I disagree.If a woman doesn't sleep around or wants to remain a virgin until marriage then great.Her doing all of that will not ensure that whatever man she marries will treat her good and respect her.	Woman	Gender - General	1/36	2.778
KasumiKrissOut of curiosity, are you basing this perspective on your religious beliefs or are your views secular? Part of the the problem is that women aren't actually generally as promiscuous as you are assuming. It only looks that way because it is what is shown in pornography and movies/tv. Also, you say that women are more emotional but that isn't really true. It's just more socially frowned upon for men to show their emotions. Plus, men often are even more emotional than women in many cases. For example, it's usually men who get more violent and angry when rejected by the opposite sex . Men also tend to be the ones who resort to wars. The other problem is that most of the studies you are talking about that show that women who have more sexual partners are less happy in marriage are conducted by religious people who have bias against women having sexual freedom. What a close-minded submissive woman... Wow. Girl if you feel less than men, fine. But don't come here with all those stereotypes pretending to be some guru that will enlighten people. And for your information, you have completely misunderstood feminisim. It is not against men, we don't ask for more, we ask for equal rights because we are nothing less and nothing more. In other words it is not against men, it is against women like YOU who are the ones to blame why women were treated like objects with centuries, not men. 'WHAT YOU GIVE POWER TO, HAS POWER OVER YOU.' And if you think that men are smarter and more ambitious then try analyzing kids at school and see who is better and more ambitious to get good grades in general. Girl, I am more ambitious and have a better career than most of the men I am surrounded with. If you are lazy, okay, I understand, but luckily not all women are girls like you, many are REAL GROWN-UP WOMEN, something you don't know about. And yes I always thought so and you are a living proof, women without self-love and self-respect who feel less are the reason why women were in a bad position for so long and why feminism started at a first place. And I hope YouTube will stop suggesting me your funny videos who never fail to make me hit the roof. W O W and btw housewife is not a real job if it is then quit 'working' as one for a month and you will see what your home will look like. That won't happen in any real working environment because they will replace you asap. Home is a responsibility of the people who live there, not a job. Which is different, but if you are lazy and wanna call it a job to feel that you are actually working something, go ahead! Let's see what will happen if someday you break up with your bf/husband (who seems like he has adopted a lazy teenage daughter instead of a mature partner) , you will then go to 'work' in your parents house and be a housewife there so they will support your lazy ass, don't you? As for sex, stop putting your nose in other's people private lives no matter if they are women or men, you are nothing but a submissive woman with a closed mind who does nothing but talk about stereotypes convincing herself that she is a guru(in bashing women) that will brain wash all of us. Some women do not deserve to be called as such, you are indeed one of them. Look at the comments below your videos and you will see only men bashing women just like you do. Congrats for that, I guess that's your goal REAL PEOPLE OF VALUE WHO VALUE HUMANS ARE FEMINISTS BECAUSE FEMINISM IS ABOUT EQUALITY NOT BASHING ONE OR THE OTHER. There are so many men who understand this wayyy better than you, real men are feminists. And so are real women, but you know nothing about that I guess. You put everything on scale and do nothing but comparing people. Oh and the world is not only made of straight people, you seem to forget about that while bashing women with all those stereotypes, but yet again, I am not surprised that you do. Typical for someone like you whose 'lectures' are based on stereotypes instead of actual facts.	Nothing, Sex, Woman	Age - Youngsters, Gender - General	9/581	1.549

Good video.One that you trust = husband.Feminism used to be about woman making men taking responsibility for heir families, it has been hijacked by those after power, bad power.And now we that the gender nonsense that says that there is no difference, men and women are the same.Both radical Feminism and genderism both are destroying women (and men) and families. How about Men stop being promiscious??? Get your head around that!!!! And stop catergorizing and pigeon holing men and women. We are all indivisuals and all have different sexual needs. Stop preaching and let people decide for themselves.	Sexual	Gender - General	1/38	2.632
Studies have shown that the more sexual partners a woman has, the less likely of a relationship and marriage lasting, people who sleep around have bad personality traits that would cause a relationship or marriage to end, by sleeping around a woman damages her ability to pair bond, pair bonding is one of the most important inheritant skills we have as humans and are essential in any kind of relationship, a lot of these woman end up having all KINDS of psychological and mental issues, also a womans dna can incorprate the dna of all of her previous sexual partners according to new scientific studies, a womans body is like a human sponge that absorbs all of the dna and traits from her casual sex partners and passing some of that dna onto her offspring, so basically a mans child could have the dna of one or many of her other male sexual partners in her life, woman also inheritant the traits of her sexual partners, that is why promiscious woman are masculine because these traits are being inserted into her dna by her casual sex partners. Well to most women the brainwashing of sexual empowerment that equals promiscuity already happened. It's not that easy to change an entire society	Sexual	Gender - General	1/23	4.348

If a woman wants to be promiscuous then she can :) it's not an achievement saying yes or no to a guy. Just your personal choice. I've been with my partner for 6 years and we had sex the first night we met. I can see you worship men and that's why you'll be in a relationship full of cheating :) but that will be your life. Saying females are more emotional is what you are saying that's how YOU are because YOU are emotional.	Promiscuous, Sex, Woman	Gender - Female sexuality, Gender - General	3/85	3.529
That's why I'm not getting married because females in my age range, teens/20s are not wife material at all, they have so many guys they are having sex with it's mind blowing, no man wants to know his wife has had 80 sexual partners.	Age, Sex, Sexual	Age - General, Gender - General	3/44	6.818
Too many generalizations in this video. The generalization that women sleeping around don't have long lasting relationships is bogus. Everyone is different and everyone's situation turns out different. Sometimes sitting around being the "good girl" can still land you in an unfulfilled relationship, getting cheated on, etc. A failing relationship has many factors; some big ones are incompatibility, rushing into marriage(because you have to be married to be fulfilled in life, apparently), unfaithfulness from either party, and my personal favorite, people upholding this fairytale image of marriage that is far from the truth and the reality is not what they expect at all. Also childhood traumas and other unhealed parts of ourselves, which means one or both of them being mentally and emotionally unhealthy people getting into relationships when they should be working on themselves to become healthy, whole people first. And there is a huge gap in the reasoning that men are made and are supposed to sleep around and women aren't. If men are "allowed" to sleep around and are doing so, they are likely sleeping around with women, right?. Therefore they are adding to the list of promiscuous women and then turn around complaining that there are too many promiscuous women. So either it's acceptable for everyone to sleep around or no one does and everyone should wait. Quite a lot of men here talk about promiscuous women not being able to settle with one man as if most men are being super faithful after having their fun beforehand. I'm personally not a fan of sleeping around by men or women because I feel people should respect themselves to find a quality partner. That is your most vulnerable state and an energy exchange happens so if you don't know who you're dealing with you'll be taking on their shit. It's best to always find a trusted sex partner Not everyone wants a relationship or has that as their end goal, and marriage is a social construct. There was a time when marriage had nothing to do with love! It was designed as a transaction between the families for resources and wealth. Marriage as we know it is a rather recent concept, even monogamy wasn't always the norm. People should do what works for them cause we are all wired differently. Generalizations are so harmful in any sense.	Nothing, Promiscuous, Sex	Age - Youngsters, Gender - Female sexuality, Gender - General	5/390	1.282

The less sexual partners, the better. That goes for men and women. It removes the unfair expectations for the partner to perform to the same extent or better than previous lovers. I love hearing about two virgins getting together, that sex will be had without the expectations and in a genuine and loving manner without the emphasis of physical quality of genitalia. Ask yourself....outside of a loving committed relationship why does someone desire a sexual encounter? Seems to me it is basically falls into 2 areas. The first is the power or control aspect. It's having the perception that I can get this person to do what I want. The 2nd is the faze narrative that sex is a form of validation and approval. I heard it said that when someone wants to have sex with you it is perceived as the "ultimate approval". So someone with low self esteem or perhaps a false sense of self feels that they need this perceived approval and validation to feel whole or good enough. In both cases, the low self esteem and empty self drives people to have promiscuous sexual encounters over and over. It never fills the empty void but they keep trying to get the illusionary result through this "fix". This is why some people become chronic cheaters chasing this illusion to fill their void. If you are still a virgin believe it or not as you are currently you are more attractive than any promiscuous women you know, it is what you have that guys find attractive in a potential wife, unless I'm mistaken guys have been proven to seek out sex or need it a lot more than women do, don't take it the wrong way if the less developed males are hard set on sex , when it comes to marriage you will be on the top of everyone's list and YOU will truly be allowed the right to have any sort of standards you like ( which will definitely be met), because you are actually worth it. Believe me your standards will have to go down if you choose to sleep with as many men as you can manage simply because you believe men are exactly the same as women, in that you achieve some sort of personal victory as a 'Strong independent woman' but the fact will remain the same, men who are looking for someone to take seriously don't find that attractive and will treat you accordingly. So if your a Rocket scientist you will attract other scientists. This statement is true, but again it isn't the power of attraction. The other person likes you because they share the same interest. You could call that the power of attraction, but everything is up to interpretation. In other words because you think that the power of attraction works you build pathways in your brain, and then your brain searches for information to meet your hypothesis. From your thinking it's obvious that you are from Stone Age , and women are wayyy stronger than men because they handle pain for example, they do handle period and they do handle the pregnancy pain for nine month, but if you are a guy and you want to try the pain that women handles , you won't handle it. Second women do work hard and they deserve to get a good salary and be equal to men because they work hard and maybe some of them are independent and don't have a parent to give them money okay . Third who saiddddd whooo told you that women are not logical and more emotional than mennnn whoooooo ??! Women do have brain to think and they are not stupid, but they have emotions too and men are the same okay . Don't act like my grandpa please. Forth if you don't have any problem to date and love a player who does have a multiple partners more than you and play with feelings and you say that it's okay for men to have multiple opinions more than one woman in their life , then go date a player okay , but don't throw shade at women because they have the same rights as men okayyyy you like it or not . And if a woman does have a multiple partners and she is plying it's not our business okay . The same as men if they play around too much at the end , they will be unbalanced. Beautiful woman with a beautiful message I am not American so I am impressed you still have women likeyourself in the Western world because so much sex crazed culture is passed on from Hollywood etc. I was raised in a traditional society and as my father always told me women will eliminate the chances of emotionally bonding with their soulmate the more partners they have because we are not designed like men. The wise men told us this in the past beyond religion but simply based on biology. I chose to wait until marriage for any intimacy and I will be getting married in a few months to the love of my life I am still proud I am this way at 25 It is not easy in this world but you should surround yourself with positive people who have similar mindsets who encourage the best for you and also avoid those who view you as 'other' for your own choices. Marca Garcia if you're implying that i am a whore then you're very mistaken. i am seventeen and i have been in a relationship for over a year now so there hasn't even been enough time for me to be promiscuous lmao. yes some people do end up with STDs etc but i'm not talking about that. as long as the sex is consensual and protected then there is no issue whatsoever. what one person chooses to do with their body and life is THEIR choice. shaming people for the number of sexual partners is so ignorant. i agree that if someone can become very emotionally attached then it probably isn't the best thing for them to do, however, most people know whether they're stable enough to have a one night stand, or multiple one night stands. From a man, you show very good understanding and balanced thinking. Today sex has become "too" easy.....women give away their pussy like its about to spoil, its just too easy today. I can't emphasis enough how many men the average woman sleeps with today, yet want to be treated as women. Women use to value themselves once upon a time, you literally had to marry a woman first before you ever had sex with them. If you lived in the stone age , yes. Human has gone a lot more complex psychologically. While a person has the right to choose what kind of lifestyle he/she wants to live, you can't deny the failure of the traditional instilled marriage paradigm. Is it because people becoming more promiscuous ? No. People have been promiscuous since before you know about history. Look how many single moms are out there. They all a) got married in early age b) wanted to have kids and started a family c) think starting a family is the only way of life. If you want to preach about NOT being promiscuous , you should stick with the same pair of shoes or the same set of outfit. You should eat the same food for every meal all year long. And yes, I have known many couples who have successful relationships by being promiscuous . But you can subjugate your narrow view of belief all you want. It doesn't change the reality. its not really a 2 way street... men are designed to have sex with offering women... women are the gatekeepers of sex , and the ball is firmly in their court.	Sex	Gender - General	2/30	6.667

As a man, whom has not been successful in most relationships and has not had sex with anyone before, I'd give up a city of gold to have a woman whom has never taken the seed of another man, and whom will stay loyal to me. I know I don't deserve that, though, because I look up porn and masterbate to it all the time. The reason why girls go out and have sex with multiple partners is because they are attracted to behaviors and attitudes that few men have, and when women find a men whom turns them on, it's a rare find for them, and it's much harder for them to pass it up. On the other hand, there are few men whom know game good enough to get a steady stream of women into their beds, and men whom are good with women don't really need to stay with one partner, so when the greatest victory men experience is having women submit to him and have sex with them, why would he be loyal? Especially when women reward him and find him even more attractive for having had sex with multiple women. Women generally have a submissive nature toward whom she is attracted to (wants to be conquered), while men build their confidence and manliness upon getting what they want - sex and women, LOTS OF SEX AND WOMEN, so dominant and masculine men get the girls, while more gentle natured or less confident men end up looking up porn, masturbating or abstaining until marriage. I'll be honest, I could have a woman whom has had sex before (especially since I'm spraying my seed all over), it's just I don't want her to choose and prefer the other men over me. Even if she has DNA of other guys in her, I'd still want my DNA to be the strongest and be the most desirable to her. My roommate has a girlfriend right now whom was married to an abusive husband, and she implies very strongly that she prefers the turn on of dominant abuse compared to the gentle and compliant nature of my roommate. Being in a relationship like that would depress most men and strip them of confidence and manliness. The strength of men comes from women, for what is a man without a woman and family? Women aren't less as human beings, nor are they less in importance, but they are inferior in authority of men. Even so, women should never underestimate their effect on men. So many things that make a man confident, masculine and attractive are built upon the submissive and gentle nature of women.	Sex, Woman	Gender - General	10/443	2.257

it's already too late for a lot of women because they refuse to have anti-feminist marches in opposition and shut down the degenerate feminists. They are the only ones that can do it now. The laws and media are such that men will get shut down before they can really do anything. Women need to fight to deplatform feminists at every turn. Throw in a few pro men marches and fight to end the current system that sticks it's nose in the marriage and maybe men will be able to slowly put faith back in women. Also if women think them sleeping around is okay and then expect a husband they are dead wrong. If you are sleeping around then what makes you more valuable to a man than a prostitute? You show that you have no value in your body, have insecurity, and aren't very good at planning ahead. No man truly wants to go down on a woman knowing he is going places many other men have been. It's just disgusting. I love this woman because she knows how men think and knows what she is talking about. Here's some more scientific studies that back her up. A study came out that the amount of partners a man has is tied to his happiness. Every partner a guy has the more endorphins (happy hormones) are released in the brain. That's why men do it, it's biology, we don't do it just because.....They ran the same thing on women and the amount of partners had zero effect on their long term happiness. They just do it just to do it, I guess. Women aren't dumb but the societal norms we have today are. Another thing that proves this is, women are supposed to think things through before sex . Men are suppose to have the discipline in everything else and women are supposed to learn to have discipline when it comes to sex . Yet today a woman is just as likely to cheat on you as a man is today. Men have biology, what are women's excuse? Firstly, women care about the quality of the relationship more than the quantity of partners, but it's hard to have a good quality relationship, because the psyche is complicated, as a result, a woman may end up having many relationships until she can find the right guy who will fit well with her personality, and know how to please her sexually and satisfy her emotional needs, and it's her right, and shouldn't be shamed for having many relationships, also it's very small possibility to find the right partner for you from the first try.Secondly, you say that " when it came to women the amount of partners didn't have effect on their long term happiness " because most likely those partners didn't know how to please them sexually, it's more complicated to please a woman than to please a man, men mostly think about pleasing themselves, you say "men need to have discipline in everything but sex while women need to have discipline in sex " I disagree, why throw responsibility on women when it comes to sex and avoid your own responsibility when you are participating in it? Men need to man up.Lastly, what do you mean by "men have biology and women no"? that's false.	Sex, Woman	Gender - General	5/208	2.404

Sweetie, don't you think it's sexist to allow men to sleep with as many women as they want and expect women to be celibate? I don't care how different men and women are, having a set of moral standards for one sex and another set for the other is oppressive. Think about women who already realized they won't find the man they deserve. Do they not have the right to have sex ? Shall they be virgins forever? And if they are divorced and can't find good men, shall they give up the pleasure of sex for the rest of their lives? Another problem stemming from this oppression of women: in countries where women are raised believing it is shameful for women to have sex outside of marriage, men complain that their wives are terrible in bed. Then they go to other women, mostly foreign women, who will do those things their wives won't do. A woman just can't win. If she is experienced in bed and likes sex she is a whore. If otoh she doesn't like sex much or lacks the experience to please a man (for no fault of her own, mind you), she is deemed frigid or bad in bed. You are not doing your gender a favor by promoting these ideas.	Gender, Sex, Woman	Gender - General	8/215	3.721
Shahrazad Saied if any man is getting married to a woman who is horrible in bed and they have a problem with that then they shouldn't have gotten married in the first place lol that's common sense. As for the man whore vs women whore statement I have to agree. Both men and women should be looked at equally based on their body count but unfortunately that's not the way society looks at it. Most male and females have respect for a male who can get with many women ONLY because it's more difficult to get with women compared to women getting with men and can you really blame them? The last thing a man wants to marry is a nun. Nuns aren't promiscuous, don't sleep around. So...no your theory is wrong IMHO.Opening the door to sex should be taken seriously by the woman and the womans job is make the man prove that he is worthy. How does a man prove he is worthy, he communicates it and then over time (a number of dates that share truthful conversations) his actions match his talk. The womans job is to be discerning and question him on his past relationships. If he claims to have none, its a red flag, if he claims his last relationship lasted a short time (red flag), if he refuses to talk details about why they broke up (red flag). No actual names (red flag). Hides his phone when it rings (red flag).A man cannot discuss his past without slipping up eventually, but a woman knows if she asks about it, the date may be over and she wont ask so she can say later, he's a pig, he only wanted one thing, etc.. I don't care how many relationships the woman has had, I can tell by her stories and her answers to my questions what her nature is, i can tell by her home, her grooming, her achievements, etc. If she takes good care of herself, and kids, or others, but if she has had lots of relationships it only tells me she favors being very social and likes to flirt, but that doesn't make her a nun and it doesn't make me think she is unworthy. She may appear a bit more 'easy' but then if she is regal she will not hesitate to put the wolfish men in their place and abandon them. As far as relationships go... I always told my daughters its far better to be on your own than take a guy who doesn't reciprocate your efforts towards them. Relationships must be balanced to last. There are too many guys that take and take and they are not worth any investment. It always ends in feelings of low self esteem (why didn't he love me, am i not worthy of love, etc.) when it should have never started (because all the signs were there, your friends told you not to date him and you refused to simply question him without getting evasions for answers). The most attractive thing going for a woman is the fact she is at peace and doesn't need me (has hobbies, friends to hang out with, likes to read and takes time instead of rushing around). I want to come home to peace. If she is constantly feeling anxious and needy, its a major turn off, just FYI. I'll bet the women feel the same way. They dont want an angry man, a petulant child waiting to be served and worshiped, they want a man who takes care of business and is calm, and when he gets her things she mentions wanting (she knows she is cared for).Relationships are like a couple dancing together. The longer the it goes on the more it is meshes. The wife and husband cannot be understood often and if you listen to what the wife or husband says and witness the answer or actions of the other it doesn't make sense, but the husband knows what the wife meant to say, and the wife knows the meaning of the husbands actions and words and they are as one mind.	Promiscuous, Red, Sex, Woman	Ideological and Political Identity - General, Ethnicity - Native-American, Gender - Female sexuality, Gender - General	16/583	2.744

I think the internet is an echo chamber. Most people that are experiencing bad things in their life tend to post more online. People that enjoy their life tend to not post things on the internet (reddit, forums, etc). There's so much negative shit on the internet and perhaps it's because of negativity bias. All the men on the MGTOW, Red Pill, Incel stuff, many of the posts I see are very negative. I always question, who are the people posting behind the keyboard. Are they truly credible? Do they have their shit together in life, do they clean their own room? Or is it just people who go outside infrequently?When it comes to Amazon, more people are likely to post a negative review if something bad happens as opposed to a positive review. More people post bad shit about their lives or viewpoints than the good cause people enjoying their lives aren't on the internet posting things as frequently. Anyone can easily bias themselves on anything with selective information bias. It's an issue with the current age we live in where there is complete accessibility of all sorts of info through the internet. If you think women are horrible, you can google hundreds of posts about it. If you think men are horrible, you can google all sorts of post on the worst of men. All reinforcing the bias one may already have. If you're consuming content or information the worst of women or the worst of men on a consistent basis than it skews perception. In normal day to day life, people are chill and cool. I don't get all these skewed perceptions of reality people ascribe too. I decided when I was young to wait til marriage but I ended up losing my virginity to a guy I really liked who didn't even want to call me his girlfriend. After that, things went downhill and I had casual sex with two more guys. It made me unhappy because I had lost respect for myself. There was no connection and it was purely physical, which left me empty inside. When I connected my unhappiness to the fact that I was getting validation from being considered hot by guys, I decided to stop. I am now in a much better state of mind because I have self respect. You can choose to not be promiscuous , and a guy can still leave. I'm sure there are alot of people who didn't have a lot of sex with others, and chose to settle with one person and they still broke up or cheated on one another. You have to understand there's nothin you can do, that will be able to make someone stay. If what you are saying is right, then why are there so many divorce rate? Stop trying to impose your own ideas onto people just to restrict them of their freedom. Everyone is free to sleep with anyone they want and it doesn't matter if you are woman or a man. There's nothing shameful about that. Sex is a beautiful and wonderful thing that you can express with anyone, you don't have to limit yourself and only express that experience with just one person. Ever thought, that maybe being with the same person, kissing the same person and having sex with the same person can be boring. In beginning, it is exciting because you guys have alot of expectations and so the attraction seems like it high. After awhile once you guys get used to one another, the attraction gradually starts to diminish. Then you have to constantly work hard to keep the attraction and relationship going. Attraction isn't something that is permanent. You can love someone and not be attracted to them. Now if you see yourself trying hard to forcibly try to spice up your relationship or try to forcibly make a relationship work, then that means that your relationship is boring and you are starting lose the attraction that you guys once had. Why you think people tend to say, that we were once happy , what happened. What happened was you guys loved the idea of a one another. You never loved the person, you loved what you expected of that person to do for you, to make you feel good about yourself. And that's what alot of people fail to realize is that if you only love someone because of what thet do and give you to make you feel special and happy. Then what happens if they stop providing what you are looking for, are you going to break up and resent them. If you do then it makes your love very conditional and it also makes you narcissistic. Because all you care about is wanting to feel special and you are addicted to that. That's what makes people think that they're in love with someone, when in reality you're simply attached and addicted to how they make you feel. That's a form of narcasstism. Women by nature ARE NOT designed to have multiple sex partners, once that Hymen is broken and that male DNA is inside her she begins to take on her male partners traits, this is why you might hear people say that married couple start to look like each other. There's a lot of shaming going on. In ones 20s people experience their lives and figure themselves out, they're getting out of university, finding jobs, making sense of dating and seeking pleasure. This is all a very healthy and normal life, any old person will encourage you to make the most of it. It's understandable to me that when you're in that growth period you're not going to 100percent chance upon the person you want to marry from the get go, in fact you're going to go through many trials and errors and even lose your momentum along the way and even your faith. I think we need to be realistic and educated when talking about these matters than villanising people who are only starting their adult lives out from their 20s.The comments demeaning women are motivated by envy through rejection. Dr Jordan Peterson talks quite clearly about how female natural selection (rejection and choosing a sexual partner) can deeply hurt a man's psyche. Shaming is a tactic used to possess those very women into submission. Women are becoming more selective and careful with settling down, that's the hard science of it. My parents in their day, finding marriage was a cultural pressure regardless. Now days most of us are well educated, we consider the decisions we make and so it naturally follows we will be more discriminatory with who we choose and if we are even ready. I haven't looked at many people and felt they were going to make good parents or partners to each other, so that says something, the divorce rates affirm this too. I see a lot of cognitive dissonance going on and I worry about the quality of intellect we have in these comments.	Old, Sexual	Age - Over 65s, Gender - General	2/291	0.687

I am sorry but I do not buy this. Promiscuous behavior does not happen because "women are becoming more selective when choosing a partner to settle down". salad salad getting to know someone first is not the exclusive signal for being selective, casually sleeping around whether one intends to be serious with someone or not actually plays a role in serving the function of natural selection. We know this because some one night flings turn into marriage and others are just one off experiences where the woman choose to move on to the next. Any interaction with the opposite sex (or same sex) plays a very real role in contributing to our natural selection mechanism. You're falling short on realising that intention to select doesn't equate to selection always. Our natural biology instructs us to test our options even without our awareness of what it is we are doing, perhaps it is merely the product of what we do that we come to an end in finding someone to settle down with or we stop knowing its time to be intentional and that can be but not always that we reduce our sleeping behaviours, some people are hyper testers whether they intend it or not ie fuck boys, "sluts"... The way you began your comment sounds motivated by something personal, try removing yourself from your own experience and looking at science, human behaviour. You may not like it, there's cases in which I don't either but this is the truth.	Sex, Woman	Gender - General	3/223	1.345

humanityandme I am primarily a mathematician in training so what I do is I always look at science. But, I think that you are missing a very important point here. You are assuming that the majority of men and women nowadays act promiscuous because of purely evolutionary reasons. However, the majority of people will never sit on a bench and reflect upon their inner biological workings and come to the conclusion that "the reason why I sleep around is because I try to select this ideal partner". They do it because of indoctrination and that is what society dictates us to do. The women I've casually slept with always argued something along the lines "I currently just want to have fun and nothing serious". It is a choice that they made. I've also had encounters where they would get attached to me or have some feelings in the primitive stage and they would then end the casual relationship because of their choice of not wanting anything serious at that time.I simply cannot see how sex is helping you determine your life partner. What do you gain from sleeping around with multiple people? How does that help you select your ideal partner?I at one point slept with three women in a casual relationship rotation. All three of them are out of my life at this point. I can tell you that I have gained nothing in terms of selecting my partner to settle down. I am precisely at the same point where I was when I only had sex with one woman in my first relationship.I can only tell you that with one woman I connected better, but that I could have told you without sleeping with her. The actual act of sex did not contribute anything to the connection. It was purely communication and compatibility of personality (i. e. common shared values, etc.). salad salad I did my degree in economics, if we must qualify how we think. You sleeping with those women taught you that they weren't for you because it did not work out, we must also consider as I was saying that in one's 20s hedonist pleasure seeking such as casual sex is prevalent regardless of indoctrination, even the most repressed societies display this behaviour no matter how strict the moral or practical reasons against doing so are. In the case you're explaining pleasure seeking is the priority, there is nothing inherently wrong with it, a person has the autonomy to at any time stop and choose someone to settle down with. If you're sleeping with people who don't want something serious then it's your responsibility to not engage, no one is holding a gun to your head and forcing you to engage, you are free to seek out women who fit your criteria elsewhere but nonetheless I stand by what I said in that women are choosing who they want to sleep with but you are changing the goal post on bringing in a different topic imposing that a woman should stop sleeping around because that is wasting her time in settling down, my assertion here is that this is simply the reality, people are human and a whole lot of them are practicing their right to sexual engagement with anyone they please and we can not sit around here telling them to stop because our egos are bruised.

humanityandme Earlier you mentioned that some one-night stands turn into marriage while others do not. How is a one-night stand a selection of a life-time partner or not? You gain nothing in terms of selection from sleeping around. You do not know that person at all. And one night stands are precisely that: A thing for a night. They do not end in marriage.Do you have any books or scientific articles to provide for you saying that in ones 20s it is natural to be promiscuous? And that even in primitive societies this is the case, regardless of moral values and indoctrination?And no. I have not learned that I do not want to be with the women I've slept in the past. Because those casual relationships are precisely what they were: From the beginning they served the purpose of pure pleasure without any commitment and without getting to know the person any deeper. That was the basis of these relationships. By your argument, prostitutes should be professional natural selectors when it comes to selecting life-partners. As you say it is a choice to seek pleasure or settling down. Precisely my point. Your case that women are sleeping around due to selecting the best partner is wrong and you said it yourself: They (and men) sleep around due to there choice and settle down due to their choice and not because their biological inner workings tells them to do so in their 20s. We are not slaves to our primitive evolutionary impulses. We were once. But we have a choice as a civilized society and we are not savages anymore. Simple as that and you said it yourself. Do not use evolution as an excuse for a societal trend and the choice why people in their youth sleep around. It is their choice and not that they cannot avoid it.	Nothing, Promiscuous	Age - Youngsters, Gender - Female sexuality	2/311	0.643

salad salad if we go to my initial comment my point was I am not going to condemn anyone for sleeping around. Did you have an issue with that, is what I'm trying to gather?Second, one night stands themselves don't lead to marriage, however subsequent interactions thereafter can. At no point have I claimed that sleeping around equates to finding an end mate, my initial comment statement something more nuanced that for those who take issue with women sleeping around and rejecting male candidates is something we should respect as their right to choose and for the bigger picture this means women and people will keep practicing discrimination (selection) until they find an end mate. Now whether sleeping around means no intention to settle down is not anything I contest, that in itself is precisely discriminatory selection where a person is choosing what to do with their reproduction functions.I've met my share of "fuck boys" but I'm not going to stand around generalising the entire male population and demeaning their sexual behaviour simply because they aren't choosing me, the empowered thing to do is shift my focus elsewhere which is to seek out the kind of man I want and/or in the appropriate spaces and see where that could lead. If it doesn't lead anywhere promising, then, thank you next.	Sexual	Gender - General	1/222	0.45

salad salad salad salad I can agree with everything you've said.As for being negatively implicated by hook up culture, I personally know its not easy to quickly jump back into the daring game with confidence because of fears regarding deceptive behaviour like you've mentioned and other negative consequences, my stress is purely on the notion that while I agree condemnation can help keep deceptive promiscuous behaviour regulated, that for those who are transparent with their promiscuity should not be condemned because that gives people full information to then make their next move in response to the move played. Do you agree?You've used the anecdote of the pressures of hook up culture and how that turned out being what that girl did not want, I empathise with her rather than condemn her for finding herself within hook up culture no matter how many men she has slept with, I think ideas promotion hook up culture are dangerous in this context. On the bright side, this girl learned and now can make the conscious effort to redeem herself in her dating life however I'm sure she will find herself troubled by judgmental men who can't embrace what her journey was and forgo the opportunity to seriously date someone who is otherwise worthy.To reiterate, I agree that hook up culture is pressuring people to behave promiscuously when they'd otherwise not want to do, this touches on the issue of consent arguably too which I think social leaders should put their focus into guiding people to be in touch with themselves and not the herd mentality, there's also the notion that people want to try and learn from the experience whether it hurts them or not and I am not sure if we can remove that choice. Second, if people are transparent in choosing a promiscuous lifestyle and in control of their intentions then that's their own business and shouldn't be used as ammunition to diminish their worth especially when it comes to choosing an end mate. A classic example of shaming women for excefisinf her right to sleep around is someone in the comment section brought up telegony, the theory whereby a woman's children resemble the traits of her previous sexual partners because sperm bonds to dna in her body, this commenter then said that this is why women who have slept with many men are " crazy " because her brain has been impeded too... I looked into the studies and my thought is that if this is a concrete theory then authorities would be sharing it or it'd be common knowledge... humanityandme Yes I agree that we should not shame people who are transparent with their promiscuous behavior. I am also a person who felt pressured to sleep around because that is expected of a man in his 20s. And I wanted to try it out myself. I can tell you that it was ok for some years. But at some point, I felt alone (even though I wasn't alone and I had women around me), there was a void inside of me, and even used (although I have not been used). From my personal experience I can say that it seems that deep down, at a very fundamental level I (not sure if I can say we to include all humans) desire something more intimate. I have read somewhere a similar comment where someone was shaming women for that. Telegony is actually new to me so I just read the Wikipedia article on telegony and from that it seems that no evidence has been found except in a 2014 which "reported a seemingly telegonic phenomenon in a fly". So this theory is inconclusive so far? I certainly will keep following this development of the theory.What are your thoughts on actually being with someone who was promiscuous ? To me such behavior usually signals the following thoughts:- I cannot trust this person since sleeping around signals relationship instability (of course people change but what if I invest 5 - 10 years into a relationship and then this person reverts back to being promiscuous ?)- sleeping around increases the chance of STDs and some STDs can still be transmitted using condoms- Do people actually lose the ability to intimately bond if treating sex casually?- Does this person seek the attention and validation from multiple people?- Sex and orgasm are highly intimate bonds between people due to the release of serotonin and oxytocin (the hormones which makes people fall in love). Kissing, cuddling and so on also releases these hormones. Thus, in essence you actually develop some emotional bond with every sexual partner you encounter. Will this person ever revert back and leave me for a previous sexual partner just because of the intimate bond? Will I ever do this? You also sometimes here people say "I am confused between loving person a and person b". Which to me indicates that promiscuity actually might harm your future serious love-life. What are your thoughts on promiscuous behavior and how it changes people's personality. What about their psychology? salad salad I think it's impotent to consider why a person has slept with an x amount of people, pressure, loneliness, belief that it would be a serious relationship, trauma... All such things can be at play and not define whether a person will remain promiscuous .I once had a partner who wanted a "let's see how things go" relationship, they were open to other partners and it put me in a constant state of anxiety and fear that I would be left, wasn't good enough and therefore had to dilute the bond I felt with him and keep the rest of my emotions free and receptive to others just in case, this was my first experience of being affected by hook up culture and for a while feeling very fearful of bonding with one person in future and therefore always keeping a part of me held back or in other cases thinking it was normal to go fast into dating experiences. I have questioned whether this has primed me to be promiscuous (I wasn't promiscuous ) but if one simply pauses and takes time to detox their life such as self reflection, healthy habits (working on oneself) then I think the buzz for promiscuity will die down and in place of that you can put in place the concerted effort to consciously go into dating with the intention of having one person. Also it's not just promiscuity, but emotional bonds with other people from a number of serious relationships someone had can even play into this inability to focus on just one person.I think mindfully setting the intention, knowing why you're doing can work with brain plasticity. It's like forming a habit.Ultimately it's down to trial and error. End of the day if someone doesn't meet you half way or if you don't then there is no pairing/relationship occuring and one has to let it go and move forwards unless there's conscious effort to recognise a problem and fix it. People may not realise the consequence of promiscuity until they find themselves consciously wanting one person but struggling to discipline their learned behaviour which they no longer identify with.I'm not the expert on this though. humanityandme ”I think it’s impotent to consider why a person has slept with an x amount of people, pressure, loneliness, belief that it would be a serious relationship, trauma... All such things can be at play and not define whether a person will remain promiscuous.”. Well look. I think that it is important to consider the cause behind it. Let us assume that it was loneliness. Well then, to me that indicates that this person has some issues. Let us say I am in a committed relationship with a person who has loneliness-issues. What if I have to go on a business trip for 5 months? Will she be loyal or due to her loneliness invite another man into her life.The things that you mentioned are indicators of emotionally unstable people. This again is helpful to guide you in dating people who have the qualities that you desire in a partner. I. e. I desire emotional stability in a woman and not a female who shows symptoms of borderline personality disorder.From what I’ve gained about you is that you rely far too much on trial and error. I believe that is a bit naive and it could get you hurt easily even though you can avoid it (and from what I take you have been hurt in the past). Such a red-flag system is quite helpful even though imperfect as you point out. But in the majority of cases it helps you pin-point the partners you do not want. And if you get one wrong by prejudice, then that is okay. It’s a far better system than brute rote trial and error.I empathize with you on your experience. I myself was not promiscuous until my very first relationship which ended 7 years ago in her cheating after three years of commitment and it set me on this path. As you see and I mentioned earlier, most of us do not want to be promiscuous. It does not seem to reflect our ”nature”. It is often a reaction to our own personal experiences and what society expects or what the norm is nowadays.And yes you are right that with introspection one can come to an evaluation of what makes one truly happy: Many sexual partners? or on intimate partner who stays with you through good and bad times?But how many people have this ability of introspection? I would say, from my own personal experience, the majority of people are not capable. They simply just live without thinking deeper and complain about their unhappiness.I’ve also talked to elderly and asked them what makes them truly happy. Most of the time they give me the following answer: Deep and strong relationships with family members, friends, partner (love-life), children. So far none of them has mentioned being with multiple sexual partners. There is also a Ted Talk somewhere on this. I enjoyed discussing this topic with you since I am at a point where I reflect upon my past and need some guidance. Jordan Peterson panders to what young women want to hear, and you fell for it. You know how you can tell? Pretty much only women care what he has to say... that should be your clue. He feeds women's ego. He's a clever little weasel though, I'll give him that.. since he likes to use evolutionary science terms to manipulate those young female minds.It's sad too, because by this single comment of yours, you already seem like you could be smarter than he is, but still fell for it anyway. But I suppose some of the things he says, is kind of like a drug for women so they don't think clearly (similar to the dopamine hit that ordinary Instagram e-thots get from attention or praises for their beauty photos).What good ol' boy Jordie isn't telling you though, is that your selection options for male partners is drying up in society today, not the other way around. Does he warn of this at all? I don't know, because I can't stand listening to propaganda in general, especially not from a "professor". I prefer reality to be my teacher, not just theory.Now certainly your options for sex partners isn't what's drying up, but it is for marriage. You'll see that I'm right in time, and that Mr. Peterson helped f*ck up a lot of people's lives with his irrelevant pablum that panders to the female ego only.Anyway, the real world will teach you what university propaganda brainwashing indoctrination will not, so there's hope yet. peppenguin I've seen some of Peterson's videos on female selection. I personally think that he is a bit too harsh on males (but this might be because his male audience is not the classical standard of a "masculine" man). And a bit naive when it comes to the dating scene. He assumes that females are in dating for purely selective reasons. But truth be told, many reject for fun, many reject for looks, many reject for money, many reject because they have already a hand full of dating partners and cannot handle another one at the time. His reasoning applies in a world where the core assumption is that females operate in the dating scene primarily for selecting a partner to settle down. This is too discrepant from today's casual dating hookup culture. Thus, none of Peterson's arguments apply. It could also be that the females that he is talking about are at the stage of settling down, then his arguments do apply. But they definitely do not apply to modern young females of the West where settling down is pushed towards the end of one's 20s/early 30s or beyond. Today's dating scene is at its fundamental core to be promiscuous and have fun. I've yet to meet a person who says "I want to date multiple people at the same time because that increases my chances of settling down". It is simply not the case. They do it because they are young and that's expected from them at that age, they are at university, they fear commitment, they fear abandonment, and of course over-sexualised media such as the music industry and movies have made sleeping around the norm. But all of this behavior comes at a cost and as you said: "Anyway, the real world will teach you what university propaganda brainwashing indoctrination will not, so there's hope yet. peppenguin you evidently aren't familiar with Jordan Petersons work, I can tell because you've not referenced how he's highly critical of women and feminism and dedicated a large chunk of his work to the issue, in fact he's even said himself that his primary audience are young men whos masculinity is under threat. Because I'm a critical thinker I will extract what's reasonable from any and every thinker, Petersons segment on natural selection is concrete science and I'm not going to engage in your cognitive dissonance that this is what's not playing out in reality. Also the very notion that I'm a feminist and postmodernist would be enough to give Peterson an aneurism, it's women like me he absolutely loathes and considers cancers to society, all of this to say, nice attempt at trying to control my confidence to express myself by engineering an idea that I'm a loyal Peterson follower. I can see I bother you. I don't sleep around, I'm also going to be 27 this year. There's absolutely no sheltering from the outside world by this stage. I've noticed people with your mindset seem to think just because someone has been university educated that it means they don't engage with life and learn skills practically, there's so many hours in a day, a week, a month and a year, life evolves within that time and you spend the rest of your time 'living'... As for me allegedly lacking options for marriage, sorry to burst your bubble but I've had men who want to marry me however I've not felt well suited to them and that's a dangerous way to go into marriage through forcing oneself or being forced, to raise a family if one isn't comfortable with the pairing. That's the first rule my upbringing instilled in me. All I've gathered from your comment is "you're a woman who men can't settle down and that bothers me because I've been personally affected therefore here's all the ways I'm going to attempt to make you feel just as inferior and flawed as I do so that you will be obedient to my will"Quite heavy low IQ stuff to be reading on the Internet, sounds like it's coming from an Incel.End of the day we can spend all the time criticising women but time should be going into self development, being a better person and eventually able to seek out and be a good partner.	Woman	Gender - General	1/408	0.245

salad salad the factors I listed that could lead to promiscuous behaviour are arbitrary and not all inclusive, there are many more factors to consider. The point I was making that it's worth investigating why someone was promiscuous .At no point did I disagree that close human relationships aren't important and what humans are in pursuit of within their life time, so I am not sure why you had to explain that to me. Did I give the impression I lack awareness of that? Lastly my mention of trial and error is exactly what dating is about, obviously one accumulates knowledge along the way about red flags and can avoid them as they go along, that's a given and I didn't feel the need to explain thst but since it's popped up then there's my explanation- people grow, they're going to learn from the past and not throw themselves into every situation with red flags.Petersons comments on natural selection still hold true when it comes to females choosing which men to be promiscuous with, that in itself is part of the natural selection process. But the main issue Peterson was making is that a woman chooses (ideally) who she will carry a child with, she is the one who has to live with the consequences of carrying the child for 9 months and if she doesn't have a strong partner and support network then this will affect her and the child's wellbeing. There's another thinker called Dr Gabor Mate, who talks about how pregnant women who are stressed and don't feel secure as well as parents, no matter how loving they may be, end up negatively implicating the child's development and so I can fully support a woman's strong sense of being careful about who she chooses as an end mate. I wish you well on your self reflection.	Promiscuous, Red, Woman	Ideological and Political Identity - General, Ethnicity - Native-American, Gender - Female sexuality, Gender - General	8/310	2.581
humanityandme No you did not give the impression that you lack awareness of the importance of close human relationships. I was discussing the long-term risks of promiscuous behavior in general. Part-taking in sleeping around rather than building a close relationship with someone within our youth might be damaging since youth fades and your overall market value pretty much decreases after you hit 30 in most cases. You might end up without a deep connection and that can be a miserable situation to find yourself in. Unless of course, you are a person who juggles three healthy relationships at the same time but that is a very small amount of the population and most people do go for monogamy.	Promiscuous	Gender - Female sexuality	1/118	0.847

salad salad personally I don't have time for promiscuity, I've always valued close relationships and have had one.An anecdote I can offer is that most women desire to have a close relationships with one partner, but they struggle to find that for various reasons and so find themselves in promiscuous lifestyles until they meet someone in or outside of casual hook up culture. I'd go as far as to argue that sleeping around is something women do to fill the times where they don't have a partner, they go out partying or feel they need physical connection and so they sleep around, its a side lifestyle not the primary lifestyle itself. This is what I think people are misunderstanding.	Promiscuous	Gender - Female sexuality	1/120	0.833
salad salad I commented not because I lack confidence in finding someone but to defend against the tarnished image promiscuous people are getting and the false assumptions made about their motivations which would apparantly imply they don't care to settle down.Ultimately while it's important to investigate what's going on and how to navigate going forward, what's valuable is just doing what you know is right which is working on yourself and seeking the right people than contemplating, complaining and debating. pegpenguin1. Science says what it says. Pick up any science book and have a read of the reproduction narrative, we can argue both parties play a role in the process because they are both in control of their consent. In which case, is science pandering to women? This is the first time I've come accross someone making the case that Peterson is pandering to women, no he's just referencing facts and it's not some marketing attempt to appeal to his listeners if we know the science first without his spin.2. You expressed yourself in an egotistical tone and are now taking issue with my assertive tone, I can't please anyone with hypocrisy issues. Let's call a spade a spade .3. My comment here was to provide nuance into why women may be sleeping around and to provide alternative discourse on why they are doing it contrary to popular beliefs. For example if a woman is having casual sex , it could simply be for hedonistic pleasure seeking needs but nonetheless she still values a monogamous emotionally strong partnership. You are free to either take that view or not and move on. What matters is what we/YOU are doing to situate yourself in an advantageous position to find an end mate, knowing what you know. Ie how can I become a more attractive candidate for marriage, where do I need to go to find such people, should I be on the Internet preventing someone from practising their own autonomy when I myself have my own and can find women who align to what I value in partnership.... salad salad I agree with everything you just said. You're also way smarter than he is, lol.Sad though that people fall for his babbling gibberish. That's all it is to me. There's much more intelligent people to spend my time listening to, that I can actually learn life-lessons from. Everything he says is basically redundant. I mean, if you subtract the biased brainwashing aspects of his opinion. I mean, it isn't a part of the real world. Basically, his talk about men vs. women is chock full of mental masturbation as far as I'm concerned. I guess it makes for good university discussion, but that's it. A lot of "higher-learning" and big words, with no substance behind it. It doesn't have a place in the real world.In the real world, what is actually happening... is that promiscuous women are basically on a binge of instant-gratification on all fronts ( sex , attention, other forms of ego-trips to feel self-important), because of the powers that social media provides them today. Then later in life, while their looks start to wane, they will attempt to attach to a beta male provider for "stability" finally (assuming they even can, that is).In fact "humanityandme" just admitted to be a great, walking living example right now. She's 27, and about to hit the wall, which is usually around age 30. Now after sleeping around in her younger years, she's looking for a beta male sucker to develop a life partner with. What a joke. I mean, that people still think smart people like me think that's not what's actually happening, and that women are the one's being ultra selective at this juncture, lol.But many of these potential beta male suitors are waking up too, and will be aware that they're just being used as per female desperation as an ATM or security blanket to oppose female loneliness. This is the sad truth in society today, that Jordan Peterson I'm sure would never touch with a ten-foot pole, because it will cause him to be demonized further (socially unacceptable in public culture). Either that, or he actually is rather clueless and oblivious. I tend to think he probably knows better. As I said, he's a clever little weasel. In fact, from what I hear, he avoided being debated by certain MGTOW content creators from YouTube, so he probably knew already that he would be in a lose-lose situation, and just get cornered too quickly by that pesky little thing, called truth & reality. peppenguin I've observed this same behavior that women tend to live their life out in their youth and the moment they approach 30 they tend to settle down. I even have female friends who admit this to me. This is nothing new. This is taught from a young age to men and women. Even my own parents encouraged me to sleep around just because your young and at university. But they often are not informed about the consequences of such advice as I pointed out in an earlier comment where I linked two papers and a Wikipedia article on BPD.I adapted a rule: If a woman does not settle down with me within her youth, then she does not deserve me to be there for her when she is "older".And I am not doing this because I'm a butt-hurt male. It is very well-known that in society females are most valuable between their teenage years and until they hit 30-something. Men are disposable in society during this life-span. And Peterson actually said this himself. Women know this. And thus they live out their lives in their youth and settle down. So I am here asking myself: Why would I settle down with someone who thinks this malevolently and evil?Now, I do not subscribe to red pill philosophy or MGTOW. I do watch videos and read upon it and I can definitely say that a lot of what these philosophies say does fall in place with my experience and observation. But staying away or holding that much anger against women and ranting is not healthy. And IMO staying totally away from female affection and a long-term commitment is not healthy, especially in your later years. So far I am 26 and still trying to figure these things out. I still participate in dating even if I get hurt. But I definitely know how to spot the potential problematic females and kick them out of my life pretty fast (of course this becomes more difficult if you develop feelings for such a person but that should not prevent you from having self-respect).And I will try again and again but with defenses up so that I do not end up in a chaotic life where I lose my emotional sanity (due to females who destroyed themselves emotionally by sleeping around), or be divorced and lose my financial "empire" because divorce courts favor females as of today. That is all I gain from red pill philosophy and MGTOW. Defend yourself in a proper way and still try.If at the end of my life I will not find my so called unicorn. It's fine. At least I tried and never gave up and I know that I was simply born in the wrong time period and lived in the wrong society.	Age, Nothing, Red, Woman	Ideological and Political Identity - General, Age - General, Age - Youngsters, Ethnicity - Native-American, Gender - General	7/471	1.486

humanityandmeEdit: I have tried posting this comment a numerous of times and link to the papers. However, youtube removes my comments. Thus, google for the following:(i) Sexual behavior in borderline behavior by Sansone(ii) Borderline Personality Symptomatology, Casual Sexual Relationships, and Promiscuity by Sansone and WiedermanShould be the first results on GoogleEND OF EDITLook at the abstract of these two papers and then read the Wikipedia article on borderline personality disorder:(i)(ii)Wikipedia article on BDP (read the symptoms):[ Again youtube does not let me post links so read the Wikipedia page on borderline personality disorder (BPD) ]I hope that I convinced you that we should judge and criticize people who act promiscuous in order to mild down this damaging phenomenon of casual dating hookup culture since most people do not use their brains to think this far. If we don't, then the majority of people you will come into contact in dating will show signs from the BDP symptoms list. Do you want to have such people around you? In your society?The reason why single young women act promiscuous is irrelevant to me unless they are one of the few humans who truly are not monogamous by nature (then we should not criticize them and accept them for what they are; however, if they desire this non-critical treatment, then it is their obligation to provide me evidence that promiscuity is inherently built in them and not that they feel like being promiscuous). If they act promiscuous out of boredom or do not want to be alone, then that is a sign of some deeper inner psychological problem. And I will always advice people (men and women) to stay away from promiscuous behavior and point them to articles.The second paper clearly shows that promiscuous and casual hookup behavior shows signs of BDP symptoms. Now, looking at the list of BPD symptoms should ring some alarm bells especially since in today's modern age where sex is tolerated without criticism (the same side you are defending) it is highly difficult to find a person who has not been sleeping around (including myself).My point is: sleeping around comes with emotional and psychological consequences. Social leaders and educators should inform the younger people about these risks rather than encourage and push towards more free irresponsible sexual life-styles. And there is an explosion in casual hookup culture due to social media, easier communication, higher turnover of meeting new people, societal push towards consequence free sex, no commitment relationships, over-sexualised media, apps like Tinder, you name it.Edit: From the article I presented people who are promiscuous actually do get some truthful tarnish. Common is to say "Women lose the ability to emotionally bond if they engage in too much casual sex/have too many sexual partners", which look again at the BPD symptoms list and there is some truth to it. They have a habit to replace a partner in critical situations rather than repair. Are impulsive, and so on.People also tend to say that women who have slept around are "damaged goods". Again a primitive way of articulating things but BPD symptomatology is in essence a damaged emotional and psychological state. In short, we usually say that such a woman is "crazy" due to her emotional instability. salad salad Okay good, your post finally showed up. You seem to have a good head on your shoulders. And at least you're aware of any potential pitfalls. My rants have more to do with women thinking that men aren't aware, like we're all just slow and stupid, and should worship the ground they walk on now more than ever, and be lucky enough to kiss their feet given the chance. I don't mind deprogramming that, even if it's just for intellectual sport (trolling).I actually love women, which is why I get irritated by useless propaganda that feeds them ear-candy (ie. Peterson Pandering, etc). I'd rather be harsh, even if they hate me for it after, rather than just tell them what they want to hear, or what feeds their ego. I don't mind. I'm not here to suck up to anybody. And at least it could wake them up to reality, and what's actually going on, rather than reinforcing university talking point gibberish.Obviously, you already are aware, as a young man, so that's nothing new to you anyway, and so perhaps how I say things sounds like nothing but red pill rage. In other words, it's redundant to you at this point (as it would be to me as well).Actually, I have a young niece that's living with me currently, that's just out of school, as well as an even younger niece (baby) just starting to observe this crazy world with wide eyes, so some of the concerns young women will have, affect me indirectly down the road, in a way. I guess I can't escape them entirely, lol.As for me personally, I don't actually want to get married, or have children of my own, just for the sake of "settling down" or to have a family. I used to though. I mean, when I was naive enough to believe in that idealistic fantasy growing up.	Crazy, Nothing, Red	Ideological and Political Identity - General, Age - Youngsters, Ethnicity - Native-American, Physical Identity - Physical (and Mental) Impairments	5/321	1.558
salad salad Btw, when I say an idealistic fantasy, I mean finding a woman I love, that will love me back likewise. I no longer believe that will happen. Sure I could force it by dating excessively, etc to look for "a mate", but that path doesn't interest me. And as you said, all this promiscuity is detaching women from properly pair-bonding long-term anyway. Most are in it just for a sense of security as their looks fade, and not much else. Hardly "enticing" knowing that.	Woman	Gender - General	1/86	1.163

peppenguin I see where you are coming from. Well to be fair these men who put women on a pedestal as they say make the matter even worse and the so called beta orbiters too. But these men would do everything just to sleep with a woman which just reinforces their behavior. I've seen this many times and I have lost a handful of women just because they didn't take my criticism and moved on to a more submissive man. Let me tell you one of my recent experiences. There was a female who I got to know and we connected pretty well. We hooked up very fast and said that we do not want anything serious. It all went well for about a month. At some point we went together to a party and at the after party she asked another guy in front of me to sleep at her place. I objected to this and took her out of the apartment and told her that her behavior is disrespectful towards me and disgusting. She simply replied "You should share me and I expect you to not react when I take home another guy in front of you". Funny thing she at the time would seek my affection whenever she was feeling sad or depressed and needed me for cuddling, etc. So she showed some huge signs of emotional instability disorder aka borderline personality disorder (Impulsive and extreme reactions towards mild criticism, one day affection behavior towards me and the next day she would be "cold", wanting to date multiple people at the same time, anxiety, insecurities; I can tell you that the entire experience with her personality was no fun at all). Well I disagreed with all of this since I consider this respect if I invest my time in going out with her and she however flirts with other men in front of me and tries hooking up with other men and if she cannot find anyone only then I will get her attention and sex. It is simply not mannered and disrespectful behavior no matter what form of sexual relationship we have going on. If we go out together, we stay together that evening end of the discussion. So I broke off contact and told her that her behavior was bitchy and disrespectful (I sensed that she was trying to make me her little slave so to speak and see how far she can toy with me/how much I would tolerate; at that point I asked myself: What did she bring to our casual relationship except sex? Nothing but problems). After a month I showed some weakness and I contacted her and asked her for a talk because I was feeling sad about the situation. She only replied "I do not need a talk and you made some bad accusations towards me. You also cannot expect me to waste my precious time just to make you feel better.". At this point I wished her all the best in life and I deleted her and since ignored her. Point of the case being. They are entitled to so much and since they can replace someone instantly, they do not even care for reflection about their behavior and introspection. I hope that you have read the abstract of the earlier papers I posted and you inform your nieces about the dangers of promiscuous behavior in today's society. So that they do not grow up and show symptoms of insecurity, emotional and psychological instabilities such as my above experience with that unstable woman. Educate your nieces and instill in them some real good old fashioned lady like values. About marriage: I do not think that one should marry. I do not see the purpose of it. salad salad Sorry for the belated reply... had to tend to some business.Wow, that cunt sounds awful (am I too blunt?). Prerequisite for me would be a good heart, and that girl would fail miserably. I'm sorry she put you through those emotional games. She does seem like a real piece of work. Let her be someone else's problem. I know, it sucks, but it's for the best.My niece is a thousands times better, which is probably an understatement. She is attractive, fit, and most of all, empathetic and caring. She also listens to me, which I'm not used to from people. The other one is a baby, so who knows? lolLoneliness is not really a concern of mine. I get lonely maybe like once or twice a year for about a few minutes or something like that. To be honest, a lot of married people are more lonely. But I have a personality that copes well being alone, and realize that's not common , so I can still empathize with others. My older brother for example, would probably go crazy if he had to be alone for too long. pegpenguin You can be as blunt as you like. No worries, I have self-respect so I moved on pretty fast and it cost me a month to know who she truly is. Another man might invest a year or two of his life (even more when she settles down). So I see it as dodging a bullet.I agree that having a good heart is a quality that I desire in a woman too no matter what form of relationship I have with her. I am glad to hear that your niece has well-mannered qualities! Hopefully the little one will be the same :D.With loneliness I did not mean being alone. I enjoy being alone. Taking walks alone, sleeping alone, not having to compromise.But from time to time there is that void inside that craves a deep bonding connection with someone.Don't you think that as you get older you wish to have a partner at your side. A female best friend so to speak with whom you've shared some intimacy throughout life?This is a concern that I have that if I someday decide to go on the path of monk that I will regret it and be unhappy once I am old because I do not have that female next to me. And this is because I have spoken to some elderly people and the majority say that they are happy because they have one another and that they went through the good and bad together. salad salad This may sound strange and ironic, but if I lived hundreds or thousands of years for a lifetime, then I would be concerned about companionship in my future. Not so much in the line of "time is running out" because life is short, so I must find someone for when I get old soon. In other words, the opposite how most people probably feel."I agree that having a good heart is a quality that I desire in a woman too no matter what form of relationship I have with her. I am glad to hear that your niece has well-mannered qualities!"A good example is like just this morning. I was drinking my coffee in peace, sitting on the couch, staring out the window at the sunshine (like a cat basically). Well my niece went to her room at first for about ten seconds, but then decided to sit and talk with me instead. We talked for over an hour about everything under the sun. Honestly, this is her empathetic heart at work. I mean, it's not like I'm sitting there with tears running into my coffee or something, lol. I'm pretty stoic. salad salad I'm familiar with the symptoms that show up in BPD, but correlation between BPD and promiscuity does not equal causation so you're making a logically fallacious claim because you're looking at behaviour in the promiscuous population and because it falls under a symptom of BPD you are claiming those who are promiscuous are BPD when there's a list of other behaviours that go hand in hand and brain chemistry. This doesn't even need to go that deeply into a diagnosed mental illness. If humans have a sex drive why is it difficult to understand their desire to satisfy their sex drive? Why does it need to mean something more? Sex is a base pleasure, if people are going to follow their hormonal code then that's nothing surprising. It also doesn't need to correlate with their ability to find someone, people satisfy their sex drive casually until they finally meet their end mate and stay. I've seen it plenty of times.I think you raise a fair point on how habitual promiscuous behaviour can prime the brain to lose attention towards monogamy but I think people can also compartmentalise a casual experience vs a serious life decision where the intention is to stay. Unlike animals we can think and act accordingly. peppenguin I respect your decision for not searching companionship. If you came to that conclusion by yourself and not by being manipulated during a vulnerable phase where you were hurt, then you can be sure that it comes from deep within you and your own individual desire. Which will lead you to happiness and peace.I myself am pretty stoic. I naturally developed this since I was raised in a different culture (born in Romania and raised after age 11 in Germany) where I was not accepted for the first 8 years in society and was pushed around. Thus, I needed to act "strong" in front of my "enemies" but then let out the emotions at home for example in bed.It's really nice to here the lovely stories about your niece! Sounds like the two of you have a loving bond which is admirable.BTW do you watch George Bruno on YouTube? Since you spoke of stoicism and he preaches that philosophy.	Age	Age - General	1/163	0.613

pegpenguin I don't believe that shit-testing women makes the matter any better. I already find the casual dating scene too chaotic and unstable. I do not want to add to this problem anymore. I want to make it better for both parties. I see the emergence of tips and tricks for both genders on how to date and in my opinion this makes the matter just worse and it starts an unnecessary hatred between the two genders. I believe that we are in this together and communication and discussion between the two genders involved is the best approach and not through strategic defense or offense mechanisms. Dating should be easy for crying out loud and not a part-time job where we have to read fucking books and watch coaches or self-help crap. It is a mating process and not a god damn strategy game. It's always a chase and the power is imbalanced (women hold it).For those who do not believe me, then try the following: Go with a female to a club. You as a male ask all females if they want to have sex with you immediately and go home with you now. Chances are you won't get anyone (if you're lucky then yes). Let the girl do it. She will have many men who agree to this. BTW: it is actually a fun experiment to do, you get to laugh afterwards about the reactions with your female friend :D.So if a woman behaves in shit-testing me or playing any dating games, then I immediately stop talking to her because that shows me immaturity (which I find highly unattractive) and that she is just a little sheep manipulated by her friends and blog articles like "5 ways to make him chase you". Such people are not worth my time.I am very radical to this. It's either you are a "normal" human being and devote your attention entirely to me in order to get to know me or goodbye and good luck in however you think about this dating game and with your petty amateur psychological games. In the end there will never be a perfect safe method to weed out the "evil" females or males. It all boils down to what humanityandme said: trial and error and some luck. salad salad Yeah, definitely not from a position of vulnerability. A bit defensive though anyway, I would say. I mean, with all the casual sex that happens (as you said earlier, "hook up culture"), and people not caring about consequences anymore. I would say that makes me not as trusting in general. But others can still hack at if they want, I'm tapping out of that game.Romania, cool. Not accepted in Germany? Isn't that ironic, since the floodgates are open now like never before. This is not a political video though, so I won't get into that here."It's really nice to here the lovely stories about your niece! Sounds like the two of you have a loving bond which is admirable."I grew up with brothers, and no sisters, so it's a different dynamic for sure. And she grew up with no siblings at all, so I wonder if that has anything to do with it. They say sometimes only-children become greedy and self-centered because all the toys always belonged to them, and so they didn't learn about sharing, but that's not the case with her luckily. I do think she was a bit wounded though from her parents splitting up at a ripe young age . Which, is unfortunately another dysfunction of male/female relations that is too common these days.	Age, Common, Sex	Age - General, Gender - General, Social Class - Working class	3/222	1.351

peppenguin I was living in an area in Germany where people there tend to be a little too far right inclined. So it was a rough environment to grow up, I would say. But roughly at age 19, when I put on some muscle mass and the fruit of my integration into society and educational achievements started to show that I was working hard, they started accepting me. I actually turned many of those "enemies" into friends. However, I will never see them as really close friends since given the past.I moved from Germany to Sweden four years ago so I have not experienced the situation at first hand with the flooding. But a similar situation is happening in Sweden too, so you know. I do feel some tensions here and there throughout society but as long as it stays calm, then it's okay for me. I am staying away from politics as much as possible and I do not follow news or watch TV. Never actually did. I have the feeling that it ruins my perception of the world and gives an impression that the world is far more dangerous than it actually is. And in the case that the flooding will become a serious threat to my well-being and the life how I imagine it to be, then I will move again. I will not be a collateral damage in some stupid political "" trend.George Bruno has a reputation for being "the father we never had". He tries to preserve the old classical role of masculinity in society, I believe is a red pill and a firm believer in what he calls practical stoicism. He usually gives advice and wisdom. Fun to think about and sometimes laugh about but sometimes too radical as well.I can only empathize with her. I myself was raised by my grandparents till the age of 11 since my parents divorced when I was 3 years old and they both ran away from the responsibility. Moved to Germany at age 11 then when she re-married, so basically ended up from one family to the other.I also witnessed female instability behavior at first hand. I.e. how she behaved towards her husband and in the end divorce raped him for half of his house and so on. Probably that is why I am on my defenses but not only. First three years relationship ended by the girl cheating with a good friend of mine. This is maybe why I as a mathematician am so interested in female behavior in the dating scene. I do not buy into this narrative that people try to sell me that females are in only for the sexual drive and are not conscious about the mind fuckery and behavior they do. I've experience too much, same for my brother, close friends and many other males to buy into this victimized innocence game. So far my the strongest evidence points towards entitlement at a young age, huge expectations when it comes to selecting partners, sleeping around, showing clear signs of emotional instability symptoms, being conscious about their value when they are young and the decline of their value once they hit 30-something and thus abuse this knowledge, and the list goes on. And I have talked to this with sexual partners and female friends and many admit to doing this on a regular basis and having knowledge of this. I.e. part-taking in female fuckery. Flaking on dates because another desirable man came up. Seeking attention and validation from multiple men. Keeping men in the friend-zone as backup. Not being transparent of dating multiple partners at the same time just to give the illusion of a good girl because they see a potential partner in me but do not want to settle down at

peppenguin I am sure you heard about the core assumption of red pill philosophy:"All women are hypergamous by nature"I am currently examining this statement. I found an interesting paper which shows that when it comes purely to education, the trend is now in the U.S. and Brazil that women do not act hypergamous when it comes to education. The number of homogamous relationships far outnumber that of hypergamous relationships (when it comes down purely to educational degrees).To me this indicates that the red pill claim that it is in their nature is dubious or that educational status is not important to them anymore as a hypergamous criteria. Women were oppressed in terms of educational degrees until the 20th century. So hypergamy could be a societal thing. Maybe it was natural in primitive civilizations but modern civilizations (past Ancient Egypt) are far more complex than evolutionary impulses.Another study from Hungary argues "We argue that females switch between homogamy and hypergamy and vice versa, depending on the particular social circumstance." and "Males, more than females, prefer and choose younger mates at marriage, whereas females tend to marry higher educated mates.". We can see this as a hyperamorous criteria from men. Men wish to marry up to young beauty. However, in Western societies young women act promiscuous before settling down at the end of their 20s/early 30s and men do not see that as a good hypergamous criteria. Thus, we are left with this mating dynamic where men refuse to mate the 30+ one's and females refuse to mate in their 20s. Really stupid situation if you ask me.Note that this is Hungary and different from a more developed country like the U.S.From what I gather so far is that hypergamy might be natural to women in primitive times. However, in the end hypergamous trends tend to mild down where there is gender equality throughout society at different levels. Pointing in the direction that hypargamy is a socio-economical strategy for commitment and not a primal instinct of female behavior. So in my view, what original feminism (not some of the radical one's) which pushes for equality of sexes at all socio-cultural dimensions (especially economic and educational wise and rights) is the best bet to get rid of hypergamous behavior.	Gender, Promiscuous, Red	Ideological and Political Identity - General, Ethnicity - Native-American, Gender - Female sexuality, Gender - General	6/382	1.571

salad salad It's true that women don't really care about a man's education level, in particular in a society where it's not necessarily valued in terms of social structure so much (social meaning relationships and community hierarchy). I mean, I've never heard a woman say, wow, that guy has a BIG degree :-)But, when education already translates to $$$ riches (a man landed a good paying job because of that degree, for example), only then may it have an impact on social status, and therefor becomes sought after. By contrast, how many broke genius nerds are chased by hot, young women in their prime? Oh, maybe to do their homework for them, but that's about it.Anyway, it sounds like you're searching for a fix for society. Good luck with that, lol. I personally think it will take a god-damn miracle. Then again, I haven't really thought deeply of how it may change for the better either. salad salad Today for some reason I was thinking about this hot & beautiful girl that used to work at the local grocery store, where I used to shop. She had jet black hair, with teal coloured eyes, and very natural, feminine lips... you know the kind. She would subtly flirt with me once in a while, but wasn't the type to make an obvious move or advancement. I suppose that's the man's job. I mean, it's obvious she wasn't the type that needed to make any advancements, but she would still drop hints. For example, one time when I was at a different cashier to check out (with an older woman behind the counter), this younger girl would leave her station, and come to my cashier, stand right in front of me, while pretending there was actually something necessary to discuss with the other woman . But the way she paused at one point in silence looking at me, I could tell she wanted me to say something to her, but I was more a "deer in the headlights" so to speak. I wasn't expecting any kind of interaction like this, I just wanted to pay for my stuff and go. Honestly, all I was thinking at the moment is that I can't afford a girlfriend right now! They too expensive, especially one that beautiful to upkeep and keep loyal, ha haWell anyway, not long after, that grocery store closed up, and so she must have lost her job. I'm guessing she was a student probably working there just for some extra money. I'd say she was probably about 22-25 years old or so. Keep in mind that grocery store actually paid workers well (not just minimum wage), but maybe that's why it went out of business too. You know, now quality is not a priority these days. Everything is basically a race to the bottom, sadly.What's the point of this? I hope you weren't expecting there to be one, lolI was just enjoying reflecting at how she had such a natural beauty. Even one day when I was there and you could tell she was obviously really tired from working long hours or from lack of sleep, and she had almost no make-up, she was still a knock-out. I mean, neither parent wanted her living with them with their newly constructed "families" with the new spouse, so that's probably one reason she's with me now. Both parents had new babies too, thus almost like a virtual "replacement" of their child. It's a weird dynamic to me, looking at it from the outside.I don't know where this is going, but it's looking pretty bleak. As you say, "Where will this lead to? I do not know. humanityandme No I cannot diagnose people with BDP. I say that women who part-take in casual sex and multiple sexual partners over their lifetime tend to develop such symptoms. Yes correlation does not imply causality. But you put yourself at a risk.Same thing with unprotected sex. It correlates with HIV. We cannot say "If you have sex without a condom, then you'll get it". But are you willing to risk your mental well-being for having sex with multiple partner instead of going from committed relationship to committed relationship? That is all I am arguing.The term hookup is relatively new since the 2000s. We have no idea about the consequences of this new culture because our parents didn't know about it and our educators do not know it. Young adults are a laboratory experiment now.Read the Wikipedia article on hookup culture, especially the sections "Risk", "Drugs and Alcohol" and "Extra effects and causes". All the papers are referenced to the claims made.You will notice that my case stands and the majority of people who part-take in all of this come out with negative consequences rather than positive which is reason enough to get rid of this epidemic and reinforce good old fashioned "normal" relationships, with the option of breaking up of course if things do not work out.	Mental, Old, Sex, Sexual, alcohol	Age - Over 65s, Behavioural Addiction - Alcohol, Gender - General, Physical Identity - Physical (and Mental) Impairments	8/221	3.62

humanityandme This narrative that you are selling that people can do whatever they want and sleep around in their youth for their pure sexual pleasure and then settle down and no big deal is wrong. It is too naive. I can ask you a similar question: "Why bother setting boundaries for children?" They are creatures given by nature so they should know how to operate by their own impulses. PRECISELY: Because children have no idea about the consequences of their actions. And same for the hookup culture. We, the young population, have no information whatsoever on the consequences because our parents have no clue and our educators have no clue so no one ever informed us. We are basically rats in an experiment. I researched this and discussed my side now. I made my mind clear. There is some truth to saying nasty stuff like "women who have slept around are damaged goods" and I will not date women who have slept around just as a precaution towards my own well-being. Now, shaming helps me filter out these women. If you ask me "Should we shame them?". My answer is No. But we should label them. Should we glorify the playboy womanizer? No but we should label him. In a utopian sexual reputation system we would just label people without shaming. But we can dream about such a system all day and never implement it because guess what? People lie about the amount of sexual partners when they wish to commit. I believe that society has some "natural" ways of dealing with many issues and labeling promiscuity is a good thing. PS: Studies have shown that it is UNLIKELY that people on campuses engage in non-committed sexual intercourse without the abuse of substances. Another contradictory fact towards "Just for pleasure and out of natural impulses". Why use a drug ( alcohol ) to act out your "natural" impulse if it is so natural? humanityandme The message of this video "Women stop being promiscuous " is actually a very good advice. Whether her reasoning is accurate or not is irrelevant to the message.I am not arguing for no sex before marriage. Definitely not. peppenguin I will reply to your earlier comments later this week. Currently working on a mathematics assignment for university.I watched the video and I can say that it is highly disturbing and congratulations to the 27-year old man who sees promiscuity and having had an excessive amount of sexual partners as a no go quality in a female. Good that he left her.The scary irony is that she is so out of touch with the entire situation and its meaning that I do not even know what to say. Except use red pill philosophy to create a red-flag system that (i) protects you and (ii) helps you guide through the mating process.EDIT: Another irony. Peterson and evolutionary theorists claim that female are highly selective and that is why we have this situation. Well I guess we men are also highly selective aren't we? Look at red pill philosophy. How do you explain that evolution. Men evolved now within 50 years to be extra selective? I suppose it is more societal and cultural than evolutionary as many females excuse their modern trend of promiscuous behavior and men just react do this bullshit situation.	Old, Promiscuous, Red, Sexual	Ideological and Political Identity - General, Age - Over 65s, Ethnicity - Native- American, Gender - Female sexuality, Gender - General	7/195	3.59

salad salad You made me just realize something. Perhaps the real reason that I find Peterson annoying when talking about women as though only they have the ball in their court and men are just perpetually at their mercy, is that I'm a walking living example of how untrue that is. So it just feels like someone lying to my face (well not literally, but to a clueless crowd of young students). Especially when I hear, read, or see other examples beyond myself as well.This doesn't mean I'm oblivious to the "scientific" theory behind it (which is why I simply called his unbiased aspects, as merely being redundant). In other words, it's personally useless to me to learn anything from. I mean, it's obvious that women are the ones who are the gatekeepers of sexual interaction (and therefor procreation). Do we really need to pay for university courses on this? Good thing I found some of his talks for free, because that's what they're worth.So even though we know women are the primary selectors of sexual interaction, does it really go any further than that? I mean, we are not cavemen anymore. Society is more complex today. To ignore that, is like having blinders on. As I said earlier, the truth of society today is that social media is allowing women to find and have sexual partners, as easy as finding a pack of gum or candy at a corner store... perhaps even easier, because the candy sometimes even comes to you at beck-n-call! Like take-out delivery, but for free with no delivery charge. In fact, sometimes the "food" itself pays as it comes to you!However, it's also the information age now, where men have become more aware of female advantage, and how they use it to their benefit. In other words, becoming "Captain Save-A-Ho" these days, unless you've been living under a rock, has to be a more conscious decision, rather than one stemmed from naiveté, as it was in the past. And what's also crumbling is the social constructs that it's somehow still mens' "duty" to take care of these promiscuous , attention-addicted, disloyal females, once their youth & beauty is finally deteriorating, far beyond any semblance of a once past innocence. It is a red-flag for women as it is for men. Some men who sleep around a lot only do it just because they can, as they're on the top 5 of attractiveness scale, but the ones who sleep around a lot who's had to put in the work to do it, do it because they have some unmet need that they need to fill by sleeping with as many women as he can (similar to why women with issues have a lot of partners to fill a void). Oh K I wrote in my earlier comment that:"However, I agree with you that in general females who are labeled tend to get shamed and men praised for promiscuous behavior."I agree with you that guys in general are praised for sleeping around while women are shamed for it. My point was that both genders get a label for sleeping around in our society. The man gets the label "playboy" and usually the female gets the label "bitch".Now, I am not arguing that shaming or praising is good. However, I see this labeling as a reputational system to help us guide which people sleep around and weed them out when we are searching for commitment. Just as you said "But as a woman I'd never date a player who slept with a bunch of women. He'd probably just sleep around while we're dating". That is precisely what impression I get from a female who is labeled a "bitch". I would not date such a woman either for the same reason why you won't date a "playboy": You (probably) cannot trust such a person. Pure Venus You sound like the typical bitter feminist who competes with men. This woman did not say that at all. The discussion here is about women NOT men. You are not a man and will never be. You don't have a penis and the consequences for your vagina being loose will not be the same for men because they don't view sex the same way. We are not the same. This does not mean men should be promiscuous either but it does not affect them in the same manner it will affect you and don't be expected to be taken seriously as a woman when you have opened up your body to multiple partners who can transmit their fluids and energy in your body which is literally an open portal protection or not. allen reynolds I agree with you. There are many studies out there that have found only negative correlations between women and having many or multiple sexual partners. 10+ partners over lifetime means that she will divorce with 35 chance.If you have never heard of borderline personality disorder, then look that up on wikipedia and read the symptoms.The following study found correlations between sleeping around and emotional instability disorder symptoms (search on google and read the abstract of the paper)Borderline Personality Symptomatology, Casual Sexual Relationships, and Promiscuity by Sansone and WiedermanSo what people are saying that women should not sleep around is correct. diongbsn2 an actual virgin has more worth but that's not enough nowadays. Modern women (virgin or not) lack a sweet feminine demeanor and domestic skills in addition to being overly demanding, bruttish,rough around the edges,and with an overinflated sense of self worth. 360 I could definitely see that. Especially, in a society where promiscuity is glorified along with inflated egos and high senses of entitlement. diongbn2 not only does a non virgin woman have nothing special to offer a man - any guy that agrees to no sex until marriage with such a woman is a pathetic excuse for a man. Such a woman is unworthy to deny him sex until marriage when she's already creamed and squinted on other men's clocks before marriage. She's not redeemed and never will be. The bitch needs to put out or get the fuck out. It's not like she has any other value whether "forgiven" (or not) according to her religion. Marriage is only for virgins that submit and know their roles. Otherwise the family structure wouldn't be in such utter decay.. A woman that's had sex with just one other man will never truly be able to pair bond with the man she's currently with in addition to not being able to provide him with genetically untainted children. If You Have to Keep Insisting That Women are Equal to Men, Then Darling, Women are NOT Equal to Men!Hi. I'm Professor Cos. Notice how it is men that we are told women are equal to and not women that we are told men are equal to, not to mention that men aren't up in women's faces claiming to be seen as their equals! The word "to" lets you know that the default mode is set to men, which also lets you know that women acknowledge men as their superiors and are GREEN with envy and denial about it! And when the "women are equal to men" argument falls on its face like it always does, the "equal in worth" argument comes to the rescue! Yea, SURE! The real issue these women have is the reality that they are not equal to men when it comes to all the things that make men look ABSOLUTELY AWESOME! Just about any woman can learn how to do things that men can do, but they have to learn it from men who brought it into existence in the first place! And when they finally put on their cute little fuzzy equality mittens to show the world how equal they are to men by doing anything a man can do, the cool image that interesting men possess due to their masculinity will never be exuded by a woman no matter how good a woman gets at emulating men and masculinity! The strange thing about all this equality and diversity and woman power and women's marches and pussy hats and empowerment and self-esteem is that when women acquire the type of skill and knowledge and achieve the type of status and social prestige that make men stand out from average men, they tend to look down on men that are below them in that regard, whereas men just see women as they are. Men don't lose their attraction for women that they have more money, status or skills than. That should let you know that women are valued for what they are valued for, not for what men are valued for, which is why women want to be seen as equal to men! Men are the reason why we enjoy the modern world. All the cool, interesting, intellectual, fun things that we partake in were brought to you by men. Women are vessels that are used to reproduce people and to serve as outlets for recreational sex. THAT is reality, so shoot me! Women partake in what men do, but they are not needed for it, and the world doesn't count on women for it! Women are boring. Women can be mothers and raise kids, or they can be sexual entertainers and swallow kids ROFL! A man's usefulness to the world is WAY more interesting and fascinating. Only men who allow themselves to be shackled to a woman or who blindly serve as cogs in the wheel live dull, uninteresting lives like women do. Like I've mentioned on numerous occasions, men get to look cool while depositing their sperm, whereas women just get to be sperm receptacles, sperm depositories, human toilets! I think it's safe to say, blessed are you, lord, our god, ruler of the universe who has not made me a woman!!!Women's so called empowerment relies on men's weaknesses. The only types of men women are better than are dopey, lame ass, dumb ass dudes. Lifting women up at the expense of men isn't a testament to women's superiority. Marginalizing men and boys so women and girls can have a leg up is patronizing and condescending, not empowering. That is a good way to treat women as the inferior beings that they are. The age old tale of why men can sleep around and it's looked at as okay and not for women is explained VERY EASILY...Women: If a man who was wearing skin tight pants and a pink v neck came up to you said "Heeey giirrlllll" with a limp hand wave would YOU find that attractive? 99 of you will say NO. Why? Because that's looks FEMININE.In nature, almost all the time the male chases the female, HE gets on top of HER and has sex with her (if she allows it), but this is a MASCULINE behavior to chase and have sex .Sooooo ladies... when YOU a woman chases men, has a lot of sex .. YOU LOOK MASCULINE to men when you act that way and men find it very very unattractive.You can go ahead an write all the blog posts, YouTube videos, shut down traffic for protests to tell men to think differently, it will NEVER WORK. Men look at women who sleep around the same: They serve ONE purpose and ONE purpose ONLY.So if you are a woman and you sleep around AND people know you do... THIS is why you can't KEEP a man. No man takes you seriously.You can try to hide this ladies all you want but you are only damaging yourself, seeking out only the hottest, biggest dick, rich, etc and your standards will grow so high that you will never find a GOOD man who wants ONLY YOU, you will spend you life bitter because you can't get a hot, rich, big dick guy to STAY and the other "average" men aren't good enough anymore, on the eyes or in bed, you spoiled yourself and have no one else to blame but yourself. No woman sleeps with every man they meet. Women are hypergamous. They sleep with men they deem to be of high value. They might sleep with a lot of these men but there is no such thing as a free whore. I'm skeptical also of this idea that women develop some profound loyalty and love to the man that breaks their hymen. If it only it was so easy. Women used to be property for a reason. They used to be property because even a woman who has only had one sexual partner is fully capable of hypergamy and disloyalty. For a woman to always be looking to better her situation while she is youthful and beautiful is just female nature and if you don't buy it then look at the divorce statistics. 80 of which are women's fault. Very true. But it is VERY rare to see a woman who truly LOVES a man cheating. Not that they're together, but that she LOVES him. When women actually love, they just can't see anything else in another man. Their world revolves around that man. But all around me are men who honestly, genuinely love their partners, wives, girlfriends but still cheat. If you ask them why, they genuinely do not know why they just can't stop. And yet, they LOVE their partner. And I think everyone can agree that men and women do not cheat on the same scale at all. Infact, women cheating is a fairly recent phenomenon. It actually only blew up with the wave of feminine power that has really intensified in recent times.	Woman	Gender - General	1/128	0.781

Men generally want to spread their seed, women generally want to procreate with the alpha male. Female biology doesn't drive a desire for sex with many men like it does to men regarding women. This is biology. Are you a man? Women should certainly stop trying to act like men regarding this issue and many other facets of their lives. This promiscuity doesn't make women happy from what I have seen, and from what research shows. Promiscuity is however, built into the very core of every man. You don't know either figure, you're just making things up to fit your belief of "AWALT" and how Chad's get all the goods.Look, the supply is meeting the demand. Sure, you can remove/weaken the supply and only the most thirsty demand will remain. Both men and women should live rather promiscuous (and use condoms) until age 25-27 and then settle down in your late twenties. It's absurd to think you even know what you like in a partner (and who you yourself even are) before having dated a few men/women. Get experiences/comparisons until your mid-twenties and then find a partner that suits your personality and lifestyle.	Age, Promiscuous	Age - General, Gender - Female sexuality	2/63	3.175
God Kim Seokjin Yes, you are totally right! Each what feels right to them. I was just saying this as a general guideline I believe to be most effective in terms of finding a partner that fits. Promiscuity has more damaging effects than beneficial ones from what I've observed. Had a one night stand once and will never do it again, as I felt filthy afterwards. I myself was never promiscuous in my early 20's, hell, I never even dated. As a result here I am today a 26 year old man with no such experiences. Those of you who advocate for traditional gender roles, do you believe women should not be afforded EQUAL OPPORTUNITY (perhaps even under the law) based on their sex ? A lot of people fear that's the slippery slope we'll be going down with continued emphasis and generalizations about the sexes. I'm really trying to understand this. Do you want to take it back to the past? If so, hope far? Should women be able to vote? One of the arguments for women not being allowed to vote was the idea that they were too emotional. Do they have it together enough to vote in your opinion or not? I think when ideas like "traditional gender roles" are spoken about it sparks concern about regressing back to the past. I know some people want this without question and they'll let it be known. With others it remains unclear to me. I'll admit I have my biased having been raised by a strong, independent woman who worked full time and raised three kids without a partner. So when I hear women NEED a man, it simply doesn't resonate.	Gender, Sex, Slope, Woman	Gender - General, Nationality - Chinese	5/186	2.688
It used to be getting a girl into bed after a couple months of dating and maneuvering was considered a grand slam homerun for a man. Nowadays, bedding her less than 24 hours after meeting her is just considered rounding first base. For young men who just want to pump & dump with no strings attached, these are grand times. For men who want more, these are bad times. I am part Vietnamese, so ALL six of my female cousins insisted I avoid American girls for marriage. To be traditional is very risky for a woman , she can't control her husbands feelings, attitude, mind etc. The worst case scenario he leaves her with a couple of kids for someone else (or dies, or fells ill), and she in her late forties or thirties with no job experience have to find one. In the USA, one of the two genders initiates the divorce over 70 of the time – the wife. Most guys know this stuff, the internet is a great resource. The only way to deal with women having abandoned their traditional female gender role is – flings. Everyone should go into a 'relationship' with their expectations set – "this will be a short fling" If you think you're going to get married, I suspect the numbers are similar in all Western countries – women get bored MUCH EARLIER than their husbands. 70 of divorces initiated by the wife. That number tells an extremely important story and ya gotta pay attention to it. Point being, I think setting as a goal "a nice long term relationship" is going in the wrong direction, due to our current social norms....	Gender	Gender - General	1/140	0.714
Well it might be smart to initiate divorce first if you know your man is cheating etc. A Simple fact that women initiate divorce more often means nothing without a context. Also the one who initiates divorce can prepare better ahead of time, or even choose a country or state for trial proceedings there your prospects are better (cause law differs) So even if it is not your fault, it could be very smart to pull the plug first. I for one would rather have the ability to assess a guy she is in a relationship with and if she thinks he is a drunken loser move on. Remember everyone puts their best foot forward in the beginning. Three months, six months, even a year until the truth comes out. And you can come across a lot of losers before a winner comes through. There were a lot of females I dated for a short time, less than six months that I had to dump when their true colors came out. Women experience the same problem. There are a lot of Alpha posers running around luring young girls in and then the young women find out that guy was just another beta player out to get some. NPC 04173 nope, it just takes any man between the ages of 18 and say 30, to have 4 or 5 girl friends to sex up the female population. Because in today's world any man that has a girlfriend will expect sex or he will move on. I had numerous girlfriends when I was between the ages 18 and 24. I wasn't a player but I certainly ain't going to settle with a woman if things aren't exactly how I want it to be. Took me to age 24 find that. Now I am 55 and still with the same woman . A person can rack up a lot of sex partners just trying to find the right person. That goes for men or women. Women have it worse because most young men are full of crap. They lie to the woman to try and make her believe they are looking for a relationship when they just want sex . That is on the men. The people who are bringing instability to the mating game are the Male players. Back in my day as a young man we kept the male players in check. Us guys would shame them. And we were not afraid to beat their ass if we caught one running through women like water. We were able to keep our pool of females sex partner numbers down. Men are supposed to be the leaders of this world. Whereever we go the women follow. If millenials continue to allow players to run unchecked and make heroes out of them. And pump them up as studs, instead of calling them out for the lying, dishonorable cheats they are. Then yes they will continue to spoil your pool of women. Your women will get further and further worthless. Young men of today were raised by women, so they don't have the balls to confront worthless men. They would rather take their frustrations out on women. They didn't have fathers around to teach them how to be manly. And deal with men that are screwing things up for their society. DeMarcus Shipman A man can become one flesh with more than one woman , 2 Samuel 12:8 specifically says God gave David "wives" and would have given him more, and Adam having one wife doesn't address or mention polygyny at all. However Exodus and Deuteronomy gives laws on polygyny proving it is biblically lawful. 1 John 3:4 sin is when you break Gods laws	Woman	Gender - General	1/63	1.587
DeMarcus Shipman The scripture you quoted has nothing to do with polygyny, it only addressed the putting away of one's first wife, even Gods chosen people Israel who are the so called negroes were started with polygyny which was before the laws of Moses were given that you speak of. The man Israel had more than one wife as well as concubines. Even Christ himself said that the kingdom of heaven is like a polygynous marriage, why would he liken the kingdom of heaven into sin?Matthew 25:Matthew 25 King James Version (KJV)1 Then shall the kingdom of heaven be likened unto ten virgins, which took their lamps, and went forth to meet the bridegroom.2 And five of them were wise, and five were foolish.3 They that were foolish took their lamps, and took no oil with them:4 But the wise took oil in their vessels with their lamps.5 While the bridegroom tarried, they all slumbered and slept. Oh K No, they are what you call incels if you ever heard the term. They are men longing for relationships but can't get one because they are not the 20 of average good looking men so in return their video games, their job becomes their relationship... women can always find sex if they want to just go to any old bar. Even if the women is ugly there will be some desperate man waiting but it's not the same for the rest of the men who are not deemed attractive or whatever. There's lots of men who are not whores and will just sleep with any old girl and usually those are the incels. Not justifying just responding back to your question.... I can speak for myself I don't have sex a lot with women and it's because I don't chase them. That's my personal choice but I know the women I'm friends with can have sex whenever they feel like it. They just need to go on IG and there's 3000 DM's from thirsty males. There is not a market like that for men... men on average with get 2-4 responses from women unless they are deemed hot. I agree completely about today's culture towards sex - it's too messed up. When I was a teenager, not having sex was something "uncool". What are you? A fanatic Christian? A Mormon? Asexual? The peer pressure was unbelievable - and not from guys as much as from girls. There is something very wrong with that if you ask me. I have a happy marriage and a kid now, but looking at some of the girls I went to highschool with - they are fucked up from shit they used to do. Or they are still doing it and the severity of it will hit them later.On another note, I believe one can do a positive change forward. Although the damage of what you've done (e.g. sleep around, treat sex as a tool to feed your own emptiness, etc.) cannot be undone - it's something you have to live with, one can always come to their senses and work on their issues, I believe. Toni Hello Toni.You seem like a smart person and would like your perspective on this subject matter.Would you say a lot of women want to be promiscuous , or is it because they don't, but they keep looking for love so much they start to become promiscuous ?	Promiscuous	Gender - Female sexuality	2/48	4.167
Frorasu I think women are more promiscuous now because media/popular culture has shown them that 'this is the way to behave'. Their parents stopped teaching them properly. Young girls in many places in our western world are taught such misinformation about sex . They think its consequence free. They think that dating= sex . To them, having casual sex is HOW YOU DATE and find a husband. I don't actually think women 'want' to sleep around with nothing in return. I believe they think that is how it's done.	Nothing, Promiscuous, Sex	Age - Youngsters, Gender - Female sexuality, Gender - General	5/87	5.747

Toni I would run through brick walls for a feminine woman who was comfortable and proud of being a woman ! But I wouldn't even open a door for a feminist, which is to say women who try to act like men and take on the traditional roles of men. Except that the liberated woman really doesn't want to be a plumber, garbage collector, or fight with men on the front lines. That's where the whole argument for equality breaks down because if women are equal and vote for the direction of the country, then they should be equally required to defend the country by being subject to the draft.	Woman	Gender - General	3/109	2.752
Toni Yes I think that's also the problem that you stated.Really what I see going on now a days is a lot of people are afraid to love. So they would rather hook up instead.I actually was dating a Czech woman last year and I just couldn't get with her trying to talk to me about the sex she had in the past. People that usually like someone doesn't want to know all that. But she was telling me all the details and thinking it was okay.	Sex, Woman	Gender - General	2/89	2.247
Toni But Toni what is actually wrong with women having and enjoying as much sex as they want? It annoys me that women are not allowed to do something that feels good and is fun just because men (and women who listen to them, like you) tell them they aren't allowed for no logical reason.It annoys me off on a personal level. I have severely limited the number of people I've slept with in my lifetime probably because I wouldn't want to put a future partner off me. And yes, my current partner probably does appreciate that I haven't slept with dozens of other men. So I've actually inhibited my own happiness for some arbitrary status of "purity" that men have decided for women. It's not fair.	Sex	Gender - General	1/128	0.781

teghan mccarthy First of all, its coming from a woman and i hate to say this but never take advice from a woman especially when it comes to men and dating. First of all, men need and want a feminine woman . Men aren't attracted to masculine women that's why so many women are single now especially black women cause they give off masculine energy. Men don't want masculinity in women. Men aren't attracted to that. The only men who like that are weak beta males. Men are attracted to femininity in a woman . Men like a woman is soft, sweet, honest, caring, nurturing, submissive (but not to the point you can walk all over them), and has traditional qualities. Women want and need a masculine man cause they're better providers and protectors. Weak emotional men are more insecure, sensitive, and less confident. Women want to feel safe and that type of man doesn't provide that sense of security for women.	Black, Woman	Ethnicity - Black, Gender - General	6/160	3.75

Martin K. This is not true. Many people just follow whatever behavior is the norm in that particular time period of society in which they grew up and are living. Martin K. Can you show me these studies?I do believe that the culture does affect sexual behavior a lot. Maybe not in terms of how often one performs sex but in terms of how many sexual partners one has. We definitely see a difference in sexual behavior from earlier times to now. We have nowadays a casual dating hookup culture which did not exist in this excessive fashion. And every sexual behavior trend has consequences upon society and overall happiness. So far, the majority of people nowadays are less happy in marriages, the depression rate increases (whether that correlates with being promiscuous I do not know. However, I strongly believe that love-life does play a huge role in overall happiness and having many/multiple sexual partners which is an increasing sexual behavior nowadays actually prevents you from finding true love. Of course, as you said some people are promiscuous but the majority isn't. But as I said sexual behavior is cultural and ever changing in society and most people follow precisely what society expects them to do and the majority of people do not have the self-awareness like you do to think about what they desire and what makes them happy. They usually just follow which leads them to bad decisions and unhappiness.), increase in STDs (condoms do not actually protect from some STDs), higher divorce rates, more unwanted pregnancies, more single mothers, etc.	Promiscuous, Sex, Sexual	Gender - Female sexuality, Gender - General	10/234	4.274

Martin K. Show me the study. What does it mean that the "reality of sex still remains quite reasonable for the majority of ppl"? What age group are you if I may ask? I can tell you that there is definitely an increase in people hooking up casually which in the past was not the case. Thus sexual behavior has changed. They do not act naturally when it comes to sex. People are influenced by whatever is the norm and act accordingly.Simple example: Over-consumption did not exist. Yet it occurs nowadays because it is part of our society and culture. People will act according to the constraints of legislation and the rules of society. Same for sexual behavior. If you impose constraints on how many sexual partners are socially accepted, then most people will behave accordingly. If you let them live out their sexuality however they wish without any consequences then they will do that.My point is that promiscuous behavior seems to indicate that psychological and behavior consequences to arise in such people. As I mentioned earlier. Having multiple partners does correlate with increase in unhappiness, depression, higher divorce rates, higher chance of unwanted pregnancy, higher chance of STDs, higher change of being a single mother (which in itself usually produces children and later adults with psychological instabilities), etc.Casual hookup dating culture is fairly new and has to be taken with care. A civilized society can only function if we procreate and provide a healthy environment in which we can raise children. If promiscuity is an indicator that correlates with people being less capable of forming long lasting relationships (which my above mentioned correlations suggest), then that leads to a serious problem and we should not promote it and rather inform the upcoming youth about the dangers.PS: I do not buy your argument at all. Sexual behavior is influenced by oversexualised media and whatever is prevalent in the culture. Friends with benefits relationships did not exist in the past, open relationships same thing. Oversexualised media actually does stimulate sexual behavior. Same for free internet porn culture. You imitate what you see in those videos. I've done this, some partners have demanded or complained about this. Women keep a man's DNA everytime she sleeps with him. So if a woman has slep with many men, she has a bunch of DNA swimming around in her brain/head. I believe what you refer to is more about the effects of having an intimate relationship and letting yourself be vulnerable. By interacting with someone for a long time we absorb a part of their temperament overtime. We get both the goods and the bads. Just like your parents can have influence on who you are and how you think even long after they are dead they are still with you. The thing is the more promiscuous means you have higher chances of dealing with many people who have deep rooted problems and unsolved issues (trying to escape their issues by being in relationships one after the other) and it adds up very fast and it all affects your psyche and your image of yourself. And we need to bear the burden of that. Especially if you are someone sensitive or with a lot of empathy and if you have a good memory it will stay with you a long time maybe forever. I see it more about something psychological than physical DNA although its hard to know what happens at the microscopic level and we are still making lot of discoveries about genetics and how it evolves over time. I'm curious tough even if those people pretend they are happy if they would want their children to have promiscuous adult life or not. That would speak volume about their real feeling about the topic. Because we all find excuses to rationalize why we do what we do and why it's the right thing.	Promiscuous	Gender - Female sexuality	2/254	0.787
KasumiKriss utuber pastor dowell has said this on multiple videos. There's a lot of meaning and significance to the act of having sex that people just don't seem to understand. It's never just sex no matter how many times they try to say it. To put it simply a man or woman who is picky about who they enter into intimate relationships with will not view sex the same way as a man or women who has been very promiscuous. Romans 1:28 And even as they did not like to retain God in their knowledge, God gave them over to a reprobate mind, to do those things which are not convenient; 29Being filled with all unrighteousness, fornication, wickedness, covetousness, maliciousness; full of envy, murder, debate, deceit, malignity; whisperersIt all begins and ends with guarding your mind and The Company You Keep.	Promiscuous, Sex, Woman	Gender - Female sexuality, Gender - General	5/142	3.521

RA spect that is interesting, in my experience I know alot of people who are also in healthy happy relationships upon reaching their mid 20s and settling down/ending their party phase I see no signs of psychologically damaged women. (not talking about women who have had a crazy sex life or anything but most women i know have had some one night stands and more than a handful of partners) I dont know what the case would be for much older women, for example closer to 30 year old women who still would be sleeping around. I dont think anyone should be encouraged to just sleep around, sex will always be better with a trusted partner but also single men or women if they want to have abit of fun and are being safe then go for it. For alot of women they find they need that security of a relationship to enjoy it the most thats what I found and that is true for many women. Tosca. Men and women who sleep around do it because they are empty, they have not purpose or fulfillment for they live a hedonistic lifestyle, but life is more than just pleasure. It is suffering for what is right, and love is the most important thing. Many say to themselves that they love a person, but it is only lust just as many men and women who have multiple short term sexual hookups. But they lie. Love is more than physical. It comes from the pure and righteous Spirit of God. For without God you cannot truly love, for He made you with love, Tosca. There is a love greater than all that is on earth. KING SAUL YT vids helped build my confidence. I never had a father figure. Raised by crazy women, so enough said there. In the past year, I started working out. Not crazy muscle but I have nice, model type body with clothes and I even got compliments on social media from younger women(not bad at 46!). I also make $2K a day, I'm not bragging but I'm in the computer field and that actually contributed to my problems. It is like a crack for introverts. Working from home sucks too.Many guys my age could pass for my dad and I could probably fit in their gut, not to say I look 21 either. I also never drank(maybe 2 beers my whole life), smoked, tanned, etc, so less wear and tear. I wear a 31 pants. I do follow guys in their 20s with fashion so maybe that affects it too. Used to dress like total shit. I also am overcoming approach anxiety. I did have a few women in the past that were crazy about me, but they had tons of problems. I also put them on a pedestal, used to cook for them, fix their car, one chick actually proposed to me, but she couldn't have kids because of a past STD. I would have been interested otherwise.Only thing that may hold me back is a 5'10" height. I do want to meet a woman my age though. KING SAUL One thing you don't understand is women have a Tsunami of power today. I also spent a while in the Incel world, I was trying to find the root cause of why I'm not clicking with women. I didn't see their community as a looks focused thing at first. But it really opened my eyes. Women could make just one, even albeit false, allegation about you and your life is practically over. You really have to be a top 1 male to be on the radar of even average women. Women consider men under 6'2" short. Even the most unattractive women could put on makeup, dye her hair and have guys worship her online and build her confidence into the stratosphere. Women have the power today. They can reject any guy and know there is a database of guys that are better, taller, richer, more endowed. Yes, I make 2k a day, but I'm competing with younger guys, who are taller than me and could make 2-3x what I make. I do feel humbled when a woman talks to me. I feel I have no competition nor do I give a shit what other men do. I'm in control of myself. The women you speak of that do that to men, the men are most to blame. If they stopped drooling over the bitch in the beginning and watched for the little things like how she carried herself, how she dressed, if she gets herself something to drink and doesn't bring one for you , never offers to pay and expects you to pay for everything, gives attitude for little shit, doesn't like you hanging out with your friends or family and makes a child like sad face trying to be cute in attempt to get you to do something. Edward Kenwy Its not big, the damage is near total. Women are only walking upto men and agreeing with this, as lip service even now, because the level of damage has destroyed the availability of men, their own sons are turning from them in waves. They only have the ability to play lip service games after that, they have spent too long collaborating with gov and oligarchs and now laws, police policies, employment quotas, hr policies and more are in place everywhere weaponising women raised as 'humanist' feminists by the school system are everywhere. They are completely weaponised. They are all on the spectrum.However perhaps there are a few that might get obsessed about what happened to get to this line and now actually genuinely do want to change, but most likely can't. The extent to which women are confrontational and competitive now is like a taste of freedom for the dark parts of the personality. On top of which this conditioning was done in our developmental years in the school system. It would take decades to iron out most of it. Add Bow If Girl True, what's really annoying about the right, even though I am more right leaning is this incessant talk about women being supposedly irrational (even too irrational to vote) whereas men are supposedly very logical and rational for that matter. Now I think there is some truth to that, but the way they exaggerate shit turns it more into a big lie, just like men have done for eons of time. It's sad to see a weakminded girl like the one in the video to so easily go along with this, because there are some other aspects the right speaks of that is more truthful. Re the 'irrational' thing, I find it quite ironic that these men's obvious irrational fear of women having too much power in society is what they are so unaware of all the while claiming they are purely rational. I think there is a difference between feminine (emotional) intelligence energy and masculine (logical) intelligence/energy, but that does not mean that you do not possess any amount of the other gender 's energy/intelligence based on your gender , neither are you purely rational because you're male. Regardless of gender , we are emotional beings driven by our subconscious emotions and men clearly are driven by some serious irrational fears and prejudices concerning women. D W I dont think it's that black and white though. Each gender does possess the other( masc or feminine)'s form of intelligence and energies as well, although naturally most women will have more feminine intelligence/energy and most men will have more masculine intelligence/energy but its a bridge too far to claim that neither can not do what the other is good at. A Ap Sure. Picking the marital partner is more about logic than attraction.A man who is in charge of his life will decide to marry because he wants to have children with someone who can pair bond with him long term; a woman who has never even had the urge to "try" sex with different types of men. This is so the family unit structure that he is creating will have less likelihood of breaking apart.Anyway, many men categorize women in the dating market in two types: those who are good to fuck only, or those who would be a good, stable, loving mother. Being fuckable is easier than being the mother quality woman , because it requires less personality attributes.	Sex, Woman	Gender - General	3/122	2.459
A Ap it's not attractive because nobody wants put their genital in a place were lots of other genitals have been. Doesn't matter how much you wash it. DNA remains	Nobody	Age - Youngsters	1/30	3.333
Females also deal with the problems of pregnancy. If I knew I'd be running the risk of impregnating myself each time I had sex I'd be more careful. This is why women can't afford to be promiscuous . It's also a major reason they are the selectors. We also don't understand the long term impact of birth control. It's just healthier for women to be less open to sex and more open to finding a long term relationship.	Promiscuous, Sex	Gender - Female sexuality, Gender - General	3/77	3.896

Agree with the anthropology. I also think sexual pressure from men is nature's way for men to (unconsciously) test out women. If a woman says yes with no commitment, then the men generally lose longterm interest unless they are already hopelessly in love (but they will nevertheless be internally conflicted). In the jungle they would walk away. After all, the whole point is reproduction, and they are looking for a quality woman , and a good mother. They don't wish to devote resources to bringing up children with a girl that did not have the good sense/self-control/inner-strength to secure commitment. She isn't quality, she won't produce quality children, and she won't say no to her own children, to external threats, to tribal elders, or to her own self. They say that a person's success can be measured by how many difficult conversations they are willing to have. She won't be having difficult conversations unless it's forced on her. A man hearing "no" is crucial to a longterm relationship. So then the other half of this is how women select men. I don't know much about that, but I can confirm that promiscuous women are of no longterm interest to most men.	Promiscuous, Sexual, Woman	Gender - Female sexuality, Gender - General	4/200	2.0

Steffen Dee Let me teach you young Steffen: Women pick players, then soon decide they want a committed relationship, or have a baby by him, and they play victim when, "Surprise", he doesn't want that. They get hurt over and over, they see other girls hurt, but they still go for the players. She gets angry and bitter and blames all men. And the players know exactly what's going on. When a man pursues a hot woman , he's doesn't play victim if he catches feelings and gets hurt by her. He takes responsibility for his choice. That's the difference between men and women. Mel C I don't know where you are living. But most men I know WISH they had virgins. But I would also say, when you reach your sexual peak, around 30-45, you will want different d!cks, a woman with one partner is more than likely to withstand the temptations that come with wanting different partners. Most women don't have that mental block because they trained their bodies to jump from Old to New in light speed. Just saying what you are at 18 sexually will be different to what you are at 30, unless you have sexual control, which most virgins learn when staying a virgin for a long time, it will be hard to succumb. Also, virgin women tend to stick like glue to the man they first have sex with, so they will have more attachment to their husbands or men when they reach their sexual peak and are likely not to stray because their bonding mechanism is glued like adamantine. But for women with many sexual partners. When that freaky, erotic sexual nature hits her in her 30's, when that testosterone levels comes shooting in her veins, first, they loose attraction to their husbands and their body begins wanting strange d!ck. The desire for new partners will make it almost impossible not to cheat. Most female cheating is done by women in their sexual peak. Go look it up.Stay a virgin and your future man or husband will thank you, hell, you sons and daughters will thank you, and be proud of you. That you shut up your fountains and sealed your cistern until the right man burst open the floodgates of pleasure, so he may feast on the delicacies of your milk, honey, wine and all sweetness that comes from between your legs....including the sweet joys of babies. alb12345672 Sorry for the late reply, Youtube didn't give me a notification. I agree with everything you said. Actually celibacy was practiced as a form of birth Control in north-west Europe by those born inside the Hajnal Line. Europe actually has had a tradition of sexual discipline, for both men and women, and its part of the way Europe was able to build wealth, by having a manageable population. In the Tudor times in England contraception was banned and abstinence during marriage was practiced to limit the population. Imagine that! Today that would be unheard of, but most don't know European history. Plato himself stated that the highest good was not physical love, but Platonic love. All animals can perform the physical sex act, but only human beings are able to express complex thoughts through dialogue. Sexuality in the media is simply pandering to the lowest common denominator. I don't mean to be a snob, but you have a much better connection with the woman when she is on your intellectual level. alb12345672- Correlation is not causation... with very few (notice "few" and not "less"?) exceptions, people are not Prairie Voles; Humans are not strictly monogamous, and therefore one cannot say that the currently higher than historically typical divorce rates are due solely to women having multiple sex partners prior to marriage.For instance, Americans are less religious now than previous generations were, and so the Catholic dogma vis-a-vis divorce is less influential. Families are far more geographically fragmented, and so there is less pressure from one's immediate family to remain married. We can see that there are many factors involved in contemporary divorce rates, yes? So once again I ask, where is the scientific evidence which shows that having multiple sex partners compromises a woman's ability to bond exclusively to a man for life?	Sex	Gender - General	2/133	1.504

Hippiekinkster I've seen some studies to that effect. Too lazy to google. not hard to do. Even in marketing companies try to make a great impression on young customers so they are hooked for life and don't consider a competitor. Cellphone companies want you on a contract (or now pay out an expensive phone) or even a postpaid plan so you are less likely to leave. Once people see choice they move on. A woman that can get unlimited sex on Tinder is unlikely to be faithful.As always your mileage will vary. But I look at real world numbers. Birth rates (according to the gov't BTW) are below replenishment. Recent statistics came out. The age of marriage creeps up (some may say this is a good thing, but it also means MANY less are not getting married), less get married period, divorces are on the rise. MGTOW has thousands of ardent followers, would be unheard of even 20 years ago. I could see older guys but many of the comments are guys that aren't even 18. Women and men today are ADVERSARIAL due to feminism. Many don't understand exactly what that means. If a cop in the US pulls you over, and you talk to him, he has to ignore and never repeat anything that could make you seem innocent. Anything that can be construed as guilt, even in the slightest, is used against you. When women take on a feminist role they operate the same way. Everything a guy does is held against them. Guys are afraid even to compliment women for ramifications. Feminist women take on the male sexual role and look for a conquest of partners. Their biology don't work that way, however. Women don't get off from porn the same way men do. It would almost be like men buying romance novels and getting worked up over them. It just don't really work that way. There are more non married adults than ever before. There is a major movement of alternative sexuality that does not favor procreation. There is something to see here. The bible and laws were created because humans have serious flaws. It's not that i disagree with this overall sentiment, but it seems rather... obvious. If a man or woman is sleeping around while single, chances are that they're not exactly looking for a relationship, really. As for in the future and whether they are wanting a long, happy relationship after being promiscuous , again, that seems like an odd thing to advise. Chances are that they want to sleep around, and if thats what they want, then that's fine. Technically accurate but implies a causal relationship in a dynamic that is far more complex. Furthermore, "successful marriage" implies something that isn't really accurate. The absence of divorce should not in and of itself constitute a "success." I would contend that marriage ending in divorce is much more successful than a marriage that endures abuse. With those caveats aside, the group's with the highest divorce rates are women with more than 10 sexual partners and women with 2 sexual partners prior to marriage. If there were a clear line of causality that more = divorce, the 3-9 cohort would reflect an increase compared to 2 partners. And while both 0 and 1 partner have lower divorce rates, this is readily explained by two factors: 1) virgin marriage is associated with religion which not only stigmatises pre-marital sex but also stigmatises divorce. The data show this religious relationship to be accurate. Additionally, those who enter a marriage with children from a prior relationship have lower rates of reported marital satisfaction than those who do not have children, and those with 1 previous partner were less likely to have a child. Overall, there is simply insufficient evidence available to conclude that the increase in partners causes higher rates of divorce. It is just as likely and perhaps even more likely that the characteristics which lead one to have more than 10 partners also affect marital stability. All in all, there's no reason to drift back to stigmatising pre-marital sex and no support for the myth of diminished pair bonding.	Sex, Sexual	Gender - General	4/257	1.556

The age old tale of why men can sleep around and it's looked at as okay and not for women is explained VERY EASILY... Women: If a man who was wearing skin tight pants and a pink v neck came up to you said "Heey giiirrrlll" with a limp hand wave would YOU find that attractive? 99 of you will say NO. Why? Because that's looks FEMININE. In nature, almost all the time the male chases the female, HE gets on top of HER and has sex with her (if she allows it), but this is a MASCULINE behavior to chase and have sex. Sooooo ladies... when YOU a woman chases men, has a lot of sex.. YOU LOOK MASCULINE to men when you act that way and men find it very very unattractive. You can go ahead an write all the blog posts, YouTube videos, shut down traffic for protests to tell men to think differently, it will NEVER WORK. Men look at women who sleep around the same: They serve ONE purpose and ONE purpose ONLY. So if you are a woman and you sleep around AND people know you do... THIS is why you can't KEEP a man. No man takes you seriously. You can try to hide this ladies all you want but you are only damaging yourself, seeking out only the hottest, biggest dick, rich, etc and your standards will grow so high that you will never find a GOOD man who wants ONLY YOU, you will spend you life bitter because you can't get a hot, rich, big dick guy to STAY and the other "average" men aren't good enough anymore, on the eyes or in bed, you spoiled yourself and have no one else to blame but yourself.	Age, Limp, Old, Sex, Woman	Age - General, Age - Over 65s, Gender - General, Physical Identity - Physical (and Mental) Impairments	16/295	5.424
If a promiscuous woman was considered as a masculine trait and puts men off then how does she even achieve promiscuity??? Obviously somewhere in between men do find her attractive enough to be with her otherwise she wouldn't be in that situation. Ancient Fern You see! That's that stubborn and rebellious mentality that is the main reason why most women are finding it hard to get married or even have long term relationships. A woman's past sexual history is absolutely the business of her potential partner because no man wants to marry a whore. No man wants a woman who has an STD. Men want respectable women. Men want women with dignity, honor, modesty and piety. How hard is that for people like you to comprehend?	Sexual, Woman	Gender - General	2/84	2.381

Savage Princess Actually, that's true for WOMEN only. Women will all too often mess around with a guy, knowing that he's seeing multiple women, but they don't care because in their eyes, he's a "alpha male". And women will kill each other over some alpha dick. Tell me I'm wrong. My point is, it doesn't matter if a man is a whore, because women will still deal with us, regardless. So long as we have money, good looks and high status. But the same can't be said for women. Men only love whores so that we can fuck em, and then move on to the next one. Men don't marry whores because they're only good for sex , not companionship.	Sex	Gender - General	1/119	0.84

William Toy dear me. Nope. Never contradicted myself at all even a single time. There is no direct causal relationship between the number of sexual partners and non-divorce. The rates of divorce are most readily explained by external variables unrelated to number of partners.You should make actual arguments rather than just making unfounded assertions.	Sexual	Gender - General	1/55	1.818
William Toy as to your point that no one is stigmatising pre-marital sex , you are asserting that a woman with multiple partners leads to less successful marriage. I summarised the research that this is not the case. I also highlighted the relevant statistical factors which influence the appearance of a correlation. There are further factors which confound the figures as well: individuals who have divorced once are more likely to be divorced twice; if they remarry, that's yet another partner which reflects a false correlation between partners rather than extraneous variables, such as personality traits which make one more prone to divorce.But hey... Don't let facts ruins your day. By all means argue against the available evidence (I will start providing links if necessary). There is np causal function identified as implies. Only virgins should be paired with virgins. Men who have sex can't complain when a woman does the same. Men and women don't even view sex the same. Sex for women is based on her emotions and for men it's a biological desire hence why men are so much more visual than women. But when women start to wise up and see how valuable vagina really is, that's when they learn how to get what they want out of life (assuming they are okay to look at). Anterea W with all due respect, I don't believe that players are hiding their true colors. I think women KNOW that they are picking bad mates, but are pretending to not know. To prove that is true, how do you explain how women are able to pick up on nice guys with pretty much 100 accuracy, and weed them out early, in search of the players and bad boys? Do you really think an intelligent person believes that you can be that great at recognizing nice guys, while being woefully unable to pickup on players and bad boys? It's BS. Men are onto your game. That's why the MGTOW guys, incels, and all of those guys are often harsh when they speak to you. They know you are not honest about what you like, and what turns you on. It's not nice guys.The reality is that the overwhelming majority of women want bad boy sex , but they don't want to be judged for it, so they pretend that they "don't know" that the guys they're dating/chasing are players or bad boys. But, you DO know, and men KNOW that you know. The dishonesty is the biggest issue.	Sex	Gender - General	1/198	0.505
Mr. Don wtf is even this "bad boy" and "nice guy narrative"? It is very possible to not know. Just like guys don't know the person they marry and then complain about them later. I didn't specify players particularly. You act like everyone's colors are so easily identified all the time. I didn't read all of that, but if you guys want to live your life hating all women because of what a few has done to you, then by all means go for it. What it seems like, is that all of you are projecting. I'm sure most of the time people know who is bad or whatever but on the sex department I cannot speak on. Anterea W lol, you just exposed yourself. I never said that a woman should date a man just because he's nice. But, if you reject decent guys, stop complaining about getting cheated on and dogged out by the ones that you do pick. After all, he was YOUR choice. It's not rocket science. And yes, it is VERY EASY to know which guys are players and bad boys, and which ones are nice guys. Only an idiot wouldn't know. For the sake of this conversation, you know what those terms mean...we all do. Don't pretend like I am making it up. There's that feigning ignorance again.You women act like just because you're with a guy, he is supposed to have sex with only you...NO. You don't own him (especially if you are just his girlfriend...you have no right to stop him from sexing another woman if he wants). Am I saying that he should? No. I'm just acknowledging that you never own another human being. An alpha male will NEVER be with just one woman . Being with just one woman is the morally right thing to do, but it's unnatural for a male (the same is not true for a female, no matter how much society tries to make men and women equal). I'm not advocating it, but I recognize that it is what it is. Men aren't better than women, and women aren't better than men, but we're NOT equals, and never will be. Societal changes can't change what is biological...it only screws people up in the head. There's a reason why women are more unhappy now than ever before, yet they have more rights and freedoms than ever.	Sex, Woman	Gender - General	5/281	1.779
Mr. Don lol I don't "hate" nice guys. I don't know how you got that from what I said. Maybe you just want to believe that. "Nice guys" sometimes aren't really nice well at least the fraudulent ones and some are pushovers. You can be a "nice guy" without being a pushover. Some guys get that part wrong. You're waiting on a woman's hand and foot, doing everything, never contradicting her, giving her everything she wants and never setting boundaries. This is what attracts the bitches of the female race the most. The "bitches" love this and will take advantage, which causes guys to become women hating assholes, when the "nice girls" did nothing to you. I personally would go for a genuinely nice guy that is compatible with me, but other women maybe not so much.	Nothing, Race	Age - Youngsters, Ethnicity - General	2/137	1.46

Anterea W so, you do realize that nice guys CHOOSE to be nice, and "pushovers", right? They know that they can dominate you (the woman ) if they want to, but they make the conscious decision not to. You're also calling nice guys fraudulent, without recognizing that players and bad boys are also fraudulent. You do realize that ALL of these personas are acts, right? In reality, EVERY guy is ALL of these things...just some are a little more of one than the other at a given time. You exposed your disdain for nice guys by saying that a woman shouldn't date a nice guy just because he's nice (which I never said that they should), but a decent woman WOULD choose a nice guy over a player or a bad boy every time, if she's a sane, logical individual. This last comment exposed your hatred for nice guys again by calling them fraudulent. There's no bigger fraud than a player or bad boy. It's not even a real thing. It's a persona that guys create because they know that most women are attracted to it, and it's used to get a lot of cheap, easy sex from whores and slutty women. No guy is born a player, or bad boy. All men start out as nice guys when they are young, and life experiences (past failures, and seeing what works for other guys in society) causes them to adapt throughout life. I'm speaking from experience. I'm a seasoned guy who has been all 3 (nice guy, bad boy, and player) at different points in my life. When you put on both the player and bad boy persona, women almost trip over themselves trying to date and/or sleep with you, and when you recognize this, it makes you dislike them, because you realize how screwed up they are. They're basically bad people. When you're the nice guy, you tend to attract the sweet, nerdy girls, country girls, church girls (not the fake ones...the true ones), and girls raised in stable, two-parent homes. Mr. Don you also act like it's black and white when IT'S NOT. I didn't express my dislike for nice guys. I just gave you a perspective of what it may be. This conversation isn't about me as an individual. Like I said before this is pointless, because you just twist the things I say into what you want to believe. Have a good day, sir. Anterea W lol, you're being irrational, and I am not upset. It's interesting that you consider a man being nice to you as a lack of respect for himself. That makes absolutely no sense, but most men have come to understand that women's brains work this way, which is why you have what you have now in the dating world. You say that people shouldn't be fake, but almost EVERYONE is fake...men and women both. Women are far more deceptive to the opposite sex than men are. That's not even a debate.	Sex	Gender - General	1/92	1.087

Anterea W it is very black and white. Women just create gray areas in their own minds. It's all in your head. A woman has a choice between a nice guy, and a bad boy/player. There's no in-between guy. You WANT there to be...but there's not. It doesn't exist. This is the reality that most people never directly express, so it's never confronted. Feminists lied. You CANNOT have it all. You must be an adult, make a choice, and accept what goes along with it. Period. You have a nice day too, ma'am. LOL	Black, Woman	Ethnicity - Black, Gender - General	2/94	2.128
Mr. Don omg, that wasn't even what I said. You need to go reread the examples that I gave you some SOME nice guys. I never said that all nice guys were that way. I was referring to doormat nice guys in a relationship. Idk why I bother to explain to you. You're adamant on not understanding at all. There is a gray area, because not everyone is the same. If you want to live your life with this idea of everyone woman being painted as a horrible person then ok. I just can't with this anymore.	Woman	Gender - General	1/98	1.02
YorickReturns They become resentful and bitter because they blame all the men for their own actions when they could have just closed their legs. It's not a challenge for women to be decisive about their bodies because we were not designed for many men at all. There is a reason virginity in many societies is still taken seriously. I have many African friends and they still have virginity ceremonies and value it with pride while they find good men to marry. I was raised the same way.	African	Ethnicity - Black	1/87	1.149
7QCM87XHN5QKE4 I don't think a woman who is a virgin or hasn't slept around much wants a man who has slept with 200 people.	Woman	Gender - General	1/24	4.167
I hear where you're coming from, but in this hyper-sexualized world along with many of us trying to do nofap is that we have been so immersed and drowned in cheap free sex without consequences only to find it emotionally destructive that it's difficult for us to fight against all of that to actually have the romantic caring and affectionate relationships we really should be having and should want because it's just so foreign to everything around us culturally anymore	Sex	Gender - General	1/80	1.25
