars and it's impossible for them to be attracted to a woman for who she is, and if he says it, he's just lying. Bull. You have very little self esteem, don't you? Fine, if you want to believe that all men are liars, because I'm sure you speak on behalf of all of them, okay. that's you. You do you, and I'll be far away. But just so ya know, if you ever want a real relationship, women are extremely turned off by shallow guys. In regards to a guy not liking how his gf looks, I know someone who kept berating a girl for her looks, then got mad when she broke up with him and couldn't possibly imagine why. You wanna do that, fine. You play with fire, you get burned. And with the couple who didn't like each other at first, you say they must be desperate. Could it be possible that they actually love each other? Because just looking at them together, it's obvious. Especially when they had several chnnces to be with other people. Again, your not a girl, so according to your theory, it's impossible to know that girls want to be treated with respect like a normal human being, because that's what we are. So I'm done here. If girls and guys can't possibly understand each other, there's no point in this conversation, because you can't understand me.	Woman	Gender - General	1/312	0.321
--	-------	------------------	-------	-------

um, dude, no. I said thinking all men are liars. Like, read what I actually said.Thinking all men are liars? Is that English? In what context do you speak of? That all men are like that? Of course ALL men aren't like how I say they are, but pretty much most of them are. Any that don't are the exception - and/or are lying. If you think men view women the same way women view men (which is pretty much what you're saying) you're an idiot bereft of common sense. Nope, that's not what it is. Being physically attracted to someone is not objectification, or else we'd all be objectifying each other all the time. I think you know that. Objectification is treating someone like they're only worth something for how their genetics happen to shape their face. As if they are not a person with rights, but simply an object, a tool for you to use. That's objectification if you somehow didn't know that all this time.Well, in my book eyeing someone up and lusting after them 100 for their looks IS objectification. I am looking at her in one way only - I don't care about anything else but her looks and I want to have sex with her. Is that objectification? If so, should I feel guilty? A tool for me to use? So if I sleep with someone because she's hot, and I never call her again I've objectified her?I get a porn mag and I jerk off to a hot girl I'm 'objectifying' her? Same with a porn movie?What's a 'tool for me to use' mean? In what context? Rights? What rights are been violated by 'objectification?' Spell out what rights under the law are being violated please if a human objectifies another. No, I somehow still don't know - you've done a crap job of explaining it so far. and a masculine view is better? huh...Didn't say that, did I? I said that you view things solely as a female, and have no interest in how men look at things. I've been trying to explain this to you but you don't want to know. I fully understand and accept how women think as regards relationships because I've studied it, but you have no interest in studying how men think. You satisfied with your minute world view which consists of how a few of your beta-male friends behave, and think that's the be all and end all.so loving people for who they are is the worst kind of projection? Interesting how you see things. I know a lot of guys who would disagree with that if I showed them this comment. And you can say they're all liars because that's what someone who's losing an argument does, but you have no proof that every single guy I know is a liar, considering you don't know any of them, so...No, projection means you think your pov is everyone elses. Again, guys will say a lot of things when talking to a female so I wouldn't put much currency in that. Your basic point is that men aren't just attracted visually or looks wise to women, that there lots of men who can get an erection by virtue of her personality alone.Your proof of this is a handful of your mangina friends who will most likely tell you what you want to hear. My proof is the multi trillion dollar porn industry which clearly proves this is nonsense. I think it's fair to say YOU are losing the argument there sweetcheeks.so you would be willing to divorce someone over their weight? Does that sound good and right to you? Honestly, does it? Because anyone who can justify that is blind and selfish. And no, definitely not all guys are like that because I have family members who put on some weight and the guy didn't divorce them, and	Blind, Common, Sex	Gender - General, Physical Identity - Physical (and Mental) Impairments, Social Class - Working class	3/744	0.403

um, you told me that I am simply viewing the world through a fem centered "worst kind of projection" gynocentric, g-rated fantasy novel view. And that's not at all insulting to a females point of view?No, it isn't, it's pretty accurate. Its how women view things, but it is completely alien to how men look at things. You literally couldn't give a shit - your way way is all that matters.so guys who treat women with respect are beta males? Jerry dee stand up to? In my personal experience there's not been a need to "stand up to" women who behave in similar ways because the men they've objectified were unlikely to leave the encounter feeling threatened or harmed. We are equal, but we are not the same. A group of women cat-calling or aggressively pursuing the average man are not going to make him feel attacked. But a group of men - or even an individual man - cat calling or aggressively pursuing the average woman often tends to have a different impact on women (for the most part). So, to consider your acid test, when I've been around female friends of mine, harassing or just objectifying men I need only remind them of their complaints when guys have done the same to them. Ideally we would get to a place where men and women could feel equally comfortable and secure in such situations and I reckon that would be better facilitated if we could all work to intuitively see and respect boundaries wherever they are. Paulo Chan I surely hope you are wrong because if that's how ALL guys really are I don't really see any good reason to give my man a child and let our species go on, nor do I have the strenght to care about living at all.. You should realize... for heaven's sake... that you are saying things like "men are not all the same" yet you are saying that all men think alike...? No one is the other alike even if there are science and stats of certain norms.. for guys to look for beautiful women more than other characteristics could surely be a norm, just as there could be a norm for girls to look more for brains or money than for appearance in men...Everyone knows equality isn't in our world, if it were... we wouldn't see the enormous talk about this all over the world.... and that you are defending yourself as a man, even though no one is saying that men aren't sexualized, objectified, abused and so on as well.., that's really sad because you don't even realize that you are trying to silence one of societys yet biggest problems with your own problem...If you wanna talk about equal rights for men, obviously it would be more accepted and listened to if you didn't go and try to use that to silence the topic of equal rights for women..... It's really heartbreaking seeing men trying to justify in this way whenever it's about equal rights for women, because there's nothing to even defend...? but if you really would have to defend yourself as a man it would be when MODERN FEMINISM is accuring. You have actually been talking about modern feminism a bit in your comments before here and to use those words surely you would know all about what it means right...? and the difference it stands for compared to the original Feminism... But yet everything you have said so far speaks against the original feminism... Let me remind you.. Feminism stands for Equality... yet you said you are tired of it... which means you are not really an "equalist" as some of you people here rather prefer calling it.. You are practically just being a real bully... Also being hateful and using expletives whenever trying to get your opinion heard isn't gonna help you at all... nor is it gonna help to change the awful things you want to change in our society, believe me I know.... Just please.. be a little more loving, caring, open, understanding and that's really all you need, because believe it or not...as a woman... that's really all I need from a man....	Nothing, Woman	Age - Youngsters, Gender - General	2/446	0.448

Do any of you realize you're furthering Jon Devo's point?? Let's all take a wonderful point about mistreatment, and mistreat each other to prove it. Purely fantastic logic on display here. Julia Hardy even says "not all men", but when men in general feel the slightest bit that their gender is being called out, instantly go into defense mode and slander everyone and everything. This isn't to say women don't do it, because I know that argument will be brought up, but the word feminism itself seems to be some sort of a trigger. As a whole, men look bad in modern times because of that. Again, not all men, but when a woman is taking interest in someone, I absolutely guarantee you, she's intently waiting, if not openly questioning, his views on feminism, equality and so forth. Because this, right here, this comment section where people bash each other with blatant, revolting disrespect, is where you all set the standard. Yes indeed. If you study feminism closely you'll see it's allied closely with Marxism, and Marxism is all about the victim narrative, ie the oppressed and the oppressor, the rich having all the wealth and the poor have nothing , men having all the power and privilege and women have nothing . And once upon a time both feminism and Marxism actually had a point. Not in the year 2017 however - nothing is off limits to any woman who has the drive to succeed in this world, and nothing is off limits to any person who wants to make something of him or herself. However if you have a victim mindset like feminists do, you'll believe with religious zeal that there is a big bad Patriarchy who meet in secret smoke filled meetings to keep women down, just like how Leftists also believe the 1 are doing the same to keep the poor down. Whereas in actual fact none of the above has any basis in reality. Nothing is off limits to anyone these days - the only Patriarchy exists in your mind. If you are a feminist/Leftist stop reading the bullshit on Buzzfeed, HuffPo, Jezebel, Everyday Feminism and elsewhere, and stop listening to idiot Leftists like Bernie Sanders and go work hard for yourself, lose the victim mentality and be a success. You'll thank me when you make your first mill.	Nothing, Patriarchy, Woman	Age - Youngsters, Gender - General	8/231	3.463

Paulo Chan honestly, objectifying anybody is wrong, but trying to find an outlet of which to volley all of the blame onto is almost as bad. It may prove to be truly impossible to pinpoint where exactly our sick modern aspirations stemmed from, thus latching the blame onto anyone is not only futile but is just plain irresponsible. We are only treating the symptoms, & NOT the cause. I am very sorry that someone touched your body without your permission. Woman can & do perpetuate this loathsomeness, but historically it has been our bodies who have been "up for grabs" against our consent, as we were simply seen as property in most civilizations. Unfortunately, at the same time, men have been targeted by other men & females. Because of a woman's low status in society, since she was basically just a walking uterus to bear +take care of children, do the housework, provide sex, meals etc, it was deemed acceptable & expected for sexual abuse to occur, yet, when this happened to a man, it was (& sadly still is) traditional to keep mum about the misconduct, as it is with a vast majority of abuse victims. It was thought that these sort of things only happened to women, & due to her low societal position, this was taken as an insult to the male complex if he were to experience this, since he was (& still is) expected to be an unwavering, emotionless figure of power & strength. If u were to report your incident, chances r ur male & female colleagues would resort to calling u a "crybaby" & to "man up", further dehumanizing u as they have been conditioned by a culture rife with toxic masculinity. Chances r, if u were a woman, you'd receive little sympathy as well, since this sort of thing has been seen as an ok thing to do for ages, & "it's not that big a deal." See? No matter what gender u r, u r suffering. Point being, women have almost always been seen as being less then men, yet our natural state of being consists of both masculine & feminine qualities, & we can never embrace our full humanity unless both of these sides reach an equal armistice.	Gender, Sex, Sexual, Woman	Gender - General	5/378	1.323

And the best way to change its corruptive behavior begins in yourself. It begins with a willingness to listen to others outside of yourself,as self empowerment of others can spread like fire, if you let it. Empowering others is a stepping stone to empowering yourself. it was going so well, until she went pc, and with that i can say no Julia, cause even though society does make sexist people, youre indeed too sensitive, just to be offended by words YOU consider sexist, cause youll see, that just like racism, it needs to have the intention to be that, meaning its not the action nor what was said, but the meaning behind it	Racism	Ethnicity - General	1/68	1.471

In this day and age a guy even going the correct route in asking out a woman will get ignored due to women's self entitlement issue of desiring to be "impressed" like us men is only born into existence to take care of and entertain women. At this point, there is no pleasing women, so don't even bother with women anymore. Go MGTOW!	Age, Woman	Age - General, Gender - General	2/63	3.175
yes but most men don't get sexually aggressive or sexually violent comments as standard. Or a never ending and un-renting dialogue about what you look like. Of course everyone has bad comments, those directed at women are consistently more common and with very different undertones.	Common	Social Class - Working class	1/45	2.222
itsjuliahardy What's crazy is in china and the region - most men don't care about relationships and prefer to stay single - it's not a very good thing but im surprised she didn't talk about that.	Crazy	Physical Identity - Physical (and Mental) Impairments	1/36	2.778 its very diff if a girl is sexually aggressive to a man than vice versa. Whilst there are cases of female to male rape they are a tiny fraction of the cases of sexual assault and rape for women. Therefore an aggressive comment from a man has more weight and meaning. A threat like that from a woman is generally unthreatening. I don't think there are many men who worry about getting sexually assaulted by women on the way home. Whereas in the reverse most women are. Mainly because most of us have experienced some kind of unwanted attention that is borderline/is scary by men. Even if there are women who are sexualising this YTer, the threat level and meaning is very different.	Sexual, Woman	Gender - General	2/123	1.626
itsjuliahardy A threatening comment on YouTube doesn't mean it's going to happen. You are saying women can't handle the Internet or real life experiences with creepy men. It's a shame that I have to share the same gender as these cry babies.	Gender	Gender - General	1/42	2.381
So what's your solution Julia? More man-shaming feminist dirge? Even if you do have a point, the vast majority of men will turn off when they hear a feminist speak. 3rd wave feminism is tanished beyond repair in most of our eyes, its nothing more than blatant man-hating and female supremacy at this stage. I know few men who are genuinely against equality, but most of us hate feminism - and for good reason.	Nothing	Age - Youngsters	1/74	1.351
I have never in my life seen a woman walk past a man and make comments at him. Never.	Woman	Gender - General	1/19	5.263

No... no.... you do not get the point. The problem is that women get a certain amount of comments BECAUSE they are women, additionally to the normal hateful comments everybody gets. If you say you are a woman in some videogames for example you get hate (or unwanted attention) not because you are "a noob" or you did or said something wrong, but because men cannot respect you because of your gender .This is the whole point. So stop being defensive and just accept some sad truths about our society.Very interesting article by a white man about how listening to women helps and how you can participate in fighting sexism as a man. Maybe you want to read it. [LINK]	Gender, Sexism, Woman	Gender - General	3/121	2.479 itsjuliahardy Of course there are more cases of male to female rape than vice versa. Women do things differently, simply view the following videos to see what women do.
