Women are bashed for showing skin and sex while men are applauded. Double standard sucks	Sex	Gender - General	1/15	6.667
The reason why feminists show off their breasts in public it's just to protest against idiots who fail biology and believe that they are just a second private part if a girl is confident and tries to look good for herself it doesn't mean that she's disrespecting herself in any shape or form Female bodies are more stigmatized than Male bodies and everyone is ignoring this problem if Girls enjoy their sexuality it doesn't mean that they are merely objects for boys' sexual desires this just sends the wrong message	Sexual	Gender - General	1/90	1.111

don't forget that girls are forbidden from having a love interest but when they are over the legal marriage age they are treated like a cosmetic product that is past it's expiration date believing that they are too old and no one wants them	Age, Old	Age - General, Age - Over 65s	2/44	4.545
not to mention that if female artists in the music industry wear revealing outfits they are OK since they are being used as living pin up dolls for boys' sexual desires if they perform the act of showing skin by removing their clothing it implies that they are being sluts so women are forbidden from enjoying their own sexuality	Sexual	Gender - General	1/59	1.695
"everybody is professional and talented" tell that to Megan Fox and Tara Reid..Oh right..I forgot it... they are "talented" Oh wait that was "sexist" of me and I'm a guy... How about the list that actually is sexist and doesn't show male celebrities being attacked by women? (please the Channing Tatum was ridiculous), sexism exists and feminism...is not about EQUAL rights... started as such...but for the last 20/30 years has not been anything about equal rights... And that lass is a fact... How do I know? Check the star celebs that are against such, like Morgan Freeman for example against BLM racist movement... oh well my lesbian friends...maybe the sexism alike racism mostly happens in the US... Nowadays it's about slut shaming women for expressing themselves and empowering themselves by showing off their beauty it's about expecting women to be unemployed from certain jobs because they are being "Objectified" by the patriarchy	Patriarchy	Gender - General	1/35	2.857
Girls are slowly getting equality but there are still families with a strict or traditional household seeing the female gender as inferior to the male gender	Gender	Gender - General	2/26	7.692
Guys... I know I'm going to be buried for this, but Emma Watson did earn the burn. Women have been used as sexual playthings for centuries. Their bodies are used to draw attention as if that's the only thing that is worthwhile about them. And exposing boobs on a magazine cover is a call for attention no matter how u sugarcoat it, so it was a pretty non-feminist thing to do. Guys removing shirts and pants for attention is a pretty recent thing so let's not compare the two.	Sexual	Gender - General	1/89	1.124
She just did it to show people that breasts are not sexual organs but are sexualized by society thus making breastfeeding feel like feeding your child your own period blood which sounds absolutely disgusting	Sexual	Gender - General	1/34	2.941
Chinmayee Jeyapriya Exactly! idiots who failed biology believe that girls have more private parts than boys Breasts are not a reproductive organ as much as Testicles are they are stigmatized by society if an obese man posts pictures of him shirtless on Instagram no one complains but if a woman wears lace lingerie then it becomes a huge red flag so the creator of Instagram believes that female nipples killed his family or something I believe this is why women in USA Protest while topless	Obese, Red, Woman	Ideological and Political Identity - General, Ethnicity - Native-American, Gender - General, Physical Identity - Physical Features	4/85	4.706

I love how when women objectify men ALL THE FUCKING TIME saying 'ooo look at him and touching his arms and flirting is NEVER looked down upon in society It's ONLY looked at as 'playful flirting' ohhh but when a Man does it to a woman 'OH FUCKING SHIT SEXUAL FUCKING HARRASSMENT EVERY CALL FUCKING 91 FUCKING 1 COZ A MAN OAYED A WOMAN A COMPLIMENT AS IS ONLY TOUCHING HER ARM AND FLIRTING JUST LIKE WOMEN DO'!!!! TIRED of that SHIT. Now before you BAT SHIT crazy ass feminizes come at me I DO realize they there are men who straight up (IN PUBLIC) will go up and straight up SMACK A GIRLS PHAT ASS which is TOTALLY sexual FUCKING harassment but I'm talking about the women who LITERALLY you can't even SLIGHTLY pay them a FUCKING compliment ANYMORE or even PLAYFULLY or Flirtingly touch them without them FUCKING SCREAMING RAAAAAAAAAAPE. Like CALM the fuck down. ALSO realize that not EVERY GODDAMN GUY OUT THERE GOES STRAIGHT UP TO FUCKING WOMEN AND JUST STRAIGHT UP SMACKING THEIR ASSES. So quit FUCKING treating EVERY FUCKING GUY like they are the same MOST of you girls. Fucking SHEESH!!	Crazy, Sexual, Woman	Gender - General, Physical Identity - Physical (and Mental) Impairments	5/198	2.525
So when women do it it's ok but when men do it's not? You need some SERIOUS mental help if you think that what you just said was a valid argument . Explain how what you just said makes sense. Coz basically what you are implying is that women have NEVER sexually harassed a man and that EVERY MAN has harassed a woman coz you said 'MEN' instead of 'MOST' Men which is which is a big generalization.	Mental, Woman	Gender - General, Physical Identity - Physical (and Mental) Impairments	2/78	2.564
fatimah anwaar Also what if a man has NEVER SEXUALLY HARASSED a woman in his ENTIRE LIFE but yet HE gets sexually harassed by all the women? So what your saying is Men who don't sexually harass should STILL get bad karma from the other Men WHO DO sexually harass? Coz remember you did say'MEN' and not 'MOST' men. Think before you FUCKING text bed time BITCH. And don't try to pull that 'Lol sheesh I was just joking around' shit or try and wiggle your way out of this. Just admit your a biased ass triggered FUCKING CUNT who typed before she 'Logically' sat down and thought about what she was gonna day and if it even made ANY goddamn sense.	Woman	Gender - General	1/122	0.82

if Female artists had male backup dancers in their music video they get slut shamed but if Male artists had female backup dancers in their music videos it's not a problem at all this is just one of the worst double standards ever Women shouldn't be shamed for expressing their sexuality only Men should be punished for being perverts also Don't EVER use biology as an excuse to think they are "programmed" to be sexually aroused and that women should only combat this problem by not flaunting their bodies and dressing like hookers this is just one of the worst double standards that is only trying to sugarcoat sexualization and misogyny	Misogyny	Gender - General	1/111	0.901
there are also a lot of double standards in our society:1 if Men sleep with multiple Partners it's considered Normal but if Women sleep with multiple partners they are called sluts2 Women cannot express sexuality unless they are merely objects for men's sexual pleasure like what i told you about the backup dancers thing in female artists' music videos3 There is the "Boys will be boys" excuse but not the "Girls will be girls" excuse4 if Men wear less clothing it's considered normal but if Women did it they are either seen as attention seekers provoking to harassment5 if boys go outside they don't get strict curfews but girls do6 Girls are seen as more vulnerable incapable and inferior to boys	Sexual	Gender - General	1/127	0.787
fatimah anwaar Look I don't got time for this and you did NOT win this argument. You got some SERIOUS man hating issues and you're part of the problem as to why Men act the way they do. I'm tired of Men getting shit for being Men but women are praised its ABSOLUTELY SICKENING. I've stated everything I need to say. You're just one of those bat shit crazy whores who thinks women do no wrong and Men are the only problem. Based on your comment YEAH that's what you're implying. But hey you do you I do feel sorry for you and who ever tries to date you and I wouldn't be surprised if you never have a boyfriend. And if you do he must be a pussy ass white knight lil bitch	Crazy, pussy	Nationality - Chinese, Physical Identity - Physical (and Mental) Impairments	2/135	1.481
TSM Craze many people think the Girls will be Girls excuse means that they should roam around topless or contract an STD which is just how people shame women for their sexual freedom they would often use Science as an excuse to defend perverts and give them excuses about their hormones which is the purpose of victim blaming girls who wear certain clothing items only because they are confident with themselves not for male gazing	Sexual	Gender - General	1/75	1.333

Many idiots use the Strawman Fallacy just to sugarcoat sexism especially in the music industry they think it's either for the female artists' safety or they are more at risk if they do provocative stuff this is just victim blaming and furthering the double standards saying that they should be responsible for how others react these are Hyperboles making huge generalizations over something small it's not the female artists who are objectifying themselves it's only the fans or the record companies	Sexism	Gender - General	1/81	1.235

I really liked the the 13 year old girl's come back the most because she just a beginner at teen aging ( or was) and she beat the living shit out of that guy, i mean all of the others are grown women and they know what they are talking about but 13-year-olds don't know what they are talking about so that 13-year- old girl was the most savage one of them up because as I said she's just a kid not like the other actors or celebrities	Old	Age - Over 65s	1/87	1.149
Feminism is only about freedom and liberation of girls and women it's not about objectifying their own bodies which is only what perverts and misogynists do to them Victim blaming needs to end Parents should stop enforcing gender roles on their children Girls are taught that standing up for themselves isn't "ladylike" and Sexual harassment is always being sugarcoated by using the excuse that boys will be boys and that girls should stay silent which are just outdated gender stereotypes	Gender, Sexual	Gender - General	3/80	3.75

Ok lets be honest sometimes men (not all men) treat woman like crap and act like their above us. I'm pretty sure all woman if not all most, are fed up. Its not the 50s-60s anymore, lol. Were done with sexism . (Again not all men, and I have even seen woman be sexist toward other woman too.)	Sexism, Woman	Gender - General	5/57	8.772
I'm sorry but how tf is asking a chick about dieting tips sexist? That rubbish makes me angry	Chick, Sex, Sexism, Woman	Gender - General	4/43	9.302

but feminists from these countries think women are being valued and protected but it's further from the truth how is FGM breast binding and being forced to menstruate in a polluted river being respected as a woman ? many women from these countries think they are enjoying their lives thinking that it's for their protection that they are not allowed to do basic things humans can do or even when it comes to dire consequences like having acid thrown at their faces or being Eve teased	Woman	Gender - General	1/85	1.176

Its 2019 and sexism is still a thing. Like are you for real	Sexism	Gender - General	1/13	7.692
you are just being ignorant about feminism I wrote a comment 1 week ago why people shouldn't be viewing feminism in a negative light you only focus on these fake feminists and jump to conclusions and don't understand the real meaning of feminism it exists because women have been controlled abused objectified sexualized and discriminated all because of their gender	Gender	Gender - General	1/60	1.667
fatimah anwaar And you still victimize yourselves. Instead of shutting up and chasing your goals, you open your mouth to "demand" equal rights. Just accept that MEN and WOMEN are NOT equal and we will NEVER be. You want to achieve something? You HAVE to fight for it, just like MEN have to. There is no other way around it. Stop whinning about the past and move on. Black people are the same thing... Always victimizing themselves about the past instead of SHOWING that it can be different. Society has too many hypocrites.	Black	Ethnicity - Black	1/93	1.075
I have boys in my class that make sexist comments to me all the time. They tell me I can suck their area, and when I respond I threaten to slap them. They that tell me I'm a f*cking weakling and I can suck his d*ck. I responded "well I would but it's kinda hard when you don't have one I got praised for that. Then they started calling me a whore and a slut. I told them I would fight them, but again They call me a fucking weakling again. I kicked them in the legs and punched them. One pushed me down then slide and I dragged him down with me. I punched his area and they don't bother me anymore. Even though people say violence is never the answer it seems like it is sometimes. I just wanna say if u r a girl and u deal with what I deal with then u r amazing and remember that men do not power u. We r stronger than them in every way. Give a like if you wanna help stop sexism like me and prove to men that we r equal	Sexism	Gender - General	1/194	0.515

I once had the same mentality of you "That us girls are better". One day this boy said that Women are naturally weaker. I tried to fight him for months. Finally he agreed. The first fight I won and he didn't try. I begged him to try he's hardest since I was so sure I would win. He agreed finally and his friends said fine. We fought that day. I had a broken nose and a black eye. Ever since I knew men were incredibly stronger then girls when they tried. They just knew we weren't a challenge therefor they never tried. But yes. It's honestly so stupid when 'feminists' like Ariana Grande and Emma Watson talk about showing off their body like it's not an easy decision to make to not show it off as if it's for the public to view. Our bodies aren't public property. Our bodies aren't to be sexually objectified, and it's not that women aren't allowed to feel sexy, they are, it's just that our sexiness isn't for some random person who purchases a magazine, it's for whom we specifically choose to show it off to. When women and girls stop being sold into sexual slavery (at a MUCH higher rate than males) maybe we can talk about how it's unfair that men get to show off their bodies and we don't. :( boohoo. How about instead we stop normalizing sex as a public resource? It's not. It's a private act between enthusiastically consenting adults. Getting to show off your tits isn't meaningful liberation in a society that sexually objectifies women.	Sex, Sexual	Gender - General	2/163	1.227
I totally agree with this comment! Sorry if i was a month late to reply to it! Most feminists talk about pay gaps and voting while I talk about how young girls are being treated in traditional or conservative households expecting to be "pure and innocent" Innocence exists but Purity is just a made up word Virginity is also a made up word too girls are not allowed to have love interests unless they reach a certain age and if they are confident in their bodies then it means that they are objects for boys' sexual desires which is setting a bad example	Age, Sexual	Age - General, Gender - General	2/103	1.942

Like, men have to be strong, or, we cant cry. Witch , could cause serious depression because men have to keep their feelings bottled up. Woman get sympathy when they cry. But when men cry, you know what people say? SUCK IT UP FAGGOT . yep. We have to deal with that kind of stuff, and still get told woman need to be treated better.	Faggot, Witch, Woman	Gender - Female age and physical appearance, Gender - General, Sexual Identity - Male homosexuality	4/80	5.0
well it's because women are always stereotyped as lazy overly emotional and that they care about their appearance too much this is one of the oldest stereotypes in the book what was even more sexist was her tweet about the double standards of how men take their shirts off and express their sexuality and no one raises a red flag unless women show skin or embrace their sexuality	Red	Ideological and Political Identity - General, Ethnicity - Native-American	2/68	2.941
First and Second wave feminism was about empowering women and giving them rights to vote or have basic healthcare and anti sex discrimination laws but third wave feminism is now about viewing men and boys as failed laboratory experiments or animals probably because of school dress codes where girls are always to blame for boys' actions and teachers and principals always use false examples from science and the "boys will be boys" excuse to degrade and objectify girls and make them feel insecure about themselves	Sex	Gender - General	1/85	1.176

THE MAKER OF THIS VIDEO IS SEXIST THERE WERE NO MEN RETARD .	Retard	Physical Identity - Physical (and Mental) Impairments	1/12	8.333

This video and feminism is a joke, we have already reached an age of gender equality even though many refuse to accept it. Modern feminists are no help to society and make everyone else's life a living hell. Plus the only actual sexist remarks in this video was the one involving Serena Williams and Taylor Swift which was uncalled for whoever made those comments. But the 9 other supposed sexist remarks aren't sexist what so ever. If I want to argue comment on this comment and I'll write back. Male Artists such as Justin Bieber and Bruno Mars are allowed to make songs about their love lives no one gives a flying F about it Meanwhile Chris Brown and Tyga are doing songs with misogynistic lyrics and are being praised for it if Female artists such as Rihanna or Taylor Swift made songs about female empowerment or their relationships with their exes they get shamed for it and are written off for "trying too hard" Sexism is not disappearing it still exists in the music industry	Sexism	Gender - General	1/87	1.149
fatimah anwaar Yes there are racist, homophobic, and sexist people out there and it breaks my heart. We can never live in a society without those things. It is a utopia that simply doesn't exist. There will always be sexism in every industry, not just music. But in the big picture, we have done an amazing job of giving women rights and equality to men. Give me one right that a man has that women don't have or one societal disadvantage women have not including the wage gap or rape culture because the wage gap is there because statistical;y more men then women work more and even RAINN this country's largest anti-rape incest and abuse organization says rape culture isn't real	Homophobic, Racist, Sexism	Ethnicity - General, Gender - General, Sexual Identity - General	3/121	2.479

fatimah anwaar First of all I do believe in the death penalty but only if there isn't a shred of doubt that person did commit the crime and rape they can get the person wrong or someone could've been in the wrong place at the wrong time. Rapists are sentenced to prison if found guilty but even if you are 100 certain this was the person who rapped and there is a lack of evidence there is no way to tell if you are making it up because there have been several occurrences where women have accused men of rape later telling the truth that they were never rapped, they have ruined men's lives simply by the accusation itself if there was proof or no proof. People who are rapists should be prosecuted. You are clearly pulling these statements out of thin air about how women have it worse than men societal speaking. Women make up of only 20 of suicides, 25 of the homeless population, 24 of homicide victims, girls are 25 LESS LIKELY TO DIE OF ABUSE OR NEGLECT, 80 of hate crimes are aimed at gay men, 70-90 of adoption requests are for girls. Grade schools are biased in favor of girls by punishing boyish behavior like pranks and such. And shame is a legitimate human emotion and guess what people will judge no matter what you say or do with your body, get over people can be assholes. And like a said before there are bigoted people out there and there is no changing that. But don't act like someone's life is harder simply because of what's in between their legs those are just stats. For all, I know your life could be tremendously more difficult than mine and I wish you godspeed in dealing with the situation you are dealing with. But if you are seriously going to make an assumption as dangerous as that about a gender , then you need to get your facts straight. Tyrone Johnsino I totally agree with this but Just because men had to deal with those things and have done so much for us it doesn't give the excuse that they should see women as objects for their sexual pleasure if women are wearing something they are confident in it doesn't mean that they are provoking to sexual assault if you think women have equality then why are they still going to public bathrooms at a nightclub in groups just to be safe? why can't men learn self control? why should women be punished for something they are not in control of? I do care about women being mistreated in certain countries but people tend to sugarcoat oppression thinking that it's to respect women and keep them safe there is literally NOTHING dangerous or immoral about getting healthcare education reproductive rights equal pay to choose who they marry or any other basic human rights that they need and that they totally deserve! this is why i choose Liberal and modern societies over Conservative and traditional societies! Also if Daughters tell their parents that they had a love interest or just a close friend of a different gender they get punished for it unless if Sons told their parents about the same thing! this isn't for their protection it's only sending the message that girls shouldn't have self confidence unless they are merely objects for boys' sexual desires this isn't the right message to send and girls are human beings not dolls girls are also expected to fit into society's expectations! because people think girls are valuable but incapable and vulnerable! because of the double standards	Gender, Nothing, Sexual	Age - Youngsters, Gender - General	5/275	1.818

fatimah anwaar If you read my reply you would know I never said anything like boys will be boys or women should be treated that way. Oh and SUPRISE SUPRISE! I am also a liberal and value many beliefs that you have as well. Listen honestly women need to be careful of their surroundings because there are bad people out there. But that's pretty unfair don't you think that you say men need to learn to control themselves when out of the hundreds and hundreds of men you see per night that maybe 1 of those men has the horrid thought to actually force himself onto you. Men aren't all bad and most of them would intervene somehow if they saw a woman being abused or taken advantage of. You mentioned how women are not equal because of how they need to live in this "fear". I am sure that you know quite a few organizations designed to help women if they encounter domestic abuse or have been rapped. Now, how many organizations are there to help specifically men. People give a shit about women's issues if something happens to a guy it's just considered funny. No there will never be equality in the way you see it because I'm talking societal equality and you're talking biological equality. Men are on average bigger and stronger than women. And don't tell me what it's like to have a dick because men's main biological purpose to fuck and move on. Some people( Rapists) can't control it. They should but don't. You tell me what it's like having to have a dick is as equally idiotic as if I told you what the 3rd trimester would be like for your fucking period. I don't fucking know so don't assume that you just know.	Woman	Gender - General	1/300	0.333
Many people would still use Biology as an excuse to defend these kind of boys I mentioned they also think it's the girls' faults that they are being objectified and sexualized People would also use Biology as an excuse to sugarcoat sexism by saying that girls have more private parts than boys this is why Slut shaming is a huge issue in our society which needs to end especially with the excuse that "boys will be boys" and that girls should stay silent	Sexism	Gender - General	1/83	1.205

fatimah anwaar No you were not only talking about women being sexually harassed freely you had multiple other points you tried to make like how men are taught that women are our inferior and that all men are in the shadows lurking and waiting for women to let her guard down so we can rape her. Of course, I'm exaggerating when I say this but that is practicaly what you said. Yes, there have been companies and schools that blame the victim and that is not okay. But anytime that a company or school has blamed the victim and the public hears about, we don't brush it off our shoulder. Whoever made that decision to blame the victim will be fired and most likely will never be hired again and that school or company will forever be known as obtaining someone like this. But when the fuck did I say because of biology rape is okay? And you have done this multiple times over when I explain why an issue you said is happening and you keep using it in your future responses. Like I said before, SHAME IS A LEGITIMATE HUMAN EMOTION. Slut shaming fat shaming and etc isn't a fucking problem. Sluts and fatties have always been around it are only now we're throwing a tantrum at whoever uses it now Oh Boo Hoo. And women get angry when a girl who sleeps with many men is called a slut but a man who sleeps with many women is called studs. This is fair however because it is easy being a slut because men are easy. Being a stud is hard. There are fat ugly sluts there are no fat ugly studs. Stop saying Slut shaming is a problem because no matter what you do people will judge.	Fat	Physical Identity - Physical Features	3/300	1.0

it IS a problem because women shouldn't be judged for embracing their sexuality and it IS objectifying them it even happens in the music industry where female artists cannot have male backup dancers but if it's the other way around no one complains about it this is only sending the wrong message that women should only be objects for men's sexual pleasure this even happens when Daughters tell their parents if they had a love interest or just a close friend of a different gender they get punished for it but if Sons tell their parents about it nothing happens to them it's considered socially acceptable when it shouldn't	Gender, Nothing, Sexual	Age - Youngsters, Gender - General	3/109	2.752

fatimah anwaar See unlike you I'm actually going to address your entire reply rather than focusing on certain arguments and how many female artists can you name that haven't been just innocent. And chances are if they were trying to be innocent, then that is the vibe the artist wants to give. You keep using these extreme hyperboles where you say, "they make a single move then they are sluts". That's not true there isn't a single person in this country where if you have sex once they're a slut and if someone does maybe call them a slut that's their choice to do so and most likely they would get backlash from it if it was made public. And I never said that because of biology men had the excuse to rape, Men are biologically bigger and stronger so some take advantage of that. Don't act like you don't want to fuck someone you find attractive because you're only human. And holy shit how many times do I have to repeat myself, men are also being used in countless movies in unrealistic ways to sacrifice their hopes, dreams, and commonly lives just for a women's wants. It happens to both sexes. Everything you mention happens to both sexes. It's the same monster wearing a different face.	Sex	Gender - General	1/219	0.457
if Male artists do these dance moves their music videos have PG rating but if Female artists do the same their music videos are rated R Just because men are biologically stronger than women it doesn't give the excuse that they should be toxic fathers to their own daughters or treat their wives like cattle the problem is that women are considered incapable and vulnerable in our society Men have objectified women even to this day so these days they are receiving bad karma for their actions such as being sold like IKEA furniture (like Superwoman's video titled "Making the Perfect boyfriend") Schools in the USA only care about boys' education because they only give girls dress codes thinking that it will distract boys from learning I Know that men have to suffer just like women like being called pussies for showing emotions or being made fun of for the size of their penises because society always claims that bigger is better in bed the reason why i hate Incels with a passion is that they always see femininity in a negative light and victim blame women for being sexualized or objectified defending perverts because of their "hormones" and that self control means denying urges formed over millions of years of evolutionary development which is just stupid they think that girls should combat this by not wearing clothes that they feel comfortable in thinking that they are dressing in a provocative way this is bad for girls' mental health and is brainwashing them into becoming Androphobes or Misandrists	Mental	Physical Identity - Physical (and Mental) Impairments	1/258	0.388

I'm back after 3 months! but you still need to stop being hypocrites because you are so concerned about women being oppressed in the Middle East North Africa and South Asia but you think girls in North America and Europe are objectifying themselves this is just victim blaming and defending perverts also the "boys will be boys" excuse exists but if the "girls will be girls" excuse exist people might think it's only about girls behaving provocatively which is just total nonsense and girls are always considered as incapable of defending themselves from predators which needs to change I was only talking about the double standards against women i wasn't "playing the victim card" or being a misandrist (discriminating against the male gender ) I was just speaking out about women's issues in our society	Gender	Gender - General	1/134	0.746

Sexism	Gender - General	1/57	1.754
Sophie Harrison sweetie, I already understand that but I'd rather fight sexism in places like the Middle East where it's more prevalent and stronger than ever. We already fought for our rights as women. While sexism still occurs, it's not legalized, accepted, nor is it completely bad as it was 100 years ago in the West. It's bad yes but it's not that common like many people make it out to be. Let's fight for womens rights where they actually need their rights. Plus, there will always be rude people who think a male or a female is incapable of being good enough. Sexism in it self can't completely go away unfortunately since there will always be that one person who has to be rude, but teaching others to be respectful regardless of gender may help it decrease. Gabriella I understand where you're coming from, but I don't believe belittling the struggles of some because others have it worse off is helping anyone. I agree that we don't need to be fighting sexism here as much as we do in the Middle East, as you mentioned, but I do think it's important to remember that everyone has something they're dealing with, and that shouldn't be less valid because others have more urgent issues. Someone will always have it worse off than you, but that doesn't mean you can't be upset when something bad happens, even if it's minuscule comparatively. Am I making sense? Men and women already have equality. About 32 of men treat women with disrespect. Everywhere I've been, a guy never treated me with disrespect. My past boyfriends have all been gentle and sweet to me. It might be because I'm not a feminazi , or maybe it's where I've live. But there's no reason for women to be crying for equality, when we already have it. It's like racism , some people are racist , some are not. You people don't even realize how stupid and petty this video and the people are in it. Literally in like two incidents in this video the women got mad for someone saying a compliment. A COMPLIMENT!!!!?!! Most of the stuff asked by people to the women isn't even sexiest, its just women making it sexiest. ModernDayFeminismIsCancerThe Ariana clip in my opinion isn't about sexism which is what Ariana made it about, the question the guy asked I felt was more towards her and her only. Not about women in general. Plus thats a valid question to ask Ariana because her phone and makeup probably are very important to her, she just doesn't want people to think they are to her. And based off women in general (at least a lot of the millenials) makeup and phones are very important to them. Prove me wrong, I dare ya.	Sexism	Gender - General	1/148	0.676

Toriana Palacki I'm a girl, I don't wear makeup and I don't need my phone more than any guy in my schoolAnd okay it's a compliment but if it had been a guy the question would not have been on the appearance of the guy but when it's a women it's one of the first subjects that come and we don't know why. Why would it be beauty for girls and I don't know sport or anything else for men ?? That's not gender equality, that's sexism and it's because of the people that think like you that men and women aren't equal.	Gender, Sexism	Gender - General	2/104	1.923
Lison De Backer First of all, why are you comparing you wearing makeup and needing your phone, to guys. Most guys don't wear makeup, and personally I think girls use their phone a lot more then men. But between everyone, guys use their phone just as much as girls. The main point I'm trying to make is that most girls love to use their phones and spend an excessive amount of time on it, as well as doing their makeup therefore its a valid question for these interviewers to ask because its kinda true. Just look at all the beauty gurus online and the girls at highschool. But like I said I feel that question was mainly to Ariana and her only. And Just using only yourself as an example ain't a good arguement. Your next paragraph doesn't make much sense. If your trying to say that different questions asked to opposite genders is sexism , how? If you believe that, you have a screwed up look on what gender equality should be. Men and Women are different, of course certain questions are going to be asked to women that would be different from questions asked to men. There is nothing wrong to that and whats questions in this video are you referring to. And are you kidding me, guys are criticized all the time for wearing makeup because its originally a girl thing not a guy thing. By the way its not because of people like me that men and women aren't equal because guess what they already are. Its because of you that makes women act entitled to things and throw sexism at any criticism they get simply because they are a women.	Gender, Nothing, Sexism	Age - Youngsters, Gender - General	4/284	1.408
Lison De Backer what work do women get paid less then men in? And your last question is a great question, Why do women get critized more then men when taking scandalous photos, well for one, women are mainly the ones who criticize other women for taking scandalous photos and do you wanna know why? Its because women are petty, women can get jealous, women get upset over stupid things and react to it by labeling it like calling someone a whore or something. So if its about women labeling other women for skin photos then its not a sexism problem. And if someone gets slack for showing skin in a photo, big whoop. The world will always have criticism, the faster us women get over it, the stronger we will be. What happened to the saying "sticks and stones may break my bones but words will never hurt me". Also women don't get paid as much as men do. I'm a girl. I want to be a musician, I don't wear makeup, I want people to be educated in feminism. If you have a sister or mother or a girlfriend think about how it is to be a women. I'm a girl. It's really hard. I wish I was a man sometimes. So please remember women are human too. Ramandeep Kaur A father cant prevent you from being an engineer. It is a free country. And if you are an adult, you are allowed to be whatever you want. But, men tend to excel more in fields like engineering and I am not offended when someone says that. Its just a fact. There are obviously exceptions, but there should always be more male engineers than female engineers just like there should always be more female psychologists than male psychologists. Personally, I was really good at math and science in high school and was often told to go into engineering because I am a woman and people seem to think the field needs more women. I am so glad I didn't because I would have been miserable in that career. Men and women are different. We have different hormones. Our brains work differently. We generally have different skills and those skills compliment each other. Men, in general, tend to excel in careers that work with concrete things and objects while women tend to excel in jobs that work with people and ideas. Our differences should be celebrated, not ignored. And someone who points out our differences should not be branded a sexist. Sexism is the belief that one sex is superior over another. believing that the sexes are different is not believing one to be superior. And most of the comments in this video did not imply overall superiority so they weren't sexist.	Engineers, Sex, Sexism, Woman	Gender - General, Nationality - General	5/243	2.058

Seriously, stop victimizing yourself and being so defensive.Honestly the women in this video are so annoying. Women want to be total sluts, baring it all because they love attention and still be respected. Women, do u really want to be like men? I don't think so. And yeah, men can morally have no shirt on, women can't. Ever. It's the way u were born. Deal with it. I doubt real masculine men can be attracted to a woman they see as a man's equal. We r polar opposites and complement each other. Ugh.Reminds me of that commercial where a gurl was mimicking a guys every move on the subway to show she can do what guys do. Or like the topless parades women have to show they can go shirtless too. The thing is women don't want to be judged for their lack of morals and respect in themselves. They want to be able to do what they want, who they want, when they want it and not be judged for it or it's sexist. This wave of feminism is unnecessary. Having a period isn't a response to this argument, it's completely besides the point. Most (salary) jobs have a set number of sick/leave days, and when you exceed those days, your pay/salary is reduced. Whether or not women take more days (which is most likely not even true) doesn't affect their base pay (and for hourly jobs you just don't get paid for the days you take off) which is the central issue. Why are men and women being paid different amounts for the same level of work in the SAME JOB with the SAME EXPERIENCE? Because companies can. Arguments like 'because they take more days' or 'because they give birth' are irrelevant and are used as quick comebacks from people who are unaffected to deflect from discussing the real issue: that men and women are not being treated equally. The pay-gap disproportionately affects women, but sexism hurts EVERYONE. All these dudes in the comments getting upset that women are complaining about their cramps when they "hold it in" or just "man up" are being affected by sexism, and what sad agonizing lives they must lead feeling so threatened by the other half of the population. Treating men and women equally leaves everyone better off, treating someone better doesnt mean that you're going to be treated worse.	Sexism	Gender - General	2/217	0.922

”Smiling doesn’t win you gold medals.” It actually does. When I did cheerleading and baton twirling, smiling was a big factor in impressing the judges, and it wasn’t because we were women and men forced us to smile. In dance/arts competitions, your style, appearance, and how you present yourself plays a part in the overall score, and whether you like it or not, looking happy just might determine how the judges view your performance. Since when did it become sexist for men to want women to look and be happy? I don’t see anything offensive in making a completely relevant point that you weren’t smiling when you could have been (and scoring points), nor in someone (man or woman) wanting to see me smile possibly because they think it looks nice. God forbid, I might even take it as a compliment! I actually like Simone Biles. I think she’s a great gymnast, and probably wasn’t even intentionally trying to ”take a stand for women” or whatever. What I don’t like is how Clevver ”News,” and other left-wing media, portrays anything a man says or does as having potentially sexist intent.	Woman	Gender - General	1/190	0.526
Emma is amazing she is my hero I can’t believve people see fit to be sexist about things we all live on planet earth, we all need the same things to survive and we wouldn’t be able to survive without the other sex. Face it sexist people. You are making pointless comments that can’t even be justified	Sex	Gender - General	1/57	1.754
The women’s gymnastics were originally identical to the men’s. Then the olympic association (or whatever the governing body is for the olympics) decided it was ”too strenuous” for women, to the objection of many of the women. They changed the events to the ones you see today and made the scoring more about character. So women had to dance and smile as well as doing gymnastics to get the medal. Have you noticed there’s none of that in the men’s events? They do their routines and their tumbles to the same standard but women have extra things to concentrate on, all the while having to pretend they aren’t concentrating. Simone is a gymnast, so she would be very aware of it. Outside of gymnastics, the whole smiling thing is standard sexism because women are judged more harshly if they are not emotionally engaging with their audience. A celebrity woman will be described negatively where a celebrity man will be treated with more respect if neither smiles at the same event. Simone was concentrating, so why should that be a bad thing when a man would not be criticised for the same? Is her smiling somehow more important than her dancing talent? That’s basically it.	Sexism, Woman	Gender - General	2/204	0.98

I hate how all these mentally handicapped people believe that its just women that experience sexism . In 2018, men are the victims of sexism more than women are. Before I start, might I mention that the so called 'Gender pay gap' is fucking duckshit. Its based on averages. AVERAGES.1. If a man and a woman commit the exact same crime, a man will be sentenced to a harder punishment in court.2. If a man and woman have a young child while going through a divorce, the mother will immediately have custody of the child unless the father can prove she is unable to take care of the child.3. If a woman wants to ruin a mans life, all she has to do is acuse him of sexual assault or harassment. The man will automatically lose his job, reputation, house, car, and custody of his children. The woman will also get away with it, even if it gets proven that she made a false accusation.4. If a young girl joins a football team, people are happy for her. If a boy joins a netball team, he will likely be made fun of and bullied.5. If a woman is to cry in a public place, she will likely be immediately surrounded by support. If a man is to cry in public, people will likely not give a shit and will see the man as weak.Men are raped and sexually harassed aswell, BY WOMEN. Overall men experience sexism more than women do. If you can name 1 thing a man can do a woman can't, (not including biologically) then I'll delete this comment. I just love how people have to think, like with Ariana grande on the radio show that when they say 'which would you rather have one last time your phone or makeup' I love how Ariana has to immediately go 'oh WOW phone or makeup SOOO SEXIST' first of all what does she have on right now in that the RADIO show not the tv show WOW what do you know she has makeup on and she has it on everyday, and guess what else, she was probably on her phone before she got there and will be after because she is a famous person who kinda has to be on their phone for social media and appearance scheduling so I don't get why people like her have to think that just because they are a girl and they said something that applies to them but it also applies to other girls that it is immediately sexist. It's not like he said 'if you had the choice would you rather be always making your family sandwiches or doing dishes and laundry.' Honestly feminism has gotten so toxic these days, feminism used to be women fighting for the right to vote or to have power or to have the same jobs men have but, now it's just these women whining about how people say things to them or try to be courteous to them because they think that everyone sees them as helpless and needs someone to do something like hold open a door for them when feminism could be working towards things that matter like to stop genital mutilation or women until recently not being allowed to even do things like drive in some third world countries but, no dye your hair a dumb color and whine about how people have stereotypes about them. (New topic) IF YOU ARE GOING TO FUCKING WHINE ABOUT HOW THERE ARE LESS WOMEN IN STEM FEILDS THEN STOP FUCKING BECOMING A GENDER STUDIES MAJOR AND BE AN ENGINEER, because there are plenty of women who are engineers and there are plenty of women who are capable but those of you 'feminists' who are saying jobs and wages are unfair then go into a high paying job field with more risks which right now men are the majority and equal the 'wage gap' that doesn't even exist. It's just men are more likely to do things like mining, construction, and such that's why there is an appearance of 70 something cents to the dollar which you feminists can't even agree on the same number, go into all the same jobs as men and the pay of women and men would be even. Also think about it if companies could get away with paying less wouldn't they employ only women so they spend the least amount of money on salaries? Guys men and women have different brains that are specialized in certain things , men and women can't be completely equal.Although I do believe in equal opportunities ....I mean cmon men and women can never be equal .Average men is taller , stronger , muscular than an average women .... Women are more caring and emotional .... That's why we can't have female soldiers , its a bad idea ... I mean just take 10 random men and 10 random females and make them wrestle who do u think will win?Men and women both need each other !Edit: I believe in equality but you can't make gender equality 100 its impossible . Peace just my opinion	Gender	Gender - General	1/121	0.826

Not being equal does not mean someone is stronger than another ...it's about the consideration you have for someone and the opportunities that are given ...if it's not the same for both gender then it is unequal(and we are not talking about physical trait nature has given to us)...and i don't know why you needed to compare women and men wrestling to prove inequality and the fact that women shouldn't be in the military (more people to serve the country is a plus,their gender doesn't matter) , it is not inequality, it is just a difference,in nature differences is only evolution and it happened that it was more useful for our species to have a physical difference between the males and the females, it is also considered as a sexual trait ... It is actually the kind of excuses that were used for the" women are less than men ".Same thing with the "women's Brain works differently than men's" wich has been recently been refuted by science(since it is impossible to see the differences between a woman's Brain and a man's brain by looking at wich zones are used in different situations, wich by the way can determine if someone has a bigger emotional respond) ...both gender are emotionally capable, the "women are more caring and emotional" is what is called a stereotype and also a thing people teach to their girls, they don't inherit it .Saying that women should not serve in the military is against their freedom of choice and therefore sexist...men can be caring and emotional they are juste told not to be and this is sexist too. Everybody is useful and it doesn't matter in wich way they are as long as they are. We're the human specie and a human= a human ,therefore Every human are equals . and if their physical capability is not enough for them to do something they like then as creative as we are we should find a solution and create the opportunity, which determines equality.there are my opinions ( i know it is long sorry, and english is not my first language si sorry for the mistakes i could have made)	Gender, Sexual	Gender - General	4/365	1.096
Also REAL modern feminism is now suppose to fight against stereotypes and inequality in private sectors wich is still occuring today and also for men's right because in some cases men are disadvantaged by the law in court (for exemple in the case of a divorce, if they have been raped,paternity leave ect) ...not against the fact that men are stronger than women because well it's nature and it has nothing to do with inequality.The fucking stupid feminazi are the one who say such shit	Feminazi, Nothing	Age - Youngsters, Gender - Female intelligence	2/86	2.326
Kenza Hanchir inequality in private sector? ? What stereotypes?? Explain?Well private sector like construction tend to prefer the stronger gender .... + men do way better than women at work they do overtime, work harder to get promotion while women.... NOT all though ....	Gender	Gender - General	1/45	2.222

Kenza Hanchir Do you support movements against manspreding ,man explaining ,manintrupting and shit??? Thats fking bullshit.. Feminism now = anti-men , if feminism believes is equality between gender then guess what, its called 'equality' not feminism ... feminist( some ) claims that 'we don't want men why are you even here '	Gender	Gender - General	1/52	1.923
An exemple , if we make two CVs that are exactly the same but the gender in them changes ,in some cases they will choose the men's CV for no particular reason except that the other is female, and this is actually illegal and considered sexist by the law, so tending to prefer a particular gender for a work does not support equality in opportunities. I read that you were for equality of opportunities so you would normally agree on that (even if it is in construction )...and about private sector, it depends on the employers not really on the work asked, in general (not for all but quite often) women are paid 20 less than men for the same hours of work ( that's why there is the" women sometimes have to work harder to have the same things as men")still in the private sector not public .	Gender	Gender - General	2/149	1.342
For stereotypes and social restrictions , "women are bad in math", "men can't do several things at the same time", "a women should not have sex casually or she is a slut", "a man that doesn't get laid with a lot of women is not normal" ect there are others but you see what i mean.	Sex	Gender - General	1/53	1.887
Now what i find really strange is that in english the definition of feminism only includes women while the true definition in the dictionnary of my country says it is a movement for equality between the sexes and includes everybody in it. A person saying that men shouldn't exist or whatever bullshit ressembling it, is not a feminist, they just claim to be but they are just people who hide their sexism behind a movement. Today's female sexism = anti-men, not today's feminism i wanna make sure these two statements are different. So if you wanna insult these kind of people make sure to use the right term please, i don't wanna be linked to those kind of disgusting people .	Sexism	Gender - General	2/121	1.653
Dan Vanson first of all, the two cv's were made on purpose ...just to see if gender are equal despite having the same experience. Dan Vanson this news site is just explaining the study, it is official it was talked about on tv news and i even had a course and exercises based on this studyat school..it was an actual "enquete" ...and it was not specific to construction...did u read it or you just assumed it was bullshit , the specific information in the study weren't public, they contacted hundreds of people to come up with results. And as you could read in this article (wich i think explains the best the study that as been done since i couldn't find the official one thanks google) they made identical cv's ,they were completely identical except the gender, and for absolutely no valuable reasons they chose the male over the female ...wich is discriminative .	Gender	Gender - General	1/130	0.769

My older sister was an amazing firefighter in her early twenties. She was friggin ripped, too, and was stronger than a lot of men (not an exaggeration). Now in her early thirties, she's a successful interior designer and builder with a kid who she is also raising like a boss. My other older sister has always fought health complications her entire life but still keeps up with training in martial arts and boxing to keep her health up. She had a c-section to bring her little boy into the world, then went right back into training. Now she's fit and ridiculously strong, and even though she is still ill, she is stronger than ever, both mentally and physically. My mother suffered the loss of her young parents in her teenage years, has lost 6 of her siblings who were all taken before their time, has thyroid cancer, and is looking out for 13 children, and despite all of that... She's still strong and fit and does a lot of work and activity. There are much more incredible, strong women in my life that not only other women, but also men could look up to. Women can be strong. Men can be strong. Women can be strong in one way or another, as can men. There is no such thing as different brains, people are what they're taught, and if men are taught that they are automatically stronger and better, then they will believe that, and if women are taught that they are weak and cannot compare than they will believe that. On a more positive note, if a man is taught that a woman is capable just as he is, then he will believe that. And if a woman is taught that she is capable, then she will believe that. Not only children can be taught, but also adults. But if you aren't willing to learn or change your ways, then I feel sorry for you. You're missing out on a lot by looking down on people. Also, by saying men's strength is the reason why gender equality isn't possible is like saying women's beauty is the reason why they are slightly higher. That's ridiculous. A man can be prettier than a woman , and a woman can be stronger than a man. Not everything is so black and white. I can't believe some people don't know this. I'm basically a kid, and I know more about this crap than adults. Geez...	Black, Gender, Woman	Ethnicity - Black, Gender - General	6/411	1.46

I honestly respect women of course since I am one, but I feel like a lot of WOMEN are being sexist towards MEN now days. Like think about it here are some examples our society has set for these things. 1. Women are brave if they hit men, men are evil brutal perverts if they hit women. 2. Women are romantic if they suddenly kiss men, men are perverted if they suddenly kiss women. 3. It's just a mistake if women go into mens bathroom, it's perverted and nasty if a man goes into the womens bathroom. 4. Women staring at a mans crotch is flirting, men staring at a womans breasts is perverted and offensive. 5. Women saying "let's split the bill" means she is independent, men saying "let's split the bill" means he is cheap. 6. Women touching a guys crotch won't get them into serious trouble if gone to the police for, but a guy touching a womans breasts or butt will get them in serious trouble. I guess it's just that I see a lot of women sticking up for their rights and THAT IS WONDERFUL because there are SO many people who disrespect women. I guess in my opinion there are a lot of people nowadays making men perverts just by complimenting girls. My grandpa legit got into trouble at his work because he said that this girl at work looked very nice. IT WAS A COMPLIMENT FFS. I guess guys are just being labeled as perverts for just about anything, and yes, the majority of perverts happen to be males, but that doesn't give any right for anyone to disrespect a male in that way. Nor should a female be disrespected! I think sexism is the stupidest thing in the world because they don't change who we are inside. Idk, it's probably just me. I just had to rant about that, sorry. And p.s the 1-6 things I saw on a post and it just made me realize some stuff so	Sexism	Gender - General	1/338	0.296

Awesome AGJ she clearly said she is a woman , so I doubt she doesn't know how hard it is. Honestly, as a girl, I've seen in my life more sexism headed towards men than towards women. You know, female teachers going all "you girls are smart, quiet and amazing...however you boys are loud, can't behave and can't understand anything unless you're told it multiple times". Or sending girls to the bathroom when they asked and not boys. I literally had a teacher last year who once said "you boys in this class are lucky, there are only pretty girls in here. You on the other hand...". And all of this from a very very young age . Look, I get that in many parts of the world us women still don't have the same rights as men, and we've had to fight a lot to get to the point we're at now. But now we're putting reversed sexism in children's heads, and it's just wrong	Age, Sexism, Woman	Age - General, Gender - General	4/164	2.439
I don't think you are right on number 2. If a man knows a woman for long enough, and they have a good relationship, he can kiss her. Same with a woman being able to kiss a man. But some men try and approach women on the streets without knowing them and try to harass them. This IS just a problem we have in general. Men approach women because they think we are the weaker and more pathetic gender and won't be able to stop them. But we have to prove them wrong. In general, men have much more rights than women, this is why there isn't a thing called 'masculism' because they don't have much to fight for. Women, on the other hand, have it hard more often. omg no don't apologize for that. You're a breath of fresh air. And what you said is so true. One day in my history class, we were learning about WWll and my teacher decided to show us an episode of some show called Bomb Girls. It's about women's roles during the wars, and how they had to look after everything in their country and work their husbands jobs. Anyways, in this one scene, some girl was pushing her fiancé up against the wall, trying to kiss him and take off his pants. He brushed her off and kept telling her to stop. A girl in my class made the teacher pause the movie and went off about how this scene doesn't make sense because 'no guy in his right mind would ever not want a pretty girl to have sex with him and have her hand down his pants', and how she doesn't know any guy that would 'push a hot girl off of him' and 'not want to make out with him'. Like, what the hell? Basically, she's saying that guys can't be raped or sexually assaulted if the perpetrator is an attractive woman, and that even if the guy is saying no, he obviously still wants it deep down, so they don't need a guys consent to do anything. And it's okay for a girl to force herself on a guy, as long as she's pretty. And that men can't control themselves, and their sexual desire always come through even if they appear to not be interested. She's so messed up	Sex, Sexual, Woman	Gender - General	3/264	1.136
I agree and I'm a girl, people are saying birth is the most painfulest thing but your the one who chose to have that baby in the first play (sometimes) people need to understand men go through tough times as well , a comment I saw said "men are weak" and just kept on going about pregnancy well you don't get babies like every year.Also everyone's focusing on bed men, there are good men out there! It's like with girls ,they're bad girls and good girls and what do we most talk about good woman and with men the opposite, Not being sexist is knowing men and woman are equal, but everyone's just focusing on men being sexist. Some mothers send there daughters to school because it's a girl. I'm lucky to have a loving mother that send me to school (so no need to say your just a kid you won't understand)but that's not the point , the point is WOMAN deserves respect the same way MEN do	Woman	Gender - General	3/170	1.765

1. Most of the time when women hit men, it's because their in a dangerous situation. I personally believe that no one should hit anybody, but men often hit women when they don't get their way, while women often are trying to protect themselves. 2. I've literally never heard that. I don't think ether are perverted as long as it's consensual. 3. Agreed. 4. Both are perverted, but I've never seen the media look at women staring at a man's crotch as flirting. I was watching this movie with my stepdad (I forgot what it was called but it was about this wedding) and a girl was staring at the man characters crotch and her grandmother yelled at her in front of everyone. Which she should have done, but I've never seen anyone encourage that kind of behavior. 5. This one is more about who has more money. On average men have more money then women. So if a less wealthy women splits the bill with a more wealthy man (which is usually the case), then I'd agreed the women is being independent, but I agree with the fact that it doesn't make men cheap. 6. On average men harassing women is more likely to happen then women harassing men, so people see harassment as a masculine thing, and being a victim is a feminine thing. Therefore, when the police laugh at a male victim, they are laughing at how degrading "acting" like a female is since most victims are females, which is sexist towards women. Also even though women are taken slightly more seriously, only 16 of sexual harassers have faced consequences for their behavior. Neither gender has it easy when it comes to harassment. I'm sorry your grandfather was accused like that, but did he get in trouble for that? Lots of women are accused of being "sluts" just by talking to guys, and lot's of women are received as "needy" when they report harassment. I'd say their are an equal amount of sexist men as their are sexist women. The difference is, sexist women are often just annoying, while sexist men are scary and in most cases abusive. sexism exist, we are just in a phase where we are starting to see specific problems being reversed, and people are being like OMG sexism doesn't exist anymore. Everything you said only occurs in developed countries. Developing countries don't even have basic laws that protects women's rights. What you said is true, but remember the world is beyond what you see, beyond what your friends see. Have you heard of dowry deaths in India? Do you know the number of girls being kidnapped and raped in villages in China? Did you know that women couldn't drive until last year in Saudi Arabia? Do you know how many girls are abandoned after being born in China? Do you have how many women in India have access to the internet? Do you know what it feels to be a woman in a less developed society? Do you know that women can not get a divorce in Kenya while men can have multiple marriages? Do you women in Kenya are starving? Feminism is about having equal opportunities between the two sex. Feminism is about allowing girls to be educated if boys are. Feminism is about raising a girl in China, giving her the same chances that boys have. Feminism is about letting women have the same freedom as men in Saudi Arabia. Feminisms is about throwing away all those stereotypes that we use to define ourselves, oh girls must get a tan, or oh you must wear dresses that doesn't show skin or else you are a slut. Feminism is about the freedom that we deserve to express ourselves and to do the things we want to do. Sexism is beyond thinking oh a girl is kissing a boy she must be romantic. Sexism is when men believe that women are shallow, cowards, unintelligent, etc. There is a reason why men are to be considered as 'perverts' when they kiss a girl, because through out history, they were always above us, they were always the one that's kissing us without our consent while we are fighting our ass off to pull them back down to the same level as we are.	Sex, Sexism, Tan, Woman	Gender - General, Nationality - British	7/359	1.95

The one question where the Girl Meets World star was asked if she had any dieting tips for girls struck me as odd to be considered sexist. Men and women have very different body chemistry so what might work for a girl probably won't work for a guy, or at least not as well, that's why dieting/exorcising products are marketed to specific genders because a weight-loss pill engineered for women won't be as effective on men. Don't misunderstand, the question was still stupid, but not for the reason of being sexist ('cause it wasn't), the question was dumb because everyone's body chemistry is individually unique. No one regimen will universally suit everybody, that's why the most efficient way to loose weight and or build muscle is to first understand your personal body chem and design a modified regimen based off of that, but that's a whole other beast and most people don't have the time and or resources to do it so it's fine if you just follow a basic regimen, you just won't be reaching your peek that's all. As for if and when someone asks what dieting tips a certain person would have for their respective gender, it doesn't mean their sexist or even stupid, really, it just means their not an expert on the science and opt to go the simpler way.	Dumb, Gender	Gender - General, Physical Identity - Physical (and Mental) Impairments	2/225	0.889

I know this video is from like..... last year but I do have to say that with me being in school to become a CMC (Certified Medical Coder) I have faced a lot of Sexism . I've been asked multiple times if that was the only profession where I felt like I was actually doing something with my time instead of being a nurse like "most other girls" and if I only got into it because "its a mostly female dominated profession"..... the funny thing is that I'm not afraid of men, I'm not afraid of working with them or around them. I know there is a pay gap but I know I can excel in my chosen profession.... and truth be told, its not completely female dominated. The biggest part of being a CMC is proving that you can handle all the work loads. So while all the guys I'll be working with are sitting at their desks at a 9-5 job, here in a few years I'll be able to do my job from a beach or from my bed like the Boss Lady that I am. :)	Sexism	Gender - General	1/189	0.529

Well yes, i know they are allowed to do it, and i know it's "women don't do engineering". But i just said it could be hard for a lot of people to do things that have been seen as a gender appropriate job, even worst if they come from a family that thinks like that, or teachers...i also think that the comment of penny Lynn didn't mean that they are not allowed to be engineer,since her /his mom is one, but that they are not supposed to because of stereotypes :) And i do think there are exceptions in stereotypes, for exemple "horse riding is a girl's sport" knowing that the number of men compare to women in high level horse riding is far superior. Also Some stereotypes existed long before we started to find equality , and they are still alive even tho they don't make any sense.it's much more complicated than what you explained to kill a stereotype , most of the time the old repeat it to the young. I was only reminding that good feminism is now supposed to fight for people that have been trapped in this sort of mechanism and whi can't see themselves going forward to what they like, or feel like they are not able to do it because of their gender , even if it's their problem a little help doesn't hurt (men and women) . I used to play netball, and I always remember this one tournament. Our team had just finished a match and a photographer came over, she was taking pictures for the local newspaper or some kind of newsletter. Anyway, I had run to the water fountain to fill my bottle, and since it was on the other side of the school I was doubly sweaty when I returned. The team was lined up and waiting for me so the picture could be taken, and the photographer took one look at me and said something along the lines 'Oh, actually, I'll take the picture with just these players.' I was confused, as was everyone else. Her reasoning was something like 'Well, you're quite sweaty, and it doesn't look very appealing on a girl, especially in a picture that's going to be published.' I was upset, but I don't really like calling people out on that stuff, I don't know why, I guess some people are just better at it. One of our team members did it for me, and I always remember what she said; 'Sexism doesn't look very appealing on anyone either, including you.' It was just so badass in my 14 year old opinion, and sure, I didn't actually look that great when the picture came out, but I'm so glad that girl stood up for me, can't remember her name but I remember her clap back. Aaliyahloves yt No human, man or woman , can do anything and everything. I know it sounds nice and uplifting to say that you can do anything you put your mind to, but you cant. No one can, except God (assuming he exists that is). Women can not do everything a man can do and men can not do everything a women can do. We are different. Our brains are different, our bodies are different, and our abilities are different. Men and women need each other. One is not better than the other, but we are different. Pretending we are not is just delusional and not backed by any science. That is not to say that no woman can be stronger than any man, but it takes an extremely strong woman and a pretty weak man for that to happen, so it is rare. I do think the teacher just want her students to be careful. Maybe the way she speaks her concern isnt the best, maybe if she just said "dont hit anyone too hard" or "be civil" without having to put "girls" in her sentence would be better. Maybe that way you and the other girls wouldnt take her concern wrong. But girls practicing sport with boys isnt about proving girls can take physical pain as much as the boys. If the boys hit girls with all their power, the risk is you could get injured, you could need to go the hospital, and the boys could risk doing a real assault in what, a school gym session? I dont think your teacher want to take the risk having their male students feeling guilty of that, you know. The teacher doesnt want the boys to actually be assaulter. She just doesnt want to take the risk, could we blame her? Maybe your teacher's concern isnt only about you, girls. It's about avoiding any possible assault. Please forgive your teacher for not saying her concern in better way, maybe she needs to work on that too? And another thing: you beat the boys in sport, that's amazing. But i think it's better for you believing you are good in sports. What boys have to do with you being good in sports? Like beating boys is proving girls power or something? Like Emma Watson said, feminism is about equality, so please take it as "you're good in sport" and gender doesnt have anything to do with it. Girls doesnt have to beat boys to prove girls power. Just do our best in things we want to do, achieve our dreams, have a strong believe in ourselves, that's feminism i think. You know This thread of reply's on this comment are a perfect example of how little understanding men and women have of each other. We are so disrespectful and make rude and nasty comments about something we have never experienced and decide that our opinion is right . It just makes me sad that that people say these things and don't even know why they are wrong. Why do we have such strong opinions on things we never have and never will undergo . Also I don't know about you but I was taught that if you don't have something nice to say you shouldn't say anything at allSide note: all of the people trying to say that having cramps and periods is hard . I respect you and I am not trying to call you out for that. I just want to say we should also recognise the problems of the opposite gender .also the people saying that men have problems too , I know that everyone has problems which are not seen as problems a lot of the times. But saying that periods aren't painful and don't take strength and that people complain about them too much is not okay. Even if you yourself have them it might be more painful for others . Medication doesn't always work you know? Also a lot of people don't have access to it . Someone making fun of something that causes you pain and calling you dramatic for expressing your pain is so beyond heart breaking So in the end what I am trying to say is that we should not joke about something at the expense of someone's happiness. And just be nice to each other and not use language that hurts someone's feelings . Also to all the people fighting about who is stronger,I personally think everyone is so strong . Brooke684 well gal, fear and forgiveness are actually two interconnected issues when it comes to criminals. It's easier to sympathise with women, especially attractive women. That much is scientifically proven. With sympathy comes forgiveness, as you're able to put yourself in the shoes of the woman who has broken the law. Whereas since men are more intimidating than women, who would sympathise with them? In short, you fear what you don't understand. You don't 'forgive'(which is a very nebulous term for you to use btw, like who are we even talking about? Friends? Family? Community?) What you fear because you don't attempt to understand; because you don't empathise with them.Lastly, just a rhetorical question to provoke some thoughts on your end. why are juries harder on men than women if it's easier to 'forgive' men for crimes? * nie * Give an example or a source. It's illegal to pay someone more because of their gender . If the pay gap was real, business would hire most/all women. Women tend to choose low paying and more part-time jobs. In fact according to Jordan Peterson, women tend to be less agreeable than men. If you want to get paid more, contact your boss to give you a higher wage instead of being jealous and complaining. By the way, what job were you talking about?	Gender	Gender - General	1/85	1.176

* nie * I know how to spell, you're probably doing this to avoid logical discussion. Women tend to choose more part-time jobs, women tend to choose low-paying jobs and they make other life choices that result to lower pay. If you compare the wage of two genders, are you going to expect the outcome being the same? No, life choices will deviate someone's amount of money. If businesses actually got away with paying women less, they might hire most if not all women to run their company. What you said before: There are jobs that actually a man gets paid more than the woman . That could mean many things including discrimination, but maybe the man was working longer than the woman .	Woman	Gender - General	2/122	1.639

f u r r e t Well unfortunately, half of today's feminists are sort of sexist. If only feminists focused on stopping sexual harassment and focusing on other countries who NEED feminism like Afghanistan. The Taliban (from Afghanistan) believe that women shouldn't have a right to education. The Taliban still exist and is alive and well, we need feminists to stop wasting their time blaming everything on men, complaining about the debunked wage gap and complaining about Trump. They should instead help third world countries with their feminism.	Sexual	Gender - General	1/87	1.149
Momo Ali Finally! Thank you. There could be many excuses but when I say the same job I really mean it. I even know some women that work harder than their male co-workers for years and they don't get promotion to the higher position like them for example. I mean that employers save money on us. It is illegal to pay less just because of gender but it is really easy to make up an excuse no matter how stupid would it be.	Gender	Gender - General	1/83	1.205

* nie * There can be reasons for that like that women tend to be less agreeable. If someone notices that they are being discriminated, they can report it. If businesses can get away with paying women less, they might resort to hire exclusively more women. What's the reason businesses pay women less because of their gender , do they benefit from it? And BTW what job are talking about specifically?	Gender	Gender - General	1/70	1.429
f u r r e t I agree with you on that point even though i'm a socially conservative person who doesn't identify as a feminist. People think feminism was bad when it was actually good. 1st wave feminism and other older feminism movements were fighting for suffrage rights, that was good. Feminism today but in developing countries is good because they are advocating for something non-political and morally right like a woman's right to be educated, banning female genital mutilation, etc. I honestly think the only thing the only thing modern-day western feminism needs is to stop sexual harrassment. metoo Feminism was historically great and it's sad for people to say feminism is cancer. It's unsettling that they might be including historical feminism.	Sexual	Gender - General	1/124	0.806
The Corny Uni Actually, biologically, doesn't the Y gene (the gene for the male sex ) come from the X gene (the gene for the female sex )? Meaning that men COME FROM women, theoretically. One of the legs of the X (female) break off which creates the Y (male), therefore men were created biologically by women which might have been for survival purposes OR bacteria then were technically female-like and needed an OPPOSITE counterpart (meaning the male counterpart of females) creating the male sex as a defense mechanism or for protective purposes. I like this theory, to be honest.	Sex	Gender - General	3/99	3.03

So I'll just freely state my opinion. As far as equality goes, from my perspective... it's equal opportunity. I'm talking about equality in genders not where your social class lies. There are statistics that show men being favoured over women after they both sent in an identical cv in companies, from my perspective feminism is being able to tackle issues like that. Men may have more physicals strength and so it's understandable why sports and similar relations should be separate for both sexes but within the sports, you'll find just as much competition, even if one is predominantly better than the other. Both genders are putting in just as much effort, therefore in my opinion should get the same pay. Women's football for instance doesn't get as much recognition. Academically, men and women share similar IQs. And 95 of sexism is towards women, which leaves 5 against men. Not saying that's not to be dealt with but if the sexism towards women disappeared, there'd be no 5 toward men. All stereotypes would be eradicated, and life would be great for everyone. The way I see it is, the men who continuously go against the belief of the same salary or try and say that it's already there need to read statistics or stop being selfish. Because let's be honest, holding women back makes their life easier, as I've witnessed first handedly.	Sexism	Gender - General	2/231	0.866

Connor Late Yes that is true, but not everyone is treated unfairly equally, if you know what I mean. Some people are treated more unfairly than others. White people are the most non-discriminated ethnicity in US. So the reason why we have " Black lives matter" and not "all lives matter" is because everyone wants to make it something about them. Black people were being extremely discriminated against at the time (still are, but it was worse at the time) so, " black lives matter" was started. Because people weren't seeing them as equals. So they started a campaign saying that black lives matter too. For people to come up to them and say "All lives matter" is so disrespectful. That is not even what people are fighting for. They were fighting for black lives to matter too. They totally understood that all lives matter, but they were protesting what was happening. They were fighting for black lives to matter, when you come up and say shit like, "All lives matter" that completely gets rid of the protest. There is no point to protest when people are sitting there trying to bring it back to how it was. Same thing with feminism. How do we fight for equal treatment when people say that feminism shouldn't be a thing? Lets take LGBTQ for an intense. When you have people asking why there are pride parades, you should just be happy that you don't need one. You should be happy that you don't have to have a parade to try to make yourself be accepted into society. This is why we have things like this dividing us as people. Because we all want to be accepted, but you can't without a protest.	Black, Ethnicity	Ethnicity - Black, Ethnicity - General	7/288	2.431
Oh stfu. You forgot another incorrect feminism. "Men are better than women". "Women belong in the kitchen". " Women are just good to look at. No need to speak". "Housewives". "Women sleeping around are whores. Men are players". Etc. Sexism isn't just expressed by one gender . Also, those things are true. Men do have it easier I mean obviously, they're still paid more for doing the same job as women. Do more research or something	Gender, Sexism	Gender - General	2/75	2.667

Connor Late the reason that feminism needed to be a thing is because women had no rights the only reason that women have the right to vote and work and do all the things that we can do now is because of things like feminism. Black lives matter is a thing because black people have been so horribly discriminated against in the past and they still are today a white person cannot always understand this because you don't go through it specially if you're young and haven't lived very long in order to see this happen so what you're saying is completely incorrect even though you might be coming from a good place with it it's not factual. Without feminism and without organizations like black lives matter racism and sexism in all these things that are horribly unjust and wrong will continue to go on and on. Bored im Really Bored it is true that women get lighter jail sentences than men but Jesus f* Christ you're talking about criminals committing violent crimes as opposed to the sexism that women experience on the regular, where we can't even make as much money as a man does at the same goddamn job. Jail sentences and the wage Gap are not comprable things and sexism in this country and probably in the world is not equal at all. In general men do not have to worry about being sexually harrassed in the workplace... not on the level that women do. And I damn sure don't have to worry about being paid less at a job just because they're a man. I'm not afraid to walk from their office to their car at night for fear of being raped by a random person and with 90 of men committing a violent crimes including rape in this country women are the majority of the victims very seldomly is a man a victim of random rape by another man. And these are just a few examples. So yes absolutely everybody experiences some type of hardship or discrimination at some point in their life but to say that everybody experiences that equally is a blatant lie men do not experience sexism in America on the level that women do when white people do not experience racism on the level that black people do. That's just the truth regardless of certain people who choose to bury their head in the sand not look at the facts and disagree with that statement. Bored im Really Bored the wage Gap is talking about a man and a woman getting paid different salaries for doing the same job. It has nothing to do with being upset because the job that women usually choose pays a lesser salary than different jobs that me usually choose. That's not what I'm talking about at all...I think you're missing the point. Lol	Nothing, Woman	Age - Youngsters, Gender - General	2/64	3.125

Bored im Really Bored men committing suicide is not the fault of a woman you f* idiot. Men dying on the front lines in combat is not a woman 's fault either. You're perpetuating a lie about this false Narrative of women in droves coming out here and falsely accusing men of rape its total f* b and it's a lie everyone false rape allegation out there there are hundreds of actual sexual assaults that go unprosecuted. You don't understand what the wage gap is. And you have no point when talking about men being 80 of victims of violence. Men perpetuate 90 of the violent crimes in America so again if other men are victims of those you need to look at your own f* gender to lay that blame. It's not the fault of women. The only thing you said that holds any truth is the fact that court systems do favor women in custody cases but not as much in divorces. I know plenty of women that have been screwed over in their divorces. I think many divorced men are just pissed off bc when they get a divorce they actually have to contribute financially to their ex wife and have to give her part of the assets that were accumulated during the marriage that she should be entitled to because she f* helped accumulate those assets. It's clear that you have cognitive dissonance and that you are just an angry white men in America that thinks that he's marginalized when in reality the opposite couldn't be more true. Smh and lmao. Sad sad sad. It's not acceptable for a woman to grab a man's ass without his consent it's also not acceptable for a woman to beat on a man either. Again 90 of serial killers in America are white men. In the 13 of the population that you're referring to being black people their victims are other black people they're not killing white people in record numbers by any means. 90 of mass Shooters in America or national white men. And you're sitting there saying that white people aren't running people over with cars are committing bombings as if white people don't knock each other off all the time for insurance money hahaha. There's no point in having a conversation with someone like you who's already made up their mind to be sexist and racist . That's undoubtedly how you were raised and sadly if you're already an adult the chances of you actually changing your way of thinking and opening your eyes to reality are extremely low. It's really sad that you're so set in your ways that you don't have enough and busy to stop and look through someone else's eyes to see what the situation might be like from their point of view it seems that you can only see and acknowledge the reality of yourself and people like you and that's sad. I think the point that people were trying to make with Emma Watson's 'sexy' post is that the people who really appeal to them are men. These men are objectifying her because of her features (you know what features I'm talking about) she calls herself a feminist yet is pretty much selling her body to the men who think of her no more than a pretty face and big tits. If. She really wanted to stop sexism , she should post about how objectifying women, or anyone for that matter (men get catcalled too) is wrong. Instead she is encouraging men to think of women as toys. I am a girl. I'm not feminist. Yes, sexism exists but from my experience, no one is sexist towards me. All my friends are boys except for a few girls, no one I know is sexist towards me but if any one is I won't except that. Actually (I don't want to insult you), feminismn is about giving woman choice. They should be able to wear what they want and post it if they are happy with it. She's not selling her body, if so, every actor would do so. She is doing it against feminismn, because being male doesn't justify objectifying her. I mean, I don't objectify her, too, although I'm pansexual, neither I do if guys go out without a shirt. Like any normal person should. Because you are a feminist, you have the right to wear what you want, too, and you don't have to cover up since 'it's her fault she's being objectified'. No, it's the men who do that. Men should be educated right, that woman are woman and not objects, also, if they wear open chlothes. One question: Why do you think chlothes are important for feminismn?! Arianna CAT Feminism is like a group of short, ugly, bald , guys with small dicks that are angry that they can't score! and more.. they demand from women to threat them the same way as handsome toll guys with huge dicks.. retarded. Feminism is just wishful thinking and yes, it is retarded so lets imagine this situation.. healthy women are applying for the same job along with disabled man. do you think he will be complaining about his life situation? the life is about competition, short guy compete with tall one, ugly compete with handsome, small dick with big and so on and on sex ain't the crucial point of competition, but your confidence, your ability, your skill, your positive impression, if you are eager and invest into company your rapacious hunger of success, sometimes your cruelty or rather callousness. everything that defines success of the company. this is fucking Sparta. sharks and wolfs. the best is going to achieve more than the weaker. sex doesn't really matter that much, it is so overrated. it can be (and often it is) just another advantage to get better position, better job (and obviously it it towards woman ) nobody is going to give better position for men cuz of his attractiveness - simple. you can't cover all working days? at work? - fine, but.. be concious of what is following - u will get less money. you will be treated differently, considerably handicapped . why? cuz I just can't depend on you 100, can't count the same way like on this worker that I am sure on him - he will be every day at work and to top it off.. will be stable during whole month. mentally and skill will be around the same level. Why you blaming men for your period ffs? or for your bleeding? this is just irrelevant.. is this our fault? you ain't feminist you are just fucking morons.. if you blaming men for that. do disabled people blaming women that they are disabled ? women gave them birth, why not blame women and make the incomes the same like handicapped /retarded and any going further addicted they were born by women as well, so lets pretend that it's mum's fault? how retarded is that? Domestic violence is higher in lesbian couples? Where did you get those stats?! Please, I really want to know though!I said 3 times now, it is needed because we are not treated equally socially, generally, men think we are dumber, and judged us based on our looks, not our actions, women are constantly objectified for profit... Not always but if it happens, it needs to be adressed!!! This is getting boring to explain, if you are a guy then it's obvious why you can't see it -.- You've never been through any of it anyway... And yes Real Men and Real Women, are those who are intelligent, think for themselves and see the truth - women and men are different, complementary, and both deserve the same respect and opportunities!!! LORDSDEED MBUAN to be fair, there are some laws and stuff in society that do favor woman more than men. For example, woman usually always win the children in divorce court, woman with a child usually can easily get welfare food stamps if they don't make enough money, a man with a kid has to literally be so poor to be approved because the government thinks men can and should be able to work so they don't need that help. Another example is that woman can try hitting men and if men try to hit that woman back in self defense suddenly we are the bad guy cause we hit a girl. People always side with the woman when relationships end too, or people expect you to make enough money for the woman to stay home if she wants and they think it's weird if you need help from your partner with 'manly' things cause you should be able to do it on your own. Sexism goes both ways, I can't tell you how many times I get told, 'men should always pay for the dates.' 'Men should always be nice to women even if they are acting moody and taking it out on you.' Etc. the main issue with people stripping down on camera is the fact that were still living in a time period where those things are meant to be sexual . It's very instilled, especially in mens minds, that certain body parts or favorable physical characteristics are meant to be seen as sexy when in reality they're just body parts. nothing abnormal, everyone has them, but were still placing idolization on things like big tits and asses. a lot of women in the entertainment industry are more likely to show their body for a little extra internet appraisal and that's ridiculous. then you are a perpetuation of women, and even men in some cases, being seen as sexual items. talent is talent, I don't need someone to shake their ass to know they can make good music. objectification can only stop when women stop doing it as well. then, maybe, there will be some progress in men viewing body parts as normal rather than sexy. No one thinks a colon is sexy, so why are asses? that's for lumbar support and to help push out my shits. tits are meant to feed babies, not to be oggled over. Anna no they aren't the worst, just because you may not have it in you to say something. They are the worst for 2 reasons, 1. You make that shit up in your mind and you're incapable of seeing yourself as something more than a female, eg: a guy doesn't like my work or me. Feminist brain: "it's because I'm a woman ", woman 's brain : "it's because he didn't like it".2. You are first class hypocrites, feminist like you don't even know the rules of your own ideology because you're busy thinking about how your vagina can influence you and people around you today. On one hand feminist want to shut down strip clubs(I don't support it because I believe in modesty) because women are willingly shedding their garments to earn money and on the other hand Emma Watson says so long as it's the woman 's choice, she should be allowed to shed her garments for money because THAT'S feminism. Do you hear yourself or your leaders when you/they talk? They are teaching you to not only be helpless but use your vagina as a coupon in some places and as a weapon in other places. Feminism teaches you that you have no identity beyond your genitalia. Also, I live in a very sexist country and very competitive, I've tried the victim mentality and it's honestly exhausting having to analyze everyone's actions because I think it may be sexism . I have a life to live and that's why I quit feminism. PS : if you didn't get it yet, I'm a woman .	Sexism, Woman	Gender - General	3/263	1.141

Fucking great comment. Thankyou.I'd also like to add that this is very similar to some issues of " racism " out there.Have you heard of a lady called Dawn Hilton-Williams? She was pulled over by a policeman for speeding, and right after being let go she goes on Facebook live. Through tears she says that she was threatened to be pulled out of the car, she was scared of getting lynched, she called him a bully and said that he degraded her as an African american, and that she was powerless. Because of the video she made, this police officer received death threats, so his supervisor released the video of his body cam. It was a completely civil interaction, but because she (chooses to?) believe(s) she is a victim, everything is a threat. I'm not gonna go off on you for not understanding, but I'll just explain. See, women/girls are constantly being told by society that if you're not thin , you're not beautiful. It's basically just saying, "I assume you're always on a diet because you're a good looking thin girl." It's also saying how people think that girls want dieting tips over all other things they could hear from a female celebrity, because they just assume that being skinny and "beautiful" is such a big deal to every girl. Women should not be shamed because they were born a certain gender. We shouldn't be stereotyped because of our gender. We should not be judged because of our bodies. If we post a more revealing picture on the internet, so what? We should be allowed to be proud of the body we got. Anyways, men can take off their shirts and sag their pants, and get no hate what so ever. But yet people will get furious if a woman posts something revealing like that. I personally think woman should also not be stereotyped as weak. We are just as strong and capable as men no matter what other people think. We are just as mentally and physically strong. Also don't say that all women care about the most is phones or makeup or wearing the cutest clothes. It's not true. Yes some woman do that but don't think everyone does because not everyone is the same. Women are beautiful in their own ways, makeup or not, so don't go calling them ugly or fat or stuff like that. 1. How the fuck is asking a woman to smile sexist? There's literally no way I can think of it as sexist. 2. Watson knows what they're saying she's just playing stupid. "AH IT IZ VARRY CONFU-SING". Most feminists talk about how terrible objectification is so they thought that her, (being a feminist) would think the same and not show her tits off. Not that far fetched really. 3. Ya if he said she was a whore that was uncalled for, sure. Makeup or phone question. It was a simple question, kinda like a what would you take on an island type question. Wasn't sexist at all. Just women acting like the victim once again. 4. I still think she's hot without makeup. 5. He literally called her beautiful. Maybe the interviewer should call her an ugly filthy cunt next time. 6. Maybe Tatum was trying to keep his career by acting like a feminist because theres no way you can be a celebrity in Hollywood without being one. 7. I don't really know anything about Tennis. But maybe those 2 did carry the sport, I don't know. Although I wouldn't say that they're lucky. 8. Ya well Katy Perry should actually do some research on the pay gap and find ya know, all those fuckin videos proving why they're sometimes paid less. Instead of believing in something blindly just because it supports your need to feel like the victim constantly. 9. Ok so, just about any actor always has to lose some kind of weight, Carry Fisher talked about it once. Man or woman , they're almost always asked to lose weight for the rule. She's young so it's very unfortunate her mind has been brainwashed already. 10. Ok well, maybe it's because not every single song from them involves romance or whatever, like hers do. Like, almost every single one. Bruno Mars and Ed Sheeran both have made songs about romance and break ups, but not in the quantity she has. 11. You know, maybe. JUST MAYBE. He said that...BECAUSE IT FUCKING IS. It is a mans profession, you know why? Because men are the vast majority of the ones doing those jobs. Just like how being a fucking teacher is a woman profession, because around 80 percent of teachers are fucking women. Jesus fucking Christ.	Woman	Gender - General	3/387	0.775

1: Telling women to smile is sexist??? How you're clearly ignorant of the subject 2: Emma is wrong there is equality and no major differences in gender. Women already have freedom 3: It's not sexist calling people whores4: I get the guys were being rude and very arrogant but she's just foolish for mentioning equality like that had to do with anything5: That had nothing to do being sexist and she didn't do anything feminist other then keep humoring him. It wasn't even a shut down.6: She is right but she had no reason to say that. The person was clearly just complementing her. She for no reason just wanted to act like a bitch.7: He is obviously not talking about "sexist" men just men that are just shit talking about her8: The guy was fucking joking, she's so god damn sensitive 9: First of all the pay gap doesn't exist if you're a girl and you work as long as the other guy and try like the guy and you don't get paid equally. Guess what you can do??? You can fucking sue them except bitching about it afterwards. Statistically an average women worker is doing her job less then an average Male due to the majority of women are usually mothers taking care of the children like it or not men are most likely going to be gone all day compared to women. Going back to what Katy said. Imagine what she said was the other way around like"I got paid less then like pretty much any guy that's been on that show" or if this was a guy"I got paid like more than pretty much any women that's been on that show" People like you would lose their shit and talk about this one subject for a long time. Btw Idc if she gets paid more she's a very big celebrity needs a big payment so congrats with her. But since you clearly don't acknowledge that. How's her being paid more? An example of equality according to the overdramatic bitch/Emma Watson.10. First of all the question is actually an very good question acknowledging she's in good fit plus if she would help her female fans by spreading a diet. Of course she would take that as an insult for some apparent reason and try to make the person look bad by asking "Do you have any dieting tips for other boys?" Idk how that would be offensive because us guys would take that as a complement. So you're saying flip the gender use of words to point out sexism this is what you're saying is when I had a gf and she said "What's up man?" I will say according to you "What's up women?" I just exposed the sexism just rn11: How is it sexist?? The artist you named were only about two. Plus none of them are directly talking shit about the person and they make a lot more songs other then those. Your songs are 80 talking nothing about your ex boyfriends. This entire list is just pointless and a lot of the 'sexist' comments aren't even sexist. We're talking about criticism here, you can criticise someone for not smiling or look like their enjoying something. You can call someone ugly. The problem with Ariana is that she goes against everything she said and she's not going to gain any respect whilst she's whoring her body off in her music videos and describing how she rides dicks all night in her lyrics. It has been proven the wage gap is a myth, it has been proven rape culture is a myth and it is other woman who put the pressure on woman to set the standard in how they look. If you even looked at how many men's life have been destroyed by 3rd wave feminism for fake rape accusations, false sexual harassment As well as men being victims of domestic abuse but being laughed at it is completely devilish. The standards in society say that men must be strong, men cannot cry, men must take abuse from their wife, men must be over 6 foot and must have a 6 pack. Dumb	Physical Identity - Physical (and Mental) Impairments	1/60	1.667
I think the definition of feminism has been lost, I understand and totally get that women should be able to wear what they want when they want if it makes them feel good, but the reality is people will leer and lust over them because its human nature and it'll never change, some women cry objectification for attention and some don't but for those who do, what do you expect you know guys like to see the female body because its beautiful its imprinted in their dna to be attracted to that, not justifying the way some guys behave but yeah, why would you want to expose your body anyway? Wheres your dignity? So basically your showing your half naked ass to prove a point? how do you expect to be respected when your flashing your bits about for everyone to see when it should only be your significant other who gets to see that, when a woman marries her husband the vows include love and respect for each other, how is she in anyway respecting her husband by letting others see what should only be for him as a married woman , if I was a guy I wouldn't date a girl if she flashes her arse to every Tom dick and Harry because she's purposely trying to gain confidence from the attention of others why isn't my attention enough for her to feel confident, it makes them cheap I'm sorry it does, and another thing, i saw a TV programme yesterday morning, a photo of a guy was shown shirtless and toned, all the women went wild, but if it was a woman shown and guys were whistling and screaming in excitement he would be a pervert? I don't understand. I don't understand how feminists cry equality but at the same time are trashing men and how bad they are that doesn't sound like equality to me. I get guys objectify and take advantage of women that happens alot but if you think stripping is going to solve that it won't, it'll only make the problem worse, its not something we want or we want to hear but it's just a fact. All these women that are feminists and feel "empowered" by nude photoshoots men are just laughing at you and jerking off to your photo you can't have it both ways, and this is coming from someone whos had alot of bad experiences with men.	Woman	Gender - General	3/407	0.737

Things like feminism make me quite angry. The way I see it from most women who are feminists, they're fighting more or less for dominance rather than equality. I understand equal pay, equal standards, etc. But at the same time, most women are just making it to the point where it's like "nope you go in the kitchen and make me a sandwich. " When really it should just be "how about we both get off our lazy asses and make some decent food". This is just my opinion but yeah. Another female	Make me a sandwich	Gender - Female intelligence	1/92	1.087
I think that there are extremists in everything. The way I understand it is that the 'you go make me a sandwich ' is (generally, hopefully) more a rhetorical question that is aimed as a retort more than a response to be taken literally. For example, if a man says to a female, 'go make me a sandwich, ' to which I don't think it'd be so wrong to reply, 'why don't you got make me a sandwich? ' I think in many ways it's really the only way to get devoutly bigoted people to listen—by saying something as strong a statement as a portrayed 'submissive' gender towards a 'dominant' gender . Maybe I'm just out of it, but many feminists I know of and see are out for equality for everyone. I see many saying there's this fight for dominance in that women want to be able to do one thing whilst inhibiting males, such as 'women have to smile' and 'men can't cry,' but I see so many more men saying that to men than feminists saying that to men. For women to be strong men don't have to be seen as weak. They're all genderless traits that are more particular to the individual and every feminist I know knows this. I think of feminism as an equal rights movement for both genders and non-binary people & quite frankly don't really see the deplorable 3rd wave feminism anywhere outside of the internet trolls who have nothing better to do with themselves. What makes me really upset is that many use this so-called tiny group of idiots (the 'feminazi's, if you will—hate the term) as a reason to promote their mysogyny. As if women fighting for themselves and others is a childish game that we've picked up just for the fun of it. Tl;dr: I agree, but also I don't. Phrases like that are very situational imo. But I do agree that neither gender should be the Dominant Force.	Gender, Make me a sandwich, Nothing	Age - Youngsters, Gender - Female intelligence, Gender - General	6/326	1.84

It's actually about turning tables and making men realise they're being sexist. You're confusing misandrists for feminists, friend. A thing a lot of people do.Some people don't really get effected by sexism , but it doesn't mean it doesn't exist. But when you look online it's terrifying. there are rapists who believe they have a right to their own children, rapists blaming women for it because 'they were asking for it' men commenting on women's bodies from social media, to catcalling in the streets. Telling women what makeup to wear, how to dress, how much they should weighSlut shaming if they have had a lot of sex , calling them a prude if they're asexual or just a virgin upset when the main characters are female in films. Arranged marriages, forcing daughters as young as 10 to marry men as old as 60.Not valuing women's opinions in court rooms or important discussions about the country. I've seen a few videos with around 10-15 men and only 2 women.Commenting on a womans menstrual cycle when she expresses her emotions. Telling women they're lying about sexual assault Blaming women for sexual assault Telling women they're not feminine enough. Telling women they're not allowed to abort (highly controversial but it's a woman's choice.) some women keep their keys in their knuckles when walking homeNearly all of these issues happen to men too. Feminism isn't what you see on Tv or in articles written by misandrists.It's those in parades and marches fighting for rape and murder victims, kidnapped victims and victims of sexism . Don't tell me ' sexism isn't real' or 'its man hating' if you're watching misandrists claim they're feminists. how completely ignorant for people to say sexism doesn't exist. It does for little girls being married off to 60 year old men, women being raped and being told they were asking for it, women being beaten because they 'disrespected' their significant other. I think old school feminists would be ashamed of all the hate here, really. There's no such thing as fucking feminazis There's only misandrists: man haters. Like the buzzfeed feminists. They're clearly misandrists and all the feminism movement is getting the backlash from videos like 'manspreading' and things that don't exist. Often confused for feminism. But if you're calling each other dumb and pathetic and insulting each other it isn't feminism. Feminism is about women being respected, respecting each other and people in general. Everyone being respected, really. But name calling, slut shaming and down right unpleasantness contradicts your statements about being feminists. Feminism isn't about men, it's so much more, it's about women, men, equality, love, compassion and maturity. None of what i see here sadly. Feminism is what it's always been about: equality. How hard is it to understand?	Dumb, Old, Sexism	Age - Over 65s, Gender - General, Physical Identity - Physical (and Mental) Impairments	4/184	2.174
solvenskia I was talking about modern day feminism (western feminism) that was shown in this video. What I meant when I said that sexism doesn't exist in the way people say it does is that it's not as much of an issue as it used to be. As I said in my previous comment people give attention to stupid shit instead of solving real problems (like little girls getting married against their will like you mentioned in your comment) I agree with what you said but feminism was created to get women the same rights which they now have and instead of helping women who need it they harrass men who simply don't deserve it anymore (at least most of them don't) and yes. Old school feminsts WOULD be ashamed. Feminism just simply isn't what it used to be. But then again what's so wrong with calling each other names? I don't mind her calling me childish. It's just stating facts. She can call me whatever she wants I don't care. But there's one thing I disagree with. Feminsm isn't about supporting each other or love because we're honestly supporting the wrong things. If it were about equality, love and support we'd stop focusing on political correctness and start focusing on countries where women don't have their rights yet.	Old, Sexism	Age - Over 65s, Gender - General	2/219	0.913

Stop Getting Offended Feminism isn't over, like you said little girls are getting married. Feminism is about equality, just because it exists in some countries doesn't mean it exists in all. If you have a problem with modern day feminists, please acknowledge that they might just be misandrists and don't take it out on us actual feminists just trying to help women's suffering. When the World Cup was a big thing, I saw an ad on my newspaper and because I live in the uk it said 'when England loses, they take the blame' or something. Indicating that these men beat their wives when they lose. Don't tell me it's over because we can vote or because 'we have the same rights' because unfortunately there is still a lot to do. Abuse, rape, sexual assault on teenage girls by teenage boys because they think it's okay is still happening. Girls getting slut shamed and talked down upon based on how many guys they decide to sleep with. You don't have a right to say we have equal rights, because equal rights isn't just about pay. It's about earning the same respect as you would treat another human being. And beating, raping, sexually assaulting and even fucking kidnapping little girls is NOT how you treat human beings. And I personally feel like feminism does have its place in politics. Because they're deciding whether or not we should be allowed to have abortions. They decide our healthcare, they decide everything we fucking do and 99 of them are male. They even touched on the subject of abortion being punishable by death. It's a woman's choice. What if you were raped and carried it's child? What if you were only fucking 12 when you were raped? You need to think of these children carrying their own children because of sick men who think it's okay to prey on young girls. So I think politics DOES have shit to do with feminism until all this shit is sorted out cause I wouldn't want my kids to grow up in the state this fuckin world is in. We call each other sluts and whores and shit so then boys think it's okay to call us sluts and whores. It's fucked up. Like you said, 'feminists attack these men who simply don't deserve it' Well then they're not feminists! If they're attacking men solely because they're fucking men then it's misandry, not feminism. Big difference	Misandry, Sexual	Gender - General	2/409	0.489

Emdontplayguitar I half agree with your comment you're absolutely right, but why do you want to show them? Unfortunately they are perceived as part of sex for some reason I don't know (so I'm with you on that) but I'm afraid women use "empowerment" as an excuse to justify dressing in not very much, they love the attention, yes women should be able to wear what they want, but if you know you look cheap why would you wear it? Lol, I don't want my child seeing half naked women everywhere they look like seriously girls have some dignity, no disrespect but if it were your daughter walking round in next to nothing , don't tell me you wouldn't have a problem with it. Empowerment is a word that is misused often, sick of people and their political correctness bs, its shoved in my face and personally I don't like that I feel like I'm forced to accept this, wheres my freedom of speech? I just get hate for it from the hypocrites spouting their mouth off about "no hate", do you seriously think its okay for a group like little mix to be wearing what they wear and dancing like they do in a room of children, poisonous if you ask me.	Nothing, Sex	Age - Youngsters, Gender - General	2/212	0.943

Emdontplayguitar you made a very valid point there they are there to feed a child I don't get why they are a sexual thing neither but the sad reality of it is somehow most people have just made it that way, I mean if you look at a playboy magazine, models have their boobs out I think it maybe down to cavemen times, a guy who sees a girl with healthy boobs would probably subconsciously think that she would be a good mate for carrying his children because she has alot of room to produce milk, that's just a theory of mine I really don't understand the male mind, but I just think it's because men know other guys will leer and lust at his wife or girlfriend and he won't like that, especially if boobs were on show because thats just what men like. I do feel you though at the same time of course if it's hot you should be able to.	Sexual	Gender - General	1/164	0.61
Emdontplayguitar also in regards to celebrities, alot of them know that alot of children follow them and idolise them because granted they are talented people, I'll even bring the behaviour of men into this it isn't just women, take Ariana grande for instance a fair majority of her fan base are teens and children and she's making songs about sex and wearing tiny skirts, I like the girl but I just think she isn't setting a very good example when she has full acknowledgement of the fact it's the kids that are following her mainly, wouldn't let my daughter have nothing to do with that. She's stunning as hell and her voice is mind blowing but she tries to hard to be sexy and then moans when people comment on it not everyone will agree with what she does and some people are just more vocal about it that others, granted people could be a bit more respectful about it but everyone's different. So since telling someone that they should have smiled more when they were being complimented is sexist, what just what, how, and her response of smiling doesnt win you gold medals, is just what again, it makes no sense so if you ask a man to smile that isnt sexist but wait if you think for 2 seconds you realize that the expectation of someone to smile while receiving compliments is naturalthen we have the emma watson thing wich shouldnt even be on this list i mean it wasnt even sexist because the people saying also call themselves femenists i dont have a problem with modeling its dumb to have a problem with it but if emma watson is the type of person who beleives women are uneaqual but thinks its dumb that women dont like it when other women clearly alot sexier than them show off their hot tits so that they can give men boners and the one who whine cant, then she needs to drop the feminist label and show her cause a diffrenter way while i personally am not someone who considers themselves to be a feminist i understand that a good looking woman in her positian may feel differently but i think feels wrongariana is right in a way that yes both genders show off their body but you cant just be a man who looks good and then have a presentable body, you have to work out and get muscle, women like ariana are just born the right way and have good looks, not saying she isnt talented, but its clear to see girls that are pretty get through school easier than guys who are handsom, so if she wants to act like theres and extreme double standard than she is forgetting about the fact that men work harder for thata and dont say make up or diet yada yada working out takes diet and working out is harder than makeup also ariana while she is beutiful and i like to see girls looking natural too but she acts liek it isnt true, i might talk to a girl and she will be all day texting while i have to answer in fear of losing an opertunity for a good relationship and yea all women spend money on things like makeup and their phones, there is this one beutiful girl who im talking to who yes says all the time how thats all women do also if you walk down the street all women will have makeup and almost all will have a phone out so i mean you cant ingnore ho wmuch longer it takes a woman to get ready and how much more she posts on social mediahow was the one with the disney girl everyone forgot about sexist at all it was by a woman im guessing by the name and she didnt say it was bad jsut different i mean only a woman could see another woman like her as ugly even when men think otherwise because they judge each other and men more than men do im in high school so i experience that first handthe other girl who i dont know that comes up next not at all sexist wtf makes no sense i had a hard time even comprehending the words but its seems like he was saying that there was more pressure on someone with looks wich well there is and yea you think about how you look that girl i mentioned earlier asks me if she looks good multiple times aday maybe its cz she likes me but whatever they do care about how they look or they wouldnt spend that time and mone on their looks that guy just,,,, wutwell with every sport almost men are better than women in head to head action and are watched more, i dont really follow tennis as much but i only know serina so i mean she cant be riding cannnt heir coatails i dont think

Excuse me? Sorry but I am a male, I'm not ashamed of that as though you should not be ashamed of being a female.. I'm not saying that men are stronger than women, or that women are stronger then men, but YOU are being sexist also. Anyone can be sexist. Women can be sexist to other women, and men can be sexist to other men. Saying that only men can be sexist IS sexist. And this is going to come out rude, but I am a 14 year old boy and girls and boys have been mean to me that doesn't mean all people are that way. Everyone has a choice. You can focus on all the negative things going on in the world with things like that, or you can think for a minute. Everyone is different, some people are mean some people are nice, sex has nothing to do with it.	Nothing, Old, Sex	Age - Over 65s, Age - Youngsters, Gender - General	3/153	1.961
Shianne Grassmann Funny thing you're against sexism to your gender but not to the opposite? The last sentence really proves it saying that woman are stronger.	Gender, Sexism, Woman	Gender - General	3/26	11.538
Shianne Grassmann the average man is stronger than the average women "fact" and going through more pain on average doesn't make you stronger,also try having testicles that get smashed or hit virtually everyday,a lite flick that causes so much pain you throw up,does that make me stronger? No. Tough and strong are two different things,regardless the fat still remain the "Average" man is stronger than the "Average" women. Sirina Williams is the world's best female tennis player,but would even be in the top 400 male players,why is that? Doesn't mean she isn't good,and still means she could spank me in a game,but she's still playing and being compared to women. She don't look to great compared to men. I mean yeah we have periods but that shouldn't be what defines us ya know? No gender is stronger or smarter because on average EvErOnE is different.. it's likes saying white people are stupid becuaze one person failed a math test.. we just need to stop focusing on who's stronger and focusing on caring and loving each other	Gender	Gender - General	1/58	1.724

Feminism isn't 'girls are better than boys' it's 'everyone is equal' you just shamed boys and said that they shouldn't say they're stronger. But your last sentence was 'girls are stronger'. By your standards, boys aren't allowed to say stuff that girls can. That's just plain sexism . We can't defeat sexism by turning it on the opposite party, that's makes us just as bad. (I'm a girl)	Sexism	Gender - General	2/67	2.985

Shianne Grassmann We do have to deal with pain like when on our periods, childbirth etc. but men also have to deal with pain everyday. It is a fact that the average man is physically stronger than the average woman , but strong can mean different things. Dude, when is the world going to understand, that physiology doesn't have anything to do with sexism? If you're a woman, you can't be as strong as a man! You can't lift like a man, you can't run like a man or compete with men at the olympics. And yes, being an engineer is for men. A woman can be a shitty engineer, if she wants too, but she won't be as good as a man engineer only because his brain is focused on constructing, building and inventing from childhood, yeah, while she plays with her dolls. You can compete with men if you were born liking to fight and invent instead of playing dolls (genetic mistakes happen), but if you were born a healthy woman, who loved playing with dolls, making everything beautiful and caring about everyone, you won't be able to reach a man's level, not unless you're on special drugs or on testosterone (which makes men who they are btw). Estrogen doesn't help with building muscles. Deal with it. Why would you want to become a man? We hear differently, we see differently, we smell differently, we have a different reaction to pain, different bone density, different brain, different interests, different muscles, we are physically different and that's a freaking fact! As a result, we have different professions for men and women. I've seen women who tried to be firefighters. :))) It was very funny because she was blown away by that hose. No matter what a woman does, she can't be as fast and strong as a man at a war. Why would she want to take his job upon herself. As if we didn't have enough of ours...Not unless the man is sick and she's a super woman. Ask a regular man and a regular woman (who don't work out) to do pushups and watch who's going to win. Ask yourself a question: Why don't women ever compete with men at the olympics? Why do men always show better results? Why can't women compete with men at chess competitions, where muscles have nothing to do with it? The answer is pretty obvious to anyone who has a brain. I feel sorry for everyone else, because instead of making feminism look good, they make women look dumb.Also, by taking a man's job, you forget doing yours and yours is way more important because women are responsible for the quality of each generation. She messes up - the whole generation messes up. Because they compete with men instead of spending quality time with children, each generation is getting dumber and weaker. Messed up people (that includes messed up men) are the result of bad mothers. Most criminals and maniacs were raised by a bad mother. We have thousands of messed up people around the world, who fight with their psychological problems, criminals, patients, who seek professional psychological help only because their mothers didn't have time for them. I call those women smart, who understand all of that. Everybody else may pretend to be what they are not. Good luck with making feminism look dumb.	Dumb, Nothing, Sexism, Woman	Age - Youngsters, Gender - General, Physical Identity - Physical (and Mental) Impairments	10/518	1.931

I don't believe the comment to Emma Watson was sexist, actually it is sexist to need a half naked woman to promote a movie..And about her response, yes, feminism is about liberation, because women are not objects and useless, then why to be in a situation in which you end up being a focus on your body, and not your real value? that is the slavey from which we want to release. They don't look the same. But it's just a chest. Why are ours so sexualised and shamed? Why is it slutty to show it when men just don't even think about it before taking their shirts off?Emma Watson spends so much time in politics, in discussing feminism, etc. But the minute she does a "sexy" photoshoot, people focus on it and use it to shame her and basically saying she's not a good feminist. I agree that women are oversexualised but there's a difference when it's their own decision. To me, it's not so superficial anymore. I personally love when a powerful &amp; smart woman like Emma show she can be sexy and confident in her body and still be an intellectual and a good business woman. I don't think this photoshoot was to sell anything. It's just a photoshoot. Anyway, what I mean is that a woman showing her body in our society is not so meaningless because there is a new wave where women want to show their sexual indépendance, their sexualities (that was portrayed by men for so long), ... asking for a workout routine about a muscular role (which you know is relevant to the movie/character) is a lot different than asking a woman about her dieting in her real actual life, irrelevant from the movie. if you asked gal (WW) how she got stronger for her movie, sure. but asking a random actress about her body, irrelevant to her current project, is not the same as asking how to get ripped like Thor. Listen to the questions. They're NOT the same. Questions directed at men are always about THEM. "How did YOU prepare for the role?"Questions directed at women are usually about OTHER people. It's funny that one of the most helpful workouts I've ever seen came from Gal Gadots' workout routines from Wonder Woman . I'm a little past middleaged and wheelchair-bound so keeping issues from happening in advance is a huge thing for me. When she started going into the reverse crabwalks I tried doing it and found that the pain from the repetitive motion of pushing my chair diminished greatly and made it a lot easier to breathe. Granted, I kind of drag my legs behind me and still fall a lot, but I'm getting better. The problem I have is talking about where I got the technique leads most to automatically go to gender from both males and females.	Gender, Woman	Gender - General	2/118	1.695

Many men are scrolling down here all triggered because they feel as if every women blames them for all their hurt, or any sexism . Well we're not, we have a right to be mad because there are so many inequal things on this world that people don't even pay attention to, all our lives, women have been told to dress up, have manner, be pretty so he likes you. And when he wants to sleep with you, just do it because he wants you. And when you do, now your a slut. Even though it was him who raped you at that party, him who asked for nudes and black mailed you, him who smacks your ass in the hallway and makes people stare, him who abused you and walked away untouched. And her who gets yelled at for being feminist. Well, she's sorry she's a female and saw the worst of men, but it's not her fault.	Black, Sexism	Ethnicity - Black, Gender - General	2/158	1.266
Marie 101 That's a heavily specific argument there, and is assuming the existence of the feminist ideology of "rape culture". Women are told to dress all pretty by other women, not men. Frankly, when you out your mind to it, you'll realize that very few men truly care about materialistic makeup. In fact, you'll find that women judge each other far more. Also, it is extremely difficu,t to get away from even being falsely accused of rape these days. If some college football players can get their careers destroyed by false accusations of rape, I highly doubt that people get away with sexual assault	Sexual	Gender - General	1/104	0.962

I got an ad for the new movie Blockers before this. Apparently, it's a bunch of parents conspiring to keep their daughters virgins on prom nite. Okay, if nobody watches the boys, to make sure they're not bent on having sex , that night, then someone's going to be very dissappointed, at the very least. (At worst, if we teach girls not to have sex , and boys to be men, by having sex , then the only option is sexual assault, which happens every year, on prom nite.) So yeah, you don't even have to read the comments. They still run the Media.	Nobody, Sex, Sexual	Age - Youngsters, Gender - General	5/101	4.95

Some men don't want to control their behavior, or take responsibility for their actions, because they like rape, and talking to girls is hard. My point is, in the movie "Blockers," what were the boys up to, that night? The ones that aren't tackled through a wall by John Cena, that is. Men can control their behavior, but they don't always, and when his daughter's viginity is on the line, Assault on a Minor is a sight gag. A joke, in a comedy. This teaches boys that Sex is wrong, Violence is justified (When sex is on the line) and it's okay if there's no consequences for your actions. Yes, men can control their behavior, but is that what we're teaching our boys to actually do?	Sex	Gender - General	2/126	1.587
"You're not the brightest." Or you are, either or. You did graduate high school right? Regardless, that's an over-simplification. Sex is not just reproductive, and teenagers have sex drives. They do, Abstinence Education isn't working. (Just ask Bristol Palin) but right now sex ed is overshadowed by what parents teach boys, and girls, peers teach boys/girls (Get laid before graduating/he's cute) and what Hollewood is teaching our children. In this example, Violence is justified to protect a girl's virginity, but boys are left unchaperoned while the parents are busy cock Blocking all night. So, what about the boys, and what about the girls that don't have fathers who're played by Pro Wrestlers, and have the charges of Assault on a Minor suspended for the duration of prom night? This is the entire equation. "Don't have sexual activity with my daughter, find another girl." Not to mention all the movies where boys losing their virginity is the central plot point. You want an example? "Not another Teen movie" parodied it. So, in a nutshell, teaching boys that losing their virginity is worth it At All Costs, and sex is a justification for violence (We see you tackling a minor through a wall, Cena) hyper-vigilance for girls, and not for boys, AND the rape scene from Revenge of the Nerds is RAPE CULTURE. In no uncertain terms. Hollywood basically conspiring to glorify sex , supress violence, and put a premium on Virgins. You want more examples? I can make you a list. "Men can just walk out." (On a pregnancy) Yeah, well you can teach them responsibility, and safe sex at the same time you teach them about Consent. Women tend to be weaker on average. However, the strongest woman is not weaker than the weakest man, AND the assumption is that physical power is the only factor in rape, which it isn't. Yes, in fact I do. Actually, you do realize that the single most common (Mode) form of sexual abuse is Maternal incest, right? Okay, not only can women rape men, but I can actually tell you HOW. I have known (Online) several serial rapists, female manrapers, since the movie Monster came out. I can't encourage sexual abuse of any kind, so i won't tell you how, but the secret is in Victimology. DeLeon, I wouldn't say most boys get their sex education from porn. i'd say they get some from porn, more from locker room talk, and other sources. including Health Class in some schools (depending on the ISD.) however, the locker Room Talk is primarily the Power Assertive Malignant Narcissist, or "Alpha male" (Myth.) So, they say that the FriendZone is a trap, to deny them sex , and the betas listen. The problem is PAMNs are pathological liars, with girlfriends, they don't want the freshmen to talk to. So, they don't ever learn to talk to girls, "It's a trap." Porn is not soley responsible for Rape Culture. It's a contributor, but sex misinformation is everywhere. our culture is steeped in it, to sell diet beer, and shake weights. "This will get you laid."	Sex	Gender - General	3/133	2.256

Creative Chaos: Yes, women can also rape, and men can also be victims. That's how Rape Culture hurts men too (And as far as doing my Research, I have. For RAINN. You know what the 1 reported sexual abuse at RAINN is? Maternal Incest) Because the archetypic de-facto victims are considered female, and the assumed rapist is male, not only are men treated like rapists, but also they can't report it, for fear of that confession making them less of a man. "Real men don't get raped." They certainly don't cry about it. So, the statistics are skewed, the male victims out there don't get treated, and you know what? That tends to motivate them to act out with sexually motivated crimes. (Though typically Murder.) It drives serial killers, because they can't get their emotional release by talking about their trauma. Boys these days get their sexual education from pornography, so it's not surprising that they fantasize rape. Rape is not supposed to be a sexual thing; it's a crime. They say that "All girls are sluts"... No, you're a porn addict, and the women in the videos you watch are sluts, as well as actresses. Everything in the porn industry is fake. Most girls get their sexual education from reality television, so it's not surprising that they treat their bodies like shit and fantasize/idealize homosexuality. They're forced to be "strong independent women" from birth, and are told to act like men, work like men, look like men, own up to men. But that's not possible. Men and women are biologically different. The whole reason that gender roles were made is so that we wouldn't have to compete against each other. Men had their own important roles, as men: and women had their own important roles, as women. It was better, that way. The world is fcked up, now. Men have no honour, and women have no shame. Today's world is very different from the world, back in my day.	Gender, Sexual	Gender - General	4/189	2.116

In rock climbing, women have a better Power-Weight ratio, because of the Square-Cube law. All else being equal (congruent) if you half 1 dimension (Height) then you quarter the area, and the mass goes down by a factor of 8. This scales up, and down, regardless of the variable, because it's multiplicative. Even if the difference in height is 2 inches, the difference in Weight (Mass in gravity, or under acceleration) is reduced by the Cube of the difference, which is a lot, proportionately. So, the adage is "Men have more upper body strength." Okay, but proportionate to Weight, it's about the same, and women have More strength in the legs. Don't believe me? Jake Waller as a proud women I find that extremely inaccurate, what you said may be true, although if a man/women is a born Pedophile a class such as the ones many colleges are giving to male students to teach about consent, wouldn't change that said pedos natural attraction to children. Just as when you take a serial killer and put them in a class about the wrongs in killing other people, it would not stop said killer from killing! The teaching of what consent is may help men/women not commit a crime when it comes to drunk rape, blackout sex , etc. ( I.e unintentional rape) but it will not prevent a man or woman from rapping if they were already predisposed to doing so. Women rape and men rape, the best thing we could do is teach high school students ,girls and boys alike, what consent is and what it means, this will prevent unnecessary acts of rape ( for example statutory rape, which in fact is the consensual act of sex between a minor and someone above legal age ) but assuming that only men rape isn't going to help anything!! Psiberzerker If you need to teach your child about consent, you have bigger issues. Women also can't control themselves. It's not a gender issue. Rape culture is not real, both sexes rape and both sexes have their own pros and cons. For example, women's expenses are usually paid for by men in a healthy relationship, eg. food, clothes, and other small purchases. Woman-like behaviour is also more valued in school systems. They are generally more quiet and attentive than men. Women can get out of driving related issues by using "persuasion". Also, women generally get to stay home, while the man works. Women are also not heavily investigated when making rape accusations and have sent innocent men to prison for 20 years. If a man accuses a women of rape he will be laughed at. Also, interestingly enough, this video didn't cover any discrimination to men. There is literally a cafe in Australia that charges an 18 man tax. Imagine that being the other way around. Feminists also have an agenda to destroy the reputation of men, specifically, white men. There is no such thing as mass discrimination or privelage in developed nations. These ideas are invented to push a third wave or higher feminist agenda.	Gender	Gender - General	1/206	0.485
Lukyan not only do you need to do research about the subject at hand you also need to do research into the simple meaning of the word "facts". Nothing	Age - Youngsters	1/70	1.429

Lukyan you're also minimizing rape stats by saying that just as many men are raped as women and then it's total b it's a complete lie and it's ridiculous do you really think that one in four men in his lifetime to drugs with Viagra drug with Rohypnol in order to knock him out so that he can't fight against a woman who waits for the Viagra to kick into his dick can gets hard and then has sex with him by climbing on top of him because that's literally the only way a woman can rape a man. The only other scenario which woman rape a man would be if she somehow overpowered him which would in most cases take some kind of assault or drug and then tie him up and anally raped him with an object. If you are actually saying that that occurs on a regular basis you are ignorant and you're a liar oh one or the other because that simply is not true and just because you think it's true and because you say it's true on the internet doesn't make it true I can sit here and provide link after link after link after link of evidence showing you what the numbers of rape statistics really are for men raping women you will be unable to do that to back up your opinion about men getting raped anywhere close to the same amount as women do it's just nonsense and it is sexist and it's ridiculous	Sex, Woman	Gender - General	4/253	1.581
Lukyan I honestly think your entire comment is sexist you're using broad generalizations to lump all women into one group put them in this box that you've defined yourself. Saying that rape culture doesn't exist is complete b and it's nothing more than your misguided opinion. You're also making it sound like women all women want to be supported by men and not pay for any of their own things and that they don't have jobs. Your definition of a healthy relationship is a man paying for all the woman's expenses and that's just archaic and ridiculous. It's totally old-fashioned and maybe all of the couples that you know are old-fashioned and that's the way they do things but I know plenty of women in my city who have careers and who share the expenses with their husbands.	Lump, Nothing	Age - Youngsters, Physical Identity - Physical Features	2/138	1.449

Lukyan lastly you're perpetuating lies about feminism. True feminists Have No Agenda other than equality for both sexes. Any group of women that are out to destroy the reputation of white men as you say are not feminists. So here's my opinion about you.... you are the quintessential example of the "angry white man in America" who thinks that he's the most marginalized person here, based on his maleness and whiteness, when in reality nothing could be farther from the truth. You have brainwashed yourself and you have this victim card in your back pocket that you whip out at any given moment which you use to blame minorities, women, probably religious groups that you disagree with, the lbgt community, whoever it may be in that given situation is who you blame for your own failures and inadequacy in life. It's a discussion with racism in America you would probably say that that doesn't really exist either. Same for the wage gap between genders and you probably think that Christians are the most discriminated against people in this country and that Muslims aren't judged by other passengers every time they get on an airplane. Hahaha	Nothing, Racism	Age - Youngsters, Ethnicity - General	2/195	1.026

Lukyan "women get to stay home". That statement is in for rings that women don't want to have a job it also in for that running a household and taking her kids is not really work. It also infers that the work women do while they're staying home this is important is the working man does at a job. In the way that you made that statement saying women get to stay home it's also implying that you think most women don't want to work and that staying home is some type of privilege. All of those things are extremely sexist and the fact that you can't see that it's sexist reveals your misogyny. Men getting raped is just as serious as when a woman gets raped and no emotionally healthy woman would ever laugh at a man for that the people that you're talking about who make fun of and laugh at a rape victim whether he's male or female or sucked up in their head it's not a situation where all women are doing something like that the fact that you think that is sexist in and of itself. Not all women want to be taken care of by a man and not have a career not at all. You have misconceptions about what feminism really is so you should probably do some research on that if you really want to know what the facts are. And you need to ask yourself who's to blame if certain cops are letting women get away with minor traffic violations based ofaults ofWouldn't that be the male police officers salt instead of the fault of women as a whole? Your problem is with cops not upholding the law not with women in general for using according to you "persuasion". Educate yourself on what rape culture is and what feminism is. And seriously if your main points to back up that sexism is just as prevalent against men as it is against women is that little girl's behavior in school is favored and women get out of tickets by flirting then you should try to pull your head out of your ass and look at the bigger picture and find some actual important and serious issues to protest. Ridiculous. By the way girls aren't favorite Warren school than boys boys are worshipped for being the sports stars of the school to the point where they can get away with many times not making passing grades and doing things behaviourally that are morally wrong. Girls are told often but they need to dress in a way that doesn't distract the boys there for teaching girls that there is acacian matters less than boys education does. Girls are sent home to change in order to not distract boys which takes them out of class in order to do so. And that's just one example. I'm not even going to get started on the numbers that reflect the amount of date rapes on college campuses and how the perpetrators of those incidents are not properly held accountable. You idiots. Feminists just don't see the contradictions in their belief system and arguments. This entire video including the presenters supposed view point is also self contradictory. Emma Watson is one of the smartest feminists I've seen but even she seems to be having major cognitive dissonance when it comes to clearly having a set of ideals, that's why she said she's confused. She just doesn't see the contradiction. Women are the ones who led way to a world were they are objectified because sex always has demand, whether it's modeling in lingerie, porn or prostitution, it pays well, pretty girls can make a living off of it. Now they are getting pissed off because everything became commercialized because a lot more girls are available, whether it's entertainment industry or porn or whatever else, now they are getting pissed of because of that, most girls don't get the glim and glamour anywhere in life no matter how pretty they are because they got competitive among themselves. Of course I don't mean all women, some of them are gold, I love women. But some of these feminists don't understand or see the whole picture. Men aren't the problem girls, maybe in third world countries and religious countries they have bad attitudes. But places like Europe, USA , Australia etc has gotten way past all that and they treat women such love and respect but they want more. They want half of all wealth from husband and specified spots for employment because they claim there's a pay gap when there are way too many barometric that contribute to the difference. Girls in first world countries really should just stop, you are being extremely ungrateful to your own men as well as your country. I know because I've seen both sides of the world. Bro Down you didnt even refer to western women in your question all you said was "women" so i simply answered about women in general. Also even though women in the western world have more rights sexism still exists maybe not as much as in asian countries but there are individuals who still think a womens place is in the kitchen.	Sexism	Gender - General	1/61	1.639

Bro Down now i'm not someone who's informed well on the history of feminism or anything, but i do obviously support that girls and boys find themselves on the same level in life, and my take on your question is that there are currently no rights men have that women don't (not a legal expert either tho). however, there are tiring stereotypes, oppressive systems (mostly bc of stereotypes or "tradition", not bc they're purposely trying to be oppressive, but it's still wrong), everyday slightly sexist cues (i believe in most cases bc of again, stereotypes or "tradition", not often people deliberately being sexist), and of course out-right violence like beatings in marriages/partnerships or rape. i believe this is of course the worst aspect of life women and girls have to deal with, and if you're a guy, i don't think you understand the fear a girl has when she's out alone at night or in areas she doesn't know where there are men she doesn't know, bc men might fear strangers mugging them, but they don't fear every woman that passes them, you know what i mean? this is also not something that's your fault (and any "feminist" that makes you think this is in the wrong), however, you should be aware of the problem and switch street sides or something when there's e.g. a girl coming towards you at night bc she is definitely scared of you. aside from the scary violence aspect (which is sadly also heavily linked to party culture, which everybody likes, also girls), there's things like the wage gap and workplace sexism , but i wouldn't be too informed on those things as i'm still in school. if i think for a sec i could probably produce a list of small sexist daily occurences i've had happen to me, if you're interested. this comment is probably really long by now so thanks to anyone who stuck through it and have a nice day	Sexism, Woman	Gender - General	2/327	0.612
Bro Down ..... ok so women are paid 80cent for every dollar a man earns.Men more likely to get higher positions in most jobs. Women get sexually assaulted ALL THE TIME every woman has as well as some women get raped and people need to learn about from a younger age because it ruins peoples lives. Women are labelled as sluts or whores for wearing what they want , a boy can go to school wearing shorts and a tank top but on the other hand a girl would be dress coded , called a slut . That was all America , England, france ect.Now lets get to the middle east In some places Women aren't allowed to go to school they are held kidnapped and raped every day. They have to cover their entire body up they aren't allowed to drive and even if they are they have to be 30.They're not allowed jobs tooA reminder this isn't against men I'm a feminist but I don't hate men i also want men to have the same rights an women where they're allowed to cry and have emotions and lots more. fathia harun Lmfao so most guys are sexist? You're clearly an uneducated kid if you believe that. Sounds like something a man hating parent would tell you. Listen, sexism will always exist, (whether toward a guy or girl) but is it bad at all to the point Where we need feminism. No not anymore. We need eqaulitarianism. Something feminists completely forget about. Real sexism and discrimination against women only exist in places like the middle East where women have to obey their husbands and have very little rights. Not in the western world	Sexism	Gender - General	2/93	2.151
Babby Face There are so many things wrong with what you just said. First off, how do sexual assaults have anything to do with gender equality (the principle feminism is entirely based off of). It's completely irrelevant. I could possibly see your point if you were talking about sexual harassment, but sexual assault and rape don't exclusively happen to women. There are plenty of guys who get raped and abused, but I don't see you bringing that up. But all of that is besides the point, when you're talking about gender equality.You also mentioned that in Western countries a boy can go to school wearing whatever they like, but girls "are dress coded and called sluts". I know for a fact that if I went to school wearing a tank top and shorts, then I would be suspended, as most English schools have a uniform. And that's the same for either gender; it's customary to have a dress code. If a girl gets called a slut for pushing the boundaries of her uniform, it's probably because she doesn't look smart or presentable (which is the whole point of a uniform). And I've seen girls my age go to school with their skirts so high that their underwear is practically visible. They are most definitely sluts and deserve to be called sluts.And finally, most countries in the Middle East are predominantly muslim, so it's part of their religion for men and women to fall into gender stereotypes. Men and women are seen as equal, but they just have different roles. Men are expected to work and provide for the family, just as women are expected to care for the household. Their religion teaches that they'll be rewarded by Allah for fulfilling these responsibilities, which is why you only ever see so few of them complaining. And as for your points about women being "held kidnapped and raped everyday", those are carried out by criminals. I don't believe kidnap and rape are legal in any countries. You're making Middle Eastern men out to be savages. And, once again, I also fail to see how it's relevant to the subject of gender equality.	Age, Gender, Sexual	Age - General, Gender - General	8/362	2.21

Babby Face The points you brought up about rape and domestic violence are also pretty irrelevant. Men have a higher average weight and height than women, so of course women are more vulnerable to rape and violence, just as men would be more vulnerable if they had lower average weight and height. That has nothing to do with gender equality, that's just the way men and women typically develop. It can't be helped, because it's human chemistry. And just because men are abusing women at a higher rate doesn't mean men aren't being abused by women. While I agree that women do face inequality in sports to some degree, I disagree that they're at some kind of disadvantage to men. The main point that most people would bring up is that women's sports aren't broadcasted as much as men's, but that's not exactly true. The women's soccer world cup final was the most watched soccer game in US history, with an audience of 25.4 million viewers. It's not really a case of a lack of popularity or broadcasting, some people just prefer men's sports.	Gender, Nothing	Age - Youngsters, Gender - General	2/183	1.093
Babby Face And why shouldn't a teenage girl be treated like a woman ? If a teenage schoolgirl is wearing her skirt so high that her underwear is visible, she's sexualising herself if anything. It's also pretty ignorant to think that teenagers can't be sluts as well, as many of them have had sex multiple times. In 2015 alone, a total of 229,715 babies were born to girls aged 15–19 years old in the US, so how you're treating them as 'children' is beyond me. It's just that these specific scenarios were in the video. If they caught a women being sexist on film and a man/women shut it down, they'd probably put that in a video, too. Honestly, all of my experiences with sexism have been males saying the comments, but I know women do as well. If I hear one more "You throw/run/hit like a girl" I will punch somebody!! This is where it gets complicated; women need to show representation in the media for their beauty and I don't think it's wrong to tastefully show off the body, emma doesn't do a lot of nude stuff, her "offensive nipples" are covered so whats the big deal? yes I understand their points but women should not have to cover up and be ashamed of their bodies because men can't help themselves; thats their fucking issue. Women suffer from insecurity about looks and feeling objectified, no matter what a woman wears or does it can be and has been sexualised, some parts of revealing clothing are a hormonal thing or a want to enjoy your own body to be proud of it to show you are attractive for people you like and for yourself, it isn't an invitation to rapists and fuckups to hurt you, it doesn't "lure" people to you, in some areas it could but one would hope you'd be smart enough to steer clear of those areas or take the necessary steps to remain safe. It doesn't help however that women often cave and oversexualise themsevles, is it wrong for a woman to enjoy feeling sexy and show off? hell no! men do it too but they do /not recieve the same amount of criticism or hate for it, so when we hear these comments they're usually from insecure men. So for all women who do show off their bodies; their are thousands if not billions of photo's of the human body both male and female, to show it of is not a big deal and it's completely natural, trying to censor it is wrong. You should not be disrespected for having different body parts or enjoying having those parts, it is NOT wrong or a woman to want to feel sexy, it's incredibly hard in this day and age to do so, if she wears clothing she likes that shows it off she's a "slut" if she covers up or does a nude shoot she's a "stupid hypocritical object". It shows the narrow-mindedness of the world we live in created by the ignorance spread by a man made world, with the help of brainwashed women.	Age, Woman	Age - General, Gender - General	4/368	1.087

Kind of wish I saw the whole bit about the dancer smiling but I assume the host was commenting on the fact that the judges had already complimented her and she didn't seem pleased. he wasn't "telling her how a woman should act." Why don't you women get your children taken away and have to pay child support if you get divorced? Why are there less men getting in to University? All these questions which I have plenty more of. Also, if women were paid less, then why don't the companies fire all of the men and only hire women so they don't have to pay people as much? But ethically if you think it's alright to hit someone built much smaller than you, you've got something wrong with you (in the case that it's not self-defense). And I just wanted to add that women go through different things everywhere maybe you're just not aware but I honestly can say that I don't know one girl who's never been sexually harassed or assaulted by a male. Donna Gant Finally someone who can identify as a feminist and agree with how some of the people in this video are just milking it as a female and using the gender card. I'd like to ask you a question as I'm open to hear your opinion if you'd be willing to answer. Do you actually believe there is a gender pay gap that is because of the employers paying less? Like I said before, there seems to be a misconception of what it is. The study was done in all out average of American women and how much they make. When a couple have children, the woman has to stay home to breast feed and look after the child most of the time which then leads to her being the one who is working at home with the children most of their life. No shaming there just a fact. My mom had done that and I love her to pieces. You see, when most women are the caretakers of the family that means there are less of them working than men which will lower the average of how much women make in the U.S. With almost all men having a job in the current day and age because they can't breastfeed (they can't really help out a baby too much and typically babies would rather be with their moms), they will be the ones generating income for the family. That causes the average that men make to go up while it causes the female numbers to go down. So the 77 cents to a dollar (I may be slightly off but that's not my point here) is not that the employers are being ass holes and paying men more, it's that women on average make that much money to men. So I'll ask the question here again. Do you actually believe there is a gender pay gap that is because of the employers paying less to women?	Age, Gay, Gender, Woman	Age - General, Gender - General, Sexual Identity - General, Sexual Identity - Male homosexuality	9/328	2.744

Mama Bear The gender pay gap is complete bullshit. It is statistically proven that women are by average paid less on a grand scale (which makes sense as more men work than women) and this whole pay gap thing is thought of as 'oh whenever he gets paid $10 I'll make $7 which is not true. Everyone is payed the same but women work less so the overall average wage women make is only 77 of what men make and it's misunderstanding as the companies are the ones at fault. Do you have any proof that your mom makes less? Why hasn't she spoken to the government or police and reported it? All stuff that could easily make this 'wage gap' bullshit end. Also women had to fight for the right to vote is bullshit as well. No, women said they wanted to and men made it happen. But oh yeah 'the women were so strong back then'. This is not a needed argument. People will always see their own views. Fighting over someone's opinion is just a waste of time. Men will never see the point of view of a women and vice versa. And not brand Men’s rights organizations as anti-feminists or a women hate group like they do. And if you think Men dont have problems and or have all the rights all you feminists want. You’re ignorant. Men have the highest suicide rates because their problems are not seen as real problems like how society sees Women’s problems, highest workplace deaths because of all the dangerous jobs out there that men have to do but women dont, they only want the easy sit in an air conditioned comfortable room kind of job and expect to have equal pay statistics when comparing all men and all women doing all jobs, treated extremely unfair in Family court when it comes to custody and alimony, there are more Women in college, Domestic abuse is a problem that goes both ways and the statistics for both men getting assaulted and women getting assaulted are almost equal but Domestic abuse is a problem that is only seen as something that Women face and men don’t, there are 2000 domestic abuse shelters in the USA and only 1 gives refugee for Men (talk about inequality). It’s unfair on both sides, but feminism does NOT see both sides. It’s always only existed to fight women’s problems. I’m all for equal opportunity for any gender, male, female or all the other ”genders” you come up with. What ever it is everyone should be treated equally and given equal opportunities. You can call yourself a feminist but come on, majority of feminism in this day give zero fucks about the problems men face. I'd encourage you to watch the Red Pill movie to learn more about the inequalities that exist within feminism itself. It was a very much needed cause back then, still needed now in the countries where women are truly oppressed, but the majority of feminism and mainstream feminism is just trash. I'm sorry, but that's just the way I and many other people who support equality feel. Feminism has lost it's meaning. I know it's wrong to generalize a whole group because of a few bad ones, but sadly the bad ones are starting to become the majority. There should be a new word for equality. The wage gap isn't real when you take into consideration the time spent on work and the kind of jobs men do. You take the whole of men and the whole of women under all jobs and say you get paid less? There are so many jobs that women Just WOULD NOT do because of how dangerous it is. Coal miners, the sewer cleaners, truck drivers (there are some dangerous roads these drivers need to drive through and potentially can kill them). Women take more time off than men, men work longer hours. all this comes into consideration when you talk about wage gap. THE WAGE GAP ISNT REAL!. And a man's world? You think men havnt been oppressed. We are automatically brought in the world to provide. The man has to provide, if he doesnt he is a loser, a failure. Men have been fighting wars for centuries, it's the men who are dying time and time again in wars. World War 1 women were given the opportunity to vote if they wanted to fight for their country, they voted no, because send all the men to die even if they didnt want to. Women were given the choice of life. Heard of the white feather campaign. A white feather was given from women to men that didnt want to go to war to brand them as cowards that would protect the women. Not denying women havnt had it hard, But so have men. Everyone has. So to recap: someone told a girl to smile in a competition of dancing, a woman confused about the double standards of feminism accuses another woman of not having the exact same stance, a radio host asking something that given you could have a bad day you may not find it very funny, a person suggesting very politely that maybe a woman used too much make-up, a man paying a compliment to a woman , a man assuming that the difficulties that have toughen up a star on it's way to stardom must have been sexism (that kind of leans towards reverse sexism actually),a fan that can't help but get on a rant about his favorite players that are men (although as journalism professionalism go that was hardly appropriate but i guess that's journalism of today, part of the problem instead of stating facts should be their new moto, deal with it it's bad journalism for all, not just women),a woman commenting on her own about how and why she was paid that much, journalist asking a girl if she has any diet tips for other girls (how dare he?), another journalist who asks a question that out of context can be considered invasive. Who run the world? Girls! As a man I can truly and honestly say I hate men. The double standards and stupidity that comes out is mind-boggling. I am sexist, against men. You see sexism against women more when you're a man. People somehow assume because you're a man you'll be of the same mindset so they speak openly about how they feel. Even just things like a guy saying "I'm going to go town on her tonight." after seeing a girl on a night is sexist because you're assuming she's just going to lay back and say yes. Im all in for stuff like women can do jobs considered mens jobs, I think its 100 fine if a woman or girl or whatever has a job like that, but stuff like equality is something I find stupid that people like emma watson is talking about, I am fully aware of that women and men didnt have equal rights 50 years back, but that really isnt the case nowadays I dont have a womans mind set so I have no idea about what women think, but to be honest I really see no other reason for women still getting obsessed about what they call wage gap and equality, ithers than they wanna have more, they simply arent happy with what they got (again Im not a woman so I have no idea what women think) and when we talk about that stuff I wanna point out that katy Perry pretty much said the excact opposit to what watson said, watson was talking a bunch about wage gap, while katy perry was talking about how she made more than most men... how does that make any sense? Also, I have yet to hear men being asked what it's like to combine family and a career. Or how they cope with being a man of a certain age in Hollywood. And one more point I'd like to make is that if there must be a song entitled "We Saw Your Boobs" sung at the Oscars, how about, in the interest of fairness singing a ditty about the men whose bums have been seen onscreen (no, John Travolta, I haven't seen yours at all!) ? Hey can someone reading this please help me out and give me some advice? So the other day I was in a class waiting for it to start. I'm going to mention that this is a military school just for context of the rest of the story. But anyway I was the only girl in the classroom or maybe there was one other girl but some of the guys started talking about their opinions on all the girls at basic training. We couldn't wear makeup, we had 10 minutes to get ready every morning, and most of the time we were sleep deprived, so we didn't exactly look our best. But these guys felt the need to say how all the female soldiers were unattractive and how on graduation day when everyone's families came, they couldn't stop staring at all of the hot sisters and cousins, etc. who came. And they said something along the lines of, that before then they had never realized the truth underneath makeup and that the entire female image is a lie. So I spoke up and told them that it this was the most sexist conversation I had ever listened to. And we're all friends so they didn't give me a hard time about my opinion or anything. They changed the topic but not before one of them remarked, "How is it sexist? We're just talking about girls that we find attractive and realistically we're not going to be attracted to everyone". As if to kind of say, "this is just guys being guys so welcome to the army where statistically there are more guys than girls, therefore get used to these kind of conversations and stay out of it if it bothers you." And I couldn't give them a valid answer to justify my reasoning. I just knew that something felt unright about their conversation and made me uncomfortable, being a female hearing the things they were saying and also having gone through those 2 1/2 months when I too didn't look like myself at basic training. I think what made me uncomfortable was realizing that those guys evidently have unrealistic standards for what females look like and that they idealize women who look superficially hot and attractive. And in that moment I just felt odd about myself and even de-feminized since I don't ever desire to look 'sexy' or like a supermodel. But does my taking a little bit of personal offense justify that they were being sexist? Just in case I am ever in a similar situation again, I want to know exactly if the unbiased definition of sexism is applicable to this situation, and if anyone agrees with me. Or if I stand corrected and it's just 'locker talk', equivalent to if a group of girls were to talk among themselves about guys that are cute. Although speaking for myself, I don't do that. I feel like that is a little immature and something I would have done in middle school but then again immature is not necessarily sexist.	Sexism	Gender - General	1/509	0.196

The only one with actual good responses here was Emma, while she is misguided and wrong on many feminist subjects her tits does indeed have nothing to do with it. Free the nipple movement have more substance than the wage gap one for example. Some of the other ones weren't even sexist. Make up or cell phone question, not sexist. Dieting tips not sexist, could be mild sexual harassment since it insinuates that she has a good body. That's it. It's not sexist. People post videos and ask all the time about Tom holland's workout for spiderman, Zac Efron, Dwayne Johnson and anyother celebrity who put in work. Interviews and people want to know how they did it, the tips they can give perhaps from working with a professional. And of course they will keep it gender based because men and women are different. Asking the interviewer the same question is stupid because they have, most likely, not gone through that experience and if they did, I don't think anyone would care. Where as if a celebrity answers this question, it may very well have a great positive impact. It's not sexist, it's because they are well known, liked/looked up to and have been through an experience that others may struggle with and because they can help. How anyone can see this as sexist is beyond me.11. Yes someone says that about everyone, calm the hell down. I don't how many people were involved in this "complaint" but it is not connected to gender like ffs. People will say what they say because of the person you. Kittygirl Puppiesrcute People who counteract sexism or any kind of discrimination by saying 'it's just an opinion' are the reason why discrimination will continue to happen. In Western countries, the right of 'freedom of speech' isn't a sure thing; there HAS to be a limit which is why hate speech is illegal. Just because someone has an 'opinion' doesn't mean they're allowed to use that as some type of excuse to be a sexist, misogynistic person. Oh yeah sure she is, I'm not arguing with that. I fully support her doing what she wants and still being whatever (feminist, etc). The only problem I have with her or rather, feminists in general is that what feminism is has changed since wave 1 and 2. We're currently on the third big movement of feminism and a lot of what it used to stand for has been thrown away. For example it used to be about women getting the right to vote, work, go to school, etc. I think that's amazing and surprised it wasn't happening from day 1 but my problem comes in with today's feminism and what the point of it is. In my eyes, everything is already equal. Of course nothing will ever be perfectly fair for anyone but I think it's pretty close and we should be happy with where we are. I think the old definition of feminism doesn't hold up with what feminists are actually doing today. The large majority say one thing ("I'm for equality between sexes") and do another. That's all I shouldn't have said that she's insane, cause she's not but she certainly, in my and many other peoples minds, have a backwards view of what feminism today is about.:)Edit: Can you tell me one thing that women, or rather, people should fight for, something that truely, undisputedly isn't fair.	Nothing, Old	Age - Over 65s, Age - Youngsters	2/233	0.858

James Films 1. Okay, I see where you're coming from now. Yes, feminism has gone completely downhill. For some people. I dunno, I guess you can believe what you want but I still have my beliefs.3. For the thing that is truly, undisputedly unfair is how people get paid. To every white man's dollar an Asian man gets 96 cents, a Latino(Hispanic man) gets 92 cents, a white woman get 90 cents, a black man gets 88 cents, Asian women get 87 cents, a Latina(Hispanic woman ) gets 83 cents and a black woman gets 79 cents.To be fair, the chart I got this from could be false, but that isn't the point. The point is people don't get paid fairly even if they do they same amount of work for the same job. Sexism happens to men too	Sexism	Gender - General	1/5	20.0
OK. This particular video happens to focus mostly on women dealing with sexism . I am not denying that men can be victims of it, too. However, statistically and historically, there is a larger amount of sexism geared towards women than towards men. Why is it bad to focus on one aspect of a particular problem? Paying attention to one issue doesn't mean that other problems don't exist or that other problems don't matter. They're just not the focus at this particular moment. In an emergency room, the person who is bleeding from a gunshot wound is treated before the person with a broken arm. The broken arm is a problem that does need to be dealt with. The person with the broken arm does matter, and they do deserve attention and treatment. But the gunshot wound is treated first. Why? Because it is a larger, more immediate problem. But not even close to women sexism	Sexism	Gender - General	1/7	14.286
" Sexism happens to men" There's your sentence. Do not even dare to add 'too'. Women have fought hard to get a little attention on the situation that they are not treated as equals. Now that there's some light on the situation don't make it about men. If you want attention for a cause that's fine we will listen because it is in fact necessary, make room for it. But when we are discussing women's issues it is not your time.	Sexism	Gender - General	1/80	1.25
ACR Have you considered your sources? Also, more men may be homeless because they often don't ask for help. Women tend to rely on family, government programs, friends etc but I've seen plenty of homeless women too where I'm at. Also, to help clear it up. As a woman , I'm fighting for equality but I've noticed that lately I'm bombarded by comments made solely by men, that feminism is bad. They make horribly, sexist, ignorant comments towards women and I think to myself "Before there's going to be any solutions, men have to decide to treat girls/women with respect first, especially in social media, they have to get over the archaic thought that giving women power is dangerous, or will somehow upset a man's world." I've found that it's men upset over women's rights that hold women back from being treated as equals. Frankly it's getting old , I want it to be easy for men to grasp, but they don't want to change because it means taking responsibility for their actions, their words, and they don't want to. I'm extremely intelligent and for most of my life, I've had men act intimidated by it, so what do they do? Trash on me. They'll make fun of my physical features, call me sexist names, purely because they can't handle an intelligent woman . It's pathetic. Why do they feel the need to fling insults all because I'm smart. If I meet a smart guy I don't get intimidated, I hear what they have to say but I don't insult them. Yet, because I'm a woman , I'm treated like trash because I'm not "allowed" to be smarter. Also I have to act feminist, conforming to what men like rather than being myself, I have to be pretty, and when I do dress up, I have to hear men cat call which is the cringiest thing on the planet, or they stare at my breasts, and it's like god damn, just fucking leave me alone. Let's discuss equality when men are willing to accept it.	Old, Woman	Age - Over 65s, Gender - General	4/341	1.173

About the homeless, loads of men do ask for help but they're still unable to escape from that situation. Also lots of homeless people are war veterans returning from the war. They have get no or little pensions, which is a shame because they are brave men willing to sacrifice themselves for their country. Also lots of women can just turn to prostitution to make some easy money. Also, women pretty much do have equality, at least in the West. Like I've said they also have it a lot better in some areas like healthcare funding and crime sentences. They also evade assault crimes more easily (if a woman slaps and spits in a man's face, no one seems to care. The other way around though, and everyone turns livid and calls the police, even when doing it with the same force). Feminism is now associating more with man hating, which is why it is falling in the millions. Less than 2 in 5 women consider themselves feminists, even though 85of people believe in equality, showing that feminism isn't what it used to be. Also the people that you're talking to are called trolls, attempting to get a funny reaction out of you. Better to just ignore them and move on, but I don't think lots of people are worried about women having more rights. They already do have equal rights. Concerning men getting intimidated by you, this happens to men as well. People get jealous of other people's intelligence, causing them to try to knock them down a couple pegs to make them feel better. Girls do this just as often as boys, to try to compensate for the fact that they aren't as clever as them. Of course you're allowed to be smarter than men. This type of obnoxious jealous behaviour isn't acceptable in businesses as well. If you report them they will get sacked or given a serious warning. Also you don't "have" to be pretty. No-one forces you to put on make-up or wear nice dresses. In our societies, everyone is pressured into trying to look nice. Girls will laugh at other people's hair hinting they need a haircut, or laugh at someone's spots so they put on cream or make fun of someone who is too skinny . As for cat calling, girls are just as guilty s boys. There's a vid of a handsome guy walking through the streets in a tight white top, and lots of girls whistle and call out saying he's hot	Skinny, Woman	Gender - General, Physical Identity - Physical Features	2/420	0.476

People post videos and ask all the time about Tom holland's workout for spiderman, Zac Efron, Dwayne Johnson and anyother celebrity who put in work. Interviews and people want to know how they did it, the tips they can give perhaps from working with a professional. And of course they will keep it gender based because men and women are different. Asking the interviewer the same question is stupid because they have, most likely, not gone through that experience and if they did, I don't think anyone would care. Where as if a celebrity answers this question, it may very well have a great positive impact. It's not sexist, it's because they are well known, liked/looked up to and have been through an experience that others may struggle with and because they can help. How anyone can see this as sexist is beyond me.11. Yes someone says that about everyone, calm the hell down. Whether or not it is sexist depends on the context. I am not saying that it is always sexist to tell a woman she is pretty when she smiles, I said it CAN be sexist. I'm just going to say, gender wage gap WAS a thing, not anymore. Second, most of you are objectifying that MEN gets better than we do. Um, first off yes we get stereotyped for being emotional. But guys have EMOTIONS, but they cant show because they'll seem like their weak. Third, feminism is meant to be as equal as men, not a whole situation for us to feel like we're the victim of "Oh, a guy said I am fake with all that make up" while they say "That guys with the abs is a total fuckboy" Victimizing that we have it worse is also a sexist thing around men because the "feminism" we have is just a big middle finger to the guys for doing nothing harmful when its actually meant togetherness of both genders. Emma Watson had the right idea of the definition and she shows it perfectly. Not just saying things like gender wage gap, or he said this is what girls do. Marie False assumptions and false reasoning lead to false conclusions....And being condescending doesn't help your case For one thing im 20 years out of school but maybe i could have been a little clearer in my earlier comment,what i should have said was the Feminist version of the gender pay gay doesn't exist There is a gap in earning but it has nothing to do with gender or sexism people getting paid less for the same job because of gender is ILLEGAL and it has been since 1963The wage gap, as measured by the Department of Labor in the U.S. also does not compare equal jobs or even equal time. It is simply a comparison of what full time women earn compared to full time men. The Department of Labor as well as other organizations have studied the wage gap at length and cite causes such as men working greater hours, taking on higher paying jobs, spending more years on average in the workforce etc. as the causes of the gap.The Department of Labor's Time Use Survey, for example, finds that the average full-time working man spends 8.14 hours a day on the job, compared to 7.75 hours for the full-time working woman. Employees who work more likely earn more. Men working five percent longer than women alone explains about one-quarter of the wage gap.There are numerous other factors that affect pay. Most fundamentally, men and women tend to gravitate toward different industries. Feminists may charge that women are socialized into lower-paying sectors of the economy. But women considering the decisions they've made likely have a different view. Women tend to seek jobs with regular hours, more comfortable conditions, little travel, and greater personal fulfillment. Often times, women are willing to trade higher pay for jobs with other characteristics that they find attractive.I feel sorry for our young boys going to school in these modern times..Feminist organisations, backed by government policy, are teaching young boys at school to feel guilty and ashamed of their gender The Daily Mail reported that a school in Oxford has become the first to introduce 'Good Lad' workshops, in which boys are singled out for sessions that teach them about 'the scale of sexual harassment and violence aimed at female students' and how they must stand up for women's rights.The workshops are the latest in a mushrooming series of initiatives in which ideologically-driven activists are being invited into schools, driven by the belief that boys need to be re-educated to prevent them from becoming a threat to women.In November last year, The Times reported on a programme in London Schools in which two American women, one a former sex crime prosecutor, 're-programme teenage boys' sexual manners so they are fit for a feminist world'.According to the report, they start the class by asserting that 'misogyny is on the rise', before going on to 'describe real-life sex crimes that have happened to teenagers in this area with brutal accuracy'. The article concludes – approvingly – that by the end of the session, the boys are 'scarred for life'. In context of the chasm between boys' and girls' educational attainment and a rising male suicide rate that is now nearly four times that of women's, why are schools deciding that when it comes to talking about gender, what boys need most is an extra dose of guilt and shame?Another organisation, A Call to Men UK, also goes into

This is such BS, which isn't surprising since they can't even spell "clever" correctly. First, I'm male and plenty of people tell me to smile more. Second, Emma Watson did not at all negate the fact that objectifying her body means that people will not take her seriously as a human being. Last time I check objects are not equal to people. So if you want to be equal to men, don't lower yourself to object-status. Third, I don't know anybody that objects to women being promiscuous who does not object to men doing the same. Also, Grande is not loving her body, she's selling it. Fourth, the question given to the Orange is the New Black star reflects the stereotype that attractive people are unintelligent, not that women are stupid. Fifth, the tennis guy's statement, while horribly worded, states the fact that tennis was pioneered by men. What? Are we going to deny that men built society, too. Sixth, the wage gap is because of women favoring different, less technical jobs than men do, not sexism! Also, Katy Perry is just an elitist jerk, so why are you hailing her a hero? Seventh, girls go on diets, and teenage boys do not, so any dieting tips would be lost on them. Eighth, Swift's songs about ex's are not as nice as those of Sheeran or Mars. Sheeran and Mars write songs about how they are sorry for not treating women right and how they love their girlfriends. Swift, on the other hand, focuses more on her boyfriends being the problem and not her (just saying, if all your relationships are so lousy, the common factor/problem is you). Ninth, Emma Watson did not shut down sexism by telling the girl to become an engineer. Women are not 'favoring' less technical jobs, they are being encouraged not to go into these professions or flat out denied the job because they are perceived as not as intelligent. The girl's question did not show that she was lacking mentally. How would you feel if your father or mother wouldn't let you do something because it was for a woman . That girl wanted to know how to stop her father from saying things like that. Emma Watson's response was to show her father that a woman can do it too.	Woman	Gender - General	2/92	2.174

1 Women naturally prefer jobs that have more to do with caring for others (like nurses). This is innate, stemming from their maternal instincts. I do not know a single woman that has been convinced that she is too stupid to be an engineer (or other STEM occupation). All of the intelligent girls that I know that wanted a career have either gone into the humanities or gone into zoology and biology. 2 The girl's question is ridiculously stupid because literally the only way to prove her father wrong is for women to be engineers .3 Watson's response does not show that women can be engineers . It merely shows that she is smarter than the girls who asked the question. P.S. I am not denying that women can be engineers . I am merely stating that women choose not to enter STEM fields of their own accords, and I'm stating that the question was not thought through. Nicky Sachs no! That is sexist because they said ” do you have any dieting tips for TEENAGE GIRLS” so they are specifically aiming it towards girls, it’s different if they said ”do you have any dieting tips?” Because then that would mean that they would like to know for any gender not just one.....do you understand now?	Gender	Gender - General	1/58	1.724
Nicky Sachs i think what you’re reffering to is misandrism. one of the things feminism is about is fighting against harmful gender roles. so feminists are fighting against gender roles (girls stay home, men work etc) and as they’re fighting against it, they end up fighting for men too. its one of those things you can’t have without the other. if you’re fighting for women, you can’t not be fighting for men, too. misogyny is about men being stronger than women. misandry is women being stronger than men. femenism is equality. it just isn’t called equalism because: femenism is about making women just as high as men equalism is about making men as low as women	Gender, Misandry, Misogyny	Gender - General	4/116	3.448
Nicky SachsWomen are told from a very young age that they need to be slim; their dolls are skinny , in magazines aimed at girls are dieting tips, everywhere they are they hear and see disgust towards women of weight, there are corsets in the making and young girls think they need them, to be the slightest bit beautiful. It’s sexist because men don’t get this pressure as often, they are not told as much to suit a certain body type. Society has taught girls from their childhood into adulthood that they need to be slim, this pressure creates mental illnesses from just in their heads to fysical often leading into a womans death. Society puts even more pressure for women in ’the spotlight’ to fit into this body type. Asking a 13 year old for dieting tips is disgusting! She should not even be thinking about that, men don’t as often deal with that pressure from society and it is toxic that women do. For me, feminism is still about equality :) I think there will always be people who think one gender/ race /class is higher than another (or should be) but I think in this day and age the human race is a lot more accepting! :D and the reporter could’ve meant his question in a genuinely curious or helpful way, but there are also people who are malice and ask rude questions so no one can know for sure unless you know his intentions/him personally. Super Amediz I know my comment was 4 weeks ago but I still keep to my point. It's not sexist because if I asked you for some dieting tips for girls around your age there is no reason why it would be sexist. The girl has no f€¥ing male dieting tips therefore, it's not sexist. I will not stop responding to whoever replies because I know I am right.	Age	Age - General	1/69	1.449
for your first point, it's because one of the things femenism is about fighting against those stereotypical beauty standards that both men and women have to face. and as you could see, the interviewer was asking for diet tips especially for teenage girls. and you know, probably, that in this society a woman is considered beautiful only if she is thin . and becausw rowan is also a femenist, she was trying to shut down that stereotype. and for your next comment, in my pov, no one ever tries to tell a man to smile when he's not smiling. and i was really triggered by your last sentence because women are not objectified for other people to look at and find attractive. people shouldn't have focused on her facial appearance, but her dance because that's what she came to do. not to aesthetically please you. Nicky Sachs I agree with your statement. Women are not the only ones to be pressured into being slim. Males and females get judged, bullied,etc. about not being slim or overweight. I have 4 brothers, my 9 yr. old brother is already being pressured to be "buff" or " skinny "and gets bullied about being a little chubby .( He's in the 3rd grade.) It's a confusing subject because it's all based around opinions, like Ariana grande just put words in the mouth of the dude, the dude never said anything wrong, he just said choose between this and this, Ariana made it a big deal by implying that's what a general girl likes, she actually said it, not the guy. So far everything you've said is much worse and more hateful than my original, innocent comment about someone you don't even know having a big head. I think you should look inwards to find out if it's normal to be so mad at an innocent comment some stranger made that caused you to behave in such a vulgar an uncouth manner. You say society is pathetic but I think you're just projecting the anger you feel at yourself and at your lack of control over your emotions. well, i mean... a lot of the things they claimed to be sexist comments aren't exactly sexist. asking a teenage girl if she has dieting tips for other teenage girls isn't sexist in nature, though the person asking could probably have asked it out of sexism . the way men eat on average is different than the way females eat on average due to the very different average body types. there is nothing wrong with asking for female specific advice.expecting someone with a good smile, and especially if that person might be someone who smiles a lot to smile when they are complimented isn't sexist by nature. females showing skin is completely different than males showing skin, because male sexuality is different than female sexuality.considering most males see most females both with a ton of makeup on and down in their cell phones most of the time, that "would you rather" question was completely reasonable.	Nothing, Sexism	Age - Youngsters, Gender - General	2/156	1.282

Mr LloydVal First, asking a teenage girl for dieting tips for other teenage girls is sexist, because it is automatically assuming that she didn't workout to be skinny and other GIRLS will want to know how they can be skinny so they can love themselves. Because society says that only skinny girls are beautiful. Second, how is females showing skin different to males showing skin? Women have boobs and men have moobs. Same difference. Third, women always wearing makeup and looking at their phones is a stereotype. I see plenty of guys on their phones and plenty of women not wearing makeup. Why aren't guys asked similar questions?	Skinny	Physical Identity - Physical Features	3/108	2.778
the premise of your first statement is flawed. diet is defined as the type of food that a person or animal regularly eats. even eating indiscriminately can be considered a diet. the way the body is designed is that exercise doesn't do as much for weight ( fat and water) loss as diet does. our brain and internal body functions consumes more calories than any exercise most or all people do. consuming specific types of calories will allow the body to burn fat faster and more efficiently than other types of calories. the main purpose of diet is to determine ones health, rather than exercise which is mainly for building muscle (exercise is healthy, but it does not determine whether you are healthy or not). exercise in most cases will not promote a skinny physique, but a fit physique. if a person is exercising so much that they are burning enough fat from the exercise to see a visual difference, their muscles are going to be very bulky and defined.by that logic, because it is socially accepted that guys can be touched on the chest without it being considered sexual , females should not consider it as a sexual advance when anyone places their hands on their boobs. if you're a girl then you obviously wouldn't know this, but guys generally don't feel any special way when we are touched on our chest area. i don't know what it's like to be a girl so i won't pretend to know, but i've been through middle school and i still remember the sting of being slapped by girls after touching their boobs.what i'm trying to say is that it makes sense for people to cover up their private areas, and that's why girls have underwear to cover up their chests and guys don't. i'm sure you also have no idea how sexually arousing boobs are to guys.it's fine if it's a stereotype, because it's also often the truth. Cassandra Teal listen to your self. Being asked to smile is not sexist. It is not targeted at women. I've been told by many women and men to "give me a smile" "cheer up" ect. It does not mean that they did it for a sexual thrill. You're reading way too far into this. men say it to men, women say it to women, women say it to men and men say it to women, so tell me how that it is inherently sexist? Theo Ikhide I mean... there's a time for everything you know, and if I don't feel like smiling when walking down the street I just don't and, idk about the rest but i've received very rude comments telling me to smile followed by more catcalls (some are super gross) and I just think that there is a double standard when it's people who literally know nothing about you and are telling you to smile out of the blue, I have seen MANY women get this and no men, so there IS a double standard there, but I won't get mad if a person I know and is aware of where my life is at at that particular point tells me to smile. Because It's not just a DUDE yelling out to a GIRL he's never seen before in the middle of the street to smile followed by a comment about her ass, It's a person telling another person to smile fully aware of what they are living at the time. Jimena Herrera Well traditionally (and even evolutionarily) speaking the male is the one that pursues the female. I'm not saying this is always the case, nor am I saying it has to be— but in probity, it's generally that way. So even though I've been harassed myself, it's less common with females. Furthermore, it seriously is not sexist at all. If they (the creeps) say "smile, you're expected to as a woman " then indubitably that is sexist. But if it isn't overtly stated, then it's really just your connotations, not their own or what is literal.	Common, Woman	Gender - General, Social Class - Working class	2/96	2.083

Men are almost never asked to fucking smile at a creepy woman . I was a fast food worker, which was not a glamorous job whatsoever. I had money thrown at my ass and these disgusting old men would not leave my drive through window until I gave them "an extra smile". Would they do this to a male worker? It's the oldest trick in the sexism book. Be decor, be obedient, serve us, never make us feel inadequate by not affording us a smile. Some show of women's delight to be in your presence. You don't get it. It's such a simple thing, you could almost let it roll off your shoulders just as I and many women have done so many times, but there comes a point where you get fucking sick of it, and you'd rather pull your own teeth out then give one more fake smile to one more egotistical, pervy man. B355Y has anyone claimed that being asked to smile isn't a first world problem or is a leading issue of oppression? No, I thought not. And it's a simple question: would a grown man ask a male employee for extra smiles or to be "extra sweet" to him? Maybe. Now, is that not creepy? Is that not uncalled for? Would that not make you feel uncomfortable? Well it happens all the time to women. All the time. It targets women and is specifically to stroke the ego of whoever is receiving the smile. It is inherently sexist. Doesn't mean it doesn't happen to men. I've seen some older women treat men as decor too, making them feel uncomfortable. Being asked to deliver a fake smile to stroke someone elses' ego so that they get what little sexual thrill they get from it is nasty and uncomfortable, man or woman. Is it the same as women being imprisoned for miscarriages as they are in El Salvador or being threatened with rape in imprisons for fighting for women's rights in Middle Eastern countries? Hell no. Is it still sexist? Yes. Either enlighten yourself or sit down and shut up. Maybe listen for once?	Sexual, Woman	Gender - General	2/201	0.995
B355Y I don't think you understand, just based on those examples you gave. Those interactions are not what I am talking about and not what I have experienced. Being told to cheer up is a-okay. Being told to smile when you are sad is fine. There is nothing wrong with that. When you have a man holding up your drive through and refusing to leave until he gets his "extra smile" from you, that's when it's negative and uncomfortable. That's when you feel forced into smiling at someone who is making you both angry and deeply uncomfortable. AND LIKE I SAID, THIS IS NOT A MAIN ISSUE OF FEMINISM OR A MAIN CONCERN OF WOMEN. It's a gripe, at best. Again, shut up and listen. And who the fuck is bringing feminism into this anyway? This is about sexism. Sexism does not autimatically bring in the femininist movement just as it does not bring in the men's rights movement. Women can care about women's issues without being a feminist. Fuck off with all that. You're one of those butthurt meninists who just want to undermine women for the sake of doing it. Anna But that still has nothing to do with being sexist; that testimonial establishes nothing . Attraction doesn't equate to sexism . To all you people denying the existence of sexism, you're either an idiot or privileged enough that the only examples of sexism you see or hear is on screen. Where I'm from, some girls don't even get the opportunity to go to college, let alone finish high school since most of the population doesn't live in cities so the girls are held back to be married off or become cases of teen pregnancy because they don't fucking know any better due to a deficit in their education and the toxic cycle of deprivation. Women get harassed in the workplace, on the street, even in their own families and are constantly looked down on. It's progressing, albeit slowly, but as privileged as I was in having a father that cared whether or not I had a college degree and was treated equally to my brothers, that didn't stop other people from being sexist towards me. Always being held to different standards and having to work twice as hard to prove yourself that you're worthy of respect otherwise, you get fucked. I wouldn't call myself a feminist as I'm all about equal rights for everybody, but to hear/see/read people saying ignorant shit like "Oh feminists getting triggered over nothing because sexism doesn't exist" get fucked you ignorant twats. I really love some of these responses, others I felt were uncalled for. I understand that being a feminist is a huge deal these days and I totally agree with some of those points". I completely agree with Emma Watson about people seemingly assuming that being a feminist means women going out of their way to prove that they 'm a do anything a man can. If a man were to tell a women they couldn't do something that can have several different meanings, it could just mean that that particular women is out of shape or it injured not necessarily that they couldn't do it because they are a women. Feminism is 100 about equality, not proving that women are better or women literally going out of their way to change their lives to prove they can do something. Another thing I really do think Feminism stands for is being confident in yourself, if a women feels confident in her body and wants to show all of that hard work that it took then she should and she should not be told that it doesn't match up with something just because you have your own definition of what it means to be a feminist. Now can we talk about how apparently anything a women does in the media today that is remotely strong is a "feminist act", a women telling someone that she down a feel that a question is important or relevant is not necessarily a feminist act, it could just be one women's opinion and really just trying to say they don't feel like answering the question. women do not need to go out of their way to prove they are strong, a truely strong proud and confident women lives her life the way she wants and is comfortable with that. I doubt that when these women such those mindless questions down they had the media and being a feminist in mind, obviously they want to be good role models but not everything that a women does has to be or directed at being a feminist. I am a feminist in the since that I am proud to be a women and recognize that I have the freedom to do anything I want without being pulled down by other peoples opinions on gender and recognize there is a certain beauty and je na sais quoi in being a women and that I can do whatever I feel I need to. I do not however feel the overwhelming need to go out and protest my feminism and my strength. Everyoje gets tired, everyone gets sick, everyone has their preferences, it has nothing to do with your gender! I don't like to mow the lawn because I have allergies, I love to cook as a way of artism in a since, I don't know much about cars because it never sparked an interest, I like clothes and makeup because efor me it is also a art form not because I am a woman and that is what I am "supposed" to like, because egress what? I have that freedom and that for me is what it means to be a feminist. I do not feel the need to make it a big deal that men in my house do the yard work, I don't do yard work but prove that I could, if I don't like it then I don't like it. I sincerely doubt that there is a part of me that thinks that it is a mans job, it is simply because I have allergies and I prefer to cook, I love to cook. I do find it sexist and disrespectful that people sometimes assume what women can and can't do or want to do but just like everyone else women have preferences, i know women who do the yard work and enjoy it, I simply don't. I just feel like these are things that need to be pointed out a lot of the time because I hear people telling men that they can't be feminist because they are men	Gender, Nothing, Woman	Age - Youngsters, Gender - General	4/711	0.563

For people who don't understand why the smiling is sexist let's roll it back a few decades where women were told to just be quiet and smile. It's not the smiling in it's own that is the issue its the fact like the 'smiling' actually means 'make yourself appear more approachable'... Simone's physical appearance because she is so athletic is intimidating... that 'smiling' is meant to make her seem more feminine and gentle 'what a woman is supposed to be'. Simone smiles all the time but in this case smiling wasn't just smiling. in her line of work as an athlete like she said 'smiling doesn't get you a gd metal' you take the compliment with a grain of salt and keep working on perfecting yourself... it wasn't that she wasn't being grateful it was just that she's tough as fuck	Woman	Gender - General	1/141	0.709

You guys need to understand that a comment against a woman is not always a comment against women.Observing that someone wasn't smiling is sexist? How does that work?The make-up/phone question was not sexist, he asked her , not all women. He thought she would have a hard time choosing, not all women. Ari (and this is just about the only time I won't defend her) was being sexist as her comeback was targeted at all men. Ari was the sexist one there.How is a question about beauty sexist? That could apply to either gender (although you may wish to choose a different word)So Katy getting paid more than the men is a sexist comment? It's only a single case a woman being paid more than men, it is not a comment and not sexist as it does not suggest that all men should be paid less than women.	Gender, Woman	Gender - General	3/152	1.974
OKay, I'm seeing many people defend Ari's interviewer with "He was asking Ariadna in specific, not all girls". And who the heck is he to know what Ariadna would have trouble picking between? Akaakaaka ak, Seriously, the many people that get more triggered over this is appalling.Everyone says : "you shouldn't just get offended by that, it isn't sexist" all these people in the comments which are "supposedly men" (trying not to assume genders here) say that women get too offended, in fact I feel like men are jellous of the fact that women are getting confident. They now see that women are starting to love them selves for who they are, so of course they have to bring them down. As it said in the video "women can love their bodies too", yes I know this comment doesn't have to do with that but it is to do with the "smiling" clip. All I'm trying to say is that most of this comment section is full of hypocrites. Women have minds, leave it be, they can be who they want to be. I'm trying not to direct this at you personally in any way. So don't come back with some random comment deflecting everything I have said, because that would simply be pointless. Maybe if you can spread the word and tell people to take women seriously. Not be idiots and think they are there to look at, or to take your anger out on. They have feelings too. They want to live. And as we say here in Scotland, they want freedom So let them have it, let them enjoy it and let them express it in any way they please. As long as it isn't sexist, or against the law, or racist or whatnot. you guys need to understand that a comment for a woman is not always against menIn other words, if someone says to a woman that they are strong, you don't bring them down by saying "men are stronger" That's just stupid Anyway sorry had to get that off my chest, have a nice day :D Phew aha	Racist, Woman	Ethnicity - General, Gender - General	3/323	0.929

+Miranda Tiffany”Would you EVER say a man looked like a slut because of the way he was dressed?” yes, people do, frequently, I have no idea why you think this doesn’t happen, perhaps not as frequently as for women, but that still doesn’t make it sexist; a comment against a woman is not a comment against women.Let’s give another example; if I say to a man (who is, say, scared of something, a spider perhaps) to ‘man-up’, is that sexist?Yeah with regards to the Ari clip, his original question wasn’t for sure and I don’t even think his follow-up comment of confirming he meant all women is sexist either, it’s just an ignorant generalisation, I think you’re throwing the word ‘sexism’ around too loosely it’s losing all meaning, preventing you from saying anything meaningful with regards to real sexist issue. If someone say to me ”would guys rather have football or beer?” I don’t take it as sexist (do you?), I just think it’s an ignorant question. ”do you think its sexist that most women dont earn as much as men for doing the same job?”.. show me one study that supports this ridiculous claim. The gender wage gap does not factor is ”doing the same job”, it is an average of earnings across all jobs. Women make the same for the same job, it is illegal to pay women less for the same job and if companies could somehow get away with it they would just hire all women. Women tend, on average, not to go into high paying STEM field jobs, but rather prefer to go into health care and teaching jobs, it just preference. mabse3 it's called feminism because "feminism" starting in 1st world countries when women were far from equal (not having the vote etc etc). It's not like the word has only recently been invented. Originally it was more about the fight for women's rights, I guess now it's more about gender equality. Things change.	Gender	Gender - General	1/53	1.887
I don't think you really read my comment. I thought the exact same way as you, but now I think differently about it. I believed it was an ugly word to avoid with every ounce of my soul, but I don't think you really heard Emma XDDDDid you not hear the words "It's about freedom, it's about liberation, it's about equality."?It's about bringing equity to women (in comparison to men) so we're on the same level, just as it should be. So to say the idea of women and men being in equilibrium is dangerous makes me wonder what's safe. I'll go hide in the safety of my unequal pay and sexual discrimination now.	Sexual	Gender - General	1/116	0.862

ok sweetie no, Feminism isnt just about the wage gap for starters which dose exsit, just beacuse you havent seen it dosent mean its not there, the wage gap isnt just for gender too its also there for race . Feminism is about men and women having equal rights. this dosen tjust mean getting paid the same. It means getting treated equaly, as in women shouldnt have to feel unsfae walking at night, or get harassed on the streets, Men shouldnt be rideculed for crying or acting 'unmasculin' shit like that.	Gender, Race	Ethnicity - General, Gender - General	2/90	2.222
Oh because men have been sooooo oppressed. Give me a break. When was the last time a man wasn't hired because he has the ability to bear children? When was the last time you walked down the street and were wolf whistled and told to smile? When was the last time you saw a woman in the distance walking towards you at night and your heart raced so bad because you're scared you're either going to be raped or murdered with no one around? When was the last time you wore sweatpants around the house and were told you've 'let yourself go' because you like to be comfortable? When was the last time someone said a man was too emotional to be president and then have the white house taken over by the most sensitive person in a power position in recent history?	Woman	Gender - General	1/143	0.699
Feminism is not about only supporting women if you look it up the definition is giving everyone equal rights. That's, not just Emmas take on it she just explains it in a better way than some people. Feminism is about equality not about women being the most powerful, it's about men and women being treated the same, given the same respect, and be given the right to choose what they want to do without the influence of typical gender rolls.	Gender	Gender - General	1/80	1.25
prmoted the idea that men shouldnt have to feel the pressure our sociaty puts on them about things like looking fit, telling them its ok to cry and exspress emotions, taught them that sexual assult can happen to them as well and to speak put when it dose. stuff like that. I understand that alot of femanism is to help women but thats beacuse men dont have the same issues like the wage gap or being told that they desseved what they got beacuse of how they where dressed or looked. But they do things for ment just as they do for women. Femanism is about everyone feeling valued for who they are and treated equaly, its about people not having to fear for there safty as the walk down streets. For people to be able to be whatever they whant when there older (job wise)	Sexual	Gender - General	1/146	0.685

You make a good point initially saying people shouldn't be mocked for doing what they want. That's not the problem most people have with feminism. The problem people have with feminism is the notion people have that society needs to be fixed, but who gets to decide what that should be? This is how the term femi-nazi comes into play. People who have a fascist mind and can't tolerate something they don't like rather than something that's wrong. When you have feminists saying men acting masculine is a problem or male sexuality promotes rape culture than it turns people off to what any other feminists will say. To be fair to Emma Watson, she seems well-intentioned and hasn't spouted anything crazy , but she won't change anything. All she does is whine about the need for feminism and her first world problems surrounded by a throng of people that will never disagree with her. Today's feminism (AKA "third wave feminism") is now destroying past gains in "developed" societies...or maybe you're not aware because Big Red didn't scream it in your face. All males need to be punished now, didn't you know? Don't be so naïve in your feminine battle for equality and fight against the debunked wage gap. Most men are sexist (biologically they don't think or behave like women) and that will not change. Also, most men don't live in the USA & agree with the stale PC agenda...because the narrative has evolved for the worse. Try educating yourself! Watch the 2016 documentary "The Red Pill" by Cassie Jaye...a former feminist who chose to listen and address the issues that face men vis-à-vis women in "developed" countries. Feminism is now failing even in the USA precisely because it has become punitive instead of educational.And just for future reference in finding examples, these are mostly very weak...you have only portrayed women celebrities as weak and that's sexist in itself. A African child i agree to an extent because some females can become big headed. At my school theres a teacher who is 'all for feminism' yet she puts men down. Thats not what feminism is. Femnism is a movement to make the world equal. I dont know why they dont just call it equality or normality even because its a movement involving both genders.	African	Ethnicity - Black	1/65	1.538
A African child but i have to say that men are the ones who cause the wars (read the history of wars and who started them). All they want is power. I remember a few months ago watching Ariana Grande’s interview with Power 106.1 FM and how the radio hosts asked her if she had to choose between makeup or her phone, which would she choose? That is not always the case with girls, and I hate that people always assume that about females, in general. Women value things much more than just an iPhone and the newest highlighter. I just really don’t understand why stereotypes as a whole, exist. Also, with Ariana clapping back at the person who called her a ”whore” from her ”Dangerous Woman ” music video, she is 100 right. Men are critically acclaimed by people when they express their sexuality and have their clothes off, but with women, they are seen as sluts, prostitutes, and anti-feminists. I honestly can’t stand the double standard. Women should be able to express their sexuality as much as men can, and shouldn’t be criticized for doing so.	Woman	Gender - General	1/156	0.641

Are people so brain washed that they see gay and trans as being normal? How fucking ignorant and stupid can you all get? What if someone in the future calls themselves a nudist and walks naked on the streets? Will you all also accept that? It's already happening in few cities btw. These LGBT are simply pushing it too far... You can't make a man bear a child, that's the woman's job for fuck sake. Dick is made to be put into vagina, not the butthole of men or women. Butthole is where the poop comes from. It's not the place made by nature for having the proper intercourse. Mouth is meant to eat food and butthole is meant for the exit of all excretion. You can't reverse that. I'm sure the TV would have showed that as well if they could. The porn has totally corrupted the minds of people. They arouse wicked deeds in all your brains and are taking you far from thinking in a way that lets you correctly or at least honestly judge the difference from what's normal and what's not. Wake up before it's not too late, people. Being liberal doesn't mean you're right. Being logical makes one reasonable, which takes them closer to justifying their own truth. The equality of women and the feminism bullshit has already corrupted Canada to a point that it might not even recover. Sweden became even worse, as they removed the words of 'boy' and 'girl' from their dictionaries, and are using gender neutral words it seems. Just imagining those people wearing weird clothes, and women having beards and mustaches is giving me chills. Who in their right mind would want to visit those type of countries? They are so fucking retarded, so much that even Kim Jong Un doesn't stand a chance against them. He looks like a kid in front of these LGBT and feminism promoting HYPOCRITES. Don't straight out believe what the fucking TV says. If you believe the TV, you are nothing but a sheep that was purposely dumbed down by the celebs, politicians and what not. Don't blindly follow the herd of sheep, but walk in your own path, the one that your heart truly believes.I'm not saying I'm entirely against the trans. If they are really born deficient, then they need help. But people are literally turning kids into transgenders. Hollywood is literally filled with trans people. Everybody knows that.I'm not entirely against lesbian or gay or bi sexual, but the thing is... If we think that they are normal, then the TRISEXUALs will enter, who says they like fucking animals. Would you all also see that as normal and accept it just because the TV says so? That's fucking gross. If someone's a lesbian or gay, they simply need help and the doctors have to give them appropriate hormones to make them behave normally. Instead of doing that, people are actually promoting the LGBT as if it's a noble cause. Give me a Break. The feeling of gayness can be changed with hormones even if came by birth. But people are too focused on following the trend of being gay that they actually forget that they only have minor hormone problems which can be totally cured. TV doesn't tell you that. Because they always want to keep the people, the masses divided. And they are doing their job freaking well. Stop sleeping and wake up people. Take your life into your control, and don't let the current trend on facebook or youtube or some other sources decide it for you. And L. It's not about not liking her music. Almost everyone talks about her songs and the fact that she makes songs about her ex's in a negative way even her fans do. You don't have to like her music. Like I said even I'm not a fan. But the point is that most she gets an unnecessary amount of attention and slut shaming that most men don't get. It's just how it is. I'm not saying that people should be forced to like her but this is an example of sexism that is socialised into us. I am guilty of this myself I don't think twice about men talking about ex's in music but with Taylor everyone brings it to the forefront and it becomes more important than whether or not the song is actually good. It's talked about a bit less now but this was pretty much all anyone said about her not even a year ago.	Sexism	Gender - General	1/159	0.629
Another thing is that it isn't just talking about how she bitches about them. It's the whole idea that she's had a lot of boyfriends in general and people call her a slut for that. That's the undeniable sexism here. Nobody cares how many people a male artist has dated and if anything it's glorified and there's nothing wrong with that. Just like there's nothing wrong with a woman dating and/or having sex with as many people as she wants.	Nobody, Nothing, Sex, Sexism, Woman	Age - Youngsters, Gender - General	6/80	7.5
There is a notable difference between being called a fuckboy and slut shaming. Being called a fuckboy is associated with hurting people and being forceful and disrespectful and/or non-consensual sexual advances. Not usually from having sex in general. Sex is a normal human act. Slut shaming happens when a woman sleeps with people or is promiscuous in any way. Whether or not people are offended by it it's still a sexist point of view that shouldn't have a place in modern society. If you'll forgive me for changing the subject I'd like to commend you for not being a complete douche about this whole thing. Being on the internet it's very easy to lash out at people.	Promiscuous, Sex, Sexual, Woman	Gender - Female sexuality, Gender - General	5/117	4.274
And L. Also it doesn't matter how many guys she's slept with, I know why people call her a slut. The point is that they shouldn't. If a men sleeps with lots of women he is generally not slut shamed that is a fact. Women are and it's wrong. Who cares if a woman sleeps with a lot of men? If you don't care when a man does it you shouldn't care when a woman does it.	Woman	Gender - General	2/77	2.597

In college sorority girls called guys they slept with 'fuckboys' because they told me those guys couldn't commit. Guys call girls sluts because they see them as girls who'd rather sleep around than commit. In the end it's just name calling. Another chapter in the battle of the sexes. Woman can have advantages in society that men can't, and men can have advantages that women can't. But society will always have double standards no matter what. Women can be sexually harassed but men can't, women can hit men but men can't hit women, women can get into places for free but men have to pay a cover charge, girlfriends can have guy-friends but boyfriends can't have girl-friends, female firefighters pass with lower scores on physical fitness than the males. Both sides see each other as the victim for different reasons. Double standards exists because everyone has different perspectives. Taylor can be seen as a slut because she's been with multiple men for short periods of time. But these guys can be hypocritical misogynists because they do the same thing and don't get called out as sluts. Both sides do the same thing and both sides get name called. One is seemingly more important than the other but double-standards deem this to be okay. Life isn't fair but why it's unfair is based on perspective. Men and women will always be different. Even scientific studies have proven they look at each other physically in different patterns. Women don't like to be treated certain ways from men, and men don't like to be treated certain ways by women. Which one's more important can only be seen as an unfair double-stand.	Woman	Gender - General	1/278	0.36
You said that those girls called guys fuckboys because they couldn't commit. That is completely different from calling someone a slut because they have sex or even when they don't. Also the general and common use of the word slut is as a nasty word for someone who in general didn't do anything wrong to deserve it. While it is possible to call someone a fuckboy who didn't deserve it again the general and common use of the word is in response to negative or hurtful behaviour. There is a difference. Even if they are both issues it doesn't erase the sexist aspects. And slut shaming has been around much longer than the term fuckboy so any negative or sexist use of the word fuckboy stems entirely from the slutshaming enforced on women as it was most likely invented as a response or counter to that ideology. So either way these things should be stopped at the root or it causes more hurt for both sides. When you think about it, people most likely wouldn't have invented that term if not for slut shaming.	Common, Sex	Gender - General, Social Class - Working class	3/184	1.63

And if something equally parallels an issue it should be cared about equally but the example you brought up was not an equal comparison. Sexism against men is also bad. But sexism against men is usually a different form. Such as the social conditioning to be "masculine" and not express emotion I identify as a feminist and I care about those issues and encourage breaking free from them. We're all human and we should support and be respectful to each other rather than widening the gap between the genders.	Sexism	Gender - General	2/89	2.247

A woman has the right to show her boobs, or to cover them, and the people who SEE her boobs have the right to respect her, or to not respect her. The same goes for a man who shows off his more personal areas in public. You can't DEMAND that other people RESPECT you; respect is EARNED, NOT given FREELY. NOBODY HAS to think favorably about someone whom they don't believe to be deserving of that kind of respect, and they have the RIGHT to avoid such people like the PLAGUE, TOO, and to NOT recommend those people to friends who might want to date them, etc.	Nobody, Woman	Age - Youngsters, Gender - General	2/122	1.639

From what I understand about the whole Emma-Watson-Boob-Feminism issue (and this is coming from someone who didn't care to look deeper into the issue after the initial backlash so bear with me), people weren't upset that she posed in the nude(ish), but rather that she partook in that photoshoot AFTER having condemned multiple celebrities like Beyonce and Rihanna for dressing scandalily/objectifying themselves. It's not so much that people thought that a woman couldn't be a feminist if she had boobs and/or posed provocatively, but that Emma's actions went against her own definition of feminism and thus people said that her way of turning on/judging other celebrities was hypocritical... For what it's worth though, out of context, her boob comment is indeed spot on and I totally agree with its message too	Woman	Gender - General	1/131	0.763
Ashley I mean, i think the issue here is that people didnt like that she judged other women for showcasing their bodies but then did it herself (the judging part being what people were annoyed with, not the skin display itself). Its not so much that feminists should dress a certain way to validate their point; you can be sexy without being objectified, its a matter of female agency and autonomy. Its just that people were holding her accountable for her initial, more narrow definition of feminism (which seems more inline with your own), that her own actions went againts. Her statement here is fine and in line with more contemporary ideas of feminism; shes just avoiding the actual issue people had, which was her perceived hyprocrisy. I personally don't think its backwards to think that you can/should be allowed to wear a skirt without other people reducing you to just legs, for instance. Objectification is turning a woman into an agency-less, empty of content object by placing all her value on her appearance. I think your intelligence, competence, and drive arent lesser because you make your boobs look good on a certain day. To me theres a huge difference between appeal (especially for your own sake) and commodification by others. To each their own opinion though.	Woman	Gender - General	1/217	0.461
I'm not a feminist, and I would never ever pose for a photo shoot that exposed my breasts in any way, but doing so doesn't mean the internet should blow up and talk about her boobs. Wow. Ariana was offended by that comment. You're a talented and successful singer, you shouldn't be offended by an irrelevant comment. Tbh, women call each other whores more than men. If Ariana is so comfortable with her body and loves herself, she shouldn't be offended by a stupid comment. I feel like Feminists nowadays are just crybabies. Women Being criticized is not sexist, seriously. A strong and independent woman would take criticism as advice and handle it like an adult. Men get criticized all the time, but we wouldn't create a worldwide ideology to make people side with us against all the harsh critics, no we handle it like perfectly reasonable adults. Hmmm, I disagree with you. I think feminists have lots of evidence and power because what they say is appealing, that no one has any roles and we can be who we choose to be, man or woman . Feminists fight for human equality and that is true and good. I believe that feminists can convince most of the world of human equality.	Woman	Gender - General	1/62	1.613
I actually have no idea what an egalitarian is, but if it is someone who fights for human equality, I like it. I don't think feminism is lifting women up and putting men down, I think it's lifting humans up and not assigning each kind roles. There is nothing people are meant to be, it's what you want to be to make the world a better place, in your own way. If that means a woman soldier, go for it. I was told to ONLY strive for things that "men do" by my feminist mother. She told me growing up that I was born a victim and I'll never be treated equal because I was a girl born in the south. She was VERY wrong. I've never felt unequal and I've surrounded myself with mostly guy friends and family members. I grew up seeing women on TV doing things that men did and I never once felt unequal. We are seen as equals to the majority. The few true sexists only want attention, so why should we give it to them? Drawing attention to losers and ones with low intelligence is what's putting them in the spotlight. Don't give them the time of day and they'll shut up. It's not sexist to say that boys do one thing and girls do another. Telling a girl she can't do something because she's a girl is never a good thing, but blurring the lines between closed-mindedness and true sexism isn't going to do anyone any good. Women in the west are among the most privileged women in the world. There are women in other parts of the world facing worse problems than words. Women every day are doing things that men do in the west. The only problem I see is the women letting their dreams pass by because they feel like someone thinks they can't do it. If you let some words keep you from what you want you have no one to blame but yourself. I'm speaking in general.	Sexism	Gender - General	1/259	0.386

+gjaddajg what I mean is being a female has always been seen as something bad, like somehow you are less. +Joy Gill”what I mean is being a female has always been seen as something bad, like somehow you are less”Do you live in opposite-land? Women’s lives have always been seen as more valuable than men’s lives. And at this point, women are practically being pampered in the West. When a ship is sinking, when a building is burning, it’s always women and children first . When there’s been an accident somewhere and people have died, you’ll hear them say in the news ”126 people have died - 7 are women” - like they’re somehow worth more and it’s important to point that out.This is known as the ‘empathy gap’. This 5 minute video explains it well: [LINK] ”That’s why we could own property or inherit and why we where no one until having our husbands name and child”No. That’s because men (not all, by the way) earned that right by defending their country and risking their lives in times of war. When it was proposed that women could earn the right to vote by making conscription gender-neutral, feminists campaigned against it. They said they wanted equality, but they really only wanted the good, not the bad. The men earned the right to vote - women felt entitled to it. And of course, men gave it to them.”So [...] being a female [...] is reason to be treated a certain way”Yes. Better. Being a female means you’re treated better. You have more rights and privileges than men.This is of course only true in predominantly white countries. Go to Africa, Asia or the Middle East and you’ll see women being oppressed.”in mine women have equal pay, in the USA they don’t”Yes they do. There’s equal pay in the US. Women and men earn the same for the same job. The ‘pay gap’ is a feminist myth.”there are also country’s like Mexico where 1 in every 5 girls has been raped or molested”Source? Also, how does it compare to violence against men?”Feminism stans for equality”No it doesn’t. It’s stands for inequality , special privileges and female superiority. Feminists lie all the time to push their feminist agenda, they don’t care about men’s rights or men’s issues, and every time men try to talk about men’s rights or men’s issues, feminists silence them.Whether they crybully cinemas and educational institutions into censoring documentaries trying to shed light on men’s issues, like in the case with The Red Pill.Or they disrupts meetings by shouting and pulling fire alarms: [LINK] Or simply block the entrance while calling anyone who tries to enter bigots: [LINK] ”its trying to bring females up to the level males have already”Females are already ABOVE males.”not make males less”Oh they certainly are.	Red	Ideological and Political Identity - General, Ethnicity - Native-American	2/467	0.428

Andi Bender the only reason men hunted when humans were still hunters and gatherers was because if 5 men went out and only 3 came back it wasn't as big of a deal as if it wasn't 5 women went out and only 3 came back sure the people would mourn the men but women were viewed as life givers because they could give life to another human being and bring it into the world and care for it until it was able to care for itself losing a woman a caregiver was more detrimental to their society then losing a man because women were so important it wasn't that men were stronger or more capable it was because women could provide life and care for it. Kieran O'Neill Action speaks louder than words, don't they? Maybe those who stands for the original meaning of feminism stands for gender equality. But guess what? Female already have the same right as male. Give me one law that say otherwise. Just one.3rd wave feminism does not stand for equality. They want supremacy. They don't cover up real issues such as child bride, sexual slavery, or even oppressed female in the middle east. Instead they care about little stuff such as manspreading and claim that it "opresses" them.They insist women should enter the workforce yet won't shut up about how horrible the workforce is because of the wholly inconvenient presence of men. They say it's a woman's choice to have children. However, they ruthlessly condescend stay-at-home mothers; insisting they are capitulating to 'traditional gender roles'. They plead with women to come out about sexual assault, yet simultaneously discourage them by insisting they won't be believed. They valiantly exclaim physical appearance doesn't matter, and are usually proud advocates of the 'fat positivity' movement, yet, regardless of their insistence that 'fat' is not an insult, for some bemusing reason they become grossly offended if you dare comment on their weight. Hypocrisy at its finest.It is evident, then, the third-waver revels in convenient double-standards.	Gender, Sexual	Gender - General	4/213	1.878

Darth Vader I agree with you some feminists do not focus on real problems such as rape however many feminists do. There is no law that I can show you that does not give women equal rights but the society that we live in puts everyone into gender roles not just women. If you truly believe that equality exists for all already then I will respect that and leave you alone but I believe that there are people being oppressed everyone maybe not as badly where I am from but there still are. I fight for what I believe in and clearly you do as well and if you have read the comments on here talking about other people putting them down you will see that there are still unfair standards for everyone and I believe in changing that letting people be who they want to be and do what they want to do that is what I stand for that is what feminism is to me I don't want to put people down for their beliefs either and I apologize if I have done so everyone has a right to what they believe. Kieran O'NeillStop being delusional. Nature doesn't give a shit about your feelings. Human sexes have different functions and qualities that accommodate those functions. Women are not just as capable as men are to do those jobs. STEM is dominated by men because women are not as good nor are as interested in those fields as men are, despite that women have massive privileges if chosen those areas (they have a hiring priority over males with equal or even superior qualifications).This is a proven fact, that has very rare exceptions. The only people that deny it are, expectedly, people that are not part of the STEM.The fact that women are not as strong as men are is not only true, it makes anybody say otherwise look like a troll or an idiot. Men are faster, stronger and more durable than women. This is proven by all the existing sports competitions and records.And stop bringing that retarded "carry and push a baby out of vagina" nonsense. How is this strong?On average a baby weights around 2.5 kg - that is nothing . Men carry bigger weights for long periods of time and push even bigger ones for short ones. I'm not even gonna mention the crazy men that drag and lift heavyweights with their penises.Women with their pregnancy have nothing on men in terms of strength. It is a valuable quality, but it doesn't require strength. A woman can never lift a finger in her entire life and still give birth. In that perspective, I get what you are saying. But, I live in America. And we (men and women) are still not equal. Lily Danks In America and the UK, we do have equal pay. The 70 cents to a dollar figure is one of the most disingenuous things I have ever seen. Women are simply less likely to take higher paying jobs. If a man and a woman both work at the same place, have the same position, and produce the same quality of work, they will be paid the same wage. In the US and the UK, women are more likely to be hired, especially in STEM fields. However, I don't blame sexism for that, I blame modern day forced diversity. Rape happening more to women is likely more because it's harder for women to rape men as the average male is stronger than the average woman . Regardless, I want equality as much as the next rational person, but we already have it, so I see no point in advocating for something you already have. Just because men allow women to show their tits on magazine covers and wear whatever they want isn't proof that somehow women are winning in Western society. They're really not. At the end of the day...when men decide collectively and without budge that women can no longer do those things, what will women do? Go to war? Pick up guns? cyberwolf anyone who thinks sexism against both men and women (yes, including in first world countries) doesn't exist is simply ignorant. The fact that I have been catcalled almost daily since I was 11/12, mostly by men much much older than me, is sexist. The fact that my little brother thinks it's 'wrong for boys to cry' because that's what society has taught him, is a clear example of sexism . The fact that my dad shouted at me to get down from climbing a tree the other day (while my brothers were happily climbing away) and pulled me to the side, explaining that 'some things are appropriate for girls and some things are appropriate for boys, and climbing trees is only for boys', that is plainly sexism . When my parents forced my brothers and I to attend a youth group, which consisted of the boys only being allowed to play football out on the field, while the girls had to bake cakes for them for when they finished? That is sexism . I could honestly give you dozens more examples but we would be here all day. Sexism exists. It exists everywhere. It is against men as well as women. Alexa Jaimes are you serious?? Sexism is very real; yeah maybe it's worse off in third world countries, but it is NOT nonexistent in first world countries. You wanna hear male privilege? How about walking alone at night without the constant fear of being assaulted and raped? How about not having the need to carry your keys in your hand as a makeshift weapon of defense? How about being taken seriously right away because you're a man? How about the wage gap? How about how girls are told to dress differently instead of boys being told not to friggin touch someone without consent? How about how girls are told things like "makeup is false advertising" or "boys don't like it if you do that." Even with guys who are told they cant cry or they cant like Barbie and the color pink. Men are basically ignored just as much as women when they say they've been raped because "they should've enjoyed it." How about expecting men to make more money and expecting women to stay home with the kids? Saying Sexism doesn't exist in ANY part of the world just proves ignorance and, at the worst of it all, guilt itself.	Sexism	Gender - General	2/201	0.995

Sexism exist in first world countries. Its sad you don't think so, but its true. You may think your statement isn't damaging but it is. Yes things are really bad in third world countries, but that doesn't mean things don't need fixing here. Saying "Oh, it could be worse' is such a damaging statement to future progress. It could always be worse. I saw a documentary on child brides a long time ago and it stuck with me. This mother was telling her child on her wedding day 'It could be worse for you could have no man want you, you could starve." What a fucking poisonous thing to say. But it wasn't the mothers fault, her mother said the same thing to her after she was raped, her mother told her she was lucky because her husband didn't leave her for that, that it could have been worse. This shit is horrible, and people and saying this it all over the world. And yes, we are very lucky today, especially in a first world country, but that doesn't mean we should stop fighting for equality. We shouldn't let the fact that it is worse else were, leave us feeling satisfactory in our current position. The world is changing for the better, and that should not stop just because you feel it could be worse.	Sexism	Gender - General	1/225	0.444

gray MLS That's because sexism against men is not seen nearly as bad as sexism against women, in fact it's ignored.For example Kit Harrington made a tweet saying that men can be objectified too (i repeat he said men can be objectified "TOO") meaning both men and women, yet the whole online community rushed to have a hissy fit of anger to express how dare a man say he experiences sexism and issues in society.This happens everywhere in the media and in society.This very videos is proof of it, they try to point of sexism , while being sexist to only show a single man. How brainwashed can you be to think feminism (today's feminism) is about equality, when they actually make laws that are by default against men and in favor of women? Read about the Duluth Model, this law puts innocent men in jail on a daily basis, a law made by feminists, and a law ALL feminists support.Manspreading, mansplaining, all these sexist things feminists created are as biased as they can be. Gender studies portray men as born evil prone to rape and hurt women, and masculinity itself being toxic, while women are victims and incapable of doing wrong in society.Feminists bash men for sexual assault to the point of just putting your hand on a woman;s leg is possible sexual assault, but they never even recognize that women can ever assault men, and always ignore woman-on-man rape and assault, and try to ignore it.And this is not some " crazy extremist", this is mainstream feminism. My two role models have to be Emma Watson and Zendaya, because they're so respectable, so talented and just genuinely good people. It hurts to see that sexism is still a freaking thing. I believe that sexism is often made a thing when one is a child. I've often seen children say "Girls are not as strong as boys" or play games like "Girls v.s Boys! Boys/Girls will definitely win because insert sexist statement here"I think parents should show their children at a young age that everyone is equal, and show them to treat the opposite gender right. Well to be fair, appreciating the human form (whether or not you find it arousing) does not equate to objectification. Objectification is far more insidious than that. Lindsey Grey All these movements are about women being able to naturalized their bodies so men don't feel so turned on towards us. Men being shirtless is so naturalized now. It's basically equivalent to shirtless women except we have fat on our breasts. Neither are sexual organs or involved in making children but one is sexualized for some reason still. When we go to the beach, wear trendy clothes (crop tops, shorts, even chokers) people have to say "she's doing that for a man" "oh he has EVERY RIGHT to tell you he has a boner because you were showing your shoulders! Your thighs!" Like no... i get it, boners are involuntary but keeping your mouth closed, being polite and mature about It, is VERY easy as I assume we're all old enough to know what basic interactions look like and when something is appropriate or not	Fat, Old, Sexual	Age - Over 65s, Gender - General, Physical Identity - Physical Features	3/147	2.041

Lindsey Grey Actually men get boners through all sorts of weird shit, it's their minds and whatever they associate with sex that decide what will give them boners, even if unconsciously . If they associate 12 year old girls dressed in school clothes with sex and get excited out of that, it doesn't mean all 12 year old girls have to start dressing in garbage bags so men wont sexualise and objectify their bodies. By the same token, no women should have to consider the possibility of men's arousal before deciding what to wear, or else we would all have to walk like those muslim women, which, by the way, still suffer from sexual advances on the streets and extreme sexism , even though they are definitely, by your brainwashed standards, NOT objectifying their bodies. So you see, what would have to change, if anything, would be the mind that finds the women to be an object or objectified, and not the women themselves. But in reality the only thing that has to change is men trying to teach women what feminism is. Just imagine a white person coming to Malcom X (or any black person, for that matter) trying to teach him what he can or cannot do to validate his own beliefs and movement, and you will perhaps and hopefully understand the absurdity of the situation. fuckMeAriel I think you have the wrong idea when it comes to sexism . Being sexist isn't just shaming someone for showing their body. It's so much more. It's believing that a certain sex can't do something or act a certain way. Such as what that girl said who Emma Watson replied to. The sad thing is that I can't walk down my street with my dog because a girl that's 14 on my block got raped by a man and beaten 3 days ago. She's now in hospital. I know this doesn't really have anything to do with anything that's said but I just want you all to take that in and think that this is why objectifying bodies is bad. If you're a someone saying that its women's fault that our bodies are looked upon as objects then you must be living under a rock. An example of sexism is school dress codes. May dress codes go as far and not allowing women to show their shoulders and they must have bottoms under their knees. It's just so disgusting how people won't let us wear what we like without getting hate one it. Some dress codes are understandable but the ones I said above are outrageous. Why can't I wear outfits without being called names? And no I don't dress up for others I do it for myself. I have a love fashion so much and trying different styles. Let me wear what I want. Sorry about my thoughts being so scattered. And I have a thought to leave you with that I found online:"I think why most people "hate" a particular individual for no reason is because they don't understand who you are completely, like if you look different or act different then what society wants. Even a lot of fathers out there high- five their sons for getting all the "hot" girls and all that shit. Fathers even sometimes envy or have a crush on their son's girlfriends! But as soon as a girl sleeps with a lot of men she is considered a slut and whore who has no "self-respect". Not to mention an angry father and may even get "shunned" by her parents. A guy can also walk around shirtless, sing songs revolving all around sex, and there ain't no problem at all. A female sings a song all about sex and some will say it's "disgusting", not to mention how it's not "true" music either because girls are generally more expected to have more "classy" songs with a deeper meaning to them or else they're just the "irreverent" bad role models. I'm not sexist, I believe in equality which is why I will never support Emma Watson, as, no matter what she believes; saying she is a feminist will only publicise feminism, which is horrid, wicked and completely inequal 'movement'. And please, don't respond with something like 'The dictionary definition for feminism is for equality, dumbass'. Also yes I know you can be both for booksmart and intelligent part; it's just not very common. She's not creating a safe place for women; she's creating a horrible place for men. What is she fighting for? Being able for some boys at 7 years old to not say that she can't run a play? The whole way she presents herself is idiotic. Also, saying you're not shallow when you're still replying with 'hahaha' really doesn't work. It's more than a 50 chance to be male, actually, which means that Emma is ruining society for over half of the entire world's population. Hi there! Ok feminism is not a "horrid" movement. It's fighting for equality, and yes, right now it's based more towards raising women up so that we are equal. Maybe what you're thinking of is "a misandranist" I believe, who want to create equality by tearing men down. Which is equally as bad as men tearing women down to raise themselves up. Feminism is more in the middle. But feminism is also protecting men, a teenage boy got raped by a woman and was told he should've enjoyed it, feminists spoke for him, and saved him. Feminists are trying to teach that feminine traits aren't bad, like showing emotion, we want everyone to have equality. Emma Watson in my humble opinion is intelligent as well as book smart, but maybe you're right. But book smart isn't a bad thing, just different. She knows her facts, but also wants to help and knows how she wants to do it. I won't pick apart your comment telling you you're wrong, I don't think you're wrong, I think that your opinion is not in my favor, and I don't agree with it, but I'll respect you. I really don't want you to think you're dumb, I didn't want to fight, just educate you a little on what our side thinks. If you could just consider what it's like being a women, and being fearful of walking home in the dark because of rapists, or being pushed from your dreams because you're a girl. It's kinda hard, and I want to be like Emma one day. If you're under the impression I'm shallow, I'm not. I won't say sorry, but I will say that I never wanted to insult you. You're very intelligent and know your facts. But all we want is a fair shot	Dumb, Woman	Gender - General, Physical Identity - Physical (and Mental) Impairments	2/301	0.664

I know how your side thinks because I was once on that side. You can say that feminists aren't misandranistic but the statistics say otherwise; that 80 of American females believe in gender equality, but only 20 of American females consider themselves a feminist. Yes; being book smart is good in a lot of situations, particularly scientific, but it just doesn't work very well in social issues. I don't believe you're shallow. Also, you keep on complaining about being afraid of rape, but I have no idea what you're supposed to do about it, apart from, y'know... do stuff before its dark? I know it's a bit more difficult in winter but just remember that a larger percentage of males get raped then women. Yes that includes prison, but I think that's a fair justification considering males are usually the ones relied on to risk their lives doing crimes so that their children and wife can have a better life. Also, for that teenage boy thing, could I have a source? Looks interesting. Also, if a man is ever harassing you, never spare! Just accuse him of rape. There's no downsides and you ruin his entire life.	Gender	Gender - General	1/197	0.508
Males are also cautious of getting raped after 8pm as well, as we also have an orifice. How is feminism going to stop rapists? If feminism is truly getting better, then go and tell BuzzFeed, they'll make it worse again. Or that women who believes in guilty until proven innocent, but ONLY for males. Sex crimes are the only ones that operate in guilty until proven innocent - if you were accused of murder 892 people, you are innocent until there is evidence that you are guilty. If you are accused of rape, then you're instantly guilty. But only if you're a male. A male accusing a women of rape is laughable.	Sex	Gender - General	1/112	0.893

honestly idk why people feel like their opinions matter on such a subject, regardless of gender . smiling is such a trivial issue to argue about, i really don't understand why people react so strongly to their feelings being hurt over something so stupid. so she wasn't smiling. so what? she didn't conform to your cultural standards of physically displaying gratitude for compliments. so what? maybe she was grateful, but was just tired from her performance and didn't feel like smiling. if your dog just got run over by a car and was laying in the road dying and you were crying, and someone came up to you and complimented your hair, but then asked why you didn't smile at them for complimenting your hair, how would you react? it's easy for certain types of people to smile on command, but for other types, it's very difficult, especially when you're exhausted. i think you people should stop being so petty and judgmental and focus more on actually important things in the world. Lonely Luke True feminism, before it was corrupted by these other ideas of superiority is about men and women being equal. I think men should be allowed to wear makeup, dresses, skirts (appropriate length) and not be judge, although naturally in society it is seen as "gay" or "weird" for a man to be feminine and many believe that is because femininity is looked down upon, while a woman can dress as a man and nobody cares!! It's considered "cool" also not in my school but I do know that some dress codes prevent girls from wearing certain things due to the distraction their body creates to the males in class(INCLUDING MALE TEACHERS) which I found disgusting. Also, girls can't wear shorts or tank tops on hot days. I think dress codes are becoming looser so it's not a huge deal, but worth mentioning. Rachel DT Who the hell cares if men are stronger, anyway? It shouldn't stop women for pursuing karate, and other sports, solely because they are the physically weaker gender . Rachel DT generally men are physically stronger. But not every single man is stronger than every single woman . There are plenty of really strong women and women bodybuilders who are stronger than many males it just isn't as common . And even with that fact just because men are stronger why can't women do karate? Because they don't have the same exact physical capacity as men they just shouldn't try? Should just submit to being weak? That ideology is part of the reason why men are stronger. Also learning karate could help women defend themselves and make them strong enough to stand against assault and without that training they probably would not be able to because men are usually stronger. jim bill why do you think men have made so many inventions while women lagged behind? do you really think it's because women are stupid and useless? it's because men have oppressed women and forced them into the gender role of homemakers, cooks, and baby factories for generations, and anytime a woman tried to rise up from that role, she was chastised, demoralized, or simply forced back into her "proper role" as a female. men are the reason women lagged behind, not women. women are the reason women can vote and actually have more rights nowadays than they did just 100 years ago or so. in the grand scheme of history, that's fucking pathetic and disgusting that women were treated as second class citizens just because of their born gender so recently. please educate yourself.	Gender, Woman	Gender - General	3/135	2.222
Flannel wtf? I cba to read jim's comment but your saying about how just because their born gender they were treated differently? Still happens today, first of all, western culture you have less if you are male, middle-eastern/eastern culture you have less if you are female. Not only that, but your saying that to people that can't change what their ancestors did? Surely you're discriminating against them for only being born too late.PS: There is also another reason women haven't made so many inventions. First and less importantly, the testosterone makes males more competitive, and the estrogen makes women more caring and more likely to sacrifice a career for a life of caring for others (children, usually). Also, as I said before, men score in the very low and the very high skill of a particular thing, whereas women usually score in the average. This means they don't make many inventions because they are in the mid area, I'm not saying they can't, I'm just saying that because of that its pretty much impossible to have a female version of Einstein.	Gender	Gender - General	1/182	0.549
Men can grow more muscle mass then women, but that doesn't mean they ARE stronger. They CAN be stronger then women. Theres a difference. But, even from that, strength isn't such an important factor when it comes to protecting yourself. Women can learn, and should learn self defence, and it won't matter how strong someone is then. So I don't understand why you had to bring up that point at all? She said that she was told by her then friend that women cant train in karate (Which is so fucking stupid- I train in karate and am a women)- why the fuck does your statement at all need to be said? gjaddajg - That is incorrect. Women have long outnumbered men on college campuses and hold more advanced degrees. Its true women's IQs have lagged in the past (easy to see why back in the day, a women's education was seen as pointless and were often oppressed into simple gender roles.), but today that gap has closed and women are in fact scoring higher then men IQ wise. Im sure that you will try come back with some smart mouth retort- but id appreciate it if you could do a little research before hand. Thanks.	Gender	Gender - General	1/94	1.064

I dont understand the meaning of your first point? What I was saying is that 'Feminist-bias' makes no sense because— feminism means 'the advocacy of womens rights on the ground of the EQUALITY OF THE SEXES' bias means 'the inclination or prejudice for or against one person or group, especially in a way considered unfair. How you believe that a movement for equality can be paired with the word biased is completely ridiculous. But moving on. I will apologies that I missed your other links, only on your reply did I see the 'read more', but anyhow, lets examine these links you have sent me to. Psychology Today- That post was actually something I read before, and doesn't really support your point that mens IQs are higher the womens. (I understand that you are trying to say that you are just saying the IQs are basically similar- which would be a great point, if you didn't go onto say then mens IQs are slightly higher.) In this post he brings up the findings of James Flynn- someone I actually admire and who's work I follow. The author of the post goes on to 'set the record straight' about the findings. See what happened (incase you just skimmed past to find something to use to support your point) was that James Flynn released his findings on the IQs of men and women. But the news did what it does best and distorted theses findings to makes them seem more surprising and more biased the they were. They took his research and ended up contorting it to say that women were so much smarter then men blah blah blah, when in actual fact, Flynn's findings were just that womens IQs have finally caught up to mens (Im hoping I don't have to explain to you why womens IQs were lower then mens a few hundred years ago) and even surpassed mens IQs a little bit- here's an actual quote from Flynn in your link "So they certainly equaled men, and perhaps were slightly above. This has been distorted in the news of my saying that women are incredibly more intelligent than men. As you can see, this somewhat goes beyond what was claimed."Your next link... oh god. As soon as I saw who the author of that piece was, I knew I was in for a good one. And I was right. The whole thing is full of hate and really twisted and misrepresented research. Milo Yiannopoulos is literally called the internets supervillian. He's been busted in recordings of supporting relationships between older men and young boys, he's basically a professional troll, gaining a following and a spotlight for bringing up controversial subjects (the more people he insulted, the more attention he would get). A female staffer put in a complaint against him for non-payment of wages, he retaliated by calling her a 'common prostitute' (what a charmer). He lead a campaign of harassment against actress Leslie Jones because she was appearing in the female cast of Ghostbusters- ultimately that act got him kicked off twitter- something he's is very proud of. I could go on, he is very famous for his hate speech, his disgust of feminism and for women in general, and his crusade against 'snowflakes' but I think thats enough. Forgive me if I don't find his writing on the matter all that compelling. Now your last link... have you even read it? Or did you just copy and paste the title because it sounded like it supported your point? The title got me too, I was a little confused because this is

Well done, women have more empathy because of estrogen which makes them want to care more for offspring. That's not sexist, that's biology. Men are more competitive and more likely to win something because of that competitiveness. That's not sexist, that's biology, and also why men and women don't race each other in the olympics. Women go through pregnancy and danger of being pregnant if they don't bother to take a pill. Oh feminism is about NOT needing to take a pill - wtf. No matter what anybody does there's still going to be rapists and the need for a pill against pregnancy, you can't argue against that. You AREN'T expected to cook clean and meet needs of your husband - we aren't in the fucking 17th century, you cunt. Your lifetime of periods is nothing to male adolescence. Abuse is a bit general. Women are on average, 50 weaker than men and around average to intellect. If you want to say that empathy equals strength go ahead - but I don't agree. Yes, and I didn't at all fit into your argument. Thats fine, and I have actually heard that theory before. But it still is a theory that hasn't been all that well tested, which makes sense because its a hard thing to test. One counter argument I heard for that was that that particular - women are less likely to be up in the genius category of IQs (going with the whole average thing) was and is because of the way society is at the moment. Years back they tested to see who was in the one percent in a particular group - I believe it was a school, and they found intuit top 1 only 1 woman to every 5 men. but in recent years that has changed considerably to 1 woman to every 3 men in the top 1 for IQs. That report I read was basically saying that the findings that there were more men in the genius catagory weren't totally reliable because of many outside factors. And that goes the same with men being in the 'dumb ass' category. I tend to believe that that is probably to do with outside factors as well. So thats where I come to believe really that men and women are basically the same for IQs and trying to test the difference is a very complicated thing to do with many outside factors influencing the results. It would take a totally equal society and a totally unbiased researcher who takes into the account other factors in order to really test this theory.And yeah you guessed it, not really interested in viewing Dr Shaym's graph. Woman	Gender - General	1/78	1.282

Really bitch... He wasn't being misogynistic he was just wondering if you were gonna smile... Cause you were performing... Its a great concept really. And about that guy calling Ariana a whore, that is un-called for. Also understand something. The reason that men are allowed to take their shirts off in public, at a reasonable time mind you, is because women have sexual organs on their upper half of their body which men do not. Yes men do have breasts but they are not sexual organs and as prominent on a man's body. That radio host asking a simple question didn't need to turn into some outrage on the Internet . It had nothing to do with equality between genders... It was a question. I'm not sexist but I'm not an activist either cause I don't want to be dragged into either side's pile of horse shit. Sexist people are extremely ignorant and need to change, yes, but on the other hand some activists tend to take comments or opinions and misinterpret/contort them to make people look like monsters and over all create problems. The perfect example is the Simone Biles clip. The host on this episode said that asking a women to smile is the oldest sexist move in the book... That's literally the most stupid pile of horse shit I've ever heard. Asking someone to smile is normal! Its a common courtesy that should be done in public, LET ALONE PERFORMING!!!!!! I understand if she was doing gymnastics and has to focus on her movements A LOT but she was on a dance show and when you dance, you entertain, and when you entertain you should smile because no one would watch Cirque Du Soleil if the performers didn't smile!!!!!! ITS JUST A NORMAL THING THAT ISN'T A GENDER ISSUE!!!!!! And for people saying that its sexist cause men can be sloppy and rude when women have to be prim, proper, and polite, that is sexist because you just implied that all men are sloppy and rude. That my friend is stereotyping a whole gender . Which is what a lot of feminists want to break, gender stereotypes. I understand that sexism is real, but I feel like sometimes people these days throw terms around and makes things more serious than they are. Yeah, everybody has theirs opinions on it, but the way I see it is that a lot of these weren't really sexist. For example, the one with Rowan Blanchard, I'm assuming that the person who asked that question was teenage girl, she was just asking for dieting tips, yeah, the way she asked the questioned implied that it was just for girls to follow, but that's really reading in too deep about it. Somebody was just asking for tips and was referencing themselves or a group in an objective manner. And the thing with Zendaya, we all know she doesn't need makeup because she is beautiful, but the person who said she looked kinda scary just isn't used to seeing her without makeup on. Is it really being sexist just because one person thought she didn't look like what she usually did with makeup on??But I will say, the Taylor Swift, Simone Biles, Emma Watson, and Ariana Grande parts can be considered sexist.But the Serena Williams one I can't say that part was sexist. If Feminism is about promoting equality between men and women and all the other sexes or identifers there are, then what's wrong with a woman thanking men who she believed did something great?? And further more, I think that the reason some of these are being so hyped up and mis-labeled as sexist because some people when they look at tweets and all of that other stuff, they don't understand the tone it is being used for and automatically feel as though somebody is trying to be offensive.	Sexism, Woman	Gender - General	2/289	0.692

And Katy Perry's response was idiotic and made no sense. So she's against wage gap... and I'm assuming that she's refering to a man and a woman who have the same job , the same responsibility and work the same hours as a man (right?)... so why in hell is she happy for being paid more than her male counterparts? It's hypocrite and not coherent with what she says to be standing for. Of course if she brings more revenues and hype to the show I don't have any objection to her being paid more... but making such claim because you're a woman being paid is like enjoying what you say you don't like to happen to others... but only when you are the one who has that advantage. The reason that question is sexist is because firstly, it implies her biggest concern should be about her weight. Never mind her career, because apparently that's not interesting at all; they are pushing aside some of her greater achievements and solely commenting on her image. This is something girls get a lot; people seem to think their greatest achievements have to do with their beauty or their weight loss and whatnot.Let me give you a personal example: I've been having a pretty good year. I've just started university, having been accepted with the best possible academic scholarship because I worked my ASS off to get good grades. I've recently been accepted into Mensa as well, which is a pretty big deal. Furthermore, I've been volunteering a lot, and I plan to go to Africa in the spring to help teach young children and build wells.But despite all this, it seems the first thing people tell me when they see me is, "Wow, you've grown up so well! You've really become a beautiful woman. You've lost weight since I last saw you!" Who cares? I've done far more important things than look pretty, but even when I mention these things, they're not usually taken very seriously.On the other hand, my brother has been training for the Olympics - and that's ALWAYS the first thing people bring up when they talk about him. They comment about how hard-working he is and how difficult it must be to balance his training with school... yet in the meantime, I, as a girl, have worked just as hard as him, and it's always brushed off. I've been told many times before that I don't actually need to work hard, BECAUSE of the fact that I'm pretty: "You'll have no problem finding a rich man."While my brother - a boy - is encouraged to work hard and impresses people with his achievements, I - a girl - get praised more-so on my appearance, as if that should be my main goal in life.Just like how Rowan, a successful actress and humanitarian, isn't been asked about the amazing things she has recently done; she's being asked about her beauty secrets. Because that's all that matters.Secondly, body image is a HUGE problem in North America. It affects boys too, do not get me wrong, but hopefully you'll agree with me when I say that it majorly focuses on young girls. I teach children aged around 3-6, and it's horribly sad how many of these girls worry about becoming "fat". By sharing "dieting tips", the interviewers are just further implying how important it is to diet and be skinny, and trying to glorify unhealthy habits - not only that, but this sort of question only seems to be aimed at female celebrities, because of course, what else matters but their beauty? So Rowan brilliantly replies, "Do you have any dieting tips for boys?" It's putting the idea in the spotlight because it sounds ridiculous, you never see dieting tips for boys, like, what? Because boys aren't required to be stick-skinny. Nah, only girls need to do that. Girls need to diet so they can look good, because looking good is all that should matter to a girl.This got really long, but do you start to understand now how these kinds of behaviours are sexist?I'll agree, the "smiling" comment is taken out of context and probably isn't meant in a sexist life, but to say that gender equality is "cancerous"? Really? There is still a lot of work to be done before the world will see women and men in equal lights. Oh my god, my heart is- my heart is oh my god! I am impressed by the amount of points you brought up in this reply as well as the quality of this reply. This is very rare nowadays in YouTube as people resort to swearing to prove their points.However, your point that the question "do you have any dieting tips for girls" is racist is not being seen from a different angle. Let me ask you something, if no one compliments you for how you look, how would you feel? I'm pretty sure you would have wanted to be praised for how you look, as it is not only showing your good manners during any sort of meeting, it also is supposed to make both parties happy. In this case with you and other parties complimenting your looks however, it is not to be. Now, it is not an act of sexism if people are not interested in the things you do. It is possible that your brother training for the Olympics might have people coming over to him praising him for what he is doing, but still: that isn't sexism, and it isn't an act of favouritism towards boys. The entire point of my comment was not supposed to be emphasizing a lot about why th question isn't sexist. No. The main point is that feminism has come to a stage where everything that isn't equal among genders is sexist. Furthermore, the media is glorifying it, so much that it has been affecting the younger generation. News outlets like Buzzfeed has made so many videos just talking about feminism, and how sexist men are. Do not get me wrong, I am not against feminism at all. I am instead against the irrational side of feminism, the one who thinks asking why Simone Biles didn't smile is an act of pure sexism. I hope I have enlightened you enough for you to understand the whole situation, in a much bigger picture.	Racist, Sexism	Ethnicity - General, Gender - General	4/333	1.201

iPhone Rebel allow me to further broaden your viewpoint, then. we're currently in an enormous cultural shift where equality is being demanded in a caricature-like style of exaggeration, which is more or less necessary for an entire population of over 300 million to be affected in such a strong manner as to be felt in future generations long-term. the early 1910s were a drastically different time, where women were treated as second class citizens simply because of their born gender. women weren't even legally "allowed" to vote until 1920 - that's less than 100 years ago, one generation. we've come a long way in a very short amount of time, and such a shift in behavior in such an enormous population requires a very powerful movement indeed. i'm not being apologist for misandry in the least, of course, because i agree with it just as much as i agree with misogyny, but if you compare it to religious movement you might understand a bit better. christianity has committed some horrific shit in the past, but we've moved past it, learned from the atrocities, and now know as a culture not to commit them anymore. the path to right and wrong is paved with empathy, and humanity is but an infant slowly learning this through trials and tribulations. it might seem like a "feminazi" apocalypse right now, but 50 years in the future, things will be completely different and hopefully significantly more equal for everyone. so i hope you're a little more enlightened now.	Feminazi, Gender, Misandry, Misogyny	Gender - Female intelligence, Gender - General	4/253	1.581
iPhone Rebel It's sexist because no one ever asks teenage boys or men on the red carpet what they eat to keep their figure. They typically get asked real questions related to their careers. Meanwhile all the women get asked questions regarding their appearance. And yes asking someone why they aren't smiling is sexist. I get told to smile all the time and in my 21 years I've never seen anyone tell a man to smile. jetnight 88 Actually, my best friend is a male and him and I had a discussion. He asked if I was a feminist and I said "Well I'm not going to take from people, but I'm not going to petition or protest." And we talked back and fourth about the subject. I said "Well if I slapped you would you slap me back?" And he said "No you're a girl." And I responded by saying, "So if I came at you with a knife you wouldn't defend yourself? Good to know." I just told that story just to say, it's usually the guy who says he wouldn't hit the female back. I don't know why, maybe they're scared to get beat up or something along the line(s). Elizard Schuyler exactly. It's not sexist. It was awkward sure but it didn't have anything to do with her sex or looking down on her as a woman . She is a performer and it's her job to smile. Also he was complementing her and she wasn't accepting the compliments or even smiling which is considered rude. He probably meant it as a way of telling her to cheer up and be happy about her performance anyway but the whole situation didn't need to be made into such a big deal especially while blaming the guy for being "sexist"	Sex, Woman	Gender - General	2/98	2.041

It is seen as sexist because women always have to uphold the stereotype of being always happy. Telling someone to smile will have the opposite effect. They'll just get pissed. It makes women think we need to be happy and pretty all the time, and it makes people think that because we're smiling, they can engage in unwanted conversation. In New Zealand, a man sexually assaulted a woman and his excuse was "because women who smile are asking men to follow them". They tell women to smile because they think we are an object and are merely there for their pleasure. You don't know, a family member could of died or something along those lines. Please, don't ask women to do something they don't want to do. It's the same in reverse. Don't ask men to do something they don't want to do.	Woman	Gender - General	1/143	0.699

And it's hypocritical, because no one bats an eye when a woman touches a man's knee or arm or whatever. Which they did several times during that very same interview.The "incident" was 1 trending on YouTube, it was trending on Twitter, and every single "news" outlet was "reporting" on it, including the Sun, the Independent, the Telegraph, the Express, Standard, Metro, Mirror, USA Today, Huffington Post,, Yahoo etc.Here are some examples: [LINK] [LINK] [LINK] The general narrative from the media was that he "repeatedly touched her knee" and she "removed his hand" and "squirmed" while the other women were "watching in shock and horror".(actual quotes from "articles")Problem is: literally none of that happened. What happened was that he was telling a story that related to her, so he put his hand on her knee as a friendly gesture. She then went to hold his hand, but he wasn't looking, so he removed his hand before she got to it. wow, i just read what male gaze actually is and it's even more stupid than what i thought it was lmao, "In feminist philosophy, the male gaze is the way in which the visual arts and literature depict the world and women from a masculine point of view, presenting women as objects of male pleasure." 1st off, "feminist philosophy" now looking through this internet you seem to trust so much feminism means: "Feminism is a range of political movements, ideologies, and social movements that share a common goal: to define, establish, and achieve political, economic, personal, and social rights for women. This includes seeking to establish educational and professional opportunities for women that are equal to such opportunities for men." Now tell me, if you're so educated, how the heck does this "male gaze", which to me seems just a way for male artists to express their passion for women, which again art is just a form of expression, telling artists to modify their art would truly be oppression, affect in any way women's political and social rights and their opportunities? like what the heck? feminism did its job some years ago already in our western modern society, now it's just a tool for tumblr girls to victimize themselves when most of them never truly suffered harassment or oppression, we don't need to teach "men" not to oppress women's rights because no sane man should do that, what we need to do is to teach EVERYONE not to commit CRIMES like rape and harassment, it's not about feminism, it's not about you, it's about a better society for all of us, because feminism's purpose is already accomplished, women have absolutely equal rights to men (and usually some advantages too), raping is a crime, sure, it's really horrid, but artistic expression, and even the expression of opinion, that's not wrong, that man just said what he was thinking, that the woman should've smiled more, he wasn't attacking her or "presenting her as object of male pleasure", he was just saying what he thought could've made her performance better	Common, Woman	Gender - General, Social Class - Working class	2/347	0.576

Nico Lay It means that women are seen as objects, and men as the possessors of such objects. Society, in commercials and ads, games, movies and series etc, is teaching men (and women and children) that women are here to reassure hetero-masculinity, as sexualised objects, while simultaneously denying them any agency of their own outside of that framework. This is very harmful because of how it makes people view and treat women, and because of how many men act believing they have the right to women's bodies and time, women being there only for what's called the male gaze. This is what drives men to tell women to smile, to use more or less make up, to call women ugly, slutty or frigid when "denied" men's believed right to women's bodies, to harass women who doesn't want to have sex with a man just because he bought her a drink. And many men get offended/angry/threatening/abusive if women don't do as they demand. It's the same with sexual harassment like catcalls being horrifying, threatening experiences for women, who are then punished for not being thankful and appreciating males "complimenting" them, saying you're hot enough to fuck or rape. People excusing and diminishing these structures and facts aren't any better, because you probably act like this since you can't see it going on or understand it's something bad that ruin lives. It even kills.And see, even though you seem to have failed not to angle your Google search in a non-sexist way, you finally took the time to actually trying to find facts. Now you just need to lean not to Google your opinion word for word, but to Google more "neutral" words (or else you will get some sexist blogger with the same uneducated opinion telling you you're right = invalid material) and to check sources. Hi there! but there are more coloured people than just black . I only use that term because I am including all races other than white, not just black people. And being catcalled by fully grown men at age 12 is scary. Being followed by a group of men at night at age 13 is terrifying. At that age , you don't know what's going to happen. I honestly thought I was going to get raped. Being catcalled is demeaning (even the name - catcalling... are we cats? Last time I checked, I didn't posses claws, a tail nor whiskers, so it is beyond me why I am catcalled), and to some people frightening. This is because we as women are taught not to get raped, rather than men (and a small minority of women) being taught not to rape, which is totally fucked up. It's not my responsibility to make sure someone doesn't decide to disregard my human rights for their twisted urges, especially as a teenage girl. Hi there! if it was so blatantly obvious, it wouldn't happen. Of course the majority of men are absolutely fine, by there are a lot of pervs who don't know how to control themselves. And although you personally may not hold sexist attitudes, many do. It's a lot more common than you think. If I can identify this as a teenager, I'd hardly call it a non-issue. Even boys experience sexism with being unable to express 'feminine' traits and emotions for fear of being called weak and being expected to be masculine and macho all the time or be ridiculed for being a 'pussy'. Being told I can't achieve the same as a male can because the female brain is 'underdeveloped'? Being sexualised when doing the least sexual things and dressing modestly? Although weight can effect your health, there's a lot more pressure on girls than boys, and the same amount of weight on a girl compared to a boy would be called fat , while a boy would just be average. Also, it is important to acknowledge that men can also have eating disorders, but it's way more common in women, and there's a reason for that. Way more pressure is put on girls to be skinny . It's sad. However, men CAN have the same issues or struggles, but society focuses that kind of stuff on women more. Atissue The red pill is brainwashing (especially) men into feeling like victims in a world where not having special privilege means they're 'oppressed'. This is why they're so against feminism, if they lose their privilege and "right" to women's time and bodies they believe they're robbed of rights, and oppressed. Look at the man who started the Men's Rights Activism movement, Paul Elam: "He recalled in a recent interview on AVFM, 'There was something wrong with the picture. It took me a long time to figure out that it wasn't my father who was in charge.'"Men's rights activists often cite the first time they realized it's a woman's world. They call these 'red pill' moments, after the scene in The Matrix when the main character is faced with the decision to swallow a red pill and recognize the true nature of the world or take a blue pill and continue living a lie. For Elam, that revelation came at age 13, when his mother tried to force him to take his diarrhea medicine."This man was ok with it when he thought his father was in charge*, but when he realised his *mother was in charge in his family, he 'saw how evil the world was'. Not always having men in charge over economy, social power, women's bodies and their time? MEN ARE SO OPPRESSED.Men suffer from toxic masculinity, and other forms of bs that is born in the patriarchy . No feminists, or other educated person, will ever deny that, but to bring that up when women's oppression is spoken about is just showing us who are sexist trash believing men matter more. To think it trumps the oppression women face all over the world, in the west too, is ridiculous. If you've ever read what privileges people supporting "the red pill"/MRA's have decided women have that men haven't, they've just taken reality for women and flipped it over to men. They claim for example that women has the right to their own bodies, while simultaneously believing men has the right to rape them. They believe white men deciding over women's bodily autonomy (shutting down healthcare and banning abortion) is how it should be, and if they don't have that it's 'unfair' and not equal. They're flipping it so they can feel sorry for themselves, and excuse their disgusting misogyny that harms both women and men. They don't care about gay or trans men, they don't care about men supporting equality, they only care about white MRA's working against women. Iman Ahmed A lot of people will say that they're a feminist and not know what it really means. Feminism is wanting and fighting for the equality of everyone, women, men, people of colour and different culture, LGBT+ and anyone else. People are people and they don't deserve hate, rape, abuse, or any other form of bullying. Feminism is about being able to do what you want with your own self and not feel attacked or shamed. Mostly, feminism focuses on women because that's how it started out, before growing to be about accepting anyone. Feminism does not mean "hate on men" or "complain about how horrible my life is as a woman ." It means equality. It means I'll stand and fight for the rights of other people that I see being hurt by society. It means I want people to be able to walk home alone and not feel like they're going to be attacked. To be able to wear what they want without being shamed. That goes for both men and women of and colour or sexual orientation. I accept that you have your own opinion, but I feel that you should fully understand the meaning of the topic at hand. This is not in any way me trying to offend anyone, just putting out the definition of the word "feminism." Kristian Krummov You may not see it as sexism but you cannot deny that these situations seem to mostly befall upon women for some reason. Many times women are bashed for not having makeup when most men don't get a bat of an eye for not wearing any. Women are constantly expected to "look pretty" so that could be a reason why so many tell them to smile or even go as far as embarrassing them or making them feel bad about themselves when they don't. There is a reason why the report or whoever asked for dieting tips in girls and didn't mention boys or people. You cannot deny that there is no pattern here. Sure you might see these situations as petty or unimportant but it goes to show how a lot of people look to women for their looks and treat them like it's their most important asset. Lisa Persson let's face the truth you know its some thing douche bags say to women (not all men are like this, but you think they are) thats why when a man asks something like, "how do we combat the issue" you get dumb struck and feel like you dont have to give them a straight answer. (Since you feel your gender is better then his. I wonder who else felt that way, oh right Hitler but in his case he hated race and religion). Point is if you dont know how to fix the issue and nobody else dose either, dont just go around saying, "I have better things to do then educate you". We all know you're just avoiding the question so instead of flaming people online, admit that you have no idea what you're talking about and you believe that women are a master gender . Even though most of the things you use to be comfortable was created by men like your home, job space/building, the economy. but dont get me wrong women have also done some great things too like putting up with kids, managing there own business, giving birth to the men that built and invented most of the things you use, and fighting for real women's rights. Flocktock - first of all, the world doesn't only consist of the western world. also, sexism is mainly a social problem. sure, law-wise, men and women are equal. but what about people on social media saying sexist comments, where is the law against that on either side? what about families stopping their children doing certain jobs because it is a "men's profession". what about society in general labelling women as a lower class gender ?	Gender, Sexism	Gender - General	2/74	2.703

Jamima RJ I don't think that first claim you made. I said that because in the middle eastern areas that's where feminism is needed not this social stuff that doesn't even happen to all women. I'm not saying that the things you talk about don't happen but the reason women have been labeled as the weaker and or lower sex is because throughout history men would go out to hunt and fight wars to provide and protect women. Bumble - maybe the reason why we don't like feminism is because no matter how much you say your for equality you only fight for petty remarks and what people say on social media. Not the fact that a woman raped a man and sued him for child support and still went through. You tell men to stop raping (with is stupid) how about you tell woman to stop falsely accusing men of rape because that easily ruins our lives and women run away scot free. Or the fact that woman can still make a divorced ex husband pay child support and not allow him to see his child is sick. Stop getting mad at words and focus on the bigger picture. I'm angry.When people don't take men seriously (IE, not letting them cry, telling them to "man up") I'm angry.When people don't take women seriously (IE, telling them they can't do a profession because of their gender ) I'm angry.I can bore you with many other examples but I think you get the point. Please don't generalize feminists as these horrible man hating bitches. Because I'm not denying there are woman out there who are man hating bitches. Bumble - I don't think your a bad person because your a feminist it's clear we have similar beliefs. The reason men complain about our rights is because with feminism being all about equality the main focus has always been woman and not about equality. By wanting these extra rights that modern Feminism is fighting for you don't want equality you want to be protected. Feminist don't want to be mocked or made fun of they don't want stereotypes or anything degrading about them. Feminist just don't wanna be talked badly about at all not equal. I would gladly spread awareness on these problems men's problems with rape and divorce and child support along with unfair female and male standards. You could say I'm doing it now, but feminism isn't about equality anymore. unfortunately to what you just said, i still see on the internet "feminists" who claim that all men should be killed, there is probably as much injustice against men as it is for women in our society nowadays, simply that women's injustices are more visible and more popular to talk about, and men's remain in the shadowsfor example on the TV, the internet, the media, tons and tons of ads and campaigns supporting young girls and women to do what they want to to do to become what they want to to do, and that's awesome, but young children never experienced any kind of sexism and shouldn't do so, young boys have nothing to do with their grandpas' mistakes and young girls never suffered any kind of mysoginy, yet here we are always encouraging young girls and barely supporting all children in general, boys included, i'm just talking from what i've seen, as i said, numerous advertisements about girls only and i don't recall a single one encouraging young boys or men in general, and i will tell you what, women are really smart, they bring out and fight against those injustices however men for some reason remain passive, perhaps we're not noticing it yet because it's not really extreme as it was with women before, but honestly, i think that if we continue the same pace in our western society, the roles will turn and instead of making this a better and equal society men will suffer something that women suffered like 80 years ago	Nothing, Sexism	Age - Youngsters, Gender - General	2/257	0.778
Carrie Wooz do you realise you're talking about a monarchy hundreds of years old and also the old times when women weren't allowed to go to war, and objectively speaking, women are biologically weaker than men physically, and unfortunately it would make sense to why prohibit them from fighting, because in a real war their lack of physical strength compared to other men could slow them down and make them lose fights, but physical strength isn't everything, people realised that and let women be soldiers too	Old	Age - Over 65s	2/86	2.326

Anjali Narang I understand that not all feminist are crazy phychos, your not s crazy psycho and bumble isn't a crazy phycho. Technically I am a feminist when you go by definition but feminism really hasn't changed this eastern world for the better in this generation. And like I said not all feminist do that.	Crazy, Psycho	Physical Identity - Physical (and Mental) Impairments	4/89	4.494
Flocktock Anjali Narang It isn't feminism that has made men "look like animals" when it comes to rape. The people defending the rapes and rapists are the reason (very often men using the exact reason that "men can't control themselves" and it's "natural" to rape). Feminists however believe they aren't animals and can control themselves, but they are influenced by the patriarchy to believe they have rights to women's time and bodies. To be a feminist you have to be educated on society, the harmful norms, learn to see structures etc. It's not enough just "believing in equality" if you don't know the facts/work for it to change. Feminism is a question of knowledge. And it's ok to hate men, in a general sense, because of the oppression women face all over the world every day, that we face personally every day. It's a reaction to oppression, and that's ok.	Patriarchy	Gender - General	1/150	0.667

Bumble you really don't realise. If a man tries to campaign for his rights, he will get criticism. Remember that guy that tried to make an area for men to go, when they're feeling down, but was so depressed by all the criticism that he killed himself? That in itself is an example you won't be able to counter with an infinite amount of feminist examples considering 3rd wave feminism pretty much exists because some lazy asses wanted to get something from nothing . They complain that its only because they're women that they cannot get paid as much, where they then get more money and are also seen as a hero because they're standing up for society, but what they're actually doing is ruining society. This wallpaper sux ok, I’m starting to get it now. You people don’t seem to know the difference in the situations. Men are asked to smile so that they seem polite. Usually in setting such as taking pictures, being near a boss, or just a higher ranking person in general. Women asked to smile usually in the contex of being aesthetically pleasing. Now that perticular setting may be a bit different, but it is a problem women face daily. Have you ever had a waiter tell you that they won’t refill your water until you ”give me a smile”? Has anyone told you that ”you’d have such a pretty face if you’d just smile”? Has your fucking school principal ever told you that ”boys don’t like a girl who looks so sad?” And have you ever had a random stranger come up to you in a public library and say ”come on sweetheart, you should smile. It ruins your pretty face.” Almost everytime I have been asked to smile it has to do with how good my face will look, and not how polite and situationally appropriate it is. Most females I know have experienced the same thing. I have no problem being reminded to smile in the proper setting. I have a pretty neutral expression so sometimes I forget to smile for a picture, or when meeting certain people. That is all well and good, but no one (regardless of gender ) should be asked to smile while studying, or fixing their coffee, or sitting by themselves reading a book, simply for the sake of being more attractive for another person. That is what everyone was having a problem with.	Gender	Gender - General	1/280	0.357

Flocktock It means that women are seen as objects, and men as the possessors of such objects. Society, in commercials and ads, games, movies and series etc, is teaching men (and women, children) that women are here to reassure hetero-masculinity, as sexualised objects, while simultaneously denying them any agency of their own outside of that framework. This is very harmful because of how it makes people view and treat women, and because of how many men act believing they have the right to women's bodies and time, women being there only for what's called the male gaze. This is what drives men to tell women to smile, to use more or less make up, to call women ugly, slutty or frigid when "denied" men's believed right to women's bodies, to harass women who doesn't want to have sex with a man just because he bought her a drink. And many men get offended/angry/threatening/abusive if women don't do as they demand. It's the same with sexual harassment like catcalls being horrifying, threatening experiences for women. Women who are then punished for not being thankful and appreciating males "complimenting" them, saying you're hot enough to be objectified and used for their pleasure, to fuck or rape, and sexually harass. People excusing and diminishing these structures and facts aren't any better, because the chances are they act like this too, not being able to see that what's going on or understand it's something bad that ruin lives. It even kills.That's why it's so important. Educate yourself, kid.	Sex, Sexual	Gender - General	2/255	0.784

Flocktock just for reference I have a law that men have and women don't, and vice versa. I don't know the names of them specifically, but here it is. Men have a law (at least in some places) about hitting women. They are not allowed to hit back in defense of a woman attacks them until they've taken (I believe) 3 hits. That's some sexist bull right there, everyone should be able to defend themselves immediately when attacked. Women have a law in many places against have a nude torso. Men are allowed to go around shirtless (like when it's hot or they're exercising), but women must at least have a bra on or it counts as public indecency. In places where it can get to extreme high temperatures, this is unfortunate because women have to continue overheating up top which could lead them to heat stroke sooner (also a bs sexist law). Iman Ahmed It's all connected, ever heard of structures? You are very shaped by them, no matter if you can grasp it or not. None of the people I've corrected with facts have tried to have a decent conversation, all they're doing is shaming people speaking up against oppression and sexism . Defending sexism , ridiculously saying it doesn't exist, is far worse and more harmful than them being called sexist and called out on their ignorance will ever be. This Is something all of you need to learn to grasp. Women do not owe men kindness, politeness or smiles. If you guys just stopped feeling so sorry for yourselves and learnt a fact or two, you could all become decent human beings after all. Making things up about me isn't helping your "argument" either, it just shows how pathetic you are, and how you have absolutely nothing of importance to say. Hating toxic masculinity is something everyone should do, and that does not mean hating men. If you had educated yourself on the subject you would have known that, instead of making a fool out of yourself like this. Even if women hate men, that is ok, because of course oppression creates anger. But people like you will deny the facts of society, and then try to punish the ones angry with/hating the perpetrators. Hate against women is rape, sexism , murder, abuse, oppression, taking away social power etc etc, "hate" against men is pointing this oppression out, seeing the structures it's built on and calling men out. I am here arguing with researched facts, while those trash cans are shrieking their opinion matters more. How can you ever believe I'd be ok with that? How can you sit there trying to defend their behaviour? Because you're one of them, you're one of the people so brainwashed by the structures in our patriarchy that you can't think for yourself. Educate yourself.
