At my elementary school that I don't go to anymore because I finished it, our teacher that's a male asked us what we wanted to be when we grow up and a lot of girls started saying some very amazing jobs such as a police woman , a fire fighter, etc. and our teacher told us we aren't suppose to pick those jobs because we're girls like wth? I disagree with Taylor Swift's saying that because people joke about her writing songs about her exes all the time it's sexist. I would say that's more of a hating on Taylor thing , not actually sexism . The reason I say this is because she is the ONLY artist they make that joke about. There are hella other female artist that wrote songs about their exes all the time but they don't get these jokes. So it's not sexism it's just the against Taylor.	Sexism	Gender - General	2/84	2.381

I am so confused because people are here saying that men get more Privilege the women blah blah I feel like we as women we do have more power than we actually think because we are in the western world we are not in Saudi Arabia or Africa or any other place where it is sexist but if you're living in America or the UK you have just as much equality maybe not as much as men as a woman in life I've never experienced sexism and I am a successful woman I don't know if my opinion is different from others because I have never experienced sexism but let's look at sexism from a different perspective if a woman slaps a guys bum or hits a guy its normal but as soon as the table turns people start cussing the guy out saying that he should not be hitting women but women do the exact same but men do not talk about it as much as women 65 of the Domestic abuse are afflicted at woman 35 are afflicted on men and domestic abuse can come emotionally and physically and it can lead to so many things like depression and death and more . Ok Katy Perry and Taylor swift clearly share the same views on women sticking together and beating this sexism BS into submission!! Yet neither are prepared to stop the bltchy catfight so they can make up and stand together United! Both are so pig headed and ignorant neither one will step down from this.. they are both being hypocritical and completely going against the message they are trying to share and apparently agree with. Come on ladies let's do it like the dudes, bros before hoe's and whatnot, "oh I have to be friends with dat bltch, hell no! Have you seen those cheap ass press on nails she's rocking!" You both talk a big talk but clearly don't mean a word of it and just want to be the most popular bltch in the industry in my opinion! Grow up and behave like grown ups please! Phuck You you don't know what your talking about, every species even being different to some degree requires adjustments, you can expect a man whose build is a lot bigger and generally a lot more bigger to be compared to a woman who gets pregnant, whose behavioural requirements are different, In my eyes and a lot of peoples eyes, the differences are more than enough to justify reasons for both to be treated differently based on their needs and strengths as appose to 'equality' and feminism is a political moment more than anything. The thing that upsets me the most is that most of the time people laugh after hearing their answers. Dude its a serious issue, maybe they are laughing to get rid of the awkwardness but I feel like they don't care about the fact that what they do is just promoting sexism and unfortunately I feel like they won't stop it and ask the same sexist questions to the next person (like that fucking interviewer who was obsessed with the skin tight suits) . And btw the "interviewers" asking those questions to ariana grande should be fired, asap. That was so annoying and rude, I am impressed that she didn't walk out of the interview, she was such a pro. Half of those are not even sexist, the Celebs however turned it into more of an issue than it really was.(Before you call me sexist keep in mind I’m a woman)	Woman	Gender - General	1/32	3.125

The first one, when the woman asks Rihanna about what she was looking for in men, In my opinion it was a normal question, Rihanna reacted as if it was implied that she was looking for a man, her response was rather defensive and came off as rude. When they asked Ariana Grande about making a choice between make-up and cellphone, she took it personally, as if they were saying this is the only things girls care about which wasn't stated anywhere, it was a small talk, funny question, not to mention the fact that the questions they ask the celebs are usually questions that came from fans, and I honestly believe that if there was a woman sitting and asking her the same thing she would have responded differently, also we can't deny the fact that we mostly see Ariana as a person who pays much attention to both make-up and social media (on the cellphone) so I can clearly see why they might ask this (again, not in an offensive way), she could have responded differently in my opinion, also when they said "ladies, learn!" and she responded "boys learn" it was absolutely uncalled for, they were addressing a real issue with girls that only pay attention to beauty and material stuff, and to their defense they clearly seemed happy to learn that Ariana is not that kind of girl, since they've seen too many girls that only care about make-up and cellphone (and they are right by the way, I'm sure even us girls can recall seeing lots of gals like this.) Taylor swift talks about cheering each-other rather than bashing and fighting (ironically, "Bad Blood" which is about rivalry between two girls start playing) and that is just plain hypocritical, n one made her fight with Katy Perry, no one made Cher fight Madonna, and no one made Lil Kim fight Nicki Minaj, the fights between women are not "what people wait for", it's just what happens every once in awhile. Same applies to Katy in the next clip, she proceeds to bash Taylor in her songs and social media yet talks so much about gals empowering each other, again, doesn't make sense, plus I honestly don't see how it's sexist. Katy Perry in the following clip stated she got paid, well, yeah? I mean, of course she got paid, it's not like women don't get paid ever, and Katy saying it as if it was something out of the ordinary, then pardon me, women just won't be entertainers since they won't get paid for it and won't be profitable to themselves nor the producer/label, same applies to men. Serena then made a huge deal out of her being the sports "person" of the year, as if it's not obvious that a woman is a person, which in my opinion sparks segregation between men and women instead of ending it, as long as people like Serena act as if it is something out of the ordinary to consider a woman as a person, sexism won't end, the fact stays, that she got there by her own power and if that isn't an indicator that women can and will then I don't know what is, f sexism was as prominent in her case she wouldn't have gotten there in the first place. We also have Scarlett Johansson which was asked about her diet, what's sexist in here? - a woman that likes to know another woman's secret to her amazing shape? - that's not sexist, that's a compliment, not to mention the fact that this question was asked on behalf of Scarlett's girl fans, since men won't care about her diet honestly. Same applies to Ann's catsuit question, her young girl fan audience cares about hat, he literally	Sexism, Woman	Gender - General	8/829	0.965
--	---------------	------------------	-------	-------

Elithale Shepard Most of your points seem like excuses. Where is the proof that that question came from a fan? And what do you mean by seen to many girls that pay attention to only make-up and cell phone? I'm going to be honest but you seem like the type to rather go by stereotypes rather than actual facts. That's the thing here. Most of these things they asked were very stereotypical and not to mention an invasion of privacy. "If the interviewer was a woman she would've replied differently." Funny, considering most of these interviewers questioning other celebrities are women themselves. What makes you think only Ariana Grande would reply differently if it was a woman?About Taylor Swift and Katy Perry. You honestly cannot use their situation to back up your point. Or Nicki's. Are you trying to say that part of supporting women means agreeing with each other no matter what? Did you even realize what they were arguing about? That's like you telling me not to end terms with someone who's rude and fake because she's a female. And not to go after someone who keeps bashing me just because she's female. If she was arguing with a man, would you have reacted different? Yeah, she means supporting each other when it comes to general terms. Like rights and policies, not always in personal matters."Which in your opinion sparks segregation instead of-" Okay, say no more. These are clearly all your opinions. They aren't facts which came from the discussion of the video. They are just your own biased opinions. You do realize in this day and age that sexists do exist, right? That racists still exist right? That homophobic people still exist right? Since you stated my opinion, I will state mine. Unless there is a constant reminder towards something and why, those types of people will always show up. Why on Earth would people get mad over a woman talking about being a woman to win an award? Do you realize the point? If you get upset over that then you clearly have a bit of sexism in you. There shouldn't be a reason for you to get mad over that. Of course a woman is a person. But how often do you see a woman being chosen for it? She felt the need to express her gratitude and hard work on being a woman that earned that title. What exactly is wrong about that? And how exactly does it promote segregation? It doesn't. You're just offended that she talked about herself being a woman to win the award. Nothing else. About the weight and health questions - I can really begin to see your biased self coming out. "What's offensive about that? That's a compliment." In your opinion it is. Why do you feel the need to refer your opinion as a fact? Do you not realize that every person is different and responds to such differently? If someone makes it clear to you to quit asking about their personal problems. Quit asking about their personal problems. If someone did the same to you on a different category: such as depression, your family, and such... Would your opinion still reply? He's supposed to ask about the fucking movie, not their weight. Not to mention it was the same dude twice. You're weird asf for supporting some creep who legit asked if she was wearing any lingerie. Something is honestly wrong with you. And please link me the source on where it was behalf on fans considering it was the same dude twice.	Age, Homophobic, Nothing, Sexism, Weird, Woman	Age - General, Age - Youngsters, Gender - General, Physical Identity - Physical (and Mental) Impairments, Sexual Identity - General	13/600	2.167

There are so many double standards in society, and Taylor Swift and Ariana Grande's replies hit me hard. One, totally agree with Taylor Swift. Artists write songs about their love life all the time, yet she is affected by participating in it for... what? Her gender ? And Ariana Grande is so freaking right. Women can love their bodies, especially in this society where everybody is judged based on what clothes they wear and what their bodies look like.	Gender	Gender - General	1/78	1.282
I wouldn't class myself a feminist, but all these examples here are all very well done. Calling out sexism when it is truly there. The online hate for feminism had just come about, for some men and women being uneducated and calling out things as sexist when they clearly aren't. These are the types of videos that get traction, and cause the whole idea that feminists are stupid.	Sexism	Gender - General	1/68	1.471
Taylor is just a bit stupid. It's great that she doesn't accept sexism . But Bruno Mars and Ed Sheeran don't sing about their exes, or romantic lives. Might see the occasional song about it, but compared to Taylor, they don't do it at all.	Sexism	Gender - General	1/44	2.273

Infinity StonesActually, feminism is supposed to be about equality. If you claim that you're a femenist yet you go around harassing men and pouring bleach on their crotches, you are actually a misandrist, which is someone who has a hatred towards men. The reason why you think that feminism is bad, is because misandrists ruin real femenist's reputation. Feminism was never supposed to be made as a "kill all men" group. It was made because woman haven't gotten the equality they deserve. Even today women still don't get equal pay. Yes, women are lucky enough that we're allowed to vote, we're allowed to work, but we're still not getting equal pay, which is exactly why feminism still exists. It breaks my heart to see so many people using the word feminism as a bad thing, when really it's good for society.	Woman	Gender - General	1/142	0.704

Madison Strong it's true what you said, it is 'supposed' to be about equality, and it was in the begining, it's purpuse was erase all the differences and to make everything gender equal, and is a pretty strong point and the thing worth fighting for, but you cannot say that it hasn't gotten too far, cause now feminists are trying to find and make something a problem where there is none.And also (don't get me wrong i'm just giving my opinion not tryna hate on you for yours), yes a lot of people think feminism is bad, but some of them have a good reason that would be for example that women only want equality in the cases that they profit out of that, like they will fight for having equal salary cause if that is the case, it is a win-win situation, it changes nothing for men but it does for women, they profit out of that, and they would do anything to make that happen. But, if it is something that will bring them into the worse situation it will be ignored, like having smaller jail sentences then men, or also for example, if a woman is being harassed by her husband, everyone is on her side and there will be police interventions and everything, but if a man is being harassed by his wife, he becomes a laughing stock of everyone and nobody does anythingNow these are just 2 things for example to show that if something would bring women into better position, feminists will try to do something about it, but if something will bring man into a better position (and make them equal in that department) no one gives a shit, and you say it is all about equality.Also I'm sorry if I'm dragging now and being annoying but i will say it anywaysThere is a lot of feminists with different attitude and i do have a problem with some of then which is why i don't really agree that feminism is necessarily a good thing First (i don't know how they're called but i think that they call them turfs)The ones who hate transgender people (it doesn't make a lot of sense but it is a thing), cause apparently, if someone transitioned from male to female 'they will never be real women and experience all the pain of growing up as a girl' and is someone transitioned from female to male then it is 'you betrayed your 'sisters', and by doing that you will not escape the discrimination(cause apparently that is the main reason they've done that)' and so on.What I'm trying to say is that even tho you're saying that its about equality you make everything into a sexist thing somehow like for example, if a women wears a dress it is because 'in our society girls are expected to act girly and all that' and if she wears a T-shirt and some pants then 'she is doing that cause she wants to escape discrimination' So the point is, if you want equality fight for mans right as wellAlso we are not in middle age, yes we can vote it is like that for years now dont act like it is the best thing that women achieved And also i get that you're tryna make like legal stuff equal, like the same laws and the same salary and all that but you cannot make people change their beliefs, cause those people are dipshits and there is no point tryna change that, you just waist your precious time with telling someone something opposite of opinions they grew up with.So yes, I agree that you have a good point, but try to understand what i just wrote here, and maybe you'll get what im saying Sorry if i was being rude or anything i am not overly good with expressing myself in a very polite way	Age, Gender, Nobody, Nothing, Transgender, Woman	Age - General, Age - Youngsters, Gender - General, Sexual Identity - Transexuality	6/659	0.91

Or are they asked that much about their underwears?Because most of the time, it's more acceptable to see mens in bad shape than women (being too thin or too fat), even if they have the same pressure to be fit.In films, if a women has/wants to be accepted, she has to get to the mold and be confident, but when men does, they had to be only confident in their capacities.But I'm still curious about your thoughts about this.Also, it's good that you talk about the fact that mens get indeed raped or harrassed but... I think more that the problem is not feminism but toxic mascunility.Men have to be tough, strong, cold... So they are not allowed to show weakness and sympathy. So if they talk, the victims are more put to shame or mockery even more than usual.And if the rapist is a woman , it's even worse, because it's not even take seriously, as mens have to be womenizer. Charline Saucier You clearly misunderstood and are in your feelings. I said Black Widow is dumb in the sense of it being a dumb comic book concoction. Not that the artifice of her fake character traits makes her unintelligent. You need reading comprehension. It's a silly movie franchise, the action is absolutely laughable and antithetical to the reality of the physical world. Even in casting ScarJo it is problematic, to look at her body, she has zero musculature. She has a small waist, large supple breasts, and child-bearing hips. She is not an athlete and the stunts and green screen required to create these silly Avenger ScarJo Spider Widow movies for socially and emotionally retarded adults is laughable. Same w Gal Gadot. She has the stick thin body of a super model, which is what she is. Not a fighter. In an actual fight, her thin bones would be snapped like twigs. Same w ScarJo, who is 5'3'. There is no fight where she beats a 6'2' man like myself. She would be bent over their knee and spanked. These comics, and their attendant 18th and 33rd sequels have zero stakes. None of the comic book cartoon heroes can die. They always win in the end. Always. There is zero surprise who will win in the end. It is literal mindless viewing intended for undeveloped minds, i.e. children. So many of folks like you in my age cohort are arrested in their development. Perpetual children, playing video games, watching silly spandex comics, not taking life seriously as they should. And so I pity my generation actually. As far as cartoons comics being a diversion, a mindless diversion, again you choose to be diverted by childish things, rather than real drama, real storytelling, real stakes, real mystery, real humanity. Shakespeare. Plath. Updike. Chabon. Zadie Smith. The Coens. Paul Thomas Anderson. Greta Gerwig. Tarantino. Sofia Coppola. Emmanuelle Bercot. Maiwenn. Kathryn Bigelow. Actual real drama, real stories, w substance, stakes, and meaning. You can not argue the fact that you choose to hero worship cartoons. Literal cartoons. You, and ppl like you, are what's wrong w this country. It's a lack of intellect. A lack of engaging w the real world. It's running away and hiding in comic books and cartoons. k • • • • • I actually love ScarJo. But I'm honest where you girls are not. Look at her filmography. She's chosen these roles. She chose to be in a catsuit as Black Widow for a decade w standalone films to come. She chose to be the sex pot in Woody Allen's Match Point who steals a man away w her sexuality. She chose to play the blonde Jersey bimbo in Don Jon. She chose to be a literal object of sexual desire in The Girl With the Pearl Earring. She chose to be a cyborg in another form fitting bodysuit that hugged her curves and private parts in Ghost in the Shell. She chooses time after time to take roles that play up her sexuality, her large breasts, her thin waist, and her beauty. She's never choosing to play roles as a career woman . Or a doctor. Or a lawyer. Or a mom. She wants to be a sex symbol. And guess what, guys? She's succeeded! Myself and every other guy (straight and gay) thinks she's a sex bomb. Because that's what she chose. So interviewers rightly ask about her sexuality, her boobs, her panties, her bodysuits, her beauty. It comes w being a sexpot instead of a serious actress like Amy Adams or Meryl Streep. johnnyparx Gal Gadot has the body of a super model. Not a fighter. She has no muscle mass. Fighters have shoulders, which is required to execute powerful punches. With ScarJo, you mentioned baby weight, which is irrelevant. Her issue is height. She's too small to effectively fight a man. At 5'3' and 115 she cannot fight a man of even average height at 5'9 and 185 lbs. She'd be destroyed.Also note how you discuss ScarJo's body and weight as a negative. Because certain body types are not believable in the context of a female soldier or a fighter. As far as your ad hominem attacks of me as an incel, that is typical of ppl unable to engage on the merits of an argument. I am a 3rd/4th wave sex-positive feminist. I believe in female equality and empowerment in a way you could never understand. Clearly far more than you do. I've actually canvassed for several female politicians (not Hillary) and I guarantee if we go into a discussion of feminist writers and thinkers from Roxanne Gay to Atwood, from Lorde to Plath to Alice Walker, and the mother of intersectionality Williams Crenshaw, I would be far more conversant on the canon of feminist thought and writing, from the 1st wave to the burgeoning 4th wave, than you could ever hope to be. For instance have you read 'Demarginalizing the Intersection of Race and Sex' three different times, as I have? Doubtful. Perhaps you should.Unlike you, I am a realist. I don't name call. I am a truth teller.	Gay, Race	Ethnicity - General, Sexual Identity - General, Sexual Identity - Male homosexuality	3/261	1.149
buffalo. black So wait, you're saying someone 5'3 can not be a fighter and take on males. Would you like to say that to Mackenzie Dern, Ann Osman, or Jinh Yu Frey? Those are just three of well known fighters who can handle there own. Most people when they are training, they learn to fight someone larger than they are, and learning about weak points from pressure points, weak points of the body, and using the balance of the other person to get the advantage. Also; for female soldiers and fighters, I'm assuming are you in the military? Have you met anyone in the military?Also I really don't think bragging about being a 3rd/4th sex positive feminist means what you think it means. "It's okay to dress sexual !" Your comment is: "BUT YOU WILL BE OBJECTIFIED BECAUSE YOU'RE SEXUAL !" Hypocrite much? I really don't care who you canvassed with, or who you have read. You can read anyone you want, but at the end of the day. You're a dick, and that's what you are. You're not a truth teller, you're a hypocrite who insult, drag, and pretend to love the female body but only if it's shown the way YOU want it to be shown. buffalo. black The moment you assumed I was talking negative about either women? Is the moment you shoved your whole foot into your mouth. quoting Lorde as a feminist writer... and the other nutjobs on that list just made me step back. This entire line of replies is turning into a dumpster fire of hot garbage. I spent 12 years in the Army. I sparred, routinely, with a Israeli Defense Force regular (Career soldier) Female. She stood 4ft 10inches. I'm 5ft 6in at the time and this is my third combat deployment with my infantry unit doing sweeps and clears (often times hand to hand room to room with isis combatants). Charline Saucier You and snickers. Super weird. I detest the taste of peanuts and peanut butter, so I've never actually tasted Snickers. Maybe if you offered a Twix or a Milky Way. Maybe a chocolate turtle. Mmm. Then you'd be talking my language. Maybe that would address the hanger you claim that I am suffering from. Just a thought.You make several assertions, so I was take them one by one:I am a fan of Mackenzie Dern. She's attractive w a large bosom, and is a decent, tho not great fighter. The Jinh Yu Frey girl is even smaller, fighting at 105. Neither of them would have a chance against an average sized man at 5'9' 180 lbs. There is a reason why men and women are not allowed to compete in sport against one another. On average men are stronger, faster, taller, more explosive, and more violent than women. It's just unfair. The average female is 5'4'. The average male is 5'9'. This is merely biology.Learning to fight someone larger in a gym is different from doing so in real life. And I know the same weak points as any woman might learn (knees, ankles, joints, eyes, neck, and on and on), plus I am much faster, much stronger, and a foot taller, meaning in a real fight I could keep any small woman at distance if I wanted to. But I could also pick her up and hold her unable to attack me.As for 3rd and 4th wave feminism, which I ascribe to, it means women have agency and determinism in choosing their sexual lives and how the choose to present their sexuality to the world. I noticed as so many regressive feminists like to do, you distorted my words. I never ScarJo should be specialized by others. Rather, what I said was that ScarJo has chosen film roles of her own volition that sexualize her. And because of that she will be asked questions about her sexuality and wardrobe. Asking a person questions about their own choices is not objectification. And to think otherwise is misguided.You should care who I have canvassed w and who I have read because it speaks to my willingness to learn and expand my feminist ideology and my desire to champion women political leaders. That is important in the continued feminist movement. What's more I have contributed campaign contribution money in just the past 12 months to a diverse set of women including Ilhan (my favorite member of Congress), AOC, Rashida Tlaib, Carmen Yulin Cruz, and Elizabeth Warren. So don't tell me I'm a dick. I'm a supporter of women and a true blue feminist.And I do love the female body. It is exquisite and I make no apologies for that fact as a heterosexual male. I will not be demonized because I call it like it is. ScarJo is a sexy woman. She also sexualizes herself by so often choosing roles that focus on her body, her silhouette, her soft curves, and her breasts. Again, this is not a negative. This is just what she does. My point is don't act like it's some patriarchal issue to ask about her body when those are the only roles she does.Again, why no similar sexualizing of other marquee actresses. Will you not address this point? Amy Adams, Meryl, Lupita, Emma Stone, Penelope Cruz, Jessica Chastain, and on and on. ScarJo has this issue because of her own choices. And you guys don't want to admit she brings this on herself.	Sexual, Weird, Woman	Gender - General, Physical Identity - Physical (and Mental) Impairments	5/593	0.843

johnnyparx You're an undersized man. Because you are such an outlier and so much close to normal female height, a fight between you and any woman is going to be more equally matched. The majority of men in the world are considerable taller than you w a far larger wingspan and reach. So in a standup striking contest your odds are lower because you cannot keep a woman outside of your reach via outsized reach advantage. So you will always suffer in fights for that reason. Blame your parents and your genetics for that.Sparring routinely does not mean anything. If you practice something incorrectly or w bad technique it's almost as bad as not doing it at all. And you do not inspire confidence as a technically skilled fighter having been subdued by a petite female.As far as how fighters look, see Holy Holm, Ronda Rousey, Cyborg, Jinh Yu Frey, Thug Rose, Gina Carano. They have sculpted physiques, pronounced traps and sculpted biceps and triceps. Sounds like you lost to a woman w little musculature. This is a clear and unequivocal indictment of you and your small size and limited fighting ability rather than any insight into her skillset.You have my pity and my sympathy for being thrashed by a small, middle aged woman .	Woman	Gender - General	4/217	1.843
buffalo. black Apparently you're living in a bubble where my ability to inspire confidence is based solely upon my size. Thank you for proving your hypocritical points as well as your own femnazi point of view, upto and including an inability to see both sides of the coin. I lost to a More technically skilled fighter. I've fought and killed across four different combat zones from hand to hand opponents twice my height, and ones equal to or smaller than myself. johnnyparx You inspire neither confidence nor scorn based on your presentation of your claimed fighting experience. I am wholly indifferent to you. What's more, you fundamentally misunderstood my comment. I specifically said that in a standup striking contest between you and any woman , your odds of winning against said woman are lower than a normal sized man due to your inability to hold them at distance due to the reach advantage that would accrue to a normal sized man. Insecurity regarding your own height deficiency is a personal challenge you should seek to reconcile internally.	Woman	Gender - General	2/95	2.105

buffalo. black Are you military, or do you have nay military experience? You have a whole lot of supposed knowledge that has been debunked and proven wrong so many times. There is no such thing as a normal sized man or woman .Average height is an 'average' taken over a large population base. I also highly doubt you have met very many fighting Men or Women. In a stand up fight a 5ft tall woman can just as easily drop a 6ft tall man. and the same is true in a matchup of a 5ft tall man vs. a 6ft tall woman . I'm pretty secure in my height and my life. The only person who is claiming a deficiency here is you. johnnyparx Reach is a key aspect of fighting odds and success. You are of a below average height for men. Your odds of beating a man in a fight are low, all other extenuating factors held constant. You are close the average female height of 5'4'. So you fighting a woman would be an equal fight because of your diminutive stature. No woman should be physically touched or harassed or assaulted for the way that she dresses. But ppl ask Qs re: the things they see. ScarJo in a catsuit is a regular movie occurrence. ScarJo w her tits out is a regularly movie occurrence. Should she be harassed for that? No. Can good faith interviewers ask her Qs about her body which she puts front and center in many of her movies? Absolutely. k • • You cannot point to one statement where I bashed ScarJo. I literally said she was genetically gifted. She is not some great acting talent. She is not Daniel Day Lewis. She is not Amy Adams. She is not Joaquin Phoenix. Or Jessica Chastain. ScarJo will never win an Oscar or be nominated for one. She does not deserve ill-treatment or sexism . That said, because she almost exclusively chooses to act in movie roles where she is in a skintight bodysuit (Black Widow character, Ghost in the Shell) or her boobs are out (Match Point, Under the Skin) or she is the object of sexual obsession for men (Pearl Earring, Man Who Wasn't There) she gets asked about her sexuality or her figure, which she chooses to display nonstop. She's no different from Kim K being asked about her booty when she constantly takes butt selfies and has paparazzi shoot her ass on beaches. For a questioner to politely ask ScarJo re: her choice to repeatedly be a sexpot in movies is fair game. And not sexist or harassing. She's picking these roles.And if you are what you repeatedly do does that make ScarJo a set of boobs and a nice figure and some perfect pouty lips? I don't know. You tell me. k • • Dumb money role is not an insult of ScarJo, but rather the role itself and unrelated to her gender or sex appeal. She can go cry a river is just an unfeeling comment saying I don't feel bad since she is swimming in $$ and privilege, not an insult of her. Dumb spandex role is again not an insult of ScarJo, but the roles she's choosing. Sellout movie is literally an insult of the movie itself and not her personally. It does suggest that she cares more about money roles than quality acting roles, which is not sexist and applies to Tom Cruise and RDJ and dozens of men as much as it does ScatJo. She clearly is choosing roles based on the paycheck and not the quality of the film, the substance of the role, or the acting challenge required. Nothing wrong w pointing that out. Saying 'fuck Black Widow' is not an insult of the actor playing them, nor is it sexist as you seem to be implying. The 'bent over a knee and spanked' comment was clearly about the fact that a small 5'3' petite woman weighing probably 120 lbs is not taking out the guys ScarJo's character does in the Avenger's movies. She's a spy, not a superhero. Point being any normal sized man would own her physically, and psychologically. And she does choose acting roles where her character's and her own sexuality is one of or the only focal point. Whose choice is that? Is that my choice? Is it your's? You seem to conflate my insulting of her characters w an attack on her. She is a beautiful, interesting, though not highly intelligent actress who makes a lot of spandex and catsuit movies and she shows her figure and her tits quite often. the weirdest person you would ever meet As far as whether a 5’3” woman taking down a 6’2” man, the height is one consideration, the weight is another. The man is going to have anywhere from an 80 to 120 lb. weight advantage. The man is going to be taller, stronger, faster, heavier, and more aggressive than the woman . Could Rose Namajunas defeat Jon Jones in any fight. Of course not. The men that Black Widow fights in the movies are supposed to be trained military men and they present her as dispensing w them w a couple of flying punches and kicks It’s silliness. As for the term outlier, it is effectively a subjective word. Within a normal distibution, anything outside of one standard deviation in either direction could be considered an outlier by a person if that is their opinion. The term outlier has a spcific definition, but there is no definitive quantification of that definition. 1 standard deviation? 2? 3? Only the long tails? Black swan instances? The point being, the average male height in America is 5’9”. At 5’6” you are going to be very close to average female height, which makes you more of a woman than a man. ScarJo is 5’3”. If I was a male of that height I would kill myself. What’s the point?	Black, Woman	Ethnicity - Black, Gender - General	5/222	2.252
Green Miller Look I’m sorry for your security in yourself that you would kill yourself if you were 3 inches under average height. Male is a male regardless of height. I’m not sure what your point is.You cannot tell me that a height so close to the average barely, deviating from the average is an outlier. Sure, it’s subjective but an outlier is uncommon and rare. When you look at the data and see a point that is way off from the rest. 5’6” is not uncommon. A height so common can not be an outlier. I agree the average male male has an advantage over the average female in a fight. I am aware that Marvel is fiction I was talking purely on the scenario. I’m still convinced that 5’3” woman can beat a 6’2 man in a fight.	Common, Woman	Gender - General, Social Class - Working class	2/141	1.418

the weirdest person you would ever meet Uh, male is not a male regardless. If you're a male born w/o genitals. If you're under 5'6". If you're born w/o limbs. If you have brain deformity. If you lack financial wherewithal. Et cetera. There are myriad ways by which your life as a male in the American capitalist society will be less than. And falling below the average male height (5'9") is but one of them.You clearly do not understand the concept of objectivity vs. subjectivity. Relative closeness is a subjective consideration. The height at which you will live a less fulsome life is also a subjective consideration.I am 6'0" even, not 6'2" and I weight 185 lbs, and no woman has ever lived 5'4" or under who could take me in a fight. There are obese men who may have trouble moving, but even they could grab a small woman and crush her under their weight. This is a silly conversation, you're arguing that women can beat men in fights. Jean-Loïc De Jaeger That was my exact point!! Finally a reasonable, rational comment. I love ScarJo. She was the first crush I ever had on the big screen. (Well, she and Rosario Dawson.) She was also in a skintight bodysuit in Ghost in the Shell. And her characters are often notable for driving men crazy sexually. So a reasonable interviewer could ask about that. But I've been getting bashed for weeks in this comment section for what is a reasonable comment.The crazy thing is that I'm a feminist and a progressive person, I'm thoughtful re: women's issues, and I believe in women's equality. buffalo. black First of all, we don't live in that era now. Movies, shows and social media platforms play a huge role in our society. And yes that is an insult because unlike you, she has earned her value by being a role model to younger kids to be fierce. I might look like a stupid angsty teen ranting on a probably white 40 y/o male, but, as I said, those platforms play a bigger role today. Black Widow is an icon to younger people that will probably rule over in the next few years. She is an icon by being or playing a hero that younger girls could look up to. She radiates the energy of a fierce woman that can stand up for herself, and that's what we need right now. But I guess, I can't and won't force my opinion to you, because as I can see, we both have different taste. Just have a good day and I fucking hate you 3000	Black, Woman	Ethnicity - Black, Gender - General	3/165	1.818

LA X NYC It is not an insult to suggest that various media play a role in society. Neither is it insightful either. Like, duuuuh!! I'm not 40 years old or white either. ScarJo was actually my celebrity crush growing up. She's older than I am. And she's not anyone's idol just because she shows of her curves and her cleavage and her nipples on film. She's just an actress. You need better role models. Try Michelle Obama. Try Oprah Winfrey. Try Megan Rapinoe. Try Elizabeth Warren. Try Alexandria Ocasio-Cortez. Try Ilhan Omar. Try women who have actually done something worthwhile w their lives, who have changed the world, who aren't showing nip in every other film they do. How about even just idolizing good actors. ScarJo is a bad actress for one thing. That's a bigger crime than the trashy comic book movies she makes. And Black Widow is a stupid character. Totally unrealistic, the physics of the jumping and fighting she does makes zero sense. And in real life she would get beaten up but the 6'2' men she regularly fights in those marvel movies. ScarJo is 5'3' and 120 lbs. soaking wet. She would get bent over a chair and spanked by any normal sized man, to say nothing of even worse things they could do to her. buffalo. black Seriously man, ngl, but you make utterly no sense at all. Just look at what you've been commenting. I mean seriously, one moment you're telling us that she lacks intelligence and just a sexy lady making profit because she wears spandex or some shit, next thing you know you say, "Oh wait, HOW did I degrade ScarJo?! I absolutely have no idea what you're talking about?" Uhm, hell yeah you do, don't pull up that reverse card on us and play victim because it ain't gonna work. Okay? Okay. Lazy Potato I never said ScarJo lacks intelligence. I did say that she's beautiful and that she has sold out as an actress to spend a decade making dumb Marvel movies. It's not degrading her to state that opinion. And I have been victimized in this thread by ppl like you who have taunted and harassed and harangued me for weeks and weeks and weeks. It's brutal. I feel attacked as a male. There is no space for a feminist male ally to be thoughtful and provide a male perspective on things w/o being attacked incessantly. I'm a 4th wave feminist. I support sex-positivity and women's empowerment. Please accept me as I am. Also, ScarJo does have a great chest. And I think Sydney Sweeney on the new TV show, Euphoria, will be the new ScarJo. buffalo.black i can oddly enough follow your position, but the reality of it is that any interviewer can literally choose not to ask those questions about her body and sex appeal. You seem to be acting like it is a necessity to address those characteristics of herself and her role when they are present, but truthfully anyone could choose to ask her any other question literally. You may not intend for those types of questions to come off in a derogatory form, but interpretation is an ambiguously subjective thing and they can be interpreted in that light to be uncalled for. Imagine you yourself in her role on your way to an interview hoping to talk about different aspects of the movie, but end up being questioned the most about that simple aspect of sexuality and nothing else- it would be legitimately uncalled for. If you cannot seem to get past the sexuality aspect at all, that is something worth figuring out in all honestly as it's truly concerning to hear	Black, Nothing, Sex	Age - Youngsters, Ethnicity - Black, Gender - General	3/171	1.754

Yessica Gacha Never changed my words. I actually said she plays sexy and sexualized characters. That is her choice. You may choose to support her choice to sexualize herself. sanjana krishna the more people talk about it the more they think they'll make the shoot i.e. if in a group setting men can 'mold' a woman 's thinking into how she fits this categories then they've won. If they can place a sense of discomfort and competition between women then they've won. I remember specifically a boy (older than me though) in which he would try and make me uncomfortable and self conscious by implying or explicitly saying the other woman was prettier, better; how I needed makeup and they didn't. I will admit little young self absorbed:self conscious=ungrateful me believed him and I would dislike or let it drain me. However, I learned is not their fault. Similarly when a man found me attractive even if they had a woman . So, now I learned how to reply to him/others: praising myself AND the other girl/ woman . When friends or men introduce their girl wife I pay attention and respect to her by elevating not just her physical beauty also any attributes I noticed or have been mentioned by him. I'll admit it is hard at Times not to compare yourself to others and how easy to take self pity by putting others down. However it all boils down to ungratefulness and not knowing oneself's strengths. No one's really talking about Taylor so I will. She's played a huge part on representing feminism as a celebrity. I'm not a huge Taylor fan, I might sing along to some of her songs and that's it. But I think everything she said here made perfect sense, and I admire her greatly for doing what she does even though she gets a lot of hate from people because of her songs. She's a brave, strong woman , who has to deal with rumours, secrets, the media and hate, and the fact that she's still speaking up for herself when people approach her with sexist (or other inappropriate) remarks is really admirable. Same goes to Cardi B, and literally, any celebrity (BOTH MEN AND WOMEN) who has to deal with sexist shit because people (BOTH MEN AND WOMEN AGAIN) can't get around the idea that values are changing, and that things which didn't seem appropriate before have become that much less 'abnormal' and that sooner or later, these things WILL change, whether they like it or not. Change is in the air. Change is gonna happen. I pray it happens.	Woman	Gender - General	1/189	0.529
this old but the point still stands. Taylor represents the most niche pretty white feminism there is. Easily can confuse the criticism of attitude of other women as "beating each other down" eg her and Nicki Minaj. She barely talks about poc, barely speaks about any other type of feminism. Fair enough but don't think she represents everything about it.	Old	Age - Over 65s	1/61	1.639
tee. r. well as a white famous woman I don't think people with different experiences would appreciate her speaking on their behalf. She'd get more backlash than do any good I think. Valentina Balbuena So you think because she's white she can't speak up about black lives matter or poc trans being killed? You most definitely can talk about these sort of issues and you most definitely can raise up the people who are involved or know more. Instead, she surrounds herself with pretty model friends and Lena Dunham who is absolutely vile. Yes, she represents a type of feminism, but it's still a pretty girl, type feminism. I'm not going to start a debate with you. It's her life, and she decided to stand up against sexism , that's it. We all have different opinions and things we prioritize, and as a famous, pretty celebrity she's doing her part. Give it a rest. All lives matter. I'm not here to criticise, I'm here to appreciate. And she's done a lot more than we could possibly do, as the no ones we are. If you feel that deeply about the issue just write your own comment about it. NarpsHD It's not that women like make up or not. They're are all not attached/grasping to it like some men or women. They can like make up and can use it. They can hate it but still use it. They can love or hate and survive without it. It's that you shouldn't generalise and make assumptions towards any gender as if everyone is the same in how they see the make up and its role in relevance to their lives. Some love it and use it some don't. Some need it some don't. They still can have it but they all don't go into Analysis paralysis and panic with their relationship with it if things go wrong. NarpsHD. Sorry, this is going to be a little long.Okay, first the 9 out of 10 women guesstimate you gave is pretty inaccurate (at least in my life). I have two big groups of friends (around 50 in one and 35 in another - pretty much all girls). In each, only about three wear makeup regularly. We just have stuff to do; work, school, dance, etc. I like makeup but I don't wear it a lot. Second, she's not trying to say she's powerful. She asked if that's what women would decide between, which isn't that bad in itself. But then she says she can go many hours without her phone, in which the men seem shocked and one says ' I don't believe it', which is so condescending. Then when she explains why she can, another man says 'listen and learn ladies' quite loudly, and then she respond with 'boys learn'. And then she says that boys and girls can all learn. Absolutely nothing in that was her saying she was a powerful woman . She was showing that men and women are on the same level.Lastly, you said everyone knows that women need makeup and men as much as men need women and cars. None of the women I know need makeup. I'm a typical girly girl and I don't need or use it often. As for the men, we're open to them, but a lot of people I know have divorced or are in unhappy relationships. The happiest most successful adult in my life is a woman who has never married, but doesn't need a man to complete her. The charity work she does is very fulfilling. She's had relationships, but they ended with her feeling very controlled and one threatening suicide if she left him.I urge you to listen to women and actually talk to them, not put them in a box of a powerful woman feminist stereotype, which you seem to dislike about us	Nothing, Woman	Age - Youngsters, Gender - General	4/332	1.205

bts blackpink Sure I get your point, but ignoring something bad can sometimes make this worse. Let me put you into an example, such as highschool, there will be some people talking shit to you, and you ignore it. Sure there will be a possibility that it may stop and get bored, but it could also fuel their desires to hurt you more, and probably in a worse way since it will give them the mindset that you're too passive to stand up for yourself and take advantage of it. Which isn't gonna be good for both your feelings, and it could encourage the bully to think that "its okay" since some people are just too passive to stand up for themselves, and take advantage. Sexism, racism, homophobia , misandry/mysogyny, pedophilia, and many other issues are something that we should be aware of since it could make things worse. Idfk why people can be such jerks, but people should be taught that these things are just plain wrong from such a young age so they become more aware when they get older. Krystall E Somewhat. The whole mens voices being oppressed thing was a blatant prod . I know it's a trigger to people like you.You misunderstand (which is expected). I just believe men are growing weaker by choice. We are simply too afraid of being seen as one way or the other. So we act in socially acceptable ways that "respect" women. Which happens to contradict with our nature.Not saying that against women at all also. I think women are stepping up their game because we set up validating systems and ideals. However, I know some very intriguing outliers that earn what they keep. And they dislike these trends as much as I do.You can pretend men are happier the way things are now. But what you fail to recognize is this: The men who aren't masculine and buy into female empowerment by imperitive, often fall into isolation by female demand. That's how you create incels and toxic masculinity.Feel free to guilt me as much as you like, though. All you are doing is proving my point.	Prod	Religious Identity - Protestant	1/179	0.559

Phill Simmer I understand what you are saying about men growing weaker, and being unhappy with the change in our system, but I'd like to point out that during the time men were happy, women were unhappy. I've read this whole conversation and respect you for your use of logic and the way you two handled this. What I fail to understand is why it has to be one or the other? Why must men be weak if women are strong? Why do we have to trade one's happiness for the other? Why can't we both get what we want?Your comment actually really surprised me; I never thought that good decent men would be truly unhappy with strong women. (I can understand the rude ones though.)I'm not an extreme feminist, and I'm aware that western women aren't oppressed. All I want from western men is their respect. I.e., no:Cat callingInappropriate comments/questionsRape/threatsCondescension/demeaningRudeness, etc.No treating women as if they are shallow.Acknowledging their accomplishments with their name attached instead of their husbands.These are simply matters of respect, and none of them are masculine, they are just rude. I don't see how you can't be masculine and allow a women to be strong; all the avengers cast do it with Scarlet Johansson. They are clearly ready to stick up for her, and support her when she sticks up for herself.I genuinely want men and women to have good relationships and just be happy, and stop fighting. I am a "strong" woman, but I want to be married one day, and to a strong man, at that. I have nothing against men, and I don't want to sacrifice their happiness for mine. What can I do as a strong women for you and other men, to allow you to have your masculinity as well? How can we coexist? What do you personally want? Not Sure Yet Thank you for the respectful reply. And I feel like your heart and mind are in the right place. You are looking for a compromise between both parties. Which is rare imo. Most people really just want to satisfy the primal urge to pwn the other side (me included a lot of times).I think we should allow women to be as strong as they want. Women are still individuals afterall. I have a deep philosphy that every individual deserves the right to explore their potential. But nature allows the female stereotype to be more socially driven. With men, we are driven by primal urges.The trick is not to oppress anyone while not giving into bias. The other trick is finding methods we can all agree on. Women typically value comfort and safety and men typically value the thrill of practice. Outliers still apply of course. And I will get to that in a bit. But there has to be a give and take for how seemingly human we allow ourselves to be. The bitter fact that nature will never let us forget is that we are nothing more than sophisticated animals. We prey on something to survive. Whether its plants or animals, or other people on a social level. It's in our nature to both destroy and create.But civilization now dictates that we oppress hateful tendencies. Which factors into a mans drive to a certain degree. If you notice, the angriest SJWs are feminist men. My pseudo-theory implies displacement of hateful energy.Naturally, outliers with the most problems make the loudest outcry (Incels, feminists, LGBT, etc.). This is natural. Every majority has its outcasts. Civilization literally needs to isolate outliers to incentivize productivity. Which is why we have a two party system. The majority blames one another, while the most isolated of each extreme is frequently challenged. In that challenge, lies the most productive individuals. Which worked for a bit. But if male potential is capped, you wont see productivity. You see raised pressure and more explosions of problems.I can't speak for women on this. But I think men need the kind of challenge that glorifies our ego. Because what we are facing right now is the kind of challenge that attempts to erase masculine instinct under the guise of comfort and safety. All we are doing is provoking the weaker males into more hostile tendencies. Sorry to say, a functioning system also needs to consider the interests of its most extreme outcasts. Not just because if their productive potential, but destructive as well. They are the rogue elements that get people killed or change the world. And they are most typically males that no one ever acknowledged beforehand.I get that women are unhappy also. And I get that the ideal of a weaker male means less chances of toxic behavior on a day to day basis. But at the end of the day, mans toxicity needs a outlet. Or else we take it out on women. Especially the ones that make us feel the most insecure or oppressed in our behavior.You made one compelling point, about female inventions and their lack of praise. I think the female stereotype is good at working under a system or with systems. Men usually have to establish systems out of discovery or find notivation to follow them. As much as I respect our progress on the matter. Productivity is far more complicated because mass shootings are more worthy of media attention than the countless inventions we made for peace. Sorry to say, men aren't praised for having ideas or

Phill Simmer (Reply was to long I don't know if this sent multiple times—sorry)Coming back to women wanting respect: you've probably heard the old remark, "now go make me a sandwich."Tbh, if a random person on the street just asked me for a sandwich, I would go make them one, because why not? Kindness is a good thing. If my boyfriend/partner wanted a sandwich, and he just said, "man I'd give anything for a sandwich right now," I'd go make him that sandwich, because I care for that person, and I have generosity in my soul. But for some reason, that line: go make me a sandwich, is hurtful beyond reason, to me personally. I don't know why, but it's the phrase that bothers me most; I'd prefer verbal street harassment to that. It's a complete disregard of a person and their feelings. Its essentially saying, go F yourself, but in the meanest most degrading way possible. It's kicking a man that is down, and it may be just a joke, but I find it extremely offensive. That line probably sums up any issues I have with (sexist) men.Edit: I can't speak for all women, but I don't want men to change themselves. Men are awesome (not to sound weird lol).Some women really do just want to be on top. Some are selfish, and want to be 'better" than men. Many are racist. I've heard a woman say it was her God-given right to cheat. Please don't take them seriously. They are not feminists.What I want is for men to change the way they see women. Value them for being people, and not for how they look. I know most/many men aren't misogynists, at least not intentionally, but I think our society as a whole needs to change, women included."The trick is to not oppress anyone while giving in to the bias. The other trick is finding methods we can all agree on."I agree wholeheartedly. And I think women should respect men just as much as I think men should respect women. The women who choose to be angry and hateful may or may not accomplish things, but killing hate with hate ... I think it often causes more hate. (Edit: although taking things nicely often doesn't get anywhere either. I guess it has to be balanced.)The sad thing is that we raise our kids in this mess. Every generation is a fresh and innocent chance to start again. These children didn't do the things we/our parents did. They should be brought up to work together; educated on racism, sexism, whateversism, and taught that it was wrong. They could be a chance to start over, but that won't happen, because we're too busy fighting each other to even consider it.The ironic thing is that the same thing keeps happening over and over. Someone always finds some group to be rude to just because they can, and then they retaliate, and we learn that we should respect a new group of people. Guess what kids, we should respect colored people, white people, old people, young people, male people, female people, queer people, fat people, AND thin people. Parents, respect your kids. Kids, you also respect your parents. If we made it a policy to just respect ALL people, we wouldn't have to go through it every time.To conclude this: It will be hard to find methods we all agree on. I personally say: be respectful, and be good. Can't go wrong with that. There are too many fights going on at once... people trying to fight sexism that isn't even there end up disrespecting someone, which turns into a whole new fight	Colored, Fat, Gender, Make me a sandwich, Old, Queer, Racism, Racist, Sexism, Thin, Weird, Woman	Age - Over 65s, Ethnicity - Black, Ethnicity - General, Gender - Female intelligence, Gender - General, Physical Identity - Physical (and Mental) Impairments, Physical Identity - Physical Features, Sexual Identity - General, Sexual Identity - Male homosexuality	18/731	2.462

Not Sure Yet Wow, you are by far my most favorite opponent in political conversation. You are a believer and you have taken human nature to heart. From what you are showing me, you are person worth respecting.On the sandwich argument. I can can empathize for that. And as much as I want to advocate freedom of speech, I know how being percieved as lesser is disheartening. And as much as I want to say "forget those people, they're assholes", that just keeps the wheel turning. I can see why you chose this argument. The worst thing about it is that there is no real solution present... Except in ways that risk escalation.I can understand that you want to change male perception towards women. And that will happen in time and with practice. But imo, where the lines need fixing is not in the genders, its in the social status. Compare the sex life of a well endowed 30 yr old to a sexually stunted 22 year old. Who is more likely to satisfy a woman? Sex is surprisingly relevant to being a male outcast.From my experience also, men resent being told what to do. But give us a reason to care and masculine force can be directed. The best place to start with men is at the scariest center of our core. The parts that make us insecure about women. Reduce sexual abrasion between the genders, you reduce the need for sexual abuse.Respecting all people is a difficult thing. In my experiemce, I can only love and respect so many people at a time. I literally had to acknowledge my inner asshole to function more sanely. And I think this is common among men. We romanticize love because we don't feel it naturally. We either have certain gifts, find our own methods or find ways to compensate. Worse over, many of those methods or ways have to be misogynistic. We literally have to objectify women in order to communicate the right cues for sex. Sure, we can respect women and befriend them. But that need for love is so closely related to sex, its intoxicating. Those of us that get desperate, we tend to be the worst. Disappointment encourages us to disregard womens needs and focus on our own physical desires.The only point I disagree with you on is gender neutrality. Personally, I don't think we should have gender roles, so long as we understand what each role requires. If a woman can carry 200+ lbs and wants to be a firefighter, you have my support. She may not be conventionally attractive, due to potential masculine features. But that is no fault of the hers. Nature vs. Nurture traded her strengths. But compare her to a male stereotype of brawn > brain. They may be intimidated because such strengths are meant to attract women. You can try to change them, but going against their nature will only make them resent you. Unfortunately, norms vs outliers is far more natural than we will ever want.You can post essays btw. In time, I might slow down. But right now, I like discussion. We are both feeding each other rational explanations of our opposing sides. It's healthy imo.	Common, Gender, Old, Sex, Sexual, Woman	Age - Over 65s, Gender - General, Social Class - Working class	13/542	2.399

Florida1213 hmmmmmmYou may have a point, but what I think you missed is that although it is true that men are discouraged to express their feelings irl, it isn't in songwriting. It's always been normal, perhaps even encouraged, to express your feelings and share your experiences in songwriting. I personally think that the fact that Taylor is able to take something like that and turn it into a masterpiece (or at least something that brings her glory in her career) overshadows everything else. Because what other people fail to understand is that it is when your emotions are at its strongest that you get the most inspiration for things like songwriting, and Taylor's weaknesses in life seems to be that she is too "emotional", right? Cemil Öztekin There are songs about loving someone who doesn't love you back that doesn't call them "mad woman , bad woman " or compare them to the devil. Is this video ironic? Or is this just some dumbass SJW video?I got the feeling its for real so let me say: the same questions are asked to male celebrities about muscles, cars, their sex life, how tough they are etc.Taylor swift, saying your music is annoying and always about the same lame subject has nothing to do with sexism, just be creative sing about some other shit from time to time. They don't say that about Ed Sheeran because he DOES sing about other stuff.Really I get some victim SJW vibes from this video. I'm all for equality but some women scream sexism at the weirdest shit. Yes men treat women different than men, but thats in our nature. I'm sorry both male and female have their role in this world, you notice it with literally every animal species, males show off or fight to impress the females, with humans men get the attention by flirting (which is now made sexist while its perfectly normal). If we weren't different there wouldn't be 2 genders now huh? No both man and woman have their own roles in 'the circle of life' so they get treated different. Biology is a son of a bitch right?And I'm not saying women should be treated less than men or that its fair to discriminate them, but men will always look at women with some sort of sexy attractive twist to it. Same goes for women looking at men. Because believe it or not, the different genders exist totally based on reproducing, as for any other animal species. And since men got no 'mating period' and can have sex any time a year, they will always have sex with women on their mind.And of course I don't mean women should be treated like sex slaves with no opinon who are only good for making kids but I'm saying that thats the reason why we treat each other different and why women get questions about their body and beauty and all that (not saying its fair, but hey it is what is) Now with most animals the male is the dominant gender, the pack leader, the 'alpha' so thats no exception for humans (not saying women can't lead but mostly men are in charge because well... nature) I mean women want independent strong men who are confident for a reason. Scream sexism all you want, but this is just pure our nature, our biology. This behaviour goes back from the time we lived in caves. Sometimes we forget it, but we are just products of planet Earth. I get that we developed our way of thinking more through the years, but still we can't get rid of that part of the nature inside of us. This was a long comment, I'm sorry but I wanted to share my point of view on this subject. Men and women should totally have the same chances, oportunties and rights in life. But asking men to not talk about women in a sexual way is like asking the ecosystem to change.

Ok so one day when I had been feeling body confident and like an amazing female, I decided I'd take some pictures of myself in the big mirror that we have at my house. I was wearing black short-shorts that were hidden under my hoodie, black socks that went a little over my knees, white and black high top converse (they matched with the hoodie) and an over-sized light grey hoodie and it would continuously slide down my shoulder a lot and would leave, from about the middle of my bicep to my collarbone, visible and instead of fighting with it to keep it on my shoulder I just let it be. Well my mom, being the nosy bitch she is, decided she was going to invade my privacy and go through my phone, and she saw the photos that I had taken of myself when I had been feeling powerful and beautiful, and for the first time in a very long time, I loved my body and how I looked; I was completely satisfied with myself that day.Well my mother thought otherwise, she had told me that BECAUSE MY "JACKET WAS HANGING OFF OF MY SHOULDER I had looked like a slut. WEEEEEEELL then. TypicalRussianDude there is nothing wrong with the comments made in that video. Yes, there are a few 'men' that feel threatened by the slightest breeze of comments that aren't worshipping them. I watched the first 3 mins. of this. Some thoughts.... yes, there are too many women who are 'addicted' to makeup...who feel that they 'don't look good' without it. This is bad. Makeup should be viewed like any accessory or adornment....as an embellishment. But not as a necessity before you can be seen by the rest of the world. There is nothing WRONG with our naked, natural, unadorned faces, yet far too many women buy into the BS fed us by the beauty 'industry'...that we have so many things on our faces to 'correct'. I also note that while it's 'cool' for young women to call themselves 'feminists', they are often hypocrites. Take the clip of that Taylor Swift video where they are all dressed in sexy black 'female warrior' outfits complete with high-heeled boots, fully made-up, etc. Who's kidding who? Far too many women continue to see themselves as objects, then call themselves a feminist out of the other side of their mouths. They then say it's about having 'choices'...but yet it's interesting how often their (ahem) 'choice' is to dress like a sex object. (Halloween is coming up soon. Let's see how many 'feminist' young women make a 'choice' to wear a 'sexy' costume, versus a non-sexy one. LOL. Many women are still very Confused.) Women shouldnt sexualise themselves because children might see but because it's highly damaging to everyone. It makes men lose sympathy and compassion for women and makes them think it's Okay to treat them like objects (because they portray themselves as objects). It also makes women feel devalued and only important because of their body. They did a study with a large group of males playing different video games and the guys that played gta were found to have less sympathy for women depicted as a victim. gowon's wife First of all, feminists come in a huge variety of opinions and stances. If you met one feminist, you met one feminist. Not all. There are even feminists who are against abortion for different reasons.Being pro-choice is a common feminist value, but that's true for anyone who values progressive ideals. You can be feminist and against abortion, they are not mutually exclusive. But.. like.. why would you be against people's right to autonomy?	Common	Social Class - Working class	1/76	1.316
Eh, your inaction is in fact killing someone though. Anyway, pregnancy can actually be very dangerous for women and of course you are not losing an organ - you are giving your whole body for 9 months to incubate something that won't even have a brain before 34 weeks. Do you even think rape and incest victims should be forced to carry to term? What about those who are knowingly carrying a terminal fetus? How sick! There are nuances in this, you know...Of course preventative conceptions and family planning should be more available. It's not like women are actively going out with the purpose of having an abortion. A dead person has more bodily autonomy than a pregnant woman - it's absurd.	Woman	Gender - General	1/123	0.813

There are very few ‘man hating’ (non real , as you say) feminists. The problem is that people (men and women) use personal comments and attribute them to a movement that is bigger than any one comment or person. Then it’s turned on the movement of women and men fighting for equality. It’s really offensive and misogynistic actually. To decide what women can and can’t say, what they feel in their hearts and what they choose to do with that. One of the most affected parties that women fight for is homosexual men, for example. But no one seems to care about that because they are seen as ‘feminine’....it’s a cycle of nonsense. Honestly, if you all want to fight about what constitutes a real or fake feminist, go for it. gowon’s wife Hey, I wanna say something quick. The reason why some people (people who know facts) want abortions to be legal it’s because: kids in poverty would reduce, mental health for a traumatize and violated women and because the baby is either not going to make it or might kill the mother. Also... People tend to say to just give it to adoption but there’s almost no one helping orphanages and some kids never get adopted. There is also the time when women entered crisis and tried to abort themselves, making themselves infertile or getting an infection and dying. There is so much more behind abortion that just ”killing an innocent”. I know it’s bad as it is but think of the bigger consequences that brings. Ashley Martinez here are 5 reasons:1: men work longer hours-a study shows that men are more likely to work extra hours than women2: men choose higher paying jobs-men are more likely to choose higher paying jobs even the ones that women are better at like being a vet. They are jobs that look for women but sometimes men take the jobs because most men are likely to compete for them.3: men are more competitive-if a woman and a man are at work the man is more likely to compete and show his boss how good he is than the woman . 4: men are more likely to die-men work more dangerous jobs and this doesn't count the military and even if the military's were added men would still have the higher death count.5: men are more likely to ask for raise-men are more likely to ask their boss for raises and negotiate than women.6: men work on sick days more-when a man and a woman are sick, the man is more likely to go to work sick than the woman , women usually stay at home most men don't.7: men take less holidays-women mostly take holidays every 10 months and men every 12.8: men retire at older ages-In the 60s men retired at 65 while women retired at 50 now men are more likely to retire at least 5 years after a woman . And they are many more if you don't believe me you could research it if you want to. Another thing if companies could actually pay women less for their gender why don't they just hire women?? Well simple they don't, they don't pay them less because of their gender they pay them less cause all the things I listed above and maybe more, oh yeah and all the things that I listed don't have to do with toxic masculinity, as you can see it's mostly women fault so how about instead of feminist blaming everything on men how about they start changing themselves if they truly want to change. OK this is toxic, if an attractive male famous person remains single for a long time like Rihanna he would be asked the same exact question as her, it makes no difference. Men actors do a muscle diet when they are playing important parts in movies like Superman,Wolverine,Captain America and such if the role requires it.So obviously women will be asked about their diet since when playing any recognized important character in a movie its gonna be mainly focused on sex appeal and athletic prowess for them to be actually relevant.That's how things work. I agree that most men and women are not like that. Only a small percentage of women claim to be feminists because they can see how it has deteriorated into the man-hating/man-blaming movement that it now is. I don't like the whole 'man-splaining' thing that sounds sexist. It could be you don't understand something and a guy happens to say it slower then all of a sudden he's sexist but if a woman did it to another woman or a man she's just telling him/her what to do. Not saying some guys do say it in a disrespectful way isn't sexist because they are but I'm saying its dumb .	Dumb, Woman	Gender - General, Physical Identity - Physical (and Mental) Impairments	3/72	4.167
I think man-splaining is mostly about a man explaining something about a woman who's more qualified than him on the subject but he just assumes he knows better when it's objectively not the case. A man explaining something to a woman if it's not condescending is not man-splaining x) it's just an advice. For example a man doctor giving advice to a teacher woman about what medication to take would be really welcome but a man teacher trying to explain to a doctor woman what medication would be best for him would be man-splaining. Yeah I know it sounds weird but trust me there are some men that actually do that.	Weird, Woman	Gender - General, Physical Identity - Physical (and Mental) Impairments	5/111	4.505

Irandeep Grewal I'm not 'spreading hate'. I'm just stating an opinion. You need to learn to accept the fact that people are allowed to like/dislike music... yes, even music that you enjoy!! My opinion is NOT fact, I am very aware - but that doesn't mean I'm not allowed to state it with conviction. You may think that your statements aren't opinion based, but ofc they are. You're using your opinion as a juggernaut, literally telling me that I am 'spreading hate' because I disagreed with you. I don't hate Taylor Swift, or her fans... But I still think most of her new music is crappy and I still think that's why she gets so much heat. As a feminist, I stated this opinion because I don't like the idea of something being tarnished as sexist if it may not necessarily be sexist, when there are so many REALLY sexist issues that we already need to deal with. SOOOO many women write songs about their relationships, practically every artist does it. Think about it, Taylor has been doing it for years. In the old days she probably didn't receive half of the critique that she does for it now. PERSONALLY, I put that down to a decline in quality of her music and the fact that she literally feeds off of this controversy. Sexism is about patterns, and there is a lack of repetition in this 'pattern'. No other female singers are constantly bashed for writing songs about their exes, just her. There has to be a reason for this. Just because she is successful, doesn't mean that any claims that her quality of music has diminished are groundless. Stop telling me how to think, it's seriously annoying.	Old, Sexism	Age - Over 65s, Gender - General	2/288	0.694
Irandeep Grewal ah, I cannot be bothered to go back and forth with you. My comment wasn't nice, but the good thing about music is that taste in music is objective and so I am free to criticise whichever music I please and I don't have to be nice about it. You're missing the point, you've missed the point of this conversation, you've missed the point of this video. This is bigger than Taylor Swift, this is about claiming that there is sexism without any grounds. Sex	Gender - General	1/56	1.786
Is the Rihanna statement based on facts or gut feeling? Taylor Swift is known for being the one that writes songs about ex-boyfriends. This is how I know her even though I don't listen to her music, you can find it bad or not. The same way Ed Sheeran is known as the ginger or many people refer to other people as "the nerd" or "the one with freckles", etc. It is how we describe people or reference people. Sometimes it is ironic and sometimes people really don't put much effort into it. But calling it sexism , like in that specific case is wrong and also dangerous because using that word too often in the wrong context is kind of inflationary. I can see how she might not like it, but don't call it sexism , that makes it worse.	Sexism	Gender - General	2/139	1.439
Did you just read what you wrote?Taylor is only known about writing about her exes because shes a woman , men have been doing it forever and none of them have been labelled as such, but once a woman does it, its all people can talk about.as for rihanna its not a gut feeling... watch the video again, even on panels there is a difference between the questions the men are asked and the ones directed to the women. men are asked about their work and women get the relationship, diet questions. there is another one of rihanna as part of a movie panel, telling off a journo for asking her about rumours about her dating life instead of asking her about her work in the film. It's great when people identify as feminists, however, I have to say I respect people who identify as egalitarians more. Feminism solely advocates women's rights (which IS huge), but also limited. Egalitarians believe in the doctrine that ALL people are Equal and deserve the same Rights and Opportunities. It is not constrained by social biases like race , class, gender , sexuality, religion, etc. And the best part in concerning feminism is that if you are an egalitarian you are by default a feminist too. +maxebanana Not really no. For sure women in third world countries have it way harder than us that's just a fact. But we're still not quite there in term of social equality and having an equal amount of problems. There's still a lot of what I call casual sexism in society. For example in the psychological struggle of a lot of women. We're a bit hardwired to think and do things a certain way, because of our education in this culture. It's not some really hard and vicious thing like it could be in a third world country but there's a lot of time when we would impulsively act one way and then take a step back and just think "wtf why do I do that. I don't need to do that, it's not my place it's just stupid". With kids for example or with cleaning, just responsibilities as a whole. Even if people don't come up to us and tell us to do them or to take them we just tend to because a part of us think that we should. There's still some social behavior between men and women in everyday life that is a testimony of cultural sexism so I really wouldn't say both gender have an equal amount of problems. At least if we talk to gender related problems because of course a black man with for example disabilities, a lot of trauma and an unstable income is probably gonna have more problem than a healthy white girl with a rich investor dad. But yeah I do think culturally there's still a lot of things that are fucked and that I hope will be fix because it comes from society and especially our education from the past so maybe our daughter will have that equality that we seek but it's hard to have it for ourselves with the education we got. I mean it just makes sense. Progress is going fast but we're talking about thousands of years of inequality and sexism here it's not gonna fix itself in one hundred years. honestly i don't mind feminism but those woman and girls who say shit like,'men deserve to have periods!' and like,'all men are perverts and predators!' like that's not feminism there that's sexism towards men.and no, that's not the message i got from this video. i just wanted to make it clear that some women (or men) use feminism to their advantage and use it for all the wrong reasons.and honestly there should be something that supports men too. like not saying that men and women should fight but men should have a term that supports their sex too just like feminism, and i'm not aware of any terms as such, yet. i'm just saying that this video makes it seem like all women only have problems to deal with when it comes to equality, i mean that's not the message that i got but it did come across a few times. men also have problems, like always being claimed as rapists, and if a man hits on a girl he's just aiming to get laid or is being perverted. idk, i'm not even a man/boy so i can't say for their sex but some people just use the term feminism to throw around like it's nothing . I always laugh so hard when people are like "FEMINISM IS CANCER" or "WE DON'T NEED FEMINISM IN THE WESTERN WORLD" just because women aren't being sold off to 50 year old men at age 12 doesn't mean we have equality. For example, what is the biggest insult you can say to someone in middle school? "You run like a girl!" or "Don't be such a girl!" "Girl" is literally used as an insult by young kids, because thats how they're raised. And when they are older, they go from "don't be such a girl" to "Don't be such a pussy".And before I see any comments being like "I sUpPorT fEmiNisM jUsT nOt FeMinAzi" theres no such thing as "modern feminism" or "feminazi". A word doesn't change meaning, it means the same thing it did 70 years ago. A feminist is someone who wants men and women to be equals, nothing else. Someone who is a "man hater" or whatever the fuck you wanna call it, ARE NOT FEMINISTS. They're Chauvinists. Why is that so hard to understand?? If a nazi said "I'm a nazi , but I don't mind jews" does that mean that " nazi " suddenly means people who don't mind jews? No. It means the exact same thing it did before, cause a word can't change meaning because of people who misuse it. Man-haters aren't feminists, so every time you use feminism as an insult or make fun of it, you're not only making fun of the thousands of child brides being sold off and r*ped by grown men every single day, you're also being straight up sexist. The problem with Taylor Swift saying all of that stuff is first, Bad Blood... and second of all, most of the guys in her genre (she mentioned Ed Sheeran and Bruno Mars) don't make it obvious who they're talking about to "get revenge" on the person or to be vicious. Her lyrics always talk about what the other person did wrong and it comes off really aggressive. I was a HUGE Taylor Swift fan, so no hate at all, but over time and with all of the interviews she has speaking on the subject of sexism with her lyrics, I've realized that (for me at least) that it has nothing to do with sexism and everything to do with how she portrays herself in the media. Because last time I checked you're the one who said that you were commenting on their profile picture, not comment, because the word 'army' has nothing to do with what the person was saying. And it doesn't matter if you said army or something else bts related, it's the same thing. I'll give another example. It's like being at a funeral then talking about how you think McDonalds is so great. It's not right for the situation and you could wait another time. Now m not that mad that you said 'army.' I'm just kinda annoyed that you still brought up bts again after the person told you not too.	Nothing	Age - Youngsters	1/117	0.855

I think what I loved about it is this: Men and woman in hollywood and in general should be asked the weight questions. Some people are interested, maybe because it shows dedication or because they want to get fit. So i think if someone doesn't want to be asked those kinds of questions then okay. Anne handled this well. She answered and when that was all that he seemed interested then she responded (to me) very appropriately.	Woman	Gender - General	1/77	1.299

Taylor taking about sexism ... SPARE ME. The critics are not about women sharing and writing songs about their past relationships... They are about her taking profit of FAKE pr relationships, especially when it's implied a certain song about a man who's actually gay and forced in a closet (and it's been more than one of her ex-es). So it's not a sexism issue at all. It is an issue of taking profit of a man's closet for your own benefits and selling your music. Hahahaha I think these kind of Women deserves this shit(ones who fuck around, who show vulgarity on TV) Modern woman shows more skin than a man does. Adele and Lorde also write about their exes, and nobody judge them for that. People, the media, as well as the critics, praised them immensely. So to some extend, It's not always about the gender , I guess.	Gender, Nobody	Age - Youngsters, Gender - General	2/37	5.405
I think maybe because women like Taylor, Ariana and Selena have a more sexy concept, and a lot of people bash on (female) artists like that even though nothing is wrong with it. In this video some talked about how women should stop fighting each other claiming you cannot be feminist when showing skin, while others (not in this video, but on the internet) say as a feminist you don't need to show skin. While actually feminism should be that women and men can decide for themselves what they want and should be accepted (as long as they are not hurting others). I mean, we want to fight for equality as a group, but some people are just trying to shame and hurt other women while claiming to be feminist :(Nothing	Age - Youngsters	1/131	0.763
Marie L Lmao but bad blood did not tear anyone down. The song literally just said that there was bad blood between her and another girl which was how she was feeling at the time. It did not bash or belittle any woman . So your point is not valid or accurate.	Woman	Gender - General	1/51	1.961
Bree Elso not really. She never ever said anyone's name in the song and was not publicized that way at all. It only states that there was bad blood between the two women. She never tore down any woman . Taylor Swift and every other artist writes about events in their lives. Just because she preaches women empowerment does not mean she isn't allowed to have a disagreement with another woman .	Woman	Gender - General	2/70	2.857
I don't think she was trying to bring Katy down because she's a woman . She's had issues with Kanye West too and she's written multiple tracks about it. One one in particular was promoted by her even more than Bad Blood.	Woman	Gender - General	1/41	2.439
Also guys don't be so sure it isn't about Katy. Ms Perry herself said she believes it's about her, and even if it isn't it's still about some girl! Hey I can be petty af, if I could id write a song too but I wouldn't in an interview also say how I would never tear another woman down. Bihh pleaseee! This is the same woman who writes music bad mouthing her exes so why wouldn't she do it about Katy. If she wants to then hey more power to her, but don't lie in an interview. It's the equivalent of if she said 'I would never speak badly about an ex in my music'. I can't	Woman	Gender - General	2/120	1.667

Marie L she's not lying. She never said she wouldn't speak badly about an ex. She said woman . Unless she's a lesbian which she isn't her exes and woman are two different topics. And if you actually listen to her music she dosent even bash her exes she only talks about what she's feeling at that particular moment in time when she was with that person. Sometimes it's bad sometimes it's good. Relationships aren't just unicorns and rainbows. She writes about everything that goes on in her life like every other artists does. Not everything the media says is true you know. But you'd actually have to take the time to know for yourself whether or not if what someone else says about a person is true or not. Kamuro Tetsu How is she a hypocrite? She wrote about her own experience and how she felt in the moment. She only talked about the subject matter behind the song ONCE, and purposefully left the lyrics in the song vague. She didn't want it to become a feud, but other people made it like that. When discussing feminism, she never said you have to like every single woman . She was saying that successful women (who don't have bad blood) need to support each other instead of giving into misogyny and fighting each other to see who's more successful. Taylor never started going after Katy for her success, and the whole point of the Bad Blood music video was to uplift women and show them supporting each other when one is hurt. You can keep trying to twist the situation to make Taylor seem like a bad person, but she isn't. Keep reaching.	Misogyny, Woman	Gender - General	2/152	1.316

How is she a hypocrite?We'll get to that.She wrote about her own experience and how she felt in the moment. She only talked about the subject matter behind the song ONCEDoesn't matter if she never talked about it. She made a SONG about it. Big difference. and purposefully left the lyrics in the song vague. She didn't want it to become a feud, but other people made it like that.Of course she left it vague, she leaves everything "vague" because she wants to come across so innocent. If she didn't want it to become a feud, she should have spoke right up and said "This song is not about Katy Perry". Guess what, SHE NEVER DID. I wonder why....When discussing feminism, she never said you have to like every single woman. She was saying that successful women (who don't have bad blood) need to support each other instead of giving into misogyny and fighting each other to see who's more successful.DING DING DING, that makes her a hypocrite then. Doesn't matter if you have "bad blood", you sort those problems out. Taylor, apparently, didn't...and went on to make a song about it. The ironic thing? Katy was the one who extended that "olive branch" not Taylor. Taylor never started going after Katy for her success, and the whole point of the Bad Blood music video was to uplift women and show them supporting each other when one is hurt.You're right. Never once did she come for Katy's success. She came for Katy with an entire league of her "Swift Squad" behind her in the video instead and made cash off the ongoing feud before Katy ever did. Like you know, she does every single time one of her relationships go sour. You can keep trying to twist the situation to make Taylor seem like a bad person, but she isn't. Keep reachingGood god, you Swift fans are incredibly naive.	Misogyny, Woman	Gender - General	2/327	0.612
---	-----------------	------------------	-------	-------

Kamuro Tetsu She didn't leave it vague because she wanted to be innocent. When she wants people to know who the song is about, she lets them know. She said publicly that Forever and Always is about Joe Jonas, she admitted that Better Than Revenge was about Camila Belle, she even fucking named John Mayer and Harry Styles in songs. She left the lyrics in Bad Blood vague because she was going for an anthem vibe, hence why the chorus is full of layers. But people will run with whatever they want and Taylor has always stayed silent when she doesn't want to discuss the subject of songs. People STILL think I Knew You Were Trouble is about Harry Styles even though it was released before they started dating and she lets people think that because she doesn't want to discuss it, and that's her own choice. She doesn't have to do answer to other people who speculate about her lyrics, especially when they treat her songs like paternity tests.She didn't like Katy. You don't have to sort things out if you don't feel like you did anything wrong. It's misogynistic to expect all women to either love each other or to hate each other. Women are human, it's okay to not like a girl if she wrongs you and it's okay to feel hurt. If she doesn't want to associate with Katy, why would you force her to? If a woman doesn't want to associate with another woman, what does it matter to you if it isn't affecting you?The Bad Blood music video has literally NOTHING to do with Katy. The song itself was inspired by that situation, but the overall song is a song about general betrayal from a friend, and the video is about bouncing back from that betrayal with the support of many women. Also, that attempted dig at Taylor writing about her relationships is... lmao. Every single songwriter in history has written about their past relationships, but Taylor Swift does it and apparently she's using people. Even Katy does it, and there's nothing wrong with that. Songwriting is about expressing your feelings when you need to the most, and there's absolutely nothing wrong with writing about heartbreak, love, betrayal, friendships, family, death, etc.Again, keep reaching and keep taking situations out of context without looking into the details.	Nothing, Woman	Age - Youngsters, Gender - General	5/395	1.266
Women shouldn't put each other down out of sexist comparisons or old-fashioned beliefs: but it's just ridiculous to expect feminist women not to dislike other women or have beef with them just because they're women. If someone treats you badly, then it's no longer about gender.Then, personally speaking and as a Taylor Swift fan, I didn't like the Bad Blood move neither, but, then again, we just don't know what actually went down. It's really easy for Katy to make it look like Taylor was being crazy and petty because she knows Taylor just won't go into the details: it could've been really bad for all we know.	Crazy, Gender	Gender - General, Physical Identity - Physical (and Mental) Impairments	2/109	1.835

DiabolicalPaperClip lol you clearly don't know a lot about Taylor Swift. She has spoken out a a lot about feminism and all of a sudden just because she made one music video about an enemy, who happened to be a woman , she isn't a feminist. EVERYONE has enemies.	Woman	Gender - General	1/48	2.083
woundedryhmes You are ignorant about what feminism is. Feminism is wanting equal rights and opportunities between men and women. It doesn't mean a woman isn't allowed to feel betrayed by someone they thought was a friend.	Woman	Gender - General	1/36	2.778
Kamuro Tetsu You are incredibly wrong. The song was about betrayal. She felt betrayed by a friend. The only thing she ever said about the song was that it was about a female friend who tried to sabotage an arena tour. And, that said female friend would come up to her at award shows and she wasn't sure if the friend was insulting her in their conversations. She never said it was about Katy Perry. Katy Perry was the one who said it was about her and started using that as promotion. The lyrics did not point to anyone as they were not meant to down another woman , but to convey that she felt betrayed and that it is okay to feel mad at betrayal. Taylor has said before that she does not like getting mad at people, and never in person, so when she decides someone is not worth talking to due to repeated mistreatment, she cuts that person out of her life. And, she included her friends in the video because she wanted to commemorate their friendship. If 99.999999999999 of people who have met or are friends with Taylor Swift say she is genuinely a nice person, than I'd rather take that opinion rather than the butthurt one of someone who doesn't know her and probably hasn't even met her.	Woman	Gender - General	1/222	0.45
Alexis Ford Feeling betrayed is one thing, writing songs about it, promoting hatred against women, sabotaging their album (and these all took a whole year) have definately nothing about feminism. If you think feminism is only about feelings and you have to show them just like in high school bullying others, then you are wrong and this is pathetic.	Nothing	Age - Youngsters	1/59	1.695
