Hi I'm black , therefore i know everything about how white people think and behave.	Black	Ethnicity - Black	1/14	7.143
I'm so glad you put this video out. It makes everything so much clearer. When I was beaten, called names based on the color of my skin for 2 years and eventually raped in a Detroit school, that was bigotry. What made it reverse racism is when the teachers wouldnt do anything because I was the only white kid in the school and it would look like preferential treatment, when the principle said they wouldnt do anything because I was white, when the superintendent said they wouldnt do anything because I was white and therefore must have instigated it (I was 7 years old ), and when we couldnt file a police report because the black cop told me I didnt know what racism felt like, or when every lawyer we went to (all black ) refused to take our case because we were white so this wasn't a case of racism . In Detroit, in the 90's all the power was in the hands of a race that was not mine. Since bigotry+ power equals= racism . Thanks for proving to me, and the world that reverse racism exists. No, reverse racism does not exist. Racists who happen to be POC exist. Deal. With. The. Reality. Thank you for this basically already debunked video, I'm just going to examine the matter on a deeper level. First of all, there is no "correct definition" of anything. Words do not have some external meaning outside waiting to be discovered all the way. Language, too, is a social construct as we all know. So then how do we assign unique definitions to unique words to reduce ambiguity? Simple. We agree on it. But to pick a definition to agree on is based on practicality of using the same word. Sometimes, a same word can have 2 or more definitions, depending when it is used. Consider the word "theory". When we casually use it, we use it as a synonym to a "hypothesis, opinion, possibility" and that is the philosophical definition of theory. It has its purpose in casual talk, "I have a theory that Rachel is hiding something behind your back". The scientific definition, however, is a hypothesis that continues to get along with evidence we have found (or something along those lines). Gravitational theory, theory of evolution. It's useful because scientists can differentiate a plain hypothesis and a theory with zero ambiguity. Of course, the problem arises when we confuse the definitions. This is the case when creationists argue that evolution is "just a theory". A very famous and irritating thing to happen between the arguing of theist and atheist communities (I didn't wanna bring this up but whatever I'm trying to split the cookie) Your point about cars is plainly wrong. A false analogy to be exact. The mechanics don't define what a car is any differently, they just know cars better. Sociologists don't have an ultimate authority on a word. The word may be tied to them, but they know the concept of the word better, not the word itself. Now it's time to apply logic to this debate. When to use the "prejudice+power" definition that we either hate or love? For us non-sociology mortals, we don't use it unless we refer to a sociologist discussion where it is used. When we refer to someone else's topic, we play on their field. But we should generally use the "prejudice/discrimination" definition. For sociologists, they are allowed to use the "prejudice+power" definition so long it doesn't create ambiguity and it helps resolve the racism-related problem within a state. I don't know what sociology works with so I can't say anything in its name but there may be cases. But when does the "prejudice+power" definition fail? Ask enough "what ifs" and you'll see. What if there is a state with perfectly no power of any race over another. Who is racist there? What is there are two states, one is white-dominated, one is black-dominated. A white person online offends a black person from the other state. Is it racist? A white person from the first state migrates to the second state. Does their ability to be racist vanish into thin air? Or maybe let's refer to the white country again. What if there are two oppressed races and a member of one is prejudiced against another? Answer all of these questions, and you will get contradictory answers guaranteed. Unless you deny that racism is a property of an individual and that is a quality a state possesses. Then no individual is technically racist. And who wants to work with that? Or, perhaps sociologists could make up a new word to take the "prejudice+power" definition, like I don't know, racismism. This would resolve or reduce the ambiguity. Racism is not a complicated issue until you allow	Black, Race, Racism, Racist, Thin, Zero	Age - Youngsters, Ethnicity - Black, Ethnicity - General, Physical Identity - Physical Features	10/614	1.629

But Obama was the head of institutional power as president of the united states of america. So reverse racism does exist. You cant say stuff doesnt exist and put out so called facts then ignore real facts. You have to accept the truth and not just what makes you personally feel good. Wearing a blonde wig and faking a british accent is pretty racist . You have the power because its your Youtube channel and video. You see power is all perspective. So if you have more power socially than others you too can be racist by your own logic. You didnt see that because you are psychologically going to take the easy way out and stop when it comes to looking at yourself and where you stand. Its alot easier to look at others and point a finger and judge them. Just live your life and do the best you can do without looking for reasons to be excuses so you can make yourself feel better about your own shortcomings in life. You are a adult and not a child so grow up and take personal responsibility in life. You will live a much more fullfilling life when you get over being pissed at the world. My goodness, the condescending way in which she spouts such utter nonsense is hilarious.For starters, race is not a social construct. There are biological difference between white & black people. This is self evident just by looking at them, one is white & one is black & it's not because the black person has had too much sun.Secondly, that reverse racism stuff. Pack it in with that. If a black person is discriminating on a white person based on their race then it's racism plain & simple.The reason you wish to separate black on white racism from white on black is obvious. You're simply trying to discredit your own racism to give you a free hand.This was apparent when you played the white girl in this video. If I put on a stereotypical black American accent & put on a black persona you would probably call that racist . But it's ok for you to do it because for some reason you believe that white people should be held to a higher standard than you.& The fact that MTV is pushing this dribble is shocking. I am officially entering the matrix. Dear people in the comments section. I'm going to take the time to answer all of you because your pretentious tone annoyed me and you may have the opportunity to learn something. First, let's take a collective deep breath! You're in for a bumpy ride. Let's start by exploring the fact that American institutions were built on the concept of white supremacy at the exclusion of others. With rare and notable exceptions these institutions were and are steeped in long traditions of legal white supremacy throughout our most important public and consequently private institutions. Let's take for example the judicial system. A system that continues to oppress black and Latinx Communities through their disproportionate sentencing. This is quantified by the way- there is research available. Feel free to google that. Another breath might be useful here. Another great example is the legislative branch. Politicians (particularly republicans) have tried to suppress the vote of people of color, in particular the black vote , and poor people at large (poor people references a group that has a larger number of white people than most realize but it disproportionately affects communities of color). This is also quantifiable, so fell free to google away. Now I think it's important that we engage in a dialogue regarding the treatment of people of color (particularly black folks) in this country. But it's more important that we come to that conversation well informed and with real substantive research on the topic. I also think it's important to find the growing number of research that has been done on what racism actually does to the brain and behavior of the white person or non black person . There is ample research available on peoples reactions to conversations on race because it's important to recognize the signs that lead white folks to experience white fragility (which all of you seem to be suffering from) and the ample other defense mechanisms that have been developed to deny difference and responsibility. It is not the responsibility of people of color to educate you on these inequities, but if you are going to make these assertions that these things are making it look like 'whites' are out to get you, it that is just social justice propaganda you need to sit down and do some research. Also don't hide behind your ridiculous contempt for education. Those of us who've spent considerable money on higher education also have substantive criticisms of our educational institutions while at the same time understanding their value in understanding our complex world.So happy googling...	Black, Race, Racism	Ethnicity - Black, Ethnicity - General	6/433	1.386

Mikayla Bonner explain this:White man violently attacks a black man because of his skin color, the black man dies. That is racism because the murderer skin color is white? Black man violently attacks white man because of his skin color, the white man dies. Not racism because the murderer skin color is black ?Chinese man violently attacks a black man because of his skin color, the black man dies. Not racism because only white people can be racist ? Or would the Chinese man be racist because the victim was black ?You realize all situations are identical. However you would like to change the name of the motive of the attack for the White murderer because of oppression and power? WTF.... Why would you do that. They are the same thing, why label it differently. What would you call the motive for the black murderer then? And don't say prejudice, its in the definition of racism . Also why would you change the word or label it differently? Is it less of an offense to not be labelled as racist ? If the new word to replace racism for black people was just as offensive as the word racism then why would you really care what you call it?Your logic is: a white man who flies an airplane is called a airplane pilot. A black man who flies an airplane is not called an airplane pilot because only white people can be called that, however the black man still is flying a plane and doing the exact same thing as the white man, we just call it something else! Mikayla Bonner your definition of racism with oppression and power has flaws though, not all white people have power and oppression, meaning your definition could actually change depending what country you live in. In parts of the world the definition would not exist for white people. Mikayla Bonner So educate me. Like I am foing to you.Today I'm going to tell you why the argument for that black people cant be racist is a myth. The most common argument is privlage plus power. Or the power structures argument. It is the notion that because that white people have not been oppressed back then society that they can be racist toward them.1: The SJW definitions which stipulate that racism and sexism must be systematic are not found in any dictionary.2: We are going to break down white privilege. White people do not have any edge in America in today's society and government. The reason that people think otherwise is because people want equality of outcome not equality of opportunity. We have equality of opportunity which means that black people can do as much as white people with out discrimination. But what people fail to understand is that if we had equality of outcome that would mean that we would have created a society that does not support work because you no matter how good you would do in the job you would not get more money so in turn you would not be incentivised to work harder. This has already been tried and it faild you might know it as communist Russia.Now for power. Black people can can be elected by the people to the highest office in the land twice in a row. For eight years. Now I dont know what that tells you other than black people can get into any powerful position in the world. But again this comes back to people wanting equality of outcome. The reason that white people hold more powerful positions it because there culture. Now this is vague so I will explain. Asian culture is centered around getting a college degree and getting a high paying job. But on the other side black people do the opposite they shun people who who want to learn. So before you come and attack white people because they hold positions that black people can get why dont you ask why are they not motivated to get to those positions.So now that we have broken down the fundamentals of the argument and disproved them I ask you why do you think that reverse racism is real. Racism is discrimination by race . Saying things like "white people can't " IS racist , in the same way that " black people can't " is racist . Anyone can be a racist ; racism does NOT have to be institutional (also known as de jure), but can also be de facto, meaning that it isn't supported (or not supported!) by law, it just is. A white supremacist rally is racist . That is not institutional. You claim, and I am paraphrasing, that the dictionary definition of racism is wrong. What I mean by that is you claim that having institutionalized power is a prerequisite for being racist and the dictionary definition saying otherwise proves nothing. It is absolutely true that dictionaries can be wrong, I am not going to argue that. However, I request for anyone who wants to alter the official meaning of racism, the burden of proof is on them to explain why the definition has to be altered and their definition should be accepted instead. Every time someone who believes that power structures argument to makes sense attempts to explain why the dictionary definition is wrong, the answer is always a clear demonstration of circular reasoning. Said conversation usually goes something like this. Erica, who is white, argues with a black man named Tyrone. Erica calls Tyrone out for being racist toward white people.Tyrone responds with 'I am not racist, reverse racism is not real.' Tyrone's response assumes that racism towards white people is impossible. Erica responds 'You are correct, it is not reverse racism. It is just racism.' Tyrone responds by saying 'Nothing I say can be racist, because racism equals prejudice plus power and white people have all the power.' Erica informs Tyrone that the definition of racism that he is claiming is not cited in any dictionary.Tyrone tells Erica that the dictionary is wrong, because only people with insitutionalized power can enforce racism. Tyrone's conclusion is that you cannot be racist towards white people, and at each point in the argument, Tyrone presents an argument predicated on the assumption that his conclusion is true. Even if it were true that power is a prerequisite for racism, the type of power identified in the privilege plus power argument is an arbitrary option taken from many different forms of power. The five types of power are formal authority (power derived from a title, ex. president, senators, court justices, etc.) expertise (power derived from knowledge of a subject, doctors, scientists, etc.) coercion (power to enforce a punishment, ex. police) rewards (power to rewrad someone, usually done with money or something extrinsic but can also use intrinsic things like praise) AND persuassion (ability to convince someone of something). Both white and nonwhite people are capable of both having and not having any one of these types of power. The prejudice plus power argument identifies the power aspect of the equation the ability to enforce prejudice on a societal level through institutions. Not only does this identify the form and scope of power that the person making the argument thinks matters while excluding all other types of power, it arbitrarily draws boundaries that itself needs justification in my opinion. But you know what, just for the sake of argument, let's assume that institutional power is actually a prerequisite for being racist. The prejudice plus power argument is still a non-sequiter. All that follows from the claim that institutionalized power is the only way to enforce racism is that those with institutionalized power can be racist towards people without institutionalized power. It does NOT follow logically that only white people can be racist. Two other assumptions would need to be made in order to arrive at the conclusion that only white people can be racist. How is this still up on mtv? LMAOOOSDASHJDFSJWHUIDHDMSJkd As a black man I disagree with this. Anyone can be racist . Everyone should not be racist . Its as simple as that. And yes Its hard for some immature people to not hate but thats up to you to know better and to grow tf up and be kind. Sometimes there is terribly bad blood involved from one group taking advantage of their upper hand in the past and we should talk about it so it doesn't repeat itself and so we can fix what ever damage has come from it. We should frown upon it. But we should also try and move forward as human begins and eliminate as much divide as possible. What we should not do is try to make excuses for treating other human beings like shit. Some where in the future black people or any minority group might gain the upper hand in society and Revenge is a terrible thing so giving such a hateful person such a platform is irresponsible. God forbid anyone has to go through what black people have gone through in the past. To a hurt person its may sound sweet but what happens when the person you've hurt gets the upper hand? A repeating cycle. Forgiveness over bullshit. You'll feel better and so will the offspring of what ever race you belong to. As an African Latino, I have been on the receiving end of Racism from African Americans (Blacks). Don't call that "reverse racism ", I call it RACISM!!! There is no such thing as "reverse racism ."I have received it more from African -Americans (Blacks) more then any other ethnicity (Asians come in at close second because they think O'm African American, once I tell them that I am not, they are more friendly to him, even hugging me lol!), because they can not believe that African from other countries don't hate Europeans as much as they do, or blame Europeans for slavery in the past. So what do they do? Call us names like "chicken George" or my favorite "Uncle Tom" (I call it my favorite because I believe Uncle Tom was chosen as one of the "Elect" or Saint, by God, for holding fast to his Christian integrity and not returning "Evil for Evil" unlike Nat Turner, a preacher, who went on a murdering spree, of slave owners and their families, which the Bible does not condon). I have to be honest, every time an African American is shot by a cop (withier they be innocent or guilty, withier they deserve or not).I find it hard to feel ANY thing wrong with it.If you saw me, you would think "Oh, he's Black " but anyone who asks or even if they don't, I disassociate my self quickly by tell them "I am a LATINO "I chose Latin American/Hispanic on the ethnicity /Race selection, because I was born in a Latin-American country and had to aquire my citizenship. African American culture, from an outsiders view, is all about hate, unforgiveness, arrogance, aggressiveness and just general rudeness.Most African Americans will see racism or racist intentions where there is none. Actually the dictionary offers a simple and broad term for the word. If something fits into that broad term then It would be labeled racist. Just like there are many parts to a car, their are many parts to what racism is. I wouldn't pinpoint a tire and say hey that actually is what a car is. And you can't just pinpoint to a part of racism and make that fit your definition of what racism is. Of course institutions and governments can be racists, but look at the broader term and by that definition, any race can be racist. Not just whites. Racism is the generalization of a person based on the color of their skin usually in an inferior way. So yes a person of color can be racist and almost seems that you are fitting the definition to fit you, so that you can defend the things you say.	Race, Racism, Racist	Ethnicity - General	8/152	5.263

The tote about how white people never face institutionalized discrimination is demonstrably false. If you try to claim that institutionalized discrimination against white people does not exist, I invite you to look up the history of Irish and Italian Immigrants in the United States, the public perception of Germans in the early 20th century and the treatment of Jews basically anywhere outside of Israel. I know that not all Jewish people are white, Judaism is a race. What I am saying is that Jewish people face systemic discrimination, despite the fact that some Jewish people are white. To that you might say that I am referencing a different time and place, the power structures argument is only talking about modern day America. The fact that geography makes a difference really only helps support my point, but you know what, let's focus on modern day America. Racially motivated hate crimes happen to white people. Granted, they happen to racial minorities more frequently, but FBI statistics from 2013 report that about one fifth of all racially motivated hate crimes in that year were motivated by anti-white sentiment. In fact, in Washington D.C., white people are more likely to be victims of hate crimes. That statistic about racially motivated hate crimes in 2013 came from this source: 'Latest Hate Crime Statistics Report Released.' FBI, FBI, 8 Dec. 2014, www.fbi.gov/news/stories/latest-hate-crime-statistics-report-released. That statistic about white people being more likely to be victims of racially motivated hate crimes in Washington D.C. came from this source: Noble, Andrea. 'Race-Based Hate Crimes Spike in D.C.; Whites Most Common Victims, but Underreporting Feared.' The Washington Times, The Washington Times, 19 Aug. 2014, www.washingtontimes.com/news/2014/aug/19/race-based-hate-crimes-spike-in-dc/.Where do you get off claiming that a hate crime against a white person, that is motivated by race, does not count as racism, because it isn't being perpetrated by some powerful institution? Walking hand in hand with that point, not all white people are part of a powerful institution. Therefore, even if institutionality were a prerequisite for counting as racism, that would still mean that not all white people are capable of being racist. Some non-white people are parts of powerful institutions. Therefore, a non-white person who is part of a powerful institution, according to the logic of the power structures argument, can be racist toward a less powerful white person. Weather or not the discrimination occurring is common makes no difference to the person experiencing it and it definitely does not make his or her plight less worthy of consideration. If you hate someone because of his or her race and you express that hatred by committing a crime against him or her, you are making him or her a victim. They are not any less of a victim because someone else has it worse. Equality is not a zero sum game. You cannot give justice to one group of people at the expense of another and call it equality. The flaw in that logic can be summed up in one sentence. Two wrongs do not make a right, especially when the second wrong hurts someone who was not even responsible for the first wrong. The Oppression Olympics, where you try to claim that you having it worse than someone else means that that someone else is less	Black, Common, Gender, Race, Racism, Racist, Spike, Woman, Zero	Age - Youngsters, Ethnicity - Black, Ethnicity - General, Gender - General, Religious Identity - Protestant, Social Class - Working class	37/1260	2.937

Institutional racism exists. But reverse racism doesn't exist, youre right. Because its just racism . You cant change the innate principle of racism based on demographic majority. Its still racism . How convenient for a black woman to say she cant be racist . I do sociology. The dictionary was invented in my city, Lichfield, England. It offers definitions. And its also imprtant to recognise, different disciplines offer different definitions. A scoiologist uses the word "validity" different to other. The Subjects of Art and Science still disagree on what the Primary colours are. So you can objectively say racism towards white people doesnt exist even if white people are the majority. Youre using the definition from one school of thought. Sociology was not handed to us on a golden plate when the earth was created. Its not an objective truth. People still debate whether its a humanity or science. So next time, evaluate your statements and maybe you will get more respect from other educated people. So how did sociology decide racism is based on power and privilage? Do you even know? Also, on your premise, i would like to point out that if majority bodies cant experience racism , does the same apply for sexism ? There are more females in the UK than men, does that mean i as a man cant be sexist because im in the minority? Of course it doesnt. So dont be so ignorant as to call things objective. WOW! Where do I even begin?Sociology doesn't say that at all and I studied sociology.The real definition from sociology : The prejudice, discrimination or intolerance based on race. AND THIS DEFINITION IS NOT SIMPLE! The fact is, you can't even understand the 3 words used for this definition otherwise you would suddenly understand YOU ARE RACIST! What you say is not the definition of sociology but mostly part of the current black society. There is a big difference. You first clue should have been that power is subjective.Mocking, ignoring the definition, doesn't make any difference you just changed the definition to suit your need of not be racist. As for your exampleYou don't ask a mechanic to know what a car is, you look at the dictionary. And you can ask an engineer to know how it works they are the one who designed them not mechanics.=====You are not even conscious that you are RACIST. As you said, and I quote "It's not just conscious hatred or dislike".So the issue acknowledging you are RACIST, but you don't want to acknowledge it.=====Race is not social construct it's genetics. You race have a DNA test and it will match the visual markers of race. PLEASE STOP DELUDING YOURSELF!Money is not a social construct it's trading method society has nothing to do with that. TRADING exist since long before money did! We just created a way to facilitate the trading. You can still barter as Oh so many people still do!HAHA! Treating people differently based on race is the problem, but that means everything you previously said is WRONG!Racial prejudice! Racial prejudice is the definition of RACISM, read it! Prejudice based on race.If some black people have trouble getting loans, there is a reason. Loan is not based on race, it's based on revenue. If your revenue is to low then NO LOAN!=====And to finish in beauty I will break even you basic premise of your definition of RACISM, Prejudice and Power or as you yourself "Institutional Power"* * * THIS MEANS * * * that during the 8 years Barack Obama was President NO WHITE IN UNITED STATES COULD HAVE BEEN RACIST AND EVERY BLACK PEOPLE WERE. Because the string of power was in the hands of black people since the highest Institutional Power is the US presidency.Now I hope you can see the irony/stupidity in your entire train of thoughts. Another thing is these sociologists are working with an (intentionally?) obfuscating vocabulary. What they call racial prejudice is what ordinary people call racism , and what ordinary people call oppression, they call racism . Feel like this terminology is designed to foster discontent between the white and minority sectors of the working class, preventing them from uniting against the powers that be. When you remove the rhetoric (and socially breed out the family-based racism ie by moving to a diverse place or the northwest), almost no-one actually hates people of other races. You put two people in a room they'll either fuck or they'll fight and that's a goddamn fact. No one gives a damn about race unless they're stupid, and dialogues like these which provoke a white racism vs ethnic pluralism dichotomy only stoke the fires of racial tension. Racism refers to a variety of practices, beliefs, social relations, and phenomena that work to reproduce a racial hierarchy and social structure that yield superiority, power, and privilege for some, and discrimination and oppression for others. It can take several forms, including representational, ideological, discursive, interactional, institutional, structural, and systemic. Racism exists when ideas and assumptions about racial categories are used to justify and reproduce a racial hierarchy and racially structured society that unjustly limits access to resources, rights, and privileges on the basis of race . Racism also occurs when this kind of unjust social structure is produced by the failure to account for race and its historical and contemporary roles in society.Contrary to a dictionary definition, racism , as defined based on social science research and theory, is about much more than race -based prejudice — it exists when an imbalance in power and social status is generated by how we understand and act upon race . I believe the minds behind this show are trying to reinstate segregation, let me explain:What does a racist want? A racist wants to keep people of different races separated.But a racist can't refuse service to someone based on their skin color, so how do they accomplish this?It's been said that the best way to get someone to do something for you is to convince them that it was their idea. Parents often use this psychological tactic to manipulate their children into behaving themselves, but how does this apply to a racist?Well, let's look at a pretend rich white racist for a moment. We'll call him Bill:Bill owns a broadcasting company that owns several popular television channels and internet news outlets. Bill wants to use these assets to further his goal of separating people by race, but he can't just put his racist propaganda on the air, because the backlash would be huge, rallying people of all races against his cause.So what does Bill do?Well, Bill hires people who are of the race that he wants to segregate, because they will be trusted by those races, seen as people they can relate to. Bill makes sure to green-light programs that talk about how ignorant, selfish, and untrustworthy white people are, so that people who believe these messages will want to avoid white people, because, let's face it, nobody wants to live near ignorant, selfish, untrustworthy people.And so, by putting anti-white messages onto popular websites and television channels, Bill gets his wish of segregation, because minorities who believe this propaganda don't want to move in next door to some untrustworthy, racist, ignorant white person.As a bonus, Bill also gets to laugh as minorities suffer in poverty, because they believe that no white person will give them a job, and no white person will help them in any way if they need it. Bill watches as minorities segregate themselves, all the while believing that it's because it was their idea.It isn't their idea, it's Bill's, and Bill is winning.	Nobody, Race, Racist	Age - Youngsters, Ethnicity - General	10/346	2.89

racism itself really doesn't have much to do with the concept of privilege and the oppressor-victim dichotomy that is frequently discussed in leftist circles. When we pretend that only majority groups can be racist and ethnic minorities cannot, we're creating a deep double standard. For example, in Canada, white people are the majority. If all whites are racist but minorities can never be racist , aren't we holding white people to a far stricter standard? Aren't we acting as though white people are inferior because they all have racism inherent in their consciousness? Because that sounds a lot like racism to me. We are told we can't have a voice on certain issues, because we can never understand or even imagine what it's like to be a racial minority. We are told we benefit from this vague, abstract concept of white privilege, just because we worked hard to be successful. We are told that we are to blame for past injustices such as colonialism, assimilation, and slavery. My point here is not at all to say that white people are victims and facing all kinds of discrimination, nor is it to say that black people, Asians, Arabs, and others are racist oppressors. I actually believe I live in a society that values a person's character more than the colour of their skin—and I want it to stay that way! Making sweeping generalizations about all white people, accusing us of being racist and oppressive solely based on our race , silencing us, and mocking us is racism , pure and simple. But I happen to think that all forms of racism are wrong, even racism directed towards white people. This helped me understand a little bit more .But I'm still confused on why a white person practicing racial prejudice to a person of color (not just black people) is considered racist , but when a person of color does the same thing to a white person it is just simply racial prejudice not racism . Your point is coming off that racism is more towards a group as a whole in Society but how can when you have this example. Also u show that u believe whites do have more power in the country of America because whites are the majority of the population so we can be racist but if a white person goes to an Asian country (or a country with the majority population being people of color) and makes racial prejudice statement does that mean white aren't being racist because whites don't have the power in that country and don't take up the majority of the country? Lmao no. If you genuinely believe that your race is superior, that is NEVER only prejudice, because being prejudice just means that you make ignorant assumptions and often subconsciously ('pre judge'). Believing in a race's superiority you have to have a set of beliefs (-ism). Many black people believe they are genetically superior. And that's all that you need to be racist . Power + prejudice is required to be SYSTEMATICALLY racist specifically, which you can't be towards white people. Systematic racism is when any racist ideology is supported systematically. Prejudice, racism and systematic racism all have different definitions. yes institutional power and individuals together can be racist however i don't think its helpful to conflate them together and not look at them at an individually level. If power shifts to where the African american become the ones with more power do white people then become unable to be racist ? like in a place like Africa. 5:23 Just because somebody is afraid, doesn't mean he has a reason to. I get a panic attack every time I see a police car behind me, even though I was never pulled over randomly without a reason. And I am white, and in a country where the policemen have much more restrictions than US policemen. (Poland) Why am I afraid? Because I have heard enough about how terrible the policemen in my country are. My experience directly contradicts that narration, but I still panic.And as a side note, I have heard only a few cases in the entire country in the past years about policemen abusing authority. Why do people then think it happens all the time? Because there was a time when it did happen all the time, and the narration was passed down from the times when it was accurate to times when it's not any more.There are from time to time cases of police brutality, in both countries. But what I found is that in Poland every now and then there are cases of police brutality on the news and after further investigation you find that most of them are accurate, others are exaggerated (policeman justifiably uses rubber bullets, some really unfortunate guy actually dies from it, "Policeman killed a young man in cold blood").In the US however, most cases are actually justified (Michael Brown), or exaggerated by the news, I remember only one or two cases when a black man was actually shot for no reason at all. They don't have the power? Ok. So when I lived in the South in a predominantly black neighborhood, and got kicked out of the library for being white, that wasn't a black person having systemic power over me? When we tried to report it, the sheriff that visited my house (also black ) who basically made fun of me before telling me that I just needed to move, that wasn't systemic power over me either, right? When I asked him if he was intentionally being rude just because I was white, and he said yes, and there's not a God damned thing you can do to prove it, that wasn't him asserting his systemic power over me? When my boss made sure that everyone in the store got a raise BUT me, and cut my hours when I asked for more, and kept me working on days I asked off, threatening to fire me if I called in, he didn't have systemic power over me? Your argument is not only short sighted, it's completely invalid. Perhaps THINK before you speak for everyone. Your sociology teacher doesn't know everything. Edit I forgot to add the science teacher (also black ) who told me I was too stupid for science, but that my 'white privilege' would get me through, when I had a PASSION for the subject, and in fact did above average before his class, I guess he didn't have the systemic power behind him either. Institutional power is world wide? what exact institution are you talking about? US government is unarguably the most powerful institution in the world and even they have 0 power in down town Beijing. The most powerful institution in that region is unarguably the Chinese state. The poor white fellow in this scenario will find himself in the middle of Chinese capital, subjected to Chinese laws and surrounded by majority Chinese population. How can we exactly measure the amount of institutional power in any given geographical location? Can you please make me a map?The thing is that this definition of racism is used by maybe a few thousand SJW around the world including some prominent professors, but none of these people OWN the English language. Racism is an old word and the meaning of it has already set in popular culture. The most common definition for racism is "prejudice based on race" or something along these lines. (and before you went to university that's also how you defined it yourself). It should be also noted that this is not the legal definition of racism (thank god).	Common, Old, Race, Racism	Age - Over 65s, Ethnicity - General, Social Class - Working class	7/186	3.763
Also regarding the Zimbabwe argument - in 2000 a large portion of white farmers were driven off from their farm lands or killed by the Mugabe government. This is a clear case where one racial group used the institutional power (Zimbabwean government paramilitary forces) to violently expel another racial group (act of prejudice) . This should surely fit your definition of racism (prejudice+power)? No? So now I wonder, If I'm using the N-word in Zimbabwe, am I being racist or just prejudice ?	Racism, Racist	Ethnicity - General	2/83	2.41
s4ss Apparently according to his logic the Zimbabwe government is being controlled by rich white people, so it doesn't fit the bill and those Zimbabweans aren't being racist. Andrew Curran Okay it SEEMS like you are trying to set up a system to make whites always the bad guys. Even if someone shows you a situation where none whites have more power you just zoom out the scale to globally, so no specific example can disprove your narrative.But I can prove Franny is talking nonsense without reference to white poeple.if an arab is racist against blacks in Saudi Arabia, he has the institutional power in that county.if he does it in Zimbawae, he is not racist as he does not have power there.Even if I accept your silly racist ideas that whites hold global power, racism is still situational under this model.If I move people to differnet countries, I cna change who has the power and who is the racist.I wonder, in the example I gave, at which exact moment on the plan ride the arab would switch from not being racist to racist? Here's the thing...the dictionary defines racism on an individual level, sociology is defining societal or "institutionalized" racism (that's the "prejudice + power" equation you mentioned). Institutionalized racism is a coherent and concerted form of individual racism . The former cannot survive without the latter, but crucially not the other way around. This is what I call a "house of cards argument" it seems like it could be legit if you're not paying attention. But upon slight examination it falls apart. Also when you have to use props in an argument it's never a good sign. Now 1 you're describing racial bias not racism . 2 I agree with you 3 I agree with you. 4 I would refer you to my first statement. Btw "racial prejudice" is racism . " Racism " is a form of prejudice hun , just like is sexism is a form of prejudice. You're talking about a less specific form of the same thing. Smoke and mirrors. I thought we were suppose to judge people based on the content of their character. "Reverse racism isn't a thing," she says. Then she proceeds to advocate reverse racism by saying, "but when a person of color discriminates or stereotypes a white person because of their race ...they (People of color) don't have the institutional power to back them up and say that those feelings are okay." But apparently white people do. It's like saying racism is no longer considered by intent, it's just that white people are racist and don't know it. If you can't catch someone being racist , it's okay. Just make false racist claims that they are probably racist and use that to get sympathy. nice argument. ... except sociology makes a distinction between racism as an action and racism as an ideology. the kkk for example uses racism as an ideology, saying "fuck ners, y'all are all good for nothing gangsters" is a racist action. sociology states that racism as AN IDEOLOGY is prejudice + power. but racism as an individual action is only that prejudice. therefore, sociologists make a distinction between this two arguments "Blacks are all racists" and "this black person is racist " the first can only be true if blacks were to hold any important place of power in society .... Idk like president or something. whereas the second one applies to ANY INDIVIDUAL DISCRIMINATING, FOR GOOD OR BAD, ON A RACE BASIS. This is a seriously flawed argument, that obviously hasnt been thought through. The argument actually destroys itself. Saying black people cant be racist because you need power is flawed because the US isnt the only country in the world, You cant have a definition that only applies to the US. The other thing is black and white people are not the only races. White people dont have power in every country of the world. What about an African country run by black people? Can they be racist towards minorities? Or in the US, what if a black man is racist towards an Asian? The Asian doesnt have "institutional power" so by your own definition it must be racist . So a black man can be racist . How did they even come up with this? Sociology does not define it that way. It is proposed as a way to view rasism in order to see how that changes the data. Sociology is not a dictionary, it is essentially p-hacking with the intention to see if it opens up new venues for interpretation. In sociology you can view racism as a tool developed by people who want social power by degrading others by calling them racists. Sociology uses what is called "tools" or "perspectives" in plural to see what sticks. I am sorry for the WoT, but this misrepresentation of sociology irks me.	Racism	Ethnicity - General	1/97	1.031

Grace Cynthia I think she's engaging in the tactic that many so-called "anti-racists" engage lately. They want to redefine the word " racist " and add a bunch of idiotic unnecessary collectivistic tenets so that black people and other "minorities" get away with hypocrisy by not having the most used, misused, and overused word in the English language thrown at them when they engage in irrational discriminatory acts. She is misusing and politicizing intellectual information. The definition of racism she is using is called the "sociological perspective of racism ." Within different forms of scholarship, definitions are often rewritten for the purpose of studying it from the perspective of that form of study. Sociologists study society. Because racism against a white person has no overarching effect on society, it is necessary that when talking about racism as a sociologist, you must only be talking about racism at a societal level. This however does not mean that racism doesn't happen or isn't racism at other levels. It just means it doesn't have a measurable effect on the overall function of the structure. Other disciplines have similar terms that are defined specifically to discuss a topic from the perspective of that discipline. But sorry Franchesca, that isn't how that works. The key flaw in this lady's argument - the dictionary offers a definition of the word racism , sociology explains how people act in racist ways. These are two different things. Let's stick with her car analogy. The dictionary defines a car as "a road vehicle, typically with four wheels, powered by an internal combustion engine and able to carry a small number of people" - but if we want to understand how a car works we talk to a mechanic. This is all true, but the key point is, that if something corresponds with the dictionary's definition of a car we must call it a car, thus, something that corresponds with the dictionary's definition of racism is called and must be called racism . Prejudice and racism ARE the same thing. Racism isn't power + prejudice, it's judging someone based on their race. Simple as that. There's nothing complicated about it, and power has nothing to do with it. If you judge someone based on the color of their skin, their nationality, or where they came from, it's racist. That includes racism against white people. Yet somehow it's okay for black people or other minorities to judge white people BECAUSE THEY ARE WHITE. Of course, it would be unthinkable for it to go the other way. It's like how some black student unions demanded black only dorms because they didn't want to have white people for roommates. Now, if that was switched and if people demanded white only dorms, people would get incredibly offended. And they would have the right to, because that's racist. No matter what ethnicity you come from, black, white, Asian, Muslim, or any other of the many minorities, you can be racist. And people can be racist against you. Always treat others as you want to be treated, and everyone should always be treated equally. Being a minority gives you no right to make racist comments against white people or other minorities and have it waved off as "oh, they can't be racist, they're black." It shouldn't work like that. Boy do I miss the old MTV. They used to play my Missy Elliot jams n’ shit. Now they broadcast this pussy shit.Anyway, here is my opinion on this.. Not that anyone asked. On the contrary to what you are preaching, Franny, I know that some black people can and are more racist to white people now than ever before. Some of them feel that they are getting some kind of revenge we as individuals were not involved in. If someone was racist to you, there is no reason to be racist back. Put out the fire and stop igniting it by ”getting back” at them. Some people are just racist , no matter what race . And they can be stuck in their ways. But that doesnt mean you get to generalize that group of people that person identifies with. Not all white people are racist . Hell, even some white people say that all white people are racist . Its very simple-minded to think that. You cant just make an assumption about a whole group of people just because one person was rude to you. You’re right, we cant just ignore races. But by identifying people by their names and who they are as a person, we get one step closer to exterminating racism . I just feel like some people like to play victim and complain about life and being oppressed. But that is no way to live.. If you are scared of everything and everybody, you never meet these wonderful people along the way and see these places and different cultures. Speaking of culture... I think that if people celebrate other people’s cultures, it is a good thing and a learnig experience. I know someone who is dating a latina and they are white. They share each others’ culture and they both learn from each other this way. Its a beautiful thing when different people can come together and share their history with each other. We dont have to dwell in the bad times.Sorry, I was a bit everywhere.. I guess dont take this too hard. This modern society is just so sensitive and paranoid. First of all, there is no "human race ". Human is a species. All of the races are part of the same species. That is, they can all reproduce with one another. Technically there are races of human but because of past usage of this, there is a global consensus (more or less) to not use the race labels on humans. The " race " label/category is a problematic one even regarding other animals nowadays as biology have problems with their categorization because of the introduction of DNA rather than judging by expertise, region and other factors (as most of the name/labels came before). There is nothing wrong with noticing differences but calling people different races today have become a bigger deal than what it actually is. Also skin colour is not the sole factor of dividing humans into races, that is just ignorant to believe and I think most people get that today. Not completely sure I buy the argument that reverse racism can't exist because racism requires the consent of the majority establishment. If so, then groups like the KKK would be considered "just prejudice not racism " because society at large disapproves of what they do and have made it illegal. But it's racism . Similarly when I got bullied every day growing up in California by the cool kids because I was white-it was racism . Power need not radiate from the central government to be power-a group of big tough kids have plenty of power if there's no one around to stop them.	Racism	Ethnicity - General	5/101	4.95

Your argument is horrible. The fact that you think racism can only be done by whites is absurd, ABSURD. Here is where you are wrong:1. You mentioned that people of color can be racially prejudice, but not racist because they are not backed up by any institutuon (the don't have power essentially) to do anything about their feelings. People of color can definitely be in and are in positions of power, unless Obama (our president for the past 8 years) has a really bad tan. To add on, you said there is no one to back it up for them making to make it okay, but when whites are racist there is. That is not only implying that its okay when white people are racist, but also that racism is okay in general which is racist and hypocritical.2. If you can only be racist if you have an institution backing you up, that means the KKK can not be racist. The KKK is not backed by any institution so can they not be racist? OF COURSE NOT. So that again proves that you do not need an institution backing you up for it to be racism and not racial prejudice.3. Racism according to the dictionary (not some BS that I made up to make my opinion seem more believable) is discrimination, prejudice, etc... done to another race based on the belief that your own race is superior. Meaning, if a person of color even believed that their race was superior to a white person's race, and the were prejudice towards whites that would therefore make them racist.4. The fact that you believe there aren't people of color in positions of power in institutions is nonsense. In my school I have an Asian principal, and a black vice-principal. If our principal expelled every white student from our school, based the the belief that her race is superior to whites, this would be a perfect example of a person of color in a position of power being RACIST to people of different races. Now, im not saying she did do that, but COULD she have done that? Absolutely! Proving that it might be rare that something like this is done, but it CAN be done. In other words meaning people of color CAN be racist to white people, but often are not.5. I have no hate intended towards you, you seem like a great person. What's funny is if someone was pretending to be black , this would be racist , yet trying to play out "white stereotypes" isn't? That sounds like hypocrisy.So, let's really dive into this:Sociology DOES NOT define racism as prejudice plus power. It sees racism as the basic idea: being prejudiced against someone of a different race as yours. That simple. Power or not. This "going a little deeper" seems to try to justify one race being racist over others....which is racist in itself. There are different types of racism , too...but the general idea has nothing to do with power. What I find funny is how this video tries to just look at institutional racism as some blanket term for all. It falls short of the truth.So, the idea that reverse racism not being a thing is true...sort of. It's just racism all the same. There's no "reverse" about it. It's racism , period. Oh, and racial prejudice IS racism . If you see someone of a different race as worse than you (or "wrong"), that's racism ...PERIOD. And, it's rather racist , too, to try to justify (in a way) this prejudice by somehow overlooking the power that black people do have (and by trying to make some ignorant argument that black people somehow "can't" be racist ). What I find really funny is that this video does a good job at implying that racism is something that only occurs against black people. Racism occurs, sadly, to all races. There are school districts who have not hired people based on them not being black . What would that be called? And, if racism is prejudice plus power, could a group of white people who have no power be racist ? Or would that somehow exclude them from this definition?Let me say this: Prejudice (when it comes to race ) and racism ARE the same thing. The dictionary is faulty because the explanation comes from the same racist institution, which will of course, downplay the reality to make whites feel comfortable and pretend that they are normal because, everyone else is also racist . NOT. Racism is literally about white genetic survival. GREAT explanation, but it even goes deeper than that, and this is why whites avoid the conversation, they perceive it as an attack against their very existence. Racist DNA is hardwired in whites, and they cannot change. Klo Those two sentences are two separate thoughts. KKK does both. They are aligned politically with local and state agencies in law and legislature AND they use cross burnings to instill fear into the black community. Your question is too ludicrous to have merit but I will play along and say yes if the KKK were black cross burners yes they would be racist . Sea Pea How is my question ludicrous? It is your premise that is ludicrous. They're aligned politically with local state agencies? That's a big claim to make, back it up. Sea Pea Dumbass.Today I'm going to tell you why the argument for that black people cant be racist is a myth. The most common argument is privlage plus power. Or the power structures argument. It is the notion that because that white people have not been oppressed back then society that they can be racist toward them.1: The SJW definitions which stipulate that racism and sexism must be systematic are not found in any dictionary.2: We are going to break down white privilege. White people do not have any edge in America in today's society and government. The reason that people think otherwise is because people want equality of outcome not equality of opportunity. We have equality of opportunity which means that black people can do as much as white people with out discrimination. But what people fail to understand is that if we had equality of outcome that would mean that we would have created a society that does not support work because you no matter how good you would do in the job you would not get more money so in turn you would not be incentivised to work harder. This has already been tried and it faild you might know it as communist Russia.Now for power. Black people can can be elected by the people to the highest office in the land twice in a row. For eight years. Now I dont know what that tells you other than black people can get into any powerful position in the world. But again this comes back to people wanting equality of outcome. The reason that white people hold more powerful positions it because there culture. Now this is vague so I will explain. Asian culture is centered around getting a college degree and getting a high paying job. But on the other side black people do the opposite they shun people who who want to learn. So before you come and attack white people because they hold positions that black people can get why dont you ask why are they not motivated to get to those positions.So now that we have broken down the fundamentals of the argument and disproved them I ask you why do you think that reverse racism is real.	Black, Common, Communist, Racism, Racist, Sexism	Ideological and Political Identity - General, Ethnicity - Black, Ethnicity - General, Gender - General, Social Class - Working class	13/380	3.421

Sea Pea Its not ludicrous if you think for one second about the context of it. You said that the kkk has political power because they instill fear in a community(this is a ludicrous idea, the kkk has no political power) therefore I wanted to ask you, if the roles were switched and the people instilling fear would be black , would they still have political power and in that case would they be able to be racist .	Black, Racist	Ethnicity - Black, Ethnicity - General	2/77	2.597
Klo Not "BECAUSE". They have political power "AND" they instill fear in their communities. I didn't say one was the cause if the other. Secondly, Members of the KKK are Judges, police officers and local officials. They hold many positions in the community. Your third point about the roles being switched just makes no sense. Too many questions would have to be answered. Like are black people the still minorities or are they now the dominate race in your scenario? Are black people doing this for a moment or do they also have a hundred year history of doing this? Cross burning is too tied to the identity of the KKK for us to hypothesize about another group acting like them. So maybe you're asking if black people did something to instill fear in white people would they be racist ? If black people got mad and killed all the white people in their communities or threatened to kill them would they be racist and/or political power? The answer would be "no", black people would not be racist and still would have no political power.	Black, Race, Racist	Ethnicity - Black, Ethnicity - General	9/184	4.891

someone needs to kick this racist piece of shit in the face.	Racist	Ethnicity - General	1/12	8.333
Im black and this video is cringeworthy to me. Fuck outta here! This shit is probably funded by George Soros.	Black	Ethnicity - Black	1/20	5.0
Wait, black people can't be racist ? What kind of crap is that?? Anyone can be racist , it's sad but it's true. To say that a certain race can't be doesn't make any sense. I heard a story were two black people were beating up a white lady because she was "in the wrong neighborhood" it's sad and sick to think that they'd beat up a defenseless woman because of her color. I don't know about you, but that's racism .	Black, Race, Racism, Racist, Woman	Ethnicity - Black, Ethnicity - General, Gender - General	7/79	8.861
