All the guys seemed to be gentlemen. The one who was going to take her home thought she was a cheap hooker . He wanted to get a tenner out of the bank.....as long as she had a fiver in change lol.	Hooker	Gender - Female sexuality	1/41	2.439
Oh, so a man cat calling and asking women if they would like to come home with him is completely sexist and he's a disgusting pervert? But a woman doing the exact same thing is funny? What are these double standards.	Woman	Gender - General	1/41	2.439
Woman is sexist to man considered here man is sexist to woman is arrested for abuse where is the real sexism	Sexism, Woman	Gender - General	3/21	14.286
See how the men handle the situation. They are respectful and respectfully refuse and don't throw a hissy fit and report it to the police as sexual abuse.	Sexual	Gender - General	1/28	3.571

oh,its so funny seeing how riled the men(and some women no doubt) have got in these comments.If only they would get so riled when they saw a women being harassed but alas that rarely happens.This is the kind of abuse and harassment women have to put up with everyday,that is only the point she is making,how normalised it is and how entitled men feel to talk to women in such ways.The comment section just further illustrates the kind of misogyny that exists in our society.Sad but true.	Misogyny	Gender - General	1/87	1.149
The intention of showing double standards was there, however this experiment was done on random men from the general public? Nobody should be subjected to catcalling. I can see what they were trying to do, but I think The Guardian missed the mark here. Made me uncomfortable.	Nobody	Age - Youngsters	1/47	2.128
Wow ! Ill never understand how any straight male could turn down such a gorgeous woman as her .Leah is so sexy	Woman	Gender - General	1/22	4.545
Amazing video! The best! Sexism is very much alive! We have to fight against it! For gender equality!	Gender, Sexism	Gender - General	2/18	11.111
The only more realistic turning the tables scenario to give men a feeling of what it feels like to be a woman would be to have a bigger and stronger MAN come and say creepy things that made the harassed man feel like something he is not. This is why men get so upset about being hit on by gay men. They perceive a power and intent difference.	Gay, Woman	Gender - General, Sexual Identity - General, Sexual Identity - Male homosexuality	3/68	4.412
As much as I hate the guys that do the catcalling etc. in my mind, at least, it's not sexist to appreciate members of the opposite gender , or the same gender , for that matter. However, what was sexist about this video was when she asked for a female employee saying, 'they might know a bit more,' I realise some men might say this when it's the other way around gender -wise, but it's wrong in both scenarios, this is a double standard I can't stand - when 'black people can't be racist ,' for example, or, in this case, 'women can't be sexist.'	Gender, Racist	Ethnicity - General, Gender - General	3/101	2.97
OH MY GOD THE COMMENTS ON THIS VIDEO ARE YOU ALL SERIOUS'This would make my day if a woman said that to me'This is an accusation that all men are sexist morons'Etc., etc.WOW EGO ANYONE?	Woman	Gender - General	1/39	2.564
is there a woman there, to ask questions about grout? trust me, you're better off with the gentleman in front of you.	Woman	Gender - General	1/22	4.545

The main thing is they better not talk to me in the first place if nothing interesting to say. It's not that hard to understand. I already don't like people and especially not women.	Nothing	Age - Youngsters	1/34	2.941
Nope, not gay . I live asexually now. I used to hate people but liked women for illogical reasons which I no longer do. Behind many of the men who started shit there was a woman laughing at the whole thing, and that's all they're good for is either laughing at me, trying to criticize, or being in my way. Since when are we blaming all men on the action of a few? What we are asking is for the good ones to be allies - eg if if they see someone act in unacceptable behaviour to call them out on it. As it is with any form of unacceptable/abusive behaviour. The fact that every woman has to put up with this behaviour is a clear sign that things are pretty shitty in our culture. NB the guys that are good we appreciate them so much we marry them!	Woman	Gender - General	1/89	1.124

All I took from this, is that men react to these things much better than women. As creepy as this behaviour is, every single guy responded politely. Not a single one was rude or abusive - called her a creep, freak , perve, arsehole etc - as would’ve happened in most instances were it a man approaching a woman . 5 of guys are inappropriate creeps, but 70+ of women feel that an abusive response would be justified. In most civilization’s since the beginning of recorded history, approximately fifty percent of the population where reduced to a second class citizenship. Though a few achieved positions of prominence, for most of history they where denied any significant influence in the financial or political spheres. Yet towards the end of the nineteenth century and continuing till the present, this segment of society has made greater strides towards being fully represented in areas of influence. The movement for equality of women was just one example of movements of people working together to end injustices. And for the most part it seems to have been a success, governments and other influential entities have many women among their ranks. Yet in the media was well as popular culture, a sizable amount of the imagery of women presented is somewhat derogatory in nature. So while women have won equality in life, many of them are somewhat dehumanized in media a public perception. What am I talking about?First of this an example is a very old double standard. A man who has bedded a significant number women is seen in a very positive light among his male peers, a woman who does this will be seen as single word descriptions as slut or whore. Such woman’s entirety is seen as something which is primarily about matters of intimacy, that one characteristic of behavior making other more subtle characteristics a moot subject. The media unintentionally glorifies women as sex objects, yet in real life such a disposition will be seen by most as something to be looked down upon. In media dramas where show women in the workplace, though women are usually portrayed in a positive light they still seem to be shown having relations with one or more co-workers; that even if they have professionalism they still are partly driven by being with men. The media has also created a stylized yet empty image of woman’s beauty, women grapple with feelings of poor body image and that a woman’s highest worth in society is as a attractive object. Though woman have achieved many victories, their public image still seems to lag behind significantly.But changing this is not the job of men of men who might share such a view, much self respect and dignity is gained from a group overturning the injustices which confronts them.	Old, Sex, Woman	Age - Over 65s, Gender - General	4/392	1.02
Just a social media observation.I very rarely see men sharing pictures around of semi naked women.....women share pictures of men ALL the time!! Yeah lmao I remember the time a girl took a picture of a busker and uploaded it to Facebook and including comments about how she would like him. The creepy woman even then called up a radio station and they tracked him down to call him regarding her. Very awkward conversation for the man who clearly had no idea and even then he politely let her down whilst making sure he was not offended. Otep 0000 If a gay guy hit on a straight guy like me, I'll take that as a compliment. A few simple words like, "No, I'm good (taken or seeing someone)" does wonders to address this "harassment". Only self-entitled pricks who think that individuals, in this case men, need permission to hit on them make a big deal of this.	Gay	Sexual Identity - General, Sexual Identity - Male homosexuality	2/60	3.333
NorfolkCatKickers That's nonsense. For example, in the beginning, only rich men could vote and then, every man who is the head of the family and then, every man and then, every person. This wasn't gender discrimination but financial. And before advanced technology, most jobs were physically strenuous and as a result, most women didn't work. It was not until WWII when women were forced to work due to the shortage of men.	Gender	Gender - General	1/72	1.389

+Otep 0000 yeah lmao I'm a masculine man and I once had a gay guy eye me up properly and even touch me a few times. Found it quite funny and politely let him down and thanked him for kind words and confident approach. It honestly gave me confidence and I did not find it creepy at all. Many a time even woman who I don't find attractive have tried to engage in conversation within me and flirt and even then I still viewed it as nothing more than an innocent compliment. Also please do not confuse sexual harassment with a sexual advance, a man can lean in for a kiss however if the girl does not reciprocate the same feelings then he can move on. I failed in kissing my current girlfriend around 10 times, but I persisted and didn't listen to weak minded men and naive feminists. mm, I would disagree with quite a bit of that haha, most men certainly arent rapists, I'd say society isnt always the best at discouraging it but i dont think it encourages it ahah. Most dudes are fine its just a case of letting people know about the intimidation they can give off wether they intend it or not. That as a woman , by being intimidated you are not being sexist or assuming all men are rapists, that you have a right to be scared and not like being spoken to in that way.	Woman	Gender - General	1/94	1.064
+slime pixie intimidating? why? they are in public places, in the street full of people, why would you feel intimidated, you can feel offended or upset, but why intimidated, honestly i don't understand, what happen in the video is that men are polite because considering the propositions of the woman they just reject them without taking the advantage of the situation to play the victim	Woman	Gender - General	1/64	1.562
urbanbehive8believe me, obviously not all men, but there are men out there who will advance on you no matter how public the place. This dude not so long ago would not leave me alone, i kept telling him to leave me alone and he eventually called me an ungrateful bitch for not wanting his attention, I later noticed him attempting to follow me home so I got a cab. That was in broad daylight, and it was intimidating. Its a minority, but a lot of women dont want to take that chance. Im not trying to get sympathy but you can surely understand why women become intimidated by these advances right? Yes its definitely less intimidating in a public place in daylight but you surely get my initial point. The guys in this video see it as a joke/dont care because the woman clearly isnt going to (or is very unlikely to) do anything threatening, it would be different if a built man was doing the same thing to women. Lol this video really is complete bollocks.Most of the puzzled reactions would be due to the fact she looks weird anyway. Lia Harlin I'm not ok with it either way. that's the point. The fact that you are ok with it, so long as it is not directed at a woman is pretty sad. I believe the expression, two wrongs don't make a right applies here. It's wrong if you've been harassed and I'm sorry that happens, but harassing men randomly doesn't improve the situation. I went through a really traumatic incident as a kid, the last thing I would want is to try to inflict harm on anyone who looked like the guy who did it. It wouldn't change what happened and it wouldn't be right. If it is the individual who did something wrong that is to be held accountable, that is one thing, but harming anyone who is superficially like them is wrong and counterproductive.	Woman	Gender - General	1/137	0.73
Which is the point in this video. Like i said. Any woman can experience sexual harassment, but as soon as ANY MAN is experiencing it it's sexist and cruel (which is the point this is trying to get at). That's great for you, but maybe some of the men targeted in this video have previously street called women (and i even know a lot of guy friends that do it), and they might learn how it feels from this experience. I'm sure no men were harmed in the making of this video.	Sexual, Woman	Gender - General	2/92	2.174
Lia Harlin I'm whining over it? Yeah, just as much as your "whining" about it happening to women. The difference is my ability to condemn sexual harassment extends to all people, instead who you think matters, IE women. Maybe try empathizing with the other sex a bit. You keep making the excuse that "hey, its just a few people." You're not understanding that doing it AT ALL is wrong. If I go and rob someone and make an excuse that, "hey, i get robbed all the time and I know loads of people who get robbed." that does not justify what I've done. Same applies here.	Sex, Sexual	Gender - General	2/106	1.887

Ok, I keep reading posts from men who are saying "hey, maybe you should learn from their reactions and not take it so seriously." First: most of these are first time reactions to light harassment. Try dealing with this 3 times a day while on your way to work, running errands, or trying to relax with a beer at your local bar. It's physically and emotionally draining.I noticed only one of the men reacted the way a woman would. That was the second, slightly older bartender. Why? He deals with harassment every day. Men and women who say and do inappropriate things due to alcohol consumption. Bartenders see some messed up people and actually have to talk to them. Kudos to all of them! So guys, before you judge the women who are commenting on this video, spend at least a year bartending and experience harassment on a daily basis. Then I'll respect your opinion. Until then: shut up!	Woman, alcohol	Behavioural Addiction - Alcohol, Gender - General	2/160	1.25
I think the point is that it highlights how ridiculous it is. And in turn, how ridiculous that women still get this kind of 'attention' every day. Yes she is rude, and offensive (in reply to comments below) and that's the point. It's rude and offensive when directed at women too. And weird and absurd. Turning the tables on who is doing it is highlighting how ridiculous it is that it still goes on the other way around...	Weird	Physical Identity - Physical (and Mental) Impairments	1/78	1.282
So... I guess the conclusion is that the majority of men responded rationally and maturely then moved on with their lives? God this is horrible. Let's imagine you have done the same with rape. Okay, you probably wouldn't. Because rape is serious stuff. But everyday sexism is something you can do yourself with gender roles reversed, because everyday sexism isn't serious, right? That's just a funny little thing for a viral video. This is the message your video is sending and this is horrible because everyday sexism IS difficult. You cannot do that to random men just to prove a point. I'm slowly loosing faith in humanity as I scroll down on these comments... You men don't realise what you are saying at all, how this 'doesn't prove a point' and how 'women should do this more often'...Society has lead women to be more mature than mn will ever be, and for your information this proves a MASSIVE point! In prank videos on YouTube, these sort of questions are asked to females... This turns the tables and you guys are getting more and more mad about this...And for those saying 'this isn't everyday sexism 'The question isn't "how do feminists see this shit'The question is HOW DONT MEN SEE EVERY DAY SEXISM ?	Sexism	Gender - General	1/114	0.877
The question of "is this sexism ?" is based of the question where men offended. For the most part guys where not offended, confused for the most part but not offended. And if guys are not offended by sexual assertiveness, it should mean sexual assertiveness is not actually sexist. Women to men "how you would like if a women walked up to you and asked you for sex ?" Men, "I would think it was a joke or something at first, but after that, I would like that a lot." As shown by of the 2 guys who answered the question. "would you like to come home with me?" One said yes, the other seem interested but was working. The idea that male sexual assertiveness is sexist is based off the idea that men act toward women as they do because men feel superior towards women. This is not true and can be easily shown when women are taken out of the picture. Gay men, in a safe area like the Castro in SF, treat other guy men in the same way or are more assertive as straight men treat women. For the reason of "men feel superior towards women" then gay men would need to feel superior towards other gay men... Not possible. So basically they either find it funny, think she's crazy or have a 'you can't talk to us like that' response. I guess in my experience from as young as 12 walking to school in my uniform to now taking the train or bus to work that sort of behaviour has been such a consistent part of my life that I pretty much shrug it off or roll my eyes. It's just there, it's not someone joking around, it's just normal behaviour. But when I look at it from this perspective it seems so obvious and from their reactions ... they just find it unbelievable, like it's some sort of skit. I suppose the purpose of this video was to highlight that disparity - that a certain type of man practices this sort of behaviour and women have it happen to them so frequently that they would feel silly complaining about it or it doesn't seem worth it. Nonetheless it always leaves a sour taste in the back of my mouth when it happens.	Crazy	Physical Identity - Physical (and Mental) Impairments	1/174	0.575

Woman	Gender - General	2/54	3.704
A lot of men are not going to find that out from a video like this, either. A video following a woman and displaying the sorts of events/behavior that take place around her, along with an aside of conversation with her after to display how those actions translate into her mind due to experiences/actions/impressions she has received in the past or from society... I never said a thing about race . Race isn't a factor. I've been harassed several times, catcalled, followed by men of several races. The first time I remember being scared for my life was when I was just a teenager, and I was walking to the store that was just down the street, a man stoped, rolled down his window and asked if I wanted a ride. I declined, and ket walking. Then I realized he was following me. I ran home as fast as I could, he followed me through the apartment complex, luckily I was able to get inside and lock the door. I don't really see the point of this video aside from showing that you can react to a rude comment without freaking out and screaming bloody murder, as all those men clearly demonstrate.But what's the point really? Most men would actually enjoy being hit on by a woman ... being called "sexy" in the street would make our day. You cannot compare out situations. Do you really think men will watch this and go "Oh my God, now I understand! It is horrible to have someone of the opposite sex make a proposal to you in public! I must make sure none of my fellow men ever do the same to a woman ever again!!'? I can assure you all men watching this are actually thinking "watch and learn ladies. This is how you dismiss rude comments made in the street without dropping the 'S' word". I don't think any of those men would even qualify what happened to them as a 'sexist assault'. And I'm saying this as a man who would never, in a million year, do this type of thing to a woman .	Sex, Woman	Gender - General	4/186	2.151

I can't believe people even think "see! the men don't care! look how calm they are!" is at all a reasonable argument. NO SHIT they are calm or nonchalant either because they obviously realize that this woman is not a threat, she couldn't over power them if she tried OR they never had to even deal with this kind of situation. When I'm approached by grown men who I don't know and they tell me he wants to fuck me I DO act just as calm as any of these men but you assholes don't know what it's like knowing that rape is an every day reality for women living in the most developed to under developed cities.Maybe if they were consistently sexualized every other day for years maybe they would care, don't you think? If it got to the point they felt unsafe, they felt harassed, felt uncomfortable in their own skin because their own fucking skin was a threat to their safety... is that what it takes to care!?I've had men yell out perversions out at me since I was about 11, so maybe they need to grow up with the fear and insecurity... would they care then!? Wow if you don't do this then why are you offended? This video isn't here to say that all men are sexists and do this, but i really think that every woman has experienced this kind of encounters at least once in her life. Women, never said all men did this, so you really need to measure your words. Just because YOU don't do this doesn't mean it's not happening, and trust me, it happens everyday. I gotta say that i'm french, so it may not be the case everywhere.. But in France it is. For all the comments like "you should take example from the calm guys" etc, don't you think women ignore them too? She's not that rude, because when a man "refuses", she's juste like "ok" or "are you sure?". The "worst" thing she said was "are you gay ?". Most of the time, when women ignore this kind of guys or even say "no" with a smile, their reactions are more like "nevermind, you're really ugly anyway" or " actually i wasn't interested in you, you're fat , horrible..." etc etc. And we don't answer to that neither. I would have LOVED to see men's reactions if she did this. One day, i was going out with friends, and a guy stopped me in the streets. He was like "hey, wanna have a drink?" then "Please gimme your number!" (in a insistent way), and i said something like: "i'm sorry, we have to meet friends in a bar" with a smile, and said no for the number. I didn't insult him or anything, and he just said: "Nevermind, i'll find other bitches tonight". So nice, isn't it? And it was not the first and the last time it happened. So we're not saying that all men do this, but trust me it happens everyday and this is not really nice to be insulted freely. jamacngyallis I do not think that the point was to make men RELATE to it - at least to me it is blatantly obvious that what she does will not have the same effect on men as when men do it to women girls. Doesn't that in itself tell us something? That women in public are subject to fear when harassed and men are not. They do not see it as a threat because there is no overhanging 'well you know that I am stronger than you, so you better not get too angry loud whatever, because I can just slap you down. From my own life - I am a larger than average woman , taller, and strongly built. I was rarely harassed by men smaller than myself, though I am bigger than a lot of men. I think that this was because I COULD represent a physical threat to a short, slightly built man, and they would rather not risk it! The last time I had obscene abuse hurled at me (ironically about 5 minutes from where the video was filmed) the man was at least 6'2". There has got to be some feeling of 'safety' being that size. He certainly felt unaccountable for his behaviour.	Woman	Gender - General	1/208	0.481
Mad Maggie The video description states that the aim of the video was to "turn the tables on everyday sexism ". So was their goal to make men understand what it is like to be objectified or to make women feel empowered by the role reversal, it's the former right? They have shown how absurd such behaviour is, but as for men feeling objectified there is no evidence to suggest men were negatively affected by it.It would have been far more powerful if as soon as the video ended they replayed the exact same scenes again but as it in real life with men behaving badly. That would have hit home. They could have even done it with men hitting on straight men, just to make it even more awkward.	Sexism	Gender - General	1/130	0.769

Say it plainly, what was the point of the video? from what im getting, your saying it was to say that men don't feel fear when approached by women in the same manner. I partially disagree, but even so, it really doesn't take much to kill a man. get a knife or a blunt object and just go to town when he isnt looking. During the scene with her just staring, what was actually going thru my head was, "wow isn't he scared this crazy woman might try to stab him or something?" because to me that was just weird ...and i know the only people that try and do that for as long as she did have something wrong with them, that seems like a really weird street harassment case. Rocky Slay Men don't care about materials, eh? Like beer? And motorcycles? And video games? And Star Wars memorabilia? And Pawn Star items? And grills? And sneakers? And boats? And guns? And knives? And old coins? And classic cars? And porno? See, I can make sexist opinionated decisions for what men want, too. Clearly, us women can see past that and only focus on what's important: professionally displaying our level of status and authority based on our superior physical presentation. <— See how much that shit hurts? Now think about having to deal with it your entire life. Everywhere. In movies, shows, posters, billboards, online, work, school, on the street, at home, with family, etc. etc. Edit: Who's Fart Barf...?	Old	Age - Over 65s	1/120	0.833
Laura L But do you have a reason to "feel threatened"? I guess if you're a scared little girl. A mature adult woman shouldn't be scared about being hit on. To say that a large majority of men are threatening is ridiculous.	Woman	Gender - General	1/42	2.381

Cankerous Booch Of course it's harassing behavior. Zero game? Is that what you call it? Then you sure do not know how to give a compliment to a girl. Laura LIf you believe that there is such thing as female on male rape, then by definition, you are not feminist! Feminist ideology is specifically designed not to include male victims. The central idea behind feminism is the " patriarchy theory" which holds that men run society for the exclusive benefit of men and to the detriment of women. Feminism has reluctantly accepted that men can be victims but only when the aggressor is male. Feminism will never accept female aggressors because that runs against the patriarchy theory.	Patriarchy	Gender - General	2/88	2.273
Laura L"If you think men, women, gay and transgender and whatever people shouldn't be discriminated because of their gender/sexual preference, then you're a feminist..." No that doesn't make me a feminist, that makes me a human being!	Gay, Transgender	Sexual Identity - General, Sexual Identity - Male homosexuality, Sexual Identity - Transexuality	3/38	7.895

Laura L Listen, lady. You seriously need to fk off. After having read this comment thread and the argument you had with Gondar, I have come to the conclusion that you are a stupid b*tch (and before you call ad hominem, that is not an ad hominem. You're a stupid b*tch AND you're wrong, you're not wrong because you're a stupid b*tch). Feminism is a movement for social equality, yes, but this ideology you're trying to defend is not feminism. It's some crazy cult that likes to call itself feminism so it can feed off the name recognition of the real movement, but in reality is a bunch of airheads on tumblr who like to think they're being oppressed and are always the victim. News flash (Yes, it's supposed to be two words, not one)! YOU ARE NOT ALWAYS THE VICTIM, NOT ALL MEN WANT TO RAPE WOMEN, AND JUST BECAUSE MEN HIT ON WOMEN DOES NOT MAKE IT SEXIST. It's called complimenting, you do it so the person you're complimenting thinks better of you and wants to be in a relationship with you or wants to sleep with you. It's not degrading sexism. On another note, there is absolutely no problem with men having no fear of women. Women shouldn't even be afraid of men. In this day and age, size doesn't matter anymore because of a little thing called a weapon. You can easily conceal a handgun in a purse or under a coat/shirt (assuming you have proper permits) and if your country doesn't have guns, you can have a knife and conceal that (assuming proper permits and all of that malarkey). On an entirely other note. Men get butt hurt about gender discussions? Men act irrationally and selfishly in these instances? Misandry is sarcastic horrible but misogyny is reality terrible? Men are insulting whole populations but tumblr "feminists" aren't? Tumblr "feminism (the kind you're preaching here) isn't about male oppression? HAHAAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHA!!!!!! That is the the most stupid thing I have ever heard someone like you say! HAHAAHAHAHAHA!!!!!! On my final note, in the first world, women have it really well off in every social aspect of life and slightly less well off in the workplace. Men in the first world have it st in social aspects of life (I mean relationships, of course, not necessarily just forming friendships and the more superficial aspects) and slightly better than women in the workplace (probably because a really large majority of fathers work, whereas a smaller percentage of mothers work). As was mentioned previously in this comments section, men have to really work to find a partner. When they find one, they have to work hard to keep both her and their money (which the women usually dips into that money as well, both directly and indirectly). If any of those moving parts slips for a second, the girl is out of there with whatever stuff the man tried to provide her with. This is a very common scenario, which I've seen my friends go through several times. If you want women to be taken seriously, then women need to start pulling their weight. Pay for dinner, go out of your way to make the man happy, be there when he needs you, and (most importantly) RECIPROCATE. The two of you are in a partnership. To the best of my understanding, partnership means the effort and reward is divided equally. If the man has put up with all sorts of crap, you should have to put up with crap too. Yes. It would be a prejudiced choice because you're assuming a man couldn't design as well as a woman . Sexism is defined as "discrimination or prejudice based a on person's gender ."	Gender, Sexism, Woman	Gender - General	3/31	9.677
Pwnzor729Thanks for the feedback but I strongly believe that how people get a job definitely has a bearing on how well they can do the job.I've seen many people in different fields who were unqualified to do their job, yet they got the job because of a referral on the inside of the company for example. I have had my share of unexpected bad experiences with both genders, but more often than not, and call it stereotyping if you will, but I lean towards one gender or the other for a variety of things I believe they are naturally better at. Car mechanic? I'd go for a male. Wedding planner? I'd go for a female. etc. I don't think that is sexist or profiling, but just reasoning based on personal life experiences.	Gender	Gender - General	1/134	0.746
Garry S Fair enough. I still believe that it is prejudice, because you're pre-judging how well a mechanic will be able to do their job based on their sex . That's not to say it's a bad thing, I don't think it's sexist or chauvinistic or whatever. I do it too, that's just the way society works.Or a better analogy would be to say that if I'm stuck in a burning building, I expect a male firefighter to carry me out of there. Not that women are incapable of doing that, but by and large men have the strength and the size to do something like that. So in that respect, yeah I'm prejudiced. I wouldn't call it sexist, but it does lean towards profiling, and it is prejudiced, in my opinion. But, I don't think that's necessarily a bad thing.	Sex	Gender - General	1/141	0.709
That's not sexism ! Sexism is the plumber telling me the heater is broke because I used Duracell batteries instead of Varta in the thermostat. It is the other plumber telling me the toilet being clogged has nothing to do with the sewer pipes going UP instead of 1° down, but because they are not made for flushing toiletpaper. The man in the hardwareshop telling me I have to put 6 hinges on an interiour door. Or what about the man explaining me the water pump not working has nothing to do with a broken sensor that does not read the reservoir is empty but it is my mistake because the pressure of the water is not above the maximum bar. Thats because it's because common for men to prey on girls and for girls to take it in. It's totally weird the other way around. I remember when I was in 8th grade walking with a girl I knew and a 50 something year old dude starting to flirt with her, it was common and I was used to seeing girls treated like that. If it was a 50 year old women hitting on me (a boy) then it would have been super weird . John Barker But it's really not, it happens so god damn often that people think it's just an older mans way of being friendly. I've seen old dudes in nursing homes slap a young girls ass and people laugh.I just don't think it's fair to say the mens replies to this were "polite" and women should take note when this NEVER happens to dudes so of course they were polite, shit most of them were probably down with it. Girls are the ones who have it happen all the time since they're young, and by older dudes most of the time. It's hard for a female to react to this kind of behavior with "class" when it's happening to their younger sister or their mom.	Old	Age - Over 65s	1/126	0.794

John Barker I don't think it fails to make the point just because the men responded politely. The point is, society doesn't have the same views on the mental states of men who do this.If a man who does this kind of thing thinks she's weird (or funny, or in any way out of the ordinary - he needn't find it disgusting) for doing it, why does he expect to be taken seriously when he does it? It's not saying any form of sexism is okay. It is showing how ridiculous it looks for a man to walk up to a woman and automatically want sex from her. She is not justifying her going around and saying these things, which by the way is scripted from actually encounters women have faced. She's not being serious, she shedding light on the fact of how awkward and degrading it is to be put in that position. Then once women deny them, men justify being turned down not because they were being creepy and too up front, but because the woman HAS to be gay if she doesn't want to be with him. Hmm... I wouldn't go that far. Some of might not be depending on how loosely/strictly you're defining sexism but stuff like assuming that someone won't be knowledgeable about something just because of their gender definitely is. Where as things like shouting at people from vans or offering sex to strangers, whilst clearly inappropriate, might not be sexism ; but I'm not sure that the semantic distinction is that important. Y'know what? I'm actually OK with people being irritated when people are dicks to them in the street, I understand it. People yelling things at me happens most days. I'm about 7ft tall, that's unusual so people want to react to that. I get that, but it doesn't stop me from being annoyed at them in the moment. You talked about the people who are yelling things as " pigs " which is fine, you're judging the action as inappropriate, but in the same breath you blame the people who they're yelling at. Why? Are you saying that men aren't smart enough not to be " pigs " when they see someone dressed like a "slut"? My problem with this video is that it depends on the idea that these incidents where perpetrated by MEN against WOMEN, as opposed to each one by a man against a woman . The oversimplification propagates the war of the sexes thing and gets us nowhere, especially in this case; because they're preaching to the choir. It seems unlikely that anyone who does this will see it. Your attitude however makes me just as irritated. Describing people who are reacting with irritation as being given a load shit from people that they don't know in the streets for no reason as "bitches"? Really!? Do you honestly think that works toward making anything better?	PIGS, Woman	Gender - General, Nationality - Southern European	3/224	1.339
Dont really get this video. Men and women arent the same plus it just seems to show if a woman did it to a man they wouldnt really be offended or kick up much of a fuss. Doubt many men will randomly go up to women and ask them to go home with them in the middle of the day. In the shop if men asked for another man to help them its probably because in that certain department men know more generally in that area, like in DIY they generally will. Basically feminists gotta chill out, pointless video	Woman	Gender - General	1/99	1.01

Nothing	Age - Youngsters	1/59	1.695
Lol this is more of a prank video. It's not proving anything. Feminist need to stop confusing societal norms with biological truths. Sex	Gender - General	1/54	1.852
Larry, I totally understand that part. Unfortunately I'm a bit hazy on how you combat sexism by generalising people based on nothing but their gender , or stop street harassment by harassing people in the streets. Making "ALL MEN look like chauvinistic pigs " is not an honourable goal which in some way benefits humanity. Your argument that these actions are based on real experiences sort of falls flat when we remember that the guys in the video almost certainly aren't the perpetrators in question.	Gender, Nothing, PIGS, Sexism	Age - Youngsters, Gender - General, Nationality - Southern European	4/83	4.819
This video is great. The point of it is to show that some men (not all men) do these exact things to women and think that it is ok but as soon as a woman does it men think it is inappropriate/that she is annoying/desperate or that there is something wrong with her. Most women don't dress a certain way to get mens attention, dressing nice/fun/sexy actually feels good it doesn't mean girls want some guy to be getting all up in their business. If you are a man who doesn't do any of these things then don't have a cry about it because it doesn't apply to you!!	Woman	Gender - General	1/109	0.917

Why is desperation flirting, sexism ?	Sexism	Gender - General	1/5	20.0

That is a good question. When judging if something is sexist I suppose you have to check if assumptions/judgements are being made about a person's character, capabilities, intelligence or the acceptability of their actions based solely on their gender . In the case of asking someone you've never met before "do you want to come back to mine?" I'd certainly say that it's too forward not to make most people feel uncomfortable and because of that it's probably a bit inappropriate. But inherently sexist? I'm not so sure. It's a question therefore offering the other person a choice as opposed to making any assumptions about them, so probably not. I'm not endorsing it as a way to introduce yourself, but "sexist" isn't a very accurate way to describe it.	Gender	Gender - General	1/128	0.781
