I also, am not interested in being a part of this lifestyle, but fun fact: At least where I live, it is actually not illegal to have sex with someone for money(the act of being a prostitute), it is only illegal to pay for sex , or sexual favours, with money(the act of buying a prostitute). There are actually like, a lot of laws in place to protect prostitutes and people working in the sex trade industry, because it's not regulated at all and can be very dangerous for them. And as much as you said that you have no disrespect or shame for the people who do live this life-style, I feel like there was a lot of it there... Also not sure what exactly you were expecting this site/app to be? Some sugar Daddy/baby arrangements are sex free, dinner meet ups, social/work functions e.t.c., and the older professionals are just paying for exclusive(closed relationship) which they don't have the time to foster-because of their work schedule and requirements-but a lot of the arrangements on these sites DO have sex in them, and I mean I feel like everyone kind of knew that? Idk, I'm just not really sure how you could come onto the site not knowing anything, and immediately disregard it as a job, because you personally had nothing but contempt for it from the start? It's not a job that I personally believe in, or would ever chose to commit myself to, but I also wouldn't just disrespect others like that, especially on a very public platform. To all of the sex workers out there: do not take advice from someone who doesnt know what "mixed race " is. To people who shame sex workers: if someone who is 18+ years old , voluntarily "sells their own body for sex ", there is absolutely nothing wrong with that, you cant change my mind. If you have a job, you are selling your body. You literally need your body to do anything. The only reason why you think it's bad is because you think sex is taboo, which it isn't.To everyone out there: literally no one cares if you have a lot of sex , just make sure that you're getting tested and going to your doctor regularly. You say that you aren't shaming these women who sign up for this platform, but you are. Imagine something that you've done that someone else wouldn't agree to, or that the mass majority of people wouldn't agree to/understand, and listen to what you've said in that light. You're shaming people for a choice that you admit that you don't understand.I've never been a sugar baby, so I don't have a truly complete understanding of it, but I've talked to a lot of people who have been sugar babies or daddies and most men aren't creepy. In fact, overwhelmingly most men just want someone to do regular things with. A good amount of these men also need a date for a function. Intimacy isn't just sex. I need everyone to stop thinking that intimacy is only sex. Intimate relationships look like a lot of different things: parents/guardians, friendships, coaches, mentors, old college/uni friends.... these are all intimate relationships and they all look different. The intimacy that you build with someone you're dating isn't just sexual, and if it is the likelihood of that relationship being long-term is low. Intimacy is not just sex. Intimacy is not just sex. If two consenting adults have sex – then they have sex but that doesn't mean that that was what the money/allowance was for. You equating everything that these two consenting adults might do in an encounter or a week to a sexual relationship is unfair. Additionally, you said these men creeped you out for asking to meet up but in every instance that you showed all the men said a public place or left it up to you on the details. So again that's really unfair of you to decide that all of these guys are just weird old men looking for a quick fuck. You've written them off without actually knowing anything other than the assumptions that you have – which at the end of the day means you know nothing at all. And no I'm not disregarding that there are creeps out there on these platforms, but there are creeps everywhere including in the medical field and schools, but we all still understand that that's a small minority within the overall community.As a YouTuber you put in the time and effort to make videos, you're frustrated even in this video about the fact that you've been demonetized many times. Why? Because you put in time and effort, and your time is something that is valuable to you; your time and effort is a commodity. Do not shame women for realizing that there is a market out there where their time, efforts, and whatever else non-sexual is a commodity that they can use to earn major money. 6k a week, or even a month, is a lot of money that can change a person's life. You may not know this but a lot of the women on these platforms or in these arrangements are putting themselves through school, are using the money to build a savings so that their future is stabilized, are just looking for someone to do the activities with that they love but for whatever reason can't afford, are single moms already working a bunch of jobs that aren't making ends meet, are using this as an avenue to network which is just as valid as any other form. You may not also realize that women get just as lonely as men. It's not easy for everyone to be outgoing and meet someone regardless of the kind of relationship. And as far as the sex thing goes, as I mentioned before just because sex is involved doesn't mean that that's what is being paid for. Additionally, many of these sugar couples agree	Nothing, Old, Sex, Sexual, Weird	Age - Over 65s, Age - Youngsters, Gender - General, Physical Identity - Physical (and Mental) Impairments	15/796	1.884

This entire video did feel like she was shaming people who are sugar babies and daddy's. I also don't necessarily think it's illegal to be paid if the agreement looks and is a relationship. Every single relationship has an agreement of sorts where both people get what they want out of the relationship. So what if it's money? A person should be allowed to do anything, safely, if it doesn't harm someone else. But that's what I got from this video. Do what makes you happy and keeps you afloat. I watched this video a couple of weeks ago and thought that it would be fun to try this to actually see what its like.....and when I tell yall this is a terrible thing to do this site needs to be taken down I met with a 51 year old man named luther at a local mcdonalds and the whole conversation was just uncomfortable and he was touching my leg the whole time. Just a very uncomfortable so I decided to leave luther gets up and yanks my arm leading me towards his car. I thought this man was going to kill me so I hit him with my phone got in my car and sped down the road. If anyone is thinking of doing this I beg you not to this is just another site that gets girls kidnapped.	Old	Age - Over 65s	1/140	0.714

I don't do this but I see nothing wrong with it as long it's with the girl's full consent. I don't know much about this but it's clear to me that the men can vary a little but most insist on sex but you have to meet and go out with the men for the sugar baby to get the money. The older guys with the lower testosterone are the ones more likely to be content with just a sugar baby's company. I heard women often sugar babies get gifts rather than cash. And even if they get paid for having sex with the men, I don't care, to each their own. My only issue is that both parties are fully consenting. Being a sugar baby is not for the woman who thinks they can get money and gifts without giving what the men want in return. Any girl who thinks they can be in and maintain such a one-sided relationship of any sort is painfully naïve and gonna get burned. Think of it this way (exclude family, close friends and charity work): would you give someone money or a gift for simply talking or being in your company and nothing more? The answer is NO. I certainly wouldn't. And men definitely won't give something without something in return and most likely go on Seeking Arrangements thinking it's a place to meet women for sex . I'd suggest being careful on the sugar daddy for several reasons, some obvious but another reason don't consider is that the man may be fake and not have nearly as much money as they claim. I've no idea why a man that isn't rich would go on Seeking Arrangements since it's for wealthy men to find young women (or vice versa) - maybe to make a video like this or something more harmful. If it's just the hookup aspect there are plenty of apps that men can use instead and it won't matter to anyone if the people on them are rich or not. Anyone I don't care if someone chooses to do Seeking Arrangements or anything like it. Just be aware, safe and 100 consenting. If anything is telling you to back out at any point, listen. I live in an area where people prefer to leech off of others rather than do anything for themselves using government aid. I honestly know people who have never worked a day in their lives who can fully support themselves because they lie to the government about their situation and receive obscene amounts of money in EBT (food stamps) or claim a disability when there is none. I absolutely agree that laziness is disgusting and breaking up a relationship is disgusting. However, that doesn't mean that someone who enjoys the lifestyle of being with a man, a woman , or anyone else to get money or vacations or dinner is wrong. Some people are willing to do things for money, and some will lie and cheat. Sugar babies should never be shamed for their lifestyle even if you don't agree with it. Personally, I don't have a dream career or anything like that. I just want to be married and have a happy life with my husband. Is that shameful? To some people, yes, but it shouldn't be. We can only see our very very limited perspective, and it isn't fair to judge anyone. I have a hard time with it myself, so don't feel like I'm calling anyone out or being hypocritical. Just try to love and understand others and have compassion for those you don't agree with <3	Woman	Gender - General	1/229	0.437

Kendal Olguin Both are wrong ethically in this transaction. Women are taking advantage of lonely low value men. Like how lonely you have to be to pay someone to spent time with you.Women are smart for taking advantage of this market and getting money to get whatever they want. But let's not act like it's not wrong. Low value men because money doesn't determine your value and high value men would never pay to spent time with some women who just want his money. Acting blind whenever we see something wrong it's what it's getting to this time we are living into. Both men and women gotta do better. We are better than this.And tell me I'm wrong. Now you can't call out someone when they are doing something unethical because you are supposed to "mind your own business". This why the " gender equality" the media always talk about it's never going to happen. There is double standard for everything. I try to be a better human being by calling both men and women when they are wrong.	Blind, Gender	Gender - General, Physical Identity - Physical (and Mental) Impairments	2/180	1.111

If I had money, I would be happy to use such an application because I need a relationship with a beautiful girl for health reasons. As a matter a fact, I need an affective shelter and to belong to someone in order to release the very painful muscular contractures in my back that make an every-second hell of my life, due to a very severe ptsd that makes me a handicapped person and a nightmare of my days and nights, and whereas I would never ask for a sexual relationship bc it is not what I need, and a girl like these sugar babies, if they look like you, could never possibly have desire for a man like me, but I suppose that at a moment, I would be very frustrated not to kiss. I have never kissed a beautiful woman in my whole life and tbh, I've been missing to know how it feels for my whole life - should I feel guilty, aren't all men the same ? I believe it's a basic need, only not vital - , although I had some adventures, but with girls who would not turn my head, though they were adorable friends. But I don't even have any money so I will never use this. However, I respect the girls who can accept this job, whatever their limits are, bc, I don't know if it is any part of their motivation, but they bring some happiness and maybe some kind of unforgettable experience, and thus, they also put some kind of an end to the sexual competition war that is such a cost for the world, except that the customers still have to be rich, unfortunately. Karolina Kobierska I agree with you that they know well on what kind of arrangement they are getting to. But if you think about it...the fact that somebody has to pay to spent time with somebody else. They have to be lonely af. And the fact that some women(in this case because gay men also does stuff like this often) are okay with taking money for their bodies or for spending time with somebody they don't like or find disgust in them it's crazy . In my opinion both are wrong. But that's just my opinion And about the shaming, we are living on a Society that it's all about "body empowerment" "female empowerment". Because women were looked as less decades ago. Now I feel like men or even other women are afraid to call out other women when they are doing something unethical or simply taking the easy way out. It's all about "You do you gurl".	Crazy, Gay	Physical Identity - Physical (and Mental) Impairments, Sexual Identity - General, Sexual Identity - Male homosexuality	3/159	1.887
Miguel Perez well yes, maybe they are lonely but maybe they want easy sex or they are old and want a relationship with a young, pretty girl who wouldnt be interested without monetary compensation. Also "you do you (as long as youre not hurting anyone)" is a pretty good rule to live by. Life gets much easier when you dont concern yourself with what other people do also i dont think its unethical - its a consensual agreement that does not hurt anybody so i see no reason to call people out. Thats just my personal perspective	Old, Sex	Age - Over 65s, Gender - General	2/98	2.041
Karolina Kobierska One perspective I've been thinking about is What are we teaching the younger generations? Would you want your daughter to do this kind of stuff? Younger generations has all this access to all kind of platforms or information. Which is good in certain aspects but I wouldn't wish my future daughter to be a sex worker or a sugar baby. I would do everything in my power so she could study the career that she wants, so that she doesn't have to rely on this kind of practices to pay for her college tuition. Miguel Perez the basic concept of female body empowerment is for women to be able to decide what they want to do with their body. So YES women being forced into sex trafficking and/or prostitution is unethical, because these women are not deciding for themselves what is happening to their bodies. HOWEVER women are deciding to participate in these arrangements, and u are shaming them for it, so it seems to be like you actually dont understand what female body empowerment is about. Nah, not in real life and not on these sites. People who have money don't just give it away for nothing , that's why they have money in the first place. They'd rather donate it to a charity, buy gifts for their friends and family or collect expensive items. And you won't find filthy rich men of that caliber on those sites anyway, simply because they have better things to do with their time and meet insanely attractive and interesting people anyway.The only way those people will give you money „just because you're talking to them', is when they actually get to know and like you and for that you have to meet them and cultivate a relationship with them. Rich men aren't dumb , they are very aware of scammers and rinsers. That also goes for regulars who give very high tips to their favourite strippers, escorts and camgirls just to spend time with them and talk to them — they do this because they genuinely like them and have known them for some time.Of course you could meet a unicorn, that sweet older gentleman who isn't horny and just wants to makes you happy because he's smitten with you, but even he will want to meet you and be sure that you are who you are and that he isn't giving his precious money to a catfish.Stay realistic, stay safe and don't believe everything people tell to get attention. Let's be clear. Sex work IS work. Just because it's not for you doesn't mean you should judge others for doing it. If it's not for you, that's totally cool.For some women it's what they do & they actually enjoy it. And it's a mutual exchange between two consenting adults..it's not always because they feel they have to- there is nothing wrong with sex work or enjoying sex work. So to anyone who is a sex worker or has done sex work in the past- there's no need to justify yourself whatsoever or feel ashamed. Sex work is work. <3 xx	Nothing, Sex	Age - Youngsters, Gender - General	7/102	6.863
Also..if you did ANY or do ANY research..it's actually not illegal to exchange sex for money. Like working in a brothel as a sex worker is legal but actually running one is illegal. Maybe this is an opportunity to educate yourself on sex work & that world. I say that in a completely positive way- hard to tell intonation with text. It's better to be educated & informed about things we don't understand than to spread misinformation.	Sex	Gender - General	3/77	3.896

Sorry, I keep adding into these comments but you say you aren't and actually you ARE judging people who are sex workers. You're turning it into a joke when it isn't- you're right, it took a turn because you realised that it isn't a joke. You put 'intimate relations' in quotes and are telling girls that there are other jobs they can do other than this..that's what judgment is, thats looking down on someone who is a sex worker because you deem it wrong on some level. I'm not being hard on you..I am just saying what I see or my opinion because you put out a public video with this content making a joke out of a job &/or lifestyle that millions have died for & fought so hard for. Just perhaps is something to think about before you make a sequel to this.	Sex	Gender - General	2/145	1.379
regnilondon Let's be clear. Sex work ISN'T work. It takes literally zero effort or intellectual power to get on your back and do exactly the same thing a fleshlight could do for a dude looking for a quick cum dump. You are good for absolutely nothing other than the wet hole between your legs, and you somehow think you deserve respect and validation for that lifestyle? You're fucking high if you think prostitutes or porn workers for that matter, female or male, deserve anything more than to be relegated to the amoral fringes of society where they've always been. Once your looks are gone you're just another used-up worn-out slag with no tread left on her tires and completely unwanted by anyone for anything more than a quick fuck, except maybe a few desperate beta males who literally can't get anyone else. sica starr I think maybe they're just so lonely and blame it on the money. Ya know? That old saying 'mad at your money' or 'burning a hole in your pocket' It's super unhealthy but I think they know the reason they can't get real companionship is because they have so much wealth (and probably flaunt it a lot) and it attracts the wrong people. I feel for my fellow broke ladies who feel the need to sell their souls to a man for 6k a month. PPM is pay per meet. This video is really overdramatic, and not very informative since you're completely inexperienced and just made a profile. There are plenty of videos of people who've done this, but basically girls are attracted to it for the money but it's very rare to find a guy who's just gonna throw money at you, pay your rent, etc. These are guys who want traveling companions (someone to fuck while they go on work trips) and the most you'll get is probably free dinners, in exchange for sex , obvi. Little Wolf Taima I didn't specify that this applied to mentally/physically disabled people. Obviously their situation/mentalities will differ from a regular, 20 something, fully competent, mentally stable female who just isn't in the best of financial situations. Yes, if that 20 something woman wasn't in the best of financial situations AND she was in some way disabled , that would be a different story. Regardless of your age , if you have a mentality that doesn't allow you to comprehend the repercussions or feelings of sex , then you are being taken advantage of. If you have a stable, healthy mindset and have made the decision at your own free will, you are not. Like I said, young woman child.But, that is a shame you had that experience and I feel for you. Obviously the man in that situation was at fault, though he wouldn't not have been under different circumstances, i.e. if you were not physically handicapped and in a bad mental state. Alana Arbucci i'm not using such sites, but as an entrepreneur and investor, who owns multiple companies, i ... got such offers sometimes from women. it is called catfishing. i'm a bit surprised how cheap those messages are, aren't they? in my experience, you are way out the league of your bf. so it eventually will come to your mind, right? if you meet somebody wealthier, this can get complicated after a while, having different life backgrounds. so, better check how he is. is he in good health? is he jogging? what did he study? so at least there's more to the relationship than money, sex and being a trophee. because for sex only the more decent weahtly friends of mine have escort girls and tinder. in my experience... chemistry is everything. maybe it is because i'm still in my 30's, better looking, so i never had trouble to meet women. but... i have troubles to imagine such "paid relationships" that extend more than 1 night myself, that is true. but the issue is, if you are at a party or in a club with friends, you can see instantly which girl is paid. the more serious, better educated or wealthier gf and wives will simply ignore you if you are sugar babe, which can be painful and insulting. a waste of time for me, but i know that it is quite popular, for instance inviting beautiful young women for a yacht trip etc. i suppose such things will never change. Victonica Black there is a difference between a very realistic ”prank” when you feel like everything is ruined and your partner cheated on you, and a few jokes about becoming a prostitute, c’mon. If my man were to joke about that i would have a real good laugh. She says so many times that this is not something people should do, and even she feels a bit weird about it, but she was just curious about how far this whole thing is going and did it on behalf of all the people who are also curious. Since we clicked on this video, we obviously knew it wasn’t supposed to be taken that serious and we were all just as curious. I get it if he really wasn’t into this kind of a video, but acting like your girl is gonna leave you throughout the whole time and being so obviously scared about it is not ok. If he simply weren’t that into the idea but still wanted to support her he would’ve told her in private then just let her be, knowing that in the end it is still just a youtube video and nothing is really serious. Lol this website can actually be really good! A lot of times it's just straight up prostitution (which honestly I have no problem with as long as it's safe and consensual) but most of the time it's either REALLY busy guys who dont have time for a relationship, a really lonely guy who can't find a relationship, or a really "unattractive" man who feels like he has to pay for companionship. A lot of the men on there have a lot of money and want to go on vacations and to nice restaurants or to watch a movie but they have nobody to do that with so a sugar baby kind of works out because they're someone to share your experiences with and to provide fun and companionship to your time away from work or to their lonely lives. It's pretty cool! If you put in your profile that any physical intimacy is off the table you'll get less messages. Also, they usually want to meet you right away because they want to see if they like you and can talk to you because if you don't vibe you're not going to have fun together going out to do fun things or going on vacation. My friend had like 3 sugar daddies from SA in college to help her out and she never had sex or kissed any of them. They hung out in public, did fun activities, they would take her shopping, help her out with bills, etc. She loved it! The only reason she stopped was because she got into a serious relationship and he didn't like it, lol.	Nobody, Sex	Age - Youngsters, Gender - General	2/271	0.738
Wrong. No honey, he does nothing for two reasons: 1) he doesn't really gives a sh$t or 2) he is fuc$ed up on the head. No men will be ok his girl does this sort of experiment it's same as pimping his girl....just for experiment lol	Nothing	Age - Youngsters	1/47	2.128

alena s First off you were stupid enough to stay with a guy, have sex with a guy and control how you used your Instagram for a guy who had no intention of investing in you or marrying you. Sounds like free prostitution to me. Secondly, her boyfriend GETS IT. They're mature enough to do something like this for a YouTube video. There was complete transparency. Your man didn't give a fuck about you and still controlled your pictures sooooo... I guess your logic is wrong, babe.	Sex	Gender - General	1/87	1.149

so the thing is, women are always gonna be objectified and oversexualized by men so there's nothing wrong with women wanting to take that power and make money off of it. especially because fatty rich corporation CEOs who are males, financially benefit off of women everyday (VS) lmfao. get your bag ladies!!! be one of 'those girls.' sex work can stop being villainized now and people can stop referring to it as a last resort, as if having a desk job at a business is super dope lol. I agree 100 however it does become is an issue (legally) when women perform physical sexual acts in exchange for money, at least in this country.	Sexual	Gender - General	1/26	3.846
Alana Arbucci that is also true, but i'm more so talking about the stigma and mistreatment of women and sex workers in general. i can get where you're coming from at a legal standpoint tho and i don't condemn you for promoting following laws either	Sex	Gender - General	1/46	2.174
I am so glad you did this video because there is a entire youth that could consider that type of site and it is absolutely scary. No ones body should be able to attach a price to it. Any girls thinking of this I really hope you really consider any other option to make money you are worthy of respect and you matter. You can do it on your own you don't need a old man daddy who wants to live out his creepy role plays with you. Girl get to work and take yourself to spas and vacations without the violations. Obviously they want sex , but I knew someone who said if you tell them upfront you're not doing anything you can weed out all the dudes who will make the moves and find someone who just wants to be friends and is lonely as hell. I totally understand that. I had a friend who is transgender and would catfish men and sugar daddies on tinder/sites for money, trips and hookups. She passes as a female VERY well and doesn't tell the guys she sleeps with. We used to work together (she paid the rest of her rent that way alot). This one dude would fly her all over the place. She'd show me pics.. And I was like damn! I feel like in another life I would do this to get out of rough spots. But only if needed and with no sexual favors. I heard that's a thing. K so I signed up with SA and met a couple guys. I signed up like last spring or summer until I met my now boyfriend. It really is a crapshoot haha some guys wanted like a non commitment travel girlfriend or in town main squeeze, the offers usually consisted of obvi sex but always with an allowance of $1000+. Some would be in my area and some would be in other states offering to fly you out to their city or two like LA or NY for a nice 'no expectations' dinner or to spend the day together. And yeah the dudes on there are pretty quick to give you their onfo or some app where you can videochat so they can see you and know you aren't catfishing.	Sex	Gender - General	1/130	0.769
