This is crazy! I'm a woman and I strongly prefer female bosses. They're generally friendlier and don't expect you to become their secretary cause they can't keep track of their commitments.	Crazy, Woman	Gender - General, Physical Identity - Physical (and Mental) Impairments	2/31	6.452
There is a very major flaw in theory shown here. I had a friend, an older gal, who was staffing about 30 ppl. And I asked her why she passed on so many females to build her team. she simply said "If I build the team almost entirely with men, it gets the most volume of work done." It was a primarily, computer and manual labor job, but still, it seemed insane to hear a woman basically say "ill place the women into the communications dept, because that's where they are useful to me." She was about 56 I think, and maybe she just didn't give a fuck about female gender . who knows.	Gender, Woman	Gender - General	2/113	1.77
This is absolute bollocks, I currently work under a woman who works under a woman and I'm the most broken I've ever been in a role, men want figures, paperwork and results women wants hugs and reassurance and don't recognise their actions are in relation to how you make them feel regardless of your intentions, it's fucking exhausting. It's what brought me here and this tripe has just compounded my decision.	Woman	Gender - General	2/71	2.817

Women prefer male bosses so they can lie about sexual assault and get money metoo	Sexual	Gender - General	1/15	6.667
I work in a workplace where the boss is female and she is pretty fair in how she acts. However, most people that work there are women and most of them complain and get peeved of whenever a customer is having trouble. Most of the men just don't seem to care, but like 2 get mad and one just jokes about it. I think age and tolerance are a factor in this, but I think it's just more on nurture than nature with this issue.	Age	Age - General	1/85	1.176
I'm a woman and I work better with men than other women. Men get the job done and work as a team. When I work with women; I get yelled at, back stabbed, gossiped about, picked on, and judged. I have to deal with a female manager who picks favorites, make me an enemy, treat me like garbage. Wherefore the male managers treat me with respect.	Woman	Gender - General	1/66	1.515
female bosses are the worst. Don't even get surprised why men still favorable when it comes to leadership. Women are vipers and they would immediately get this sense of entitlement once they are in power position. They would expect people to submit to her every whim just because they are in power. No matter who they are, women will always have this "entitled princess" attitude once you give them power. They are catty bitchy and frankly they favor men workers over female ones because they are insecure bitches. I am a woman and I'd rather work for sensible male boss who doesn't let his emotion makes other people life miserable.	Woman	Gender - General	1/110	0.909
As always, this woman isn't placing ANY of the blame on women themselves or any accountability and ironically women's inability to practice human accountability is just one more reason on a never ending list of reasons why women simply do not belong in the workplace either in management or as an employees	Woman	Gender - General	1/52	1.923
Another twist that's fact, female bosses prefer male employees over female employees because of the bichyness happening in the workforce among woman .Men on the other hand remain silent don't say a word, and when the break time comes, men find their space they can actually be themselves with one another..Men are better working together that's the obvious fact, I'm sure woman can set aside their difference, but they should never use their gender as a justification as an oppression for opportunity and equal pay.If men hear that excuse for too long, then men simply stop hiring woman to protect their company from bankruptcy. What a load of absolute BS. I knew the Atlantic was biased but I didn't realise they are outright Marxists. They actually tried to explain female aggression on the patriarchy LMAO!!!!	Patriarchy	Gender - General	1/31	3.226
Women generally = over-dramatic, gossiping, hateful, spitefulness, needy, demanding, disgruntled, entitled, sneaky, vindictiveness, plotting, scheming, etc....This is unfortunately very common behavior amongst women, and especially in any type of leadership roll/position, and is only worsening the more they're catered to. More importantly, women are completely incapable of checking their emotions, and personal issues/feelings at the door in order to maintain any ample degree/level of professionalism in any work environment.	Common	Social Class - Working class	1/69	1.449
"make it easier" so what you mean is cut the qualifications and work required to do for any given job for women?...do they not see problem with this way of thinking? Also wouldn't this hurt women as no consumer male or female would go to female employees and instead go to the more qualified individuals? Which would lead to more hours/overtime/sales/projects etc. for men which would lead to more pay and opportunities for advancement. You want equality then put forth equal effort. This goes for women or men. You're not gonna go anywhere if you halfass anything. You shouldn't expect thing because of gender , but by merit.	Gender	Gender - General	1/108	0.926
Where did the Atlantic get this information? I've seen more than my share of mostly, if not all, female offices. Frankly if I'm in a position to hire I'm only going to hire another woman .	Woman	Gender - General	1/35	2.857

Something I've seen at nearly all my jobs is that men always have the highest position, like CEO or CFO, and that they're hardly seen by low-level workers. These men employ women to manage everything and keep us low-level workers out of their hair. I've managed to befriend some of these "evil female bosses" and their stories match up: they're underpaid "guard-dogs" for the men who sit at the top and reap all the benefits. I once had a woman who managed our whole team and she was such a nightmare (losing our companies' contracts because of her behaviour etc.) that I went to complain to the CEO . He told me that she had free reign to do whatever she wanted so long as he could get on with his work in peace and that if I ever complained about my manager again I would be fired. I've also seen this families. Dads work all the time and when you see them a little on the weekends they play-fight with you and buy you an ice-cream and you think they're a hero. But Moms do all the shitty work like disciplining and cooking and cleaning with no rewards whatsoever. I think in a world where men did more of the shitty jobs like being a stay-at-home parent or a manager we would see that they would be just as bitchy and stressed in the same situations.	Woman	Gender - General	1/237	0.422
I think its not the bosses per se but the environment. When there is gender balance in colleagues female bosses are tolerable.But when the majority of colleagues are women the queen bee comes out. Females bosses require a higher level of compliance—they can smell dissent. They use social bullying to maintain the pecking order and will relish firing you to get even for "symbolic" insults. Women are hyperaware of passive aggression—being late is not just a regular work politics but is a sign of contempt. Being pretty in an office of women matters more.Male bosses just overlook you for promotion or treat you with kid gloves. Women have to go pretty wide out of bounds to get canned by a man. Men may not respect you but are less likely to want to discuss it if you get a token amount of work done. The status quo floats with male bosses, doesnt with female.	Gender	Gender - General	1/156	0.641
You can save all that mumbo jumbo you're talking every body knows females are in competition with each other woman are vicious & will do anything for male attention am telling you straight god did not create a woman to be in charge of men sweetie you were created to be a wife & a mother god said it's not good for man to be alone I will make him a helper that's what a woman is she's not supposed to ahead of the man that's why were bigger & stronger than woman & yes of course were smarter to a man was created to work & lead a woman was created to be a wife & a mother period!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!	Woman	Gender - General	5/120	4.167

I Honestly don't know how women were given the label of being the kinder, gentler, more empathetic sex . all my life it was the females around me that made my school and work environment hell. look, you cry about men being horrible, then in the same breath you want them as your boss. Men are ment to be leaders, let them be, whats wrong with following and winning too? I don't get why women nowadays have this idea that the only way that things need to be is with a woman at the head and men following. red lilly totally disregard reality as well, always blame other people especially men. My friends ex was like you, hated other women cause of their bitchiness and would only make male friends. Said she enjoyed herself more around us. Women always blame the man for treating them bad and call them pricks and such but they dont realise men will treat everybody the way they treat them. If your trying to control everything, moaning all the time, demanding and spending all the money on shit then eventually the guy is going to start disliking you. Imagine a flatmate was doing that to you? Youd go off them quick. My ex accused me of being controlling and treating her like shit. Women prefer male bosses and science says . . . it's men's fault. Progressivism, you see dear children, is both a mental illness to the extent it is not a faith and a religion to the extend that it is not subject to factual refutation or the scientific method in that it is both immune to facts and claims the scientific high-ground at the same exact time. Ironically it is totally unaware of being totally unaware. Don't worry they can "fix" this "problem." They just need to restructure the workforce, hiring practices and society from the ground up. Easy-kapeezy. Hint: just listen to her tone. It's really quite simple children, yeah sciencism. Just believe . . . remember the solution is as predetermined as the problem itself. Everyone....EVERYONE...EVEN WOMEN know that women are mean spirited, and vindictive by nature!!!! There are some exceptions...I've met them...but they are the EXCEPTION NOT THE RULE! A woman will take the most intimate thing she knows about you and use it to hurt you for the slightest of mistakes you make or if you do something that bothers her. A man will have words with you...maybe even want to fight you...but once it's overITS OVER! NOT WITH A WOMAN . It will always be there....ready to be used against you. Money doesn't make a person evil...money just reveals what ALREADY ON THE INSIDE OF A PERSON. The same goes for power. The "solution" proposed in this video is absurd! EVERY experience (with one exception) that I've had working for women or in a team comprised mostly of women has been an absolute, unmitigated disaster. The micromanaging, two-faced, backstabbing, catty, bitchy nastiness and bullying have been unprecedented. And the pettiness over stupid, nonsensical things! During a job search last year, as soon as a headhunter told me the manager was a woman , I told them NO WAY, I am not interested. I won't even waste my time. I've had a couple of male managers who were jerks, but by and large, all the men I worked for were pretty easy and straightforward to deal with. Do the work, do it well, deliver in a timely manner, ensure the stakeholders are satisfied and all is fine. NEVER had any issues. THAT is how it should be!	Woman	Gender - General	1/143	0.699

I have had 3 bosses from hell. Two were women. One was male. What all three had in common was that they were deeply insecure, highly emotional to the point of appearing mentally unstable, were given way too much unchecked power and authority, and would go out of their way to punish and berate anyone they found remotely threatening. That being said, the two female bosses in the bunch, still give me nightmares. The male boss was clearly just a pathetic buffoon with an extremely fragile ego. If given the choice, I would still prefer a male boss or a highly secure and capable but fair female boss who doesn't attempt to be my friend. Just give me someone worth respecting and I don't care which gender they are. Unfortunately women are too often busy trying to command respect, that they end up doing the opposite. Well researched, anf it makes sense to what I've found from personal experience.. Now I've got names for these concepts.. Insecurity is deadly.. My strongest haters I've noticed hurl their insults and accusations from this same mental state.. Because I've become confident, speak my mind, relaxed, and at ease, I dress very well it's an endless assault... I flat out ask my employees why they prefer Male bosses and they all tell me WITHOUT HESITATION that they simply can't deal with a female boss, I asked them why and their response is that because among women they always and inevitably devolve into drama, bitchiness, fighting, powerplay, and when they do fight they never reconcile. A female boss is more likely to gaslight them and add to the drama rather than stamp it out or be immune to it the way perceive men to be. They tell me that they can joke around and be friendly and feel more secure in their emotional expressions around a male boss because they know he will not overanalyze them and create drama out of it. They feel as if Men act more like emotional buffers, they can be themselves around us without worrying about a bitchy attitude and they know that if a male boss is being bitchy it is almost never personal because men get pissed off at impersonal circumstances and abstract concepts whereas female bosses get pissed off at people and seek to put a face to the problem rather than work to solve it. One female employee told me: "I feel as though I can lash out and you won't give a fuck and just brush it off even though I'm gonna be feeling guilty latter but I just can't do that with a female boss. I just feel like I can be myself around men without all the hostility and drama."And that is the most common answer I hear from women. They say that they don't feel that tension with a Male boss that they get from a female boss. They feel like they can be themselves and not have their guard up all the time and they don't have to walk on eggshells. One girl even said "I just feel more free." Or how about women in general act more nasty and bitchy toward each other, that why I don't fall for the fake feminist propaganda that the media try to put out every single time. Plus most female bosses don't even manage or run a business correctly compare to the guys counterpart. Of course not all women but majority are. I am a male but guys tends to actually get the job done while girls always argue and hate literally everyone it doesn't matter if it a man or another woman . I am very thankful my gender doesn't have the evil attitude in the workforce.	Gender, Woman	Gender - General	2/104	1.923
Women are just plain evil creatures! I'm a woman myself, who says the truth.. Women will never ever change, I prefer men anytime to be anything.feminism is so hard to too..	Woman	Gender - General	1/32	3.125

I have absolutely nothing against female bosses, that is provided they're mature and professional. The trouble is the majority of women, especially in this country these days are immature. They grow up spoiled rotten, but don't grow up mentally into mature women. Parents and other family members often refer to the females growing up as princesses/queens and of course that goes straight to their heads. They have an endless sense of entitlement with big egos and they bring all that mess into the workplace. Yet somehow, women are put on this always put on this pedestal of being more mature than men, meanwhile they act just the opposite. Furthermore, society constantly enables this behavior. This isn't about men trying to keep women down in any way, shape or form. This is about the fact that women bring female logic into the way they do things instead of real logic. They think in terms of almost quite literally, it's my way or the highway. Also, immature women seem to get more respect than mature women do.	Nothing	Age - Youngsters	1/175	0.571
--	---------	---------------------	-------	-------

I think that it is a mistake to make it easier for women to rise to the top, lest we provoke the idea that they rose because of inappropriate bias. What we want to do is make it harder for women to be overlooked or otherwise discriminated against due to their being women. Making it easier for women to progress in business focuses primarily on the woman's being a woman, and secondarily upon her skills and talents. That will actually hurt the woman herself, as soon as she detects her womanness as a major factor in her progress. What we want to do is focus, perhaps even more intensely for women than for men, in making sure women have as much freedom and resources as possible to acquire skill and talent. To give them that freedom likely will require us to call it out, to focus more on calling women forth than we would tend to call men forth. This is not a hard and fast rule, but a principle to be applied to all humans, regardless of their sex. A male who, for whatever reason tends to lack assertiveness but who has inherent qualities that can be nurtured, should get the same treatment, being called forth so that his skill and talents can be developed. When I see a woman who has that special indescribable something that signals inherent quality, then, as a leader, I consider it an obligation to decency to go out of my way to make sure nothing gets in the way of helping her qualities develop and flourish. In fact, I have an obligation to go out of my way to call forth those qualities, to let everyone else begin to see them, and even to help me call them forth. It won't do to create the mythical "level playing field" in her case because the field has been built against her sex for the past 50,000 years. I understand that many guys will reject this. But those same guys, when faced with a woman, especially a pretty woman, will generally begin responding to her firstly, based on their base sexual impulses and not based on the woman's talents and skill. I have seen this a thousand times, even in myself. It is important to me that I vigorously crucify my tendency toward sexual response, to instead favor my tendency to appreciate the potential benefits of skill and talent that any particular woman might present. I have an obligation to do this not only for the development of those in my charge, but also for shareholders and for the health of the enterprise in general. There is a domain for sexual dynamics and expression. That domain does not include the progress of employees and development of enterprises - perhaps unless we are dealing with brothels.	Nothing, Sex, Sexual, Woman	Age - Youngsters, Gender - General	12/470	2.553

Sure, if that is the case and recognized as so then most men will support that woman or women like that.....However there is thing known as "protect your own well being" first and foremost and most people, both men and women are not going to encourage another people to replace them and take away their job by way of encouraging other people to get ahead at the expense of someone else.....Most of the Jobs are held by men in most industries for a hundred years or more, and thousands of years in some industries and that is how men have built industries and build economies and support themselves and their families and earn income and develop a sense of self worth from earning that self worth.....They are not about to step aside and give those jobs to women by way of Proxy or Political Correctness when they need the job or employment or opportunity themselves.....As I said before...a lot of men with no employment and no means to earn income and having a lot of idle time on their hands are the roots of civil unrest and rebellion and social upheaval. This was typical white-washing which is lying in the form "Yes, A is like this but it is because B is like this". She says that the problem is not A's to fix but B's. Even when there is woman boss she finds the excuse that women are in inferior position. In Finland feminists used this argument even when our president and prime minister were women. Nothing is enough for them, it is always patriarchy, structures that men created, that are to be blamed. If all bosses would be women, some of them would still be horrible in their behavior, and there would be an excuse that men created these structures and women can't fulfill their true nature. As many others have said, it is about personality. There are great woman leaders and great man leaders, and the rest is not so great. It is as simple as that. No the problem is that women for the most part are insecure and do see other women as competition not as a cohort. Not all but MOST. Regardless of race and background. For one, most if not a ton of women rather take the easy way out or like to be comfortable in jobs. A woman boss will find it awkward to give easier jobs to a woman unless she needed it (pregnancy, health, familial responsibilities). Two, a lot of women do like to do a bit of power play by manipulation. And men are easier to manipulate if they find you attractive. If the boss is attractive the women will feel intimidated and try to "dethrone" her. Most women feel comfortable working with a woman on the same level as her. If she's too attractive they'll ostracize her. It's sad but true. Though high maintenance female bosses are truly awful. More often than not the female bosses that wear too much makeup and dress too sexily have very likely slept their way to the top. No I don't mean fashionably elegant bosses. You learn to tell the difference fast. I hate to say it, but insecure women are their own worst enemies. I must say that my best bosses were women, by far. They were tough, astute, loving, fun and hard-working. They always pushed me to be my best. Always had good advice and always looked to reward and promote me when I did great. And provided tips and adequate advice. They were also confident, and I truly think this is the key. Women are always told we could always improve when we are good enough. This is what leads to problems when an insecure female meets a self assured one. My worst bosses so far have been men, older men in particular. Maybe it is because I'm at the beginning of my 20s and not unattractive. They give unwanted attention and get offended if you don't look at them as sexual partner material. The supervisors try to one up another to see who gets the largest body count. They get frustrated when I don't do it up or dress up for them like a lot of female co-workers do to get certain favors. They also feel less than. Male co-workers might be fun when I'm older since they'll be less likely to see me as a potential sex partner. They really care about age more than anything I'm noting. And that's always a nice feeling since you can relax at work and not fight or deal with the gossiping co-workers. There's less tension.	Age, Race, Sex, Sexual, Woman	Age - General, Ethnicity - General, Gender - General	7/435	1.609

Men like orders and women don't. From hunting to war, men have evolved to follow one male leader whom they believe is good at leading. Throughout history, women were independent to design their workplace according to their own wish. Men never interfere in their home. Women followed men only when men guided them in times of crisis. Even today, most home interiors will be chosen by women and very rarely all women share common taste. Women entered the educated supersensitive yet safe work space only after industrialization. In this short period of a few decades, it's less likely to remove the instinct to follow the confident male and trust on the confident female. Moreover, the risk analysis done by a male CEO will be in more depth and inclusive of minor market disturbances as compared to female CEOs. Only the long term analysis can say the outcome given by a confident male and a confident female.	Common	Social Class - Working class	1/156	0.641
I thought this was educational, but its propaganda... First off, we don't need gender equality everywhere. Men use logic to make decisions and are able to remove themselves from circumstances and not take things personal. These are important qualities for leaders to have. We don't have numerous female leaders because most women inherently lack the qualities that a strong leader needs. And to answer the repeated question that gets brought up to justify propaganda like this, there aren't many female CEOs because either women choose to not have those positions or they were not a good fit. Your suggestion is lowering the standards for women? To equalize the numbers no doubt. Preposterous. Equal outcome is not equal opportunity. We need strong leaders leading. The young woman in this video uses the predictable cookie-cutter blame-it-all-on-the-patriarchal-male-dominated-system justification. My last job (that I held for 9.5 years) was a completely women-dominated environment (a large healthcare company with largely, if not mostly, female administrators) and every person in the chain of command, including the chairwoman of our large department, was a woman . The new young supervisor, whom we trained from scratch, suddenly became our boss. She was like a fascist dictator who repeatedly bullied and undermined us. You can't justify that by claiming it was because of a male-dominated workplace with few opportunities for women.I was a male secretary/administrative assistant in an extremely female dominated profession for 26 years. My supervisors/immediate bosses were almost always women. Specifically, by age group/nationality/gender/orientation, U.S. American heterosexual women in their late 20s through mid-30s are the worst of the worst of the worst to work for. Sit back, relax, and watch women (under the age of 40 especially) make employees hate them. I've been through this too many times. I'm not sure if it's due to age , generational elements, etc... but the females in their 40s and higher tend to be more fair to their employees.. while the 20 something women are queen bees to both their male and female employees.. and if you know more than her, you might as well start updating that resume because HR/companies will side with the young female boss over an employee (even if the female boss is in the wrong). I've worked with male bosses that are in their 20s and they're laid back and allow autonomy with their employees while female bosses in their 20s are moody, emotional, and will micro-manage every move an employee makes (one female boss in her 20s started crying when she didn't get her way). If the females at that Law Firm, in that study, arbitrarily identified their competition as mostly based on gender , I'd argue you would have to draw a completely different conclusion. More on the lines of insecurity, low self esteem and poor insight. It's "male domination" in gender representation only. Unless that Law Firm enforced a quota regarding gender , the people at the workplace (regardless the gender) should have identified both men and women to be competition. Sure you could study from a gender angle, but regarding promotion or job application in that Law Firm, the gender shouldn't/wouldn't be an issue. Strawberries Blueberries Another reason everyone hates females bosses that hasn't been mentioned yet.. everyone knows that female bosses don't really belong in their positions .. they didn't work hard like a man and move up the ranks acquiring vast knowledge about his industry and company as wellNo, she either blew someone or was just put in a low level manager position because there's nothing else you can do with women- they never have any talents, they're lazy, always out and unreliable, they're never smart enough to actually do any real necessary work .. but government mandates legally FORCE companies to hire X amount of women so ya gotta put them somewhere! So they put her in a do nothing manager position where she will cause the least amount of trouble and not get in the way and she knows nothing and all of those below her know 1 billion times more, so it's all just a joke- seen it a million times in a million companies in almost every industry you can imagine that are our clientsSo she lasts about 6 months and then quits because it's just too humiliating even for a woman or she's fired for vast amounts of days missed (women are always, always, always OUT). Then they put another clown female in her place.. rinse, repeat	Nothing, Woman	Age - Youngsters, Gender - General	4/222	1.802

The problem with working with women is the fact that they don't use common sense. Instead they live by their emotions, instead of understanding the situation. An example would be working in Mcdonalds. The customer cannot seem to make up their mind on an order they want. They tell an order, I repeat it and they say yes. Then later on, the customer changes his or her mind and the women coworkers get mad at me even though it wasn't my fault. They're too emotional to have the common sense to realize the customer was indecisive. So I get screamed at over the customer's wrong doing.	Common	Social Class - Working class	2/106	1.887

I work with mostly women, and a female boss I'm sure they would hire all woman if they could. As a male your the odd man out, you just don't speak female. You can do all the crappy jobs, lift the heavy stuff, and its all good, because your the guy. Under all that, your going no where fast. "Worst still is the pant-suit-wearing, 'Lean In,' you-go-girl, make-believe-I'm-a-man-style leadership that's being encouraged by today's popular media. These women, failing to understand the true nature of male leadership, attempt to replicate masculine poise, but end up with little more than aggressive power-tripping. They become plain-and-simple bullies who, rather than commanding respect, command nothing but hate and fear."It is UNNATURAL for women to be in leadership positions because one of two things will happen: 1) they'll keep their gossip mentality and create clique, which completely destroys morale of everybody. 2) like the quote from an article above: they TRY to be MEN, but THEY AREN'T. And the sooner you realize that the only reason you bitchy nobodies want to be boss is because the media and liberal feminist agenda is promoting it, the happier you'll be. Maybe 1 in a 100 (maybe 1000) can lead by example. The rest fall into the two categories mentioned above.	Nothing	Age - Youngsters	1/156	0.641

I noticed the woman I worked with preferred dealing with male managers because they found them easier to manipulate. For example, they wore more make up and less clothes before going into meetings with male managers and overtly flirted with them during the meetings. Sometimes they would even suggest the meeting be held over lunch to make it seem more like a date than a business meeting. Obviously none of these tricks worked on female managers.	Woman	Gender - General	1/76	1.316
This is true. And male bosses treat women that don't suck up to them quite badly or get frustrated because they get used to the manipulation. My best bosses have been women actually. They understand women and edit out the women that are in to manipulate favors or sleep their way to the top. Not all women do but way too many out there put themselves to this. My worst bosses have been men so far, and I think it's because I'm young and not unfortunate looking. I have attracted unwanted and 100 unwarranted sexual attention. This has led to backstabbing and snipping from older female co-workers and grumpy older male coworkers looking to sugar me up. It's happened to me thrice and I have since only chosen to work in places where most people are within my age range. So much more pleasant and no hostility or sexualization. Yeah but you totally fail to cover researches that show that women more often than men socially exclude other women and that women also more often are bullied by other women. That already happens in school where girls are more often than boys afraid of going to school but also more often than boys bully other girls. And that happens in peer groups and not only in a hierarchy. While boys are more often physically aggressive to each other, the bullying of girls among each other is more long lasting and has more drastic effects because it is less visible and because girls are generally seen as the more emotional sensitive and caring sex while this is not the truth. Supertyp might sound weird comparing us to dogs but, if you have owned many dogs in your lifetime you will notice that if you have more than one female dog and no males, the females will constantly be aggressive to one another (this is the same with cats), but if you have more than one male dog without a female dog, the male dogs get along and never fight. Even if u have 2 male dogs and a female dog, the males will likely compete with each other and be aggressive towards each other but not long because one of them will state that they are the dominant. Women.....don't have experience being oppressed? Men have empathy because they are victim? Have you bumped your head or something? Do you regularly wear a helmet or something? There's NO way in the world that you graduated from high school without knowing the history of women in this country and around the world! As for men being "empathetic"? Hell, when they DO decide to come across as empathetic it's mostly because they know that if anything goes wrong, a woman will bust her azz to fix it OR if it can't be fixed then he knows that he is surrounded by other "good ol' boys" of whom will believe him when he decides to blame whichever random woman he chooses to blame for whatever goes wrong! So that's why they are so laid back. Most women know this....most men rely on this.....so why don't YOU know this? Tell you what.....try going back and reviewing history. You won't have to go back too far. After all, women (who you claim don't know about oppression) only got the right to vote in the 1920's so.....start there!	Woman	Gender - General	2/183	1.093

Most men also only got the right to vote in the 1920's after being forcibly told they must possibly go and die horrific deaths in a worldwide war. How they are not also considered victims is beyond me. While I don't fully agree with either of the above commentators I personally believe this idea that throughout history women have been eternal victims of male power is just totally absurd. Historically both sexes have been thoroughly oppressed by a rich upper class that decided everyone's fate. Most men would have been prepared to give their lives to save their wives and children because women and children were seen as more important than men were. Men have historically been nothing more than cannon fodder while women were also oppressed as they were seen as little more than baby making machines. HOWEVER, biologically speaking, men ARE worth less than women (just as 1 trillion sperm is needed to fertilize one single egg), and womens primary function IS to make babies so perhaps biology has been the cause of societal ills all this time. To me, it isn't the gender of the person.. but the personality of the person that determines if they make a good leader or not. I just started a job a few weeks ago.. and the female boss never smiles, gets emotional if things don't go her way, doesn't want to listen to other feedback.. and wants things done her way (telling me that what I'm doing is wrong, etc). My previous boss before her was also female, but was more open to hearing feedback and ideas... even would let us run with our suggestions and would brainstorm if things didn't work out on how to improve it (she was also very emotional.. but never took it out on us). Nonsense. Women respond to culture just like guys. I have had both female and male managers in my charge who have been, shall we say, "overbearing." But I did not dismiss any of them as inherently flawed. They have equally adjusted to the culture that I have established - with some of them adjusting favorably, and others of them failing. I am fairly convinced that in every case where there is a "bitchy" female boss, there is a manager above her who has been rendered ineffective due to his or her fears or inexperience dealing with people, especially when it comes to issues of sex and gender . It is the job of upper managers to set the tone and culture of their enterprises, enforcing it effectively so that everyone else aligns with it. It has been my experience that both men and women adjust and fail here with absolute equality.	Gender, Sex	Gender - General	2/150	1.333

System Justification just scratches the surface and barely serves to apply. It is not the answer to female-to-female competitiveness or male boss preference, nor does it explain when some women tend to overcompensate when exercising authority. However, my female manager is amazing! There are always exceptions. I think we need to look toward human ethology to determine instinctive behaviors with consideration of environment and posturing for approval (within independent/competitive environments i.e.). Ask any woman in retail what it's like working with a majority of female coworkers and they'll tell you they would rather work with the male employees (especially of equal measure) in that environment. Gender, Race	Ethnicity - General, Gender - General	2/56	3.571
Jonathan, yes it's female nature. Men are competitive, so are more willing to be direct and in your face. It's not that men bash each other with chairs when they have a problem, but one will go to the other to see what the problem is. Women tend to avoid conflict and competition, so they'll never say what's wrong to the person they have a problem with. They'll be passive aggressive and spread rumors about the person their mad about to everyone else. This is why the divorce rate is so high, women can not communicate like an adult male. Have you ever experience it when a woman is pissed at you but won't say why. I worked at an organization that was probably 75 women and things were pretty messed up from a male perspective. There was rudeness and subterfuge and back stabbing and tattletaling that would never exist in a male dominated office (there would be a punch up every day if it did exist). However, to be fair it was only a small percentage of the women that created most of the problems which you need to be careful not to extrapolate out to "all women". Men learn in elementary school that if you are not civil to your contemporaries - there will be a punch. Near as I can tell, women don't have the same experiences and continue to show a lack of respect to each other that persists through adulthood. If there is plain nonthreatening woman in a position of power, all is good. If a woman that is physically attractive is in a position of power - bring out the knives. Wouldn't it make a lot more sense that once any person of any gender is given a lot of power over a group of people, that they will naturally try to push around anyone else that they see as either a liability or a threat to that power? (I'm not condoning it, in fact I down right hate it, but it has been observed in countless psychological studies.) It just seems incredibly contrived to take this idea of dismissing any kind of personal responsibility for women in a position of power. It also seems strange that your trying to argue that these "bitchy queen bee's" are somehow "persecuted" and being made to do what they're doing, because they're all somehow "internalising the gender stereotype", and so completely innocent of any abuse of power they may carry out. No matter who you are, what ethnicity you are, or what gender you are, everyone should be held accountable for their actions with NO exceptions. That is true equality.PS: Just to clarify to anyone wondering, I'm not one of those worthless anti-feminists, but I'm not supportive of those nonsensical feminazis. I support the level headed and openminded feminists, who actually understand what they're talking about and are only asking for true social equality.	Ethnicity, Gender	Ethnicity - General, Gender - General	4/211	1.896
I think everything plays a role. Similar things of "internalized prejudice" are found even with black people, in empirical tests. I didn't have much the interpretation that the bitchy behavior is then "excused", because "she's also a victim", though. Other possible factor may be that female bosses will even treat female employees in a more egalitarian fashion, whereas perhaps male bosses would be inclined to cut them some slack in order to not be perceived as sexist. But male bosses can possibly even be more malleable, more susceptible to women's requests in a nearly "biological" way, either in some sort of unconscious behavior of either "courtship" or provider, whereas female bosses don't have these brain buttons to be triggered, or are more conscious of not creating the appearance of unfairly favoring women, possibly even overcompensating.I'm not sure the "we should make it easier for women" is a good solution, if by "easier" it's meant "easier than for a man". I think it will only reinforce the view of "tokenism", of women/minorities being put there just in the name of diversity, favored over others with higher competence. Petitio Principii because of personal experiences, I am actually kind of permanently scared to talk to girls. One time a girl accused me of sexual harassment without any evidence, and I was punished and shamed until I graduated from middle school. She did it because her friends started to like me better than her herself. I think this shows an overpowered aspect of women.	Sexual	Gender - General	1/64	1.562

That's not how most men compete. Men compete by being better then other me, they work harder and longer hours. Women destroy rivals with gossip or sabotage like Tanya Harding and try to cripple her rival over working harder	Cripple	Physical Identity - Physical (and Mental) Impairments	1/39	2.564
True social equality is what you see when a woman is being beaten senseless while men walk right on by not intervening. Its called they asked for it when they got into the relationship and didnt find an out. Not condoning the right wing psychopaths and definitely not condoning the abusers out there, but... Wait the but just changed my entire stance. Hmm reading your comment shows me just how much of a leftist you actually are.	Woman	Gender - General	1/77	1.299
The only way to make things better is to ACTUALLY work together in solidarity. Instead of complaining that there's no place for woman in the work place, create your own work environment. That's true feminism .	Woman	Gender - General	1/36	2.778
The problem is: 1) most women do not want to create their own work environment; 2) most men and women do not want to work for women; 3) most women do not want to employ women. Because nobody wants to work with or work for women, and that is women themselves included. Because everyone knows and even women know what a nightmare women are at workplace. We ought not overlook, however, that for pretty much all western societies, women have had access and freedom to work only for the last 50 or so years - and even that freedom has not been significant. Even today, the idea that a woman's place is in the home tends to dominate the thinking of vast numbers of both western men and women. As recently as the 1950's and 60's it was acceptable in some "civilized" cultures for a man to literally beat his wife if he thought she was not obeying his commands. Marriage vows customarily required a woman to "love and OBEY" her husband, and not the other way around.Imagine the cultural imagination it once took to celebrate the following broadly published advertisements: [LINK] We cannot forget the fact that this general culture has shaped multiple generations of women and that we are therefore still enduring its effects. True feminism will keep all of this in mind as it helps us build fair societies.	Woman	Gender - General	1/167	0.599
I'm sorry but I prefer her man to a woman because they're often super rude and bitchy. A For example, at my school, when I stay too late to work on projects, the male security politely ask me to leave, but the woman ? She act rude, as if she thought I stayed late to commit a crime or something.	Woman	Gender - General	2/59	3.39
