They are talking infantry... not mobile or electronic.These roles are already gender neutral. A woman can do what they can do... if they can’t do it then don’t push them to.A woman who works this hard becomes sterile. This is a fact. Listen to what is being said.Let them have a choice.Now they are being made to do it, just like men have been since the biting of time.Women are not oppressed, they are protected. There is a difference.	Gender, Woman	Gender - General	3/84	3.571

Not even joke. And before people call me all sorts, this female boxer wanted me to fight her so badly. My former colleague is a woman and she has been boxing for 5 years. I don't do boxing but I still beat her in her own sport. No joke. Before the fight, she said I am allowed to punch her like a man. I felt bad but she said don't hold back. I said fair enough. After the 4th round, I KO her and the ref ended the fight. Bare in mind I don't do boxing. These idiots need to understand that men are physically stronger than women. We have a bigger bone mass than women and we produce more testostero than women. That's why we are more faster than them and have more energy. Another example of this is the USA and Australian women's football team. The USA women who are currently the best women on the planet got beat 5-2 by a bunch of U15 boys. These are boys aged 13 to 14. And the Australian women team also got beat 7-0 as well by another U15 team. It just goes to show the biology doesn't care about your feelings and opinion. I have such respect for this marine. She isn't towing the feminist line because she knows that the marine life is damaging for women. I am so sorry to hear about the infertility caused by her training and I hope she serves as a final warning to women to understand that bringing life into the world is the most magnificent thing a human can achieve. It is enough and completely vital to our futures. Feminist lesbian academics, who won't ever have children anyway, are trying to level the playing field in any way they can. It's disgraceful. I just don't get the point of the last question regarding the choice vs being ordered.....when the hell did men ever get a choice as to where and how they will serve? When guys were drafted into the military nobody took him aside and asked him if he want to serve in a combat role or a support role, he was ordered and that was it. F*ing women want equality BUT they want to be treated differently. Also, put them on the "front lines" in female only units. Down-size their equipment if that will help them perform better, but why the hell should they get all the "support" roles and let the guys go out and get killed and maimed. So if a guy joins the military he has a very huge chance of being in combat and all that entails, if a woman joins, she is almost guaranteed to get a "supporting" (i.e. usually less risky) role but wants the same pay and to be treated as an equal????? What a load of crap.	Nobody, Woman	Age - Youngsters, Gender - General	2/175	1.143
Women should not be on front line fighting, rather they should be having children and raising the next generations.... the whole of civilization was built on men competing for women to propagate their genes.... competing by fighting and, as tribes grew to cities, by going to war.... i dont get it.... if women dont have babies then the species dies out... if men and women dont provide stable homes through marriage then societies decline ffs its just common sense! Obviously females are physically inferior to men, if they weren't we wouldn't separate sports by gender . This doesn't mean that some women aren't stronger than some men. I dated a girl who was a power lifter and a Muay Thai fighter. She could lift more than most men and kick most guys asses, but she was an anomaly.	Gender	Gender - General	1/58	1.724

If I ran a country, I would never allow nor would I have any respect for any man that would allow a woman to go fight a war and get blown in half. This is not about woman being inferior. its about respect for the woman . They are the most important thing in the world. They ensure our survival.”When I look around the world today, the picture from the papers that comes to mind is: A woman ’s regiment in the Soviet Union for sharpshooting. Or a woman ’s battalion of grenadiers in Spain. All I can say to the representative of this type of equality:I would not be a man if I wanted to tolerate such a thing. Iexperienced the war. I know how hard it is. I know how many men’s nerves havebeen shattered by the war. I have often seen them return by the dozens,doddering. Completely ruined and broken. The idea that a girl or a woman has totake it upon herself. I could have no respect for the man then. Either theytake responsibility for this or they shall resign. As long as we have a healthymale gender no female grenadiers and sharpshooters should be trained. That’snot equality, but in reality, inferior rights for woman because it is harderfor women than for men. For her it is much more terrible than for men. I couldsay just as well that I am for arming children in the future and sending themto war. But we don’t do it.” -Adolf Hitler	Gender, Woman	Gender - General	6/261	2.299
Everyone knows women are not physically equal to men... if they don't say so they are lying or in denial. Women were created to carry the new generation into the world, men were created to protect their families. Modern Feminists are destroying society. Men and women are equal in worth as humans regardless of their abilities/inabilities, but men are generally physically superior. As a woman , I just don't understand modern feminists - why do they want to be men? Physically inferior does not mean intrinsically inferior.	Woman	Gender - General	1/86	1.163

The fact that having women in the infantry is even a thing lets you know that society isn't necessarily on the decline anymore; that is because society has fallen clear into the shitter. We are being taught that gender is not a dividing line anymore. Women going into the coalmine while Jeffrey, her husband takes care of the children, cleans and cooks could be the beginning of the end. That men are physically stronger than women should be an incontrovertible fact. That was once considered fact by 99.9 of the population. Just wait until what could be the called the14'th women infantry regiment goes up against Iran, or some other hellhole's infantry when it really counts. In a real war, not make believe and training, will show that this model was make believe from the beginning. What would Sun Tzu think?	Gender	Gender - General	1/141	0.709
Here's a thought: How about...the human race stops killing itself in war so we can stop debating stupid fucking empty points such as should women be doing the killing of humans or should men be the only ones with that right? Do you even fucking hear yourselves? The level of ignorance I am witnessing here is the reason Chuck Norris eventually enters the Mortal Kombat, challenges Shao Khan, defeats Shang Shung, obliterates Quan Chi, disintegrates Shinnok and his shitty amulet, crushes even Onaga, the mighty dragon king. Then we will have peace in the galaxy.	Race	Ethnicity - General	1/95	1.053
Australia actually put this shit in place, out of 150 women or so only 30 could pass the basic physical requirements. Another Women was trying to pass the infantry physical test. Failed to finish the 5km hike with full gear on in time and wasn't close along with some guys failing but her superiors passed her because they needed her to, the rest of the guy who actually passed got pissed off because she was still on site even though she failed so then ended up getting rid off her.Our police force have a standard for how fit women have to be compared to men. It's about half as fit and obviously not as strong. I would say that if women are actually feminine they would be very useful in certain situations than men might be but if they are masculine, butch women they are pretty much useless for the police force.	Hike	Nationality - Italian	1/153	0.654

Women wouldn't be in the military if the standards were the same.Even in the US, they are now making their physical fitness standards dependent upon the type of specialty you have. Different minimums, but uniform maximums, and all scores are gender specific, as well.	Gender	Gender - General	1/45	2.222
so lets start by taking the equal word out of it this is not thatthis is very simple ...the bottom line here is men have the upper hand physically ok but thats not it either its mental men do not want to see females blown up in front of them its demoralizing and distracting to them ...in their head you are their sister mother wife aunt grandmother and when that is shot blown up etc we lse focus and moralemen seeing other men destroyed is just part of the situation and while terrible it doesnt have that effectwomen not being in combat is not a slght to them or a put down or not being fair to themanyone who has served from tier1 down to the most basic soldier knows or should know it takes every person involved to make the wheel go aroundsimple as that from the tip of the support to the rear support they are all vital to the mission and it success those who dont get that should respectfully get the fuck out of the service ...this total bullshit of putting women in combat needs to get fixed ...before we fuck up the service and then what ???...or all the men can quit immediately and and all the hat wearing equal this and that and all these women groups combined can now serve and watch as the entire military is slaughtered in one battle and we are totally fuckedwho will they complain to then ...also of note if your a combat vet do you want that for your sister or wife or whomever to have that shit going on in their head ...and then to have to come back and try to nuture kids etc ??? i wish no one those things and trust me you dont want them but i certainly dont want that for any sister mother anut etc ...war is hell ...hell....in conclusion women know that i respect and love you and know you are capable of so much and yes we are equal partners on this big rock we call earththis is why we work we both have strengths and weaknesses together we are strong so ...be the amazing people you are and leave the combat shit to us ...its a dirty nasty worst of the worst thing ..lets us handle it we dont want women to lay down in the mud with pigs	Mental, PIGS	Nationality - Southern European, Physical Identity - Physical (and Mental) Impairments	2/410	0.488

A woman has the courage to admit that just because you're female it doesn't mean you can do everything that men can do. Women naturally have lesser bone strength, different muscular structures, different ways of thinking and problem solving abilities. They get too emotional too quickly. I've seen female police officers who have to work twice as hard as male officers when they are confronting people on the streets. The female officer needs a male backup. Most female officers don't do that job alone. Even when they do have guns and tasers, they always have backup close by for the female officer. What are the chances of a female officer being able to over power and subdue a 200 pound body builder on steroids? 9 times out of 10 she will fail.	Woman	Gender - General	1/132	0.758
I believe that if women can complete the same training as men, with the same skill as men, they should be allowed on combat missions. I was not aware that it can cause infertility in women and believe that it is necessary that women are made aware of this information before making their decision to join. Also worthy of note is that women have fought in wars in the past. In England during the time of the celts Bodecia was a celtic queen who led her army against the romans, in fact many celtic tribes had women warriors known as Shield Maidens. In France Joan of Arc led the french army to victory. There is nothing wrong with women choosing combat service and as long as they are as qualified and as well trained and their brothers in combat I say go for it.	Nothing	Age - Youngsters	1/144	0.694

women who can pass the same tests as men can go if they want. I don't discriminate. however a 100lbs woman grabbing a 200lb man throwing him over her shoulder and running 100 yrds to safety isn't going to happen. reality is she cant even drag him. marines don't leave men behind. she is a liability and not worth the loss of life period. There are millions of MEN that are good general shape, who are not suitable for front-line infantry. You need to be the best of the best. Physical strength is vital... as a 5'9, 150lbs man, I know I wouldn't last a minute physically. I'd cope mentally, just like many women would, but you need strength and mental power, simple. women are designed physically by god and nature to be gatherers, more intuitive, they have 20 more muscle in thier legs, why? when we were primitive they gathered across long distances and carried children, men hunted wild beasts with melee weapons and ran after them. Its just fucking evolution women just endanger all the men in their squad because they are a liability simply because they do not have the same physical standards. You shouldnt jeopardize peoples LIVES just because some fucking stupid feminists who arent even in the military say they should. i would like to see a woman in the army carry her full battle pack and another 200+ pound man, while running through enemy fire. In Sweden every single branch is open for both female and male applicants. Whether they can finish the tryouts and training is another matter. That simply puts most of the women in the SAF in support roles such as armored vehicle personell, radio operators, officers assistants etc, simply cause most of them (by a pretty HUGE majority) can't hack it in the more demanding roles. That's just how it is. Why would you ever have a RULE saying women can't be allowed doing this. Just let people tryout and those who make it, make it. Why is gender even a discussion? I've always said, if you can hack it by the exact same standards that exist, then bring it on. Two women graduated from Ranger school not long ago. I always remembered going through MEPS (military, entrance and process station) and I had to press 100 lbs. over my head at one station, but this was only for males, not females. Later in the day I was talking to another young woman and discovered we were going into the same job. No one ever was able to give me a reason for that and absolutely got angry about it if I asked. What many people fear about putting women and men together in battle because society teaches men to protect women at all costs. When I went through survival/POW training, they played that very scenario. Get rough on the women and see if you can break the men.	Woman	Gender - General	1/147	0.68

That's why I don't get why trans women are allowed to compete in women's sports...they need to draw the line when it comes to basic physics, common sense and what's fair. But we all know the left doesn't deal with facts, common sense or any of those things so our society will continue to degrade based on these types of values and beliefs which are ever perpetuated by the politically correct liberal loving media! Trans women are dominating all sport categories that they have competed in..why!? Because they were physically born men who have more muscle tone, bigger bone density making them stronger and generally larger than women. These are facts! Just because you identify as a certain gender doesn't make it phsycially so. I find this extremely unfair and plain absurd that women competing against trans women who biologically are still in fact men is considered social justice to the left. I have no problem with the LGBTQ community but when we take away one groups rights so that another can have theirs is absolutely wrong and a very dangerously slippery slope that were on! She works for a major airline as a pilot, and letting people pass training easier just because they are a woman is not an option. Pilots are mostly old males but there are quite a few female pilots. Until every woman who wants to be in combat can drag a 225 lb lifeless dummy with an 80 lb rug 250 rounds of ammunition and a machine gun off the battlefield under fire then her ass shouldn't be there. I'm not saying women aren't smarter than men I'm not saying that women are better than men in some ways I think we all agree they are. Combat is about physicality. How bad is about brawn muscle and misery. A woman cannot be in the field the way a man can be in the field from a hygienic point of view. I don't even want women in combat in the air. my argument is from this point look at what the Vietnam vets who were shot down over North Vietnam had to endure now imagine what would have happened if there had been female American pilot shot down and captured in the Hanoi Hilton what would have happened to them question mark they would have been used as a pincushion and their fellow American men had to live listen to it which would have made every American man almost lose their mind because we are taught you don't do that and you always take care of a woman . I'm not surprised that a far-right propaganda outlet like Fox News was able to find a traitor to speak on behalf of our military, and it's gratifying to discover this video in the future and know that the sexists lost this fight and that women have since begun serving with distinction in nearly every military role, from infantry to submarines. It's all about individual capability, and there are millions of women in our country who have the potential to serve with honor and distinction. The minute you start denying women rights and opportunities because of their sex , is the minute you betray the common heritage endowed to us by the Constitution. The same people who talk shit about female servicemembers tend to have many other ugly views hiding just beneath their surface, about race , religion, and so on. They are not good people. Josh Fredman I was in the Marines and in great physical shape. Trusting your fellow Marine to have your back in combat situations is driven into our heads from day 1. i'd have the same trust in a female Marine with the exception of me being wounded with just the 2 of us around. I weighed 220 pounds then and it wouldn't be a matter of trust it would be a matter of acceptance that her physical stature could not carry me out of a combat situation to safety. There's the belief in equality and undeniable facts that women are not physically equal to men . God made us that way and there's nothing wrong with eithers size or strength it is what it is. I appreciate that she brought the argument from "women should have the right to" back to the real issue which is "we are a war fighting institution and I don't think this is going to help anybody". I have no issue with womens rights but the military is not a male only fantasy fucking football league or something, it is war. I am not even pro military, I am actually kinda anti big military but even I have enough brain cells to see it is NECESSARY and it is NECESSARY for it to be strong, fast, high endurance, etc. things that a woman can do absolutely, but is easier when your biology assists you and only means that a man that is trying can just be that much better than a woman who is trying... again, womens rights, right on, but when you staring Charley down in his beady little eyes that shit goes flying out the window. lol no racism inteded, just thought it was mildly funny. ok im leaving now... Wow. A military woman who gets it. If you allow women, who are physically not as strong as men into the infantry, you are no longer a military force, you are a political force. The purpose of your unit is political, not military. And if our warfighting force becomes a political entity instead of a military entity, it will compromise its capacity to achieve victories on the battlefield. women can barely throw the grenade and the armor wieghs them down, in the heat of combat if she cant perform her duty and help her brothers then she is no good to us, if she cant push forward or is ever afraid any ranking personnel in the field from pvt to general has the right under the ucmj to execute her on the spot for desertion....look it up. can a woman carry a 38lbs saw 249 with over 50lbs of ammo and run to the next objective....no, they can barely run 8 mphs while men with full gear can reach 19mphs in full gear....do we have to wait for her...no. plus in the field of combat the fighting wont stop because she has to change her tampon or is having a bad day because of pms....thats why one gender is stronger than the other, guys are built for war, work etc...women arent, both mentally and physically. hollywood has these bitches brainwashed...note to women its a freaken movie. no way a woman can carry an assault rifle all the gear and a 180 lbs plus man. ever. i dont care how strong she is. their muscle fibers are stranded differently....one way to prove this...take the weakest man an the strongest woman and get them to dig a hole 3x3x3x3 and 3 ft deep....i will bet $1,000,000 that the man finishes without the woman ever finishing before giving up...a woman in my combat unit, i would push her harder than i do the men under my command..why because she is and always will be weaker....and getting wounded...omg they cant take pain while a guy will get duct tape wrap it up and keep moving but her she breaks a nail or gets a cut she is done.....hollywood and the media have these cunts thinking they are equal to me...ha...thats why my wife divorced me. i started treating her equal cause she kept bitching about equal rights and saying she could do what i do and better...i broke that bitch when she decided to mow the yard with a push mower like i do on my 4 acres.....took her a week which takes me 3 hrs....by the time she finished it need mowing again...lmmfao...go ahead put them in combat and order the body bags	Gender, Woman	Gender - General	6/382	1.571

I am inclined to agree with restricting women from the "front line," except that they are an integral part of the Israeli army. How are they doing it? Is it different from the way the American military conceives of battle? Muslims are afraid of being killed by a woman on the battle field. In ancient Greko-Roman times, some of the best units in combat often had pairs of lovers whom fought together relentlessly. This proved affective among some homosexual couples who fought for the Spartan military and in Israel, female soldiers fight right next to male soldiers. As a result of the bullshit 3rd wave feminazi party the Aussie government wants to put women on the "front lines" too. Women have an invaluable role in our military, but we cant have them on the front lines. We are hard wired to protect women and I know I would ignore orders and do something stupid and dangerous to save a female soldier compared to a male soldier. While there are some tough chicks out there, generally women just are not physically strong enough or emotionally able to handle front line combat. The shit soldiers do and see fucks men up in the head, imagine what it will do to a woman . Seeing children blown up and all the horrible other shit that you see in a war zone. Women can shoot, women can make the right call, women can cop a strippin down just the same as men. But they just arent strong enough for infantry. Men have been conditioned for war over 100000 years, women have not. I could not rely on a female soldier half my size to carry me and the nearly 30Kg (60pnds) of gear Im wearing, while under fire. Trust and confidence in your brothers in arms is paramount to the success of the mission. Soldiers rely on each other to give everything they have for each other. In America, the soldiers say they "fight for you and your freedom" In Australia we fight for each other. I didnt want to go to war to kill people, i didnt want to go to fight terrorists. Until AUS went to war in the middle east, we didnt have terrorism here. No, I wanted to go so I could do everything in my power to make sure my fellow soldiers made it home and back to their families. Aussies arent fighting for freedom, we're fighting because America went to war and we're their ally. Therefore our motivation is each other. Not all of you. They make you swear an oath either to the queen (the crown) or to god. But we all know the oath is to each other. Plain and Simple. Women should be allowed infantry roles, but don't have different physical requirements. I have sent a number of students to the military, and most of them continue to perform admirably. Many of the guys were not very imposing physically, and I have had a girl who went on to become a shotput olympian. I know several women who could haul my 6'5", 225 lbs body for miles, but the 5'3", 120 lb guys who graduated and went to the military would have a tough time getting me down the stairs. You would be surprised to know that a 5'3 120 lb man is still stronger than a 5'10 170 lb woman. Men have 20x the testosterone, which is directly responsible for muscle growth. Therefore he is already heavier in terms of muscle weight, and as an added bonus his body will respond at least 5x better to strength training than the woman's will. Even if he is somehow weaker than the woman, by the time he has made it out of boot camp and passed the physical standards, he will be far stronger.I did a quick google search and here's a picture of a 16 year old kid who is 5'3 120 lb, most marines will be in the strongest, best shape of their lives such as this. Ignoring reality is an excellent way to get your ass handed to you.As a Marine, I served alongside WM's (Woman Marines). I've only met ONE, who could actually compete with most male Marines in physical fitness. This WM was a DIE HARD physical-fitness person, who trained and worked her ASS OFF to maintain the highest possible degree of strength and endurance. Think Demi Moore in her role as "G.I. Jane", and you've got the perfect picture.This WM was the exception. MOST WM's don't come close to the degree of physical strength and endurance/stamina, as male Marines.This is NOT a diss against females! It is a simple fact of biology/physiology/nature.What the WM's I met and worked with DID excel at, and often kicked male Marine's ASSES in? Mental acuity. I worked in the mechanical M.O.S.'s, and as such, there was a wide range of people who could simply turn a wrench, and then those who could diagnose and trouble-shoot difficult technological mechanical problems.The job, and the 'Trick' is to acknowledge what a PERSON can and cannot do, and then set them to the task THEY are most-capable of doing.Plumbing doesn't matter in that regard.Carry-On! Putting women in combat infantry would be a massive mistake. 1. We would be the laughing stock of the world, and our enemies would think we're bitches for letting women fight. 2. Women are inferior in sheer physical strength and could be easily killed/over taken in a hand-to-hand situation. 3. I doubt women can sustain the mental trauma of seeing death or shooting another human, as women are more compassionate beings. 4. Guns and rifles have some strong kick, and with a woman (who is usually thinner and lighter than males) it would make her incredibly inaccurate in terms of firing at certain ranges. Its just a horrid idea.	Mental, Woman	Gender - General, Physical Identity - Physical (and Mental) Impairments	2/109	1.835

As an x Troop Sgt in the Army the truth is quite simply that woman soldiers are not as fit and strong as there male counterparts, My troop was regularly downgraded because woman were at times unable to complete there operations . This was due to 'monthly's' . the ability to keep up with there male counterparts . i am not sexist, i believe in equal rights. but when a woman soldier started to flag a male soldier would then try to help making his job harder. An example is a troop of 60 of which 20 are woman . When you met your objective many times 80 of the woman were unable to set up a 'hide' go on guard, and a lot became argumentative due to tiredness. It affected the operation capability of the troop. I'm all in favour of certain woman (some are really good soldiers) of serving with the infantry units, but expect the unit to be less effective than should be required. There are many parts of the military where woman far exceed men. however after serving 34 years. let me tell you from experience that the infantry is no place for most woman . Nice lady Captain. Truthful, straightforward, experienced. A formidable force to be reckoned with. Yet she opposes the decision to put women on harms way. Points to ponder from a genuine woman versus fake feminist hullabaloo.	Woman	Gender - General	1/35	2.857
It's obvious woman are not equally in physical strength, speed, stamina, or anything that requires you to survive. Due to the fact, that females have a different role in their natural way since the beginning of times. While man are hunters, and physically brute to survive.	Woman	Gender - General	1/46	2.174
Why not do this: Have physical requirements that are standard for ALL prospective soldiers of any branch that are based on what the soldiers need to be able to do. If you can do them, you're good, if not, you're out. Man or woman , doesn't matter, it just matters if you meet the physical requirements or not.	Woman	Gender - General	1/57	1.754

Stop hijacking the word feminism. Its gross and ignorant. I'm a feminist and I dont believe women should be doing the same things men are doing in combat. We are physically different, obviously. That has nothing to do with feminism and wanting women to have the same basic inherent fundamental rights as men in LIFE. Stop with this stupid rhetoric about feminists hating men and the patriarchy . We dont WANT to be men! We are women! Just because we want equal rights doesnt mean we want to BE YOU! August Your argument is not only flawed, you're beating around the bush here. America already has equal laws and rights for men and women. FACT. Infact, women has more rights. So there is nothing wrong in asking you to go where the problem exist. Next, these man-hating women are at the top of the feminism food chain. They are running the feminist organization. They control the minds of new entrees. Look at the movements such as metoo that have been happening in the name of "feminism". Now it is seen as an utter joke because so many women are abusing it's power. Also, Feminism is a movement for women (according to encyclopedia) therefore it means it is inequal in itself. Matt Blaise Lmao oh and another thing you wanna talk about rights? Go read the US constitution if you're american, then tell me what part of that constitution says women have more rights then men. If you're talking about Family Law? In that case, the custodial parent that has CUSTODY gets child support - THATS the law. Sometimes men get custody and the woman has to pay child support. Does that blow your mind or something? What other area of life can you possibly think of where a woman would have more RIGHTS than a man? Hmm, are you suggesting in a court of law a woman would have more rights? Not true. That is based on a case by case basis, which involves lawyers, proof of evidence, and innocent until proven guilty. Your argument is invalid.	Woman	Gender - General	3/137	2.19
Matt Blaise Lastly I just wanted to say that if any of you actually thought feminists were somehow a threat to your gender , you wouldn't attack them with arguments and why they're wrong (cuz they're not, just take one singular glance at history in ANY country). Instead, you would come together with them to get RID of male chauvinism WITH them. Also, IMPORTANT DISTINCTION - STOP LUMPING "Man-Haters" with "Feminists" they are NOT the same thing AT ALL!	Gender, Male chauvinism	Gender - General	2/78	2.564

Matt Blaise Why do we need feminism? How terrified would you be if you were born in a 3rd world country where you were not allowed to drive, vote, own a home, marry the person you wanted to marry and by the way you're a child and he's 45 years old with 3 other wives, no reproductive rights, financially destitute with children, wear a burka in 1000 degree weather and you CANNOT take it off because you're a woman and you'll get stoned. These are just a few examples, not all of them. That could be your next life, and it WILL be the life of many. That is why we need feminism.	Old, Woman	Age - Over 65s, Gender - General	2/113	1.77

Sorry, but this is a bullshit. Let alone woman , even 13 years old boy could beat average male if this boy professional MMA fighter or a boxer. Cust Ard I'm sure as fuck you never trained in MMA or boxing. When I trained in thai boxing I personally beat the shit out of newbie who was more than 20 kg heavier than me - and I was far from master level - it is just difference between someone who trained for 1-2 years and someone untrained. Do you understand simple fact what untrained person can't take a hit in his chin even from someone who is half of his size? Learn some human physiology before talking bullshit. One precise strike in your chin or face would make you unable to do anything else. Your weight and power are important against opponents of the same level of skill or close to it. Chris I did some BJJ and was able to win guy who weight 50 more than me, the difference was what I was just a little bit more skilful and experienced other forms of training while he was just fat . And we have had some women in our group who trained for a long time, one of them was able to win both me (when I just started) and this other guy. And we here don't talk about rule, we talk about those same exceptions, as trained woman IS exception by herself. And it is even more obvious in boxing martial arts what your skill is more important than weight and muscle strength. IDK what type of "average guy" you mean but untrained fat or skinny guy can't beat trained woman or kid. By your logic you wouldn't be able to beat someone who is bigger than you even after 13 years of training which is ridiculous. Men are stronger on average because we are bigger and have stronger muscles, but it is something what can be changed with training. Trained woman could lift more than untrained man, kick and punch stronger, etc. How many women who trained for 5+ years you know? Do you really believe what she would be beaten by someone who never trained their body? It is same as acknowledging what you wasted 13 years of your life for nothing . You don't want to send average Joe on the battlefield in the middle of a depression because the female Sarge decided to suck the colonel instead chosing him. Women would also turn the values system upside down -elevating various soldiers solely on their appearence, being tall or whatever instead valueing courage, good soldiery and so on. Even many domestic jobs are f*ed bigtime because the invariable conflicts caused by feelings related to sexual desire -hate, love, jealousy, playing the vip in front of their colleagues to impress the ladies, so basically sh1tting on everyone else -because -and so on. I was in the Canadian infantry and some women out performed many men with no special treatment.Why should the job be closed off to woman who can make it but open to men who can't make it?I don't think women should be prohibited from the infantryI'm for equals rights and open opportunity to those who can make it.I don't think the standard should be lowered for anyone with weaker bodies. That includes women as well as testosterone challenged men. The job is open to anyone, but the standard should remain the standard and anyone who can pass it has what it takes and those who can't don't. The battle ground doesn't care about your sex , but it does care about if you can't meet the standard.If you have a weaker man who can't meet the standard then that's more of a liability than a woman who can meet the standard.And I've seen weaker men pass the infantry course who shouldn't have, because they received special treatment, while women have passed with no special treatment.It's not this absolutest black and white thing. Not all women are physically inferior to all men. And that is proven when you have an infantry course where some women pass while some men on the same course fail.Once again; Why should the job be closed off to woman who can make it but open to men who can't make it? apart of there anger is "Men can phsyically do things women cant" and then "Men choose not to do things women excel at"Its the very principal that men mostly feel "I can do everything better than you, other than the physical act of giving birth" from architecture to clothes design, to math and physics. I remember my auncle told me in 10th grade back in the mid 80s his highschool gym teacher stood him up in front of his class (6ft male 210lbs) that he was stronger and faster then 99 of all women who have ever lived (he was a pretty good track and field).the term they used to use back in the 80-70-60s was penis envy, women simply feeling they got the short end of the stick in the gender lottery. that has been subverted now into feminism the want for men to be viewed as equal to men in all areas in society.Feminism back then was women simply wanting to have the same governing rights and access, Feminism now is women saying "well im not exactly able to succeed with only the same access so you need to change the barrier for entry AND make laws for me only to garaunttee i succeed".I thnk every man today would be a 60s feminist "yeah let them vote, yeah let them get a bank loan, yeah let them run for office" I dont think we have an issue with that anymore new feminism though is an entirely different beast based off inequality	Gender	Gender - General	1/257	0.389

Although I witnessed several woman take role of (1 man) (2 man) responsibilities. That's because the physical strength required as a (3 man) to lift an object that was extremely heavy and also 7 ft off the ground, was giving mostly to those individuals with proven competence. Not One Woman . Just skipped right over that responsibility and was giving cross training opportunities or giving the supervisor role. I'm sorry but that's not effective. When I went through Marine Corps bootcamp, the disparity in training was a joke. Men did standard push-ups, women on their knees. Men did pull-ups, women hung from the bar for a few seconds. Women skipped upper body intensive portions of the obstacle course. When we shot the rifle, they didn't even bother going to the 500-yard line. Excuse me? When you have that type of disparity in training requirements (and outright skipping obstacles), what does that tell you? You can force-feed all the feminism and equality you want down a society's collective throat, but on the battlefield reality prevails. I can understand the PT being inferior (they still have people washing out anyway, somehow), but why the rifle training? Shooting isn't something that the physical, mental , and emotional differences between men and women would really make a difference in (excepting the exceptionally weak minded or extremely emotional individuals).Anyway, I remember reading somewhere from some vets online that they usually have to carry the women's pack on patrol, the women tend to stick too close to them and not maneuver properly during firefights, and other such difficulties. There was also something about men's instincts to protect women causing problems for squads with women in them as it kept getting Marines and soldiers to take unnecessary risks to protect their female squadmates without even thinking about it.Look, all they need to do is keep the requirements the same between sexes. Not make an average training both can pass reliably, but make one that is strenuous for men and require that women must also pass those some requirements. If they do, great, they can do the job. If they can't, oh well, there's other fields in the military they can participate in.	Mental	Physical Identity - Physical (and Mental) Impairments	1/192	0.521
Former USMC here as well. I remember quite well the scenes you painted here. And I agree, to a certain point. I'm all for a woman going toe to toe with men. God willing! That means, though, they do the SAME things in EVERY aspect. It's impossible. We are biologically different. Those differences aren't "weaknesses" they are just...LIFE. I don't get to give birth, and show the incredible strength it takes to go through that. I don't get to go through things as woman goes through. My experiences, however similar, will always be vastly different. Just the same for other males. I will never share the same experience the exact same way. My point being, if they can do what we can, let them. If not, there are supporting roles, that even the men get put into when they can't cut it. I've had female superiors, and I've had subordinates. Never had an issue with any of them. Had more issues with power hungry idiots that thought they were leaders when they were nothing but loudspeakers for idiocy. Stop being a woman ...stop being a man. Be human and give your best. If you have to be recognized for your gender as an achievement, then the achievement has no meaning except to you. Way how I see it: how many wars have women have participated in actual combat? I'm talking like literally hundreds, thousands, tens of thousands, or bigger amount of women shooting at women with intent to kill and/or participated in melee battles (ancient and medieval)? If you can name me 10, I'd be very surprised. Wars that involved men killing men? At the top of head (also last studied history in 10th grade) I can name at least 15-20 before I need google or wikipedia. SKill wise? It's very debatable and it can go either way, so hire/go for the better person regardless of gender , age (maybe not too old , reflexes might be a little slow), sexual orientation etc. Why men should be in actual combat and not women: 1. In general men are physically stronger, bigger (most cases in war you might want a bigger person, more intimidating, bigger usually means stronger) and faster. 2. Most men can still reproduce even after strenuous physical training and/or serving tours (provided that their reproductive organs are unharmed). 3. Men tend to (not always and not everyone) act more calm or at least rational in life threatening scenarios (I've seen this happen and experienced this a few times during my hiking and camping trips. A girl had severe dehydration and started walking towards empty space instead of keeping to the wall. The girls in her group were panicking yelling whereas the boys in front and back start to pull her to safety. I then gave her my cap, some food and water). 4. Let's face it, men dying in wars have a less negative social outcry from society. But if we send girls into actual combat zones then almost everyone loses their minds. 5. Men are much more mentally and physically (denser bones, muscle density, more muscle etc.) tougher than women. Hence why you don't see a lot of female special forces around the world.6. Let's face it, women have periods every month. It's a serious liability during combat, your team might get flanked or something just because someone needs to change their underwear or something. My dad retired from the fire service after 25 years back in 2000. Even then he was saying much the same as you do. The most top notch women can barely keep up with the bottom 10 of men. Not for lack of trying, but their bodies just CAN'T hack it. That said, there were a couple of women in the department he had great respect for because they were mentally tougher than most men and wouldn't quit no matter what (to a fault sometimes). I remember a story he told about a woman on his shift being lead on the hose at a large house fire. Every so many minutes they would be relieved to come outside and cool down. When this lady came out after her turn inside, she was physically spent. When her time to go back in came up she put her gear back on and could barely stand up she was so weak. Had to be put in the ambulance herself and treated for exhaustion (in spite of her protests). This left one firefighter out of action and more slack for the men to pick up. Everyone respected her for her competence and don't quit until you're ordered work ethic, but reality was she physically CAN'T hang. When he retired, he was given the opportunity to choose and train his replacement (he was the ladder truck driver/pump operator). He chose this lady to keep her at the truck and utilize her exceptional multitasking ability and knowledge managing the pumps, ladder, water sources, etc where it would do the most good. That way she would always be an asset instead of a liability. Also in part because she was the only one with the balls to put her right foot down when you leave the station and keep it there until you're on scene. Also even without combat roles women in the military engage in prostitution and do not work together as well as men. Show me one all female collective that doesnt feature bullshit drama and backstabbing? Personal differences and disagreements in women are paramount to everything, where as men can easily put them aside when other shit takes priority. And the biggest reason why any two men would fight is a woman . So putting them among men is bound to end in a shit storm.	Woman	Gender - General	1/108	0.926

The psychological differences between women and men are even STRONGER than a physical ones ! Women are not capable of fighting due to their mental traits. For example: a group of 5 7-9 years old boys who do not know each other can quickly organize themselves, set the goals and perform a mission. They are better and more efficient than a similar group of adult women trained as marines for millions of dollars. First of all women would not be able to decide who is a leader. Even if they would do that, they would not stick to it. It would be a total mess. This is due to the evolution: women NEVER in the past MILLIONS of years were forced to organize and cooperate. They were always dependend on their man and took care of their children. The evolutionary pressure for this ability didn't exist at all. At the same time the ability to organize in a group was one of the most important factor in the evolution of males.This is for example the reason why there are no organized female crime groups. And in the military they are always protected by male mates.	Mental, Old	Age - Over 65s, Physical Identity - Physical (and Mental) Impairments	2/196	1.02

I feel that all jobs and roles should be open for both genders, but ONLY if they have the required ability. For example if women want to be firemen - let them, but have them go through and pass the same physical and mental standards as the men serving and vice versa if situation is reversed. If they pass that I don't see any issues. Just make sure acceptance into these roles are based on ability and not "quota". Sick and tired of all this crap about women being allowed in to jobs where they physically have no place to be, but are accepted just to even out a men vs. women-ratio. Men and women ARE different, why not just accept that and work together instead of competing for ridiculous reasons. Both genders are dependant on each other. As for "pay-gaps", of course men and women should be paid the same IF they both perform equally in their assigned role. But if one performs better in a role then the other, then the underperforming person should be paid less. Pretty simple in my humble oppinion. Most soldiers in the military are men, and that won't change for a long time, if ever. But for the brave women who do volunteer to fight on the frontlines will be treated just as harshly, and be expected to be just as disciplined as every other soldier. They will go through the same training, eat the same meals, face the same disciplinary punishments, and be expected to keep up with every other soldier (men and women alike) physically, and mentally. To fight on the frontlines, you have to have a warriors mentality, and not be afraid to die. And the fact is, a lot more men will be able to adapt to that kind of mentality than women. So if there's less women in the military (especially in infantry) there's no sexism , or patriarchy or whatever the fuck involved. Whether you're a man or woman , you have to meet these physical and psychological requirements to fight on the frontlines. Plain and simple.Sorry for the rant it's just so simple. Andy Kaufman proved the average guy can out-wrestle any typical woman of his weight. Some people think that whole shtick was totally fake, but I wrestled in high school and I recognized many of his moves for escaping from holds and then reversing. Wasn't surprising at all to me that no woman ever pinned him even though some were quite robust and claimed they were from a family of boys who taught her how to wrestle. Not saying there weren't women who could have beat Kaufman then, but they would have needed to be quite skilled and strong and with wrestling training, or maybe someone along the lines of a roller-derby chick . And remember; they needed to be the same approximate weight as Andy.	Chick, Woman	Gender - General	3/124	2.419

Let's see if I understand this correctly. A successful, strong, motivated women is now sterile, just because she tried to keep up with, but fell short of, and ended up costing more resources, plus personal to take care of so she could say she was equal to a male counterparts? because of this perception that women can do anything a man can? It is sad really, that it takes reality dropping a paino on her head. In their deranged sence of reality that "they" are "different": "as in; not the same!" as a man. So who is diluted? Who is living in a fake reality? Men or women?Again, it is sad this woman will never know what it's like to become pregnant, and all in the name of equality. She did it to herself, and allowing women to do this is, from the evidence, an act of intentional disfigurement. It's a violation of human rights against women, but its women who want it? Old video but feminist don't think about equality at all. They make up fake statistics constantly trying to make everyone feel sorry for them. Then tell more lies about men while pushing a never ending agenda about how women can do everything better. Just about every doctor, scientist, coder, etc on TV/movies are women just because of their agenda. They always are leaders with men following. Its about as far away from the truth as it gets in real life, but its their agenda. They only want soft jobs, the percent of women that want real working jobs are extremely rare. Plus the real facts are most women have no idea what it takes to keep the real world running. But their babbling mouths makes it sound like they do. Then you have the white knight manginas protecting their every move no matter what. The cause just as many problems as feminist. Apparently they cannot exactly function without a woman hung to them, so they go over board catering to their every wish. A few figure it out later in life but some never do. A good ole American divorce wake some up but not all. Women sleep, lie, marry, divorce their way into money & power. Then act like they created the money & power personally. Its the old fake story, men are only successful because of the woman behind them. Also women sue their way into everything these days. Nothing is ever good enough, they never make enough money and its men's fault, so we sue you. So men, go ahead and protect those creatures and see where it gets you. Not all women are that way but don't matter because the big mouth ones are. But sorry women, you cannot do everything men do and and you never will. The few that come cause don't count, they are freaks of nature and small percent. Useless to post this also, comments mean nothing . Just in the mood I guess. is this host deaf. Twice the captain said there are no longer "front lines" in modern warfare. Yet she still asked the question, twice. Modern warfare for combat troops lie marines is fighting in everything from mountainous regions to wetlands and swamps to open desert to jungles and forests to 40 below zero in the arctic or antarctic to built-up urban or suburban areas, fighting building to building, street to street. Here's my question: Which would you rather face in hand-to-hand combat, a 220 pound male Marine or a 120 pound female Marine, both wearing/carrying full combat gear? Personally I'd rather face the 120 pound female. Just saying. That doesn't mean however that women can not do excellent work in support roles, which they do with skill and honor in the Isreali, Canadian, Australian, British, German, French, Spanish and many other nations' military, as well as the USA. While there may be a few exceptions here and there, generally speaking combat is a job best suited for big, tough, resilient men. Here's a bit of perspective from you fiends in the Great White North. In Canada, about 15-20 years ago, the federal government was under pressure to allow women in combat roles. So the Canadian Defense Department created 300 spots for women to apply for to be combat troops. It turned out only about two dozen women applied for those positions. I'm not saying those two dozen women shouldn't have been allowed to become combat troops, if they were able to satisfy all of the job requirements. Just that the perceived level of interest for that specific military role among women turned out to be much lower than even the most strident feminist lobbyists anticipated.	Deaf, Zero	Age - Youngsters, Physical Identity - Physical (and Mental) Impairments	2/285	0.702

Also, when I was in the Army I was in a support role. 92-foxtrot. In the field women had to take care of their hygiene and whatnot and use wipes. Well us men was like fuck this. We were tired of using wipes after 2 weeks and we came up the idea of making a shower. We used a Camelbak and flipped it upside down so gravity could do its thing and punctured a few holes in the mouth piece so the water would come out like a shower head. It got the job done, had to be quick to hit the main parts but your nuts and ass were clean. Also it was nice having clean hair before you hit the sleeping bag. Anyways, the women were dumbfounded that we created a shower in the field. Shortly after they asked us if they could use our shower and we were like sure and told them to refill the water after use. Then, we were asked if we could make a barrier so that they shower. We put up some Panchos and place a guard so they could shower. Fucking inconvenient as hell so a woman could wash her ass. Women aren't on the same level with men, Period. There's a reason why there are Male and Female standards for physical fitness in the military. Women are weaker, slower, less explosive and have less endurance and stamina. Examples...When a Mens U-15 (Under 15) beats the Women's U.S. National Soccer Team (the same one that won Gold in the Olympics) 5-2. That speaks volumes. High School freshman beat the best women's team in the world. The they played the U-17 (15-16 year olds) mens team and got beat 8-2. There's a reason there are Men's and Women's sports and records. If there were just one set of records it would be all Men. The moment you actually treat women as equals they all don't want it. Women want to pick and choose what they want to be equal in, but it doesn't work that way. It's ALL or nothing . Imagine if tomorrow females across the board in all branches of the military were required to perform at the males physical fitness standards. Nearly every female would be out of the military. Oh the outcry from the left, feminist and SJW. How they'd say the military were being bullies and how and why it isn't fair. And the sad thing is the females get paid the same for doing less and get promoted easier because they have to do less. To just get a passing score males 22-26 must do 40 push-ups, 50 sit-ups and run 2 miles in 16:36. Females the same age must do 17 push-ups, 50 sit-ups and run 2 miles in 19:36. These numbers score a min of 180 points or 60 Points per event. This overall score is part of your promotion grade. The higher the better. If that same female runs a 15:36 she gets 100 Points, the maximum. If she does 80 sit-ups she gets 100 Points the maximum. If she does 46 push-ups she she gets 100 Points the maximum. That's a 300 Point maximum score. Now if a male does the exact same as her he scores 71 Points on the run, 100 Points for sit-ups and 67 Points for push-ups. 238 points total for the same work. 62 Points difference is a huge amount. 75 push-ups, 80 sit-ups and 13:00 is what a male soldier must do to get 300 points. I know what I say is going to me misconstrued and taken out of context, I don't care. I am all for feminism for what it means at its core: EQUALITY, meaning men and women are equal as humans. That being said, our bodies, emotions, reactions, all of that and more are totally different from females. Does that make them inferior somehow? Absolutely not, but they are not biologically the same and are not the best suited for intense physical reaction to physical male threat. Personally I can't understand why ANY female would want to be a Marine at all, but I am nobody to tell one she CAN'T, I wouldn't ADVISE it, but I have no say over what another human being outside of myself wants to do with their own life. Despite being of average size and weight, I have been around Marines that could probably pick me up and throw me over a humvee. That doesn't mean I wouldn't fight back until I was burger, but knowing the probable outcome in that scenario, I'd do my best to avoid it and as such, if I had to worry about children, being raped, menstruating in the field, I wouldn't choose to put myself there in the FIRST place. In warfare, gender matters and affects operational performance efficiency. a. Some might have morning sickness..... Imagine a female pilot dressed as a male having morning sickness.... while piloting an F14 in an aerial dogfight with enemy planes. Who do you think is at a disadvantage?b. Menstrual bleeding.... in prolonged deep jungle raids on enemy territory, the scent could attract animals and alert hostile guard dogs. This causes the element of surprise to be lost. It endangers the entire mission and lives matter..... A female can dress like a male but some characteristics do not change.c. Physical performance. A female soldier may dress or become male, but it doesn't change the fact that pound for pound, males have better muscular strength, stamina and size. In physical combat..... the enemy will have an advantage. (Compare the Olympic performance for proof of physical advantage males have over females.It matters in warfare.)d. Tenacity imagine asking a transgender who's actually female to snipe a child or woman who's a suicide bomber..... don't you think they'd hesitate? This hesitation is a risk to troops.e. Perversion..... there is a possibility that males pretend to be females just to leer at them. or females who pretend to male to be among males..... this relationship dynamic affects operations.f. Childbirth.....Women can bear children. Men can't. If all women become male, go to war full time and get killed....your population could be reduced. This trend should not be encouraged. It's bullshit. If women weren't physically inferior to a man, they wouldn't be trying to lower the entry requirements for women. Why would you want a woman that couldnt even pass the physical requirements to serve the united states? I don't understand why people are having such a hard time with this. Make a fitness test that accurately assess your ability to do the job. If you pass, then yay you get to be a marine. If you fail, sorry you're not physically capable to do the job. Go hit the gym and train for it and try again next year. Don't bring gender into it. Either you're able to do the job, or you're not. Simple. The Canadian armed forces has one test. Men and woman are expected to meet the same standard every year. You either pass or fail.	Gender, Woman	Gender - General	2/102	1.961

Everything she said is true. I have great respect for women and there are many things they can do better than men. Physically speaking, the AVERAGE woman "CANNOT" do what the AVERAGE man can do...that's just how it is and will always be. I spent 22 years in the military, 8 conventional and 12 unconventional. Carrying 110 lb rucksack for up to 25 miles would break them. I had this argument with a friends friend, who is a feminist lesbian . I weigh 185, I laid on the ground and askes her to pull me over a 4 foot wall....she couldn't lift my dead weight. No big deal, it would be self-correcting. Let women into the combat jobs and see if they can do them. If they can't, they wash out, and men get the job. Same for all military jobs. Men are better at some tasks, women are better at others. Give men and women the opportunity to find their own level. That's one of the things that the military is really good about-extensive testing- for intelligence, aptitude, mechanical ability, clerical abilities, etc. If the personnel specialists are doing their job correctly, they will match up the best people with the best altitudes for the various jobs needed. If a woman wants be an infantry soldier, check her tests and see if she has the aptitude and physicality needed for the infantry. If not, tell her the tests indicate she is NOT right for the job and counsel her on what the tests indicate she would be better at. If she insists, try her out and let her succeed or fail on her own. The military might tell you otherwise, but there is plenty of time to determine what a person may be better or worse at for aptitude and abilities. I saw it many times when I was in the Army. A kid signs up for infantry, can't do it because he weighs 250lbs. but he turns out to be a rather decent army cook, or supply clerk, or truck driver. They were inferior when the Marine Corps tried a co-ed unit with highly motivated Marine volunteers. Only 20 were found physically qualified for infantry. The women broke at a rate nearly triple that of the men. Most common complaint with a load less than 40 combat load involved hip injuries, and lower leg injuries. they are built physically differently from their male counterparts. The injury rate for the women was close to 48, while the men had an injury rate of about 18. At 48 it does not take long for a unit to be combat ineffective. When only 20 are physically qualified, one has to wonder what political pressures are going to cause training standards to be lowered like they always have been in the past. The F-14 fighter pilot program saw that, and it wound up with millions of dollars in damage and dead Sailors. It happened as well in the Blackhawk training program, same result. Every time we lower standards of training, we lose equipment, and more importantly we get dead service members that should have never been in the position to be harmed, as they were not qualified for that role in service.	Common	Social Class - Working class	1/197	0.508

Women wanted freedom, and with that freedom comes the cost of protecting that freedom. Get off your lazy ass's women and step up to the plate. All women do is whine and whine and whine about work and not making enough money. Don't see them actually working for the money though, no, they won't take a single tough job to earn their money, they want all the cushy jobs. I'm so sick of their pampered, we are owed this mentality. If every woman in the world stopped working today, except for a few hiccups in the medical field, the world would be just fine. If every man stopped working, EVERYTHING we grind to a stop. No power, no sewage, no clean water, no protected country, no protected citizens, no fires being put out, no surgeons, and on and on and on. Hey Sweet: the problem with men putting women in their place is, if we treat a confrontation with a woman , the same way we treat a confrontation with a male, the man will go to jail most likely and have a permanent record. So, we let women hit us, scream at us and all the other crap women pull, and we just deal with it like we deal with everything else in life. That is male privilege I guess, we just deal with everything; not that I mind that, I would rather deal with everything, then have to rely on others, such as the police or government to fix everything for me. Lastly, Sweet, if you aren't behaving that way, then you don't need to say, "we women." You are not responsible for anyone but yourself. If you aren't acting that way, then feel no shame for how the others act, and if someone lumps you in with them, then tell them to fuck off. That's my two cents anyway. VodkarageI do agree with you on the women stepping up to the plate thing. But your acting like women don't take any chances when it comes to careers. Their are plenty of female firefighters, doctors , surgeons, police officers, scientist etc. It's been proven women choose jobs that make them happy like teaching and most of the time men choose jobs that make good money. Not really caring about them being happy. Everyone has a role on this Earth and if all women disappeared then plenty of kids wouldn't be taught tons of doctors would go missing as would fire fighters and surgeons. Right now, it's pretty simple what needs to be done. Let's start removing the stereotypes that boy toys are about building and more brain developing things and girl toys are about pink playing with dolls taking care of babies. At an early age if you introduce stem toys to the kids they will want to go into stem jobs. Thus making more women want to be scientist, doctors and even get into the gaming industry. It's all about shaping the mind. If we shape the youths mind towards stem they will start to take an interest simple as that.	Age, doctors	Age - General, Nationality - General	4/202	1.98

No, neither can survive without the other, so neither is more important than the other. Also, it's not like women giving birth is anything amazing, they don't do anything but spread their legs, except sperm, then their body does the rest, they aren't mentally building that baby from blueprints, they are doing the exact same thing that millions of species around the planet do. Once a baby is born, a man can take care of a baby just as easily as a woman . Vodkarage calm down! Not all of us women are bitch-ass feminists who complain about things. I love being a women, I don't mind the gender roles and I very much appreciate men for what they do. in terms of freedom, some of us women wanted our freedom in order to be valued and acknowledge for the fact that we're humans too instead being overlooked by men where our opinions didn't matter, we weren't allowed to vote or have a say at anything, our existence wasn't viewed as valuable as men's, that mindset wasn't gonna change until women demand their freedom. We were just good for making babies and that's it. Some of us just wanted our freedom to be able to pursue life the way we want instead of being forced to a specific role. For example, I'm going to become a zoologist because I'm good and passionate about animals and nature kind of stuff, I couldn't stand the idea of staying home making babies while watching animals go extinct due to human destroying the environment. I completely disagree. Women are different from men. You can't make a military service and say "These are the requirements" and then dumb it down for another gender because they can't keep up or can't handle it. I think women being able to have and bear children is important. Not to mention women worked hard taking care of kids at home, creating victory gardens, making weapons, nursing men back to health during war time. How dare you call ALL women lazy! They can't handle the same stresses as men. But women work hard to the best of our ability. We are not biologically equal, no matter how much the media or left wing propaganda kick and scream. Yes, judicially, women are equal. We should have the right to own land, to have a job that we choose, or vote, absolutely. And men, GOOD men, DIED for that right and I'm so proud and happy they did. I owe these men everything! Feminist nowadays are the ones that complain and mope. Not real women who have a brain to understand that we are different and that needs to be taken into an account. Women are not superior, never will be. But men aren't either. To say that your better than women when feminist are shouting the exact same claim but flipped makes you no better than they are. We need both men and women to make society function.men and women are yin and yang. Both are important for balance and stability, without the other...both sides are not whole. I'm sorry brother, that some of these women complain and treat men like the scum of the earth. Please know, these women do not speak for me. I'm proud of men, and love men. In Spain women are pretty accepted on infantry. And other roles too, such as policemen, firefighters, etc.I'm in favour of the right everybody has to enter anywhere IF HE PASSES THE MARKS.Different marks for men and women is unfair. And not only that: it's unefficient for the needs of the job, as it makes people more prepared than you to get excluded because of you being woman .If a woman passed the same physical exams the men have, then I've got no problem for them to gain a job there.However feminist are against this. There's no way we can force biological equality. The only equality that should be demanded is JUDICIAL equality. That means: the same exams and requirements for anyone doesn't matter their condition. The Russian's had it sorted in WWII. Chick's played vitally important back up supply, and medical roles. Occasionally, they were called up into combat to make up the numbers in pretty much all fields and areas of conflict on the Eastern Front. Those who fought did themselves and their nation proud. My fave group are, "The Night Witches." Anyhow, the issue here though is Women were essentially reservist's and the Russians were fighting a defensive war when it was, "all hands to the pump." So to speak. Utilizing women for offensive/combat infantry operations on the ground over men, simply for the sake of pleasing a few idiots, is a fucking dumb move. History has proven capable Women have important roles to fulfill in the military, but throwing them in the front line unnecessarily is a waste of skill's better used elsewhere. I fact checked list of top ten deadliest snipers of WWII. Stepan Vasilievich Petrenko-USSRA Ukranian Senior Sergeant, Stephan was a skilled marksman compiling 422 kills. In 1945, Petrenko was given the Hero of the Soviet Union Award, one of the highest prizes earned regarding heroic accomplishment in the USSR. Petrenko lived from 1922 to 1984.9. Vasilij Ivanovich Golosov-USSRTied with Petrenko at 422 kills, Golosov was an expert marksman. He earned the Distinguished Sniper Award during the war. This is given to snipers who have killed more than 50 people. In total, 261 soldiers were granted this award by the USSR. That number includes both men and women as the Soviet Union had more than 2,000 female snipers. It is believed that of his 422 kills, around 70 were snipers he killed in battle.8. Fyodor Trofimovich Dyachenko-USSRThe Soviet Red Army trained more than 400,000 people as snipers, although only approximately 9,000 went on to receive higher training. Dyachenko was one of those, and he excelled, killing 425 during the war. His primary goal was to kill officers that would be difficult to replace, and because of his efforts, he received a Distinguished Service Cross from the USSR.7. Fyodor Matveyevich Okhlopkov-USSRThe part of Russia he was from is indicated in red. At the time, it was the USSR. His village was located in the center of this red region. Image SourceThe part of Russia he was from is indicated in red. At the time, it was the USSR. His village was located in the center of this red region. Author: Marmelad – CC BY-SA 2.5Okhlopkov’s story and the path to his 429 kills are interesting. As the story goes, both Okhlopkov and his brother joined the military. They were Yakut, which is an ethnicity found in the northern part of Russia. Apparently, his brother was killed early in the war. From then Okhlopkov dedicated everything to avenging his brother’s death. In the process, he killed 429 people while sniping, and more in regular combat. He went on to win several high ranking awards and had a ship named after him in 1974, which he did not see as he died in 1968.Okhlopkov suffered many combat wounds, including one to the chest which almost took his life. The incident occurred in 1944 and put an end to his military service. It is estimated he killed more than 1,000 people during World War II using a variety of weapons.6. Mikhail Ivanovich Budenkov-USSRBudenkov raked in 437 kills in his time as a sniper, becoming a motivation for other aspiring snipers. He was a Russian sergeant and utilized both his sniper rifle and other weapons in combat. His 437 kills take into account only those killed while sniping.5. Vladimir Nikolaevich Pchelintsev-USSRAt number five with 456 kills is Vladimir Pchelintsev. He knew the lands he fought on very well, allowing him to succeed as opposed to soldiers who were not familiar with the area. Many of his kills, however, cannot be confirmed for varying reasons.4. Ivan Nikolayevich Kulbertinov-USSRWhile Kulbertinov did not experience as much critical acclaim for his work, he is fourth on the list of deadliest snipers. With 489 kills, he is only 53 kills behind the number one. He did not receive attention as he was often working around or near the highly celebrated female sniper, Lyudmila Pavlichenko, who had more than 300 sniper	Ethnicity, Red, Senior	Ideological and Political Identity - General, Age - Over 65s, Ethnicity - General, Ethnicity - Native-American	22/918	2.397

Handpickedpartz I truly hate that I feel compelled to enter into this "debate," but it has occurred nonetheless. Yes, men are on average stronger than women. Men are on average larger then women. However in reality, while they do play a factor, size and strength are not the only determining factors in a fight. Training and experience are both major factors in a physical confrontation. A 17-year-old kid who's "combat training" can be summed up in the form of playing Call of Duty versus a trained Marine...I'm sorry to break it to you, but that boy would get his ass kicked so hard he'd have to learn to shit out his mouth (but, judging by the original post, he's already skilled at that). Biology does play a factor, but don't discount skill and training just because you're talking about a female.All that said, I do personally think it's a bad idea to have women serving in combat arms positions in the military. Their physical limitations would serve as a detriment to the unit and would, in turn, result in a less effective fighting force. That is not, however, the only issue. Because of their physical differences, women are held to a different physical standard than males in the military. This is, I'm sad to say, likely to be a major cause of contention between the soldiers in any given unit. It would literally be a situation where women are allowed to do the same thing as the men are, but have to do less to get credit for it. Gender aside, anyone would be pissed off if they were in a similar situation. I am all for women in the military, but there are just certain jobs that they are not suited for. More women in support roles means more men in combat roles which means a stronger fighting force as a whole.	Gender	Gender - General	1/314	0.318

joslyn richardson sure, but I doubt any woman wants their career to take away that option completely, the same way I doubt any man would want their career to take away their ability to have children. Many people are having children later on and put their career first, that's fine, that doesn't mean their career should fuck up their body to the point where they can't procreate. Fuck, what happens if she finds her significant other and that person wants to have children and is one of those people who believes they must have children? It's fucked up. Also, many people enlist when they are really young, you think a young adult, someone who is likely 18 or so really understands that decision? Can't even buy booze, yet making a decision like that?	Woman	Gender - General	1/133	0.752
Mevy Right on, I didn't want to have kids for most my life, and I'm still on the wall now when I'm 32 years old , but there are moments now when my wife and I talk about it. I think majority of young people will not want to have kids, but will start thinking about it later on in their late 20s and early 30s. Most people who enlist are really young and make to make that decision at that point could be something they really regret later on in life. I've had the same thoughts on adoption when I was younger, but now every now and again I have thoughts of having my own children. Biological clock? Respect for making such a decision, I just don't think a person that age understands long term concepts yet as they are so young.	Age, Old	Age - General, Age - Over 65s	2/142	1.408

They know it, they talk about it, chuckle at the men they find attractive and fantasize their own future pretty families.But some don't. My aunt don't. Men who spend their entire life in the army, operations after the others, don't.Why can't we just acknowledge that people can be different.I don't want a family. I want to go to ravaged countries. Explore my own capacities and limitations. Go where nobody could. Maybe die trying.That's not the typical peaceful life. I don't want comfort. And if I'm tired of it, I'll go even more forward, because that's where most people give up.That's cheesy , I know. But that's the life I dreamed of. If only we could live our lives without the judgemental looks of others.	Cheesy, Nobody	Age - Youngsters, Social Class - Working class	2/153	1.307

Mevy I understand people are different, what I'm saying is that many people who don't want children get hit with the biological clock around the age of 30 and start thinking about it. When people are younger, they generally have less fear of death and many will think those ideas your talking about, however as they hit their 30s, they start to have a fear of death, of losing what they have gained so far, and of settling. It doesn't happen to everybody, but it does happen to many who start out against settling. People change. It's not just that they are different, but as people age , they change as well. Making a decision at a young age and then changing later and having to come to the conclusion that one made an irreversible decision that they regret later on sucks. How old are you if you don't mind me asking?	Age, Old	Age - General, Age - Over 65s	4/151	2.649
Tropsmoo - I'm 21. Does that prove your point, because I'm too young ? Because I'm biologically too naive to know my true desires ? Well, if older people can't listen the inexperienced youth, I suppose I'll take examples of grown-ups.As I said, my aunt is borderline in her fourties and has still no desire of a family. I met countless people in the military who are also not interested in the slightest.Yes, I may be blinded by my young mind, but does it make it less real ? Must I follow everyone's else's path because it's supposed to be ?Not that this is wrong, but I'm simply not interested. Also. Funny thing, I'm a combat medic. I follow medical school. There is no such thing as a biological clock suddenly telling me to have kids in my thirties.I'll rather think it's society's pressure on young adults to have kids (well, a understandable demand, that is...). that ending sums up the problem, she is not standing for what she believes in she is just stating truths. In today's modern social issues we see in the (American) media the core is often that truths and beliefs have been mixed and build upon with creating these obvious issues that people shy away from acknowledging because it would undermine the whole reason to start with it in the first place and so put themselves at risk to be put down by the "bad" momentumwhich is why these two should be respected to actually say what a lot are now afraid to as they have defended it too much at this point to come back to.whats wrong with:men have (general/common) qualities and woman have (general/common) qualities that are equal in their own right, the power is acknowledging there is a difference but EQUAL and know there is overlap that is just as important to accept, to realize we all can bring something to the table which will be bound to be different but equal at the same time.ofc this is just my opinion xDIf this was the foundation of how people treated these gender mix based cased i think a lot of these issues u see come by wouldn't have matured as they did, resulting in these awkward realizations where u will always have a that would defend it to the end as they have emotionally/time invested in it too much to let go at this point. I really do not understand all these efforts to achieve two identical genders that do, think, live, operate in the exact same way. There is something diabolic in this. It's a fact that the two genders are different physically, the brain and the way it works it is different. Particularly women it seems to me that are pushed by society to be like or better than men in any field as a useless race to what? Throughout the history women have done the most important work of all: procreate, grow and educate children the future of society, a human being not a material product. Is there a job more important and burdensome than this? Why women that do this have to be treated as they are doing something useless or less satisfying. The fact that there are TWO genders means that the genders are... guess what: TWO. Not be able or not prefer to do something it is not a SIN it is a feeling that has to be respected. I worked in a small MC ammo dump in Okinawa from mid '67 to Mar '68. Went to Ammunition Technician school in Quantico, VA for two months prior to that. Learned a lot about ammo. That said, when we were assigned to the ammo dump at Camp Hague, Okinawa, we learned very quickly that we were primarily MULES that "humped ammo" in and out of bunkers and also worked out in the open. Due to the hot, humid climate, ammunition in outside storage (primarily 8" cannon rounds) had to be re-palletized every so often due to the wooden pallets rotting from the heat, rain and humidity. So we had to move three 8" rounds each from an old rotted pallet to a new one. Each round had an eye bolt in the fuse well for lifting. Two Marines (another jarhead and myself) were on opposite ends of a "Hernia Bar", a six foot long, 2" diameter steel pipe with a "J" hook in the middle. We would hook the "J" hook into the eye bolt of each round, one at a time, and lift the rounds off the old rotten pallets and onto the new ones. Each round weighed 204 pounds and the hernia bar weighed about 20 pounds. So the two of us were lifting about 112 pounds on each end of the bar for every single round. Of course, there had to be coordination so one man would not lift more than the other, and each of us made sure we were only lifting half the weight. This went on all day long, as there were thousands of 8" rounds to be re-palletized. We re-palletized hundreds of rounds every day for weeks. My point is, we were each lifting the equivalent weight of a small to medium sized woman hundreds of times every day. I weighed about 145 at the time and my fellow Marine was a little larger... about 165. So the question is, how would a 100-125 pound woman lift her own bodyweight hundreds of times a day without adverse affect to her health? Those steel pipes weren't called "Hernia Bars" for nothing! Can you imagine a small to medium sized woman doing this kind of work all day long? How many would hold up under those conditions... the stifling heat and humidity? Fast forward and put that same woman in a war zone trying to cope with 40-60 or more pounds of gear on her back and then having to carry some wounded Marine to safety? I don't believe that the vast majority of women, whether they will admit it or not, would want to find themselves in that kind of situation. Could some women do it? Perhaps, but I would wager very few of them could. Hell, none of us jarheads liked humping ammo, but it was necessary. I agree with this WM that women would be required and expected to do everything a physically larger male Marine would be expected to do. As Marines, we were all told in boot camp that we were Riflemen FIRST, and no matter what your MOS, when the shit hit the fan, you could very well find yourself on the front lines. The expectation will be the same for women. That's what equality is. Semper Fi	Nothing, Old, Woman	Age - Over 65s, Age - Youngsters, Gender - General	7/549	1.275

Eh, I think there's no reason why women shouldn't be allowed to become marines to be honest.Before I get lynched, no, I'm no SJW delirating and saying women are just as capable of becoming marines as men, far from it actually.I'm aware of the physical capabilities and mentality it takes to become a marine and I know men are simply more suited to become such due to both their physical power and mindset, which are a direct result of their being males.However, a woman might still show the prerequisites to be a marine after all.Of course, it's granted that men would be the clear majority, but hey, if a person shows he/she has what it takes to be a marine, why not let him/her in?...God I hope feminazis and SJWs won't consider this support for their beliefs	Woman	Gender - General	1/142	0.704
R. M. I have been Years in the Marines and you have seen to much stupid movies from the 70s, 80s to 2010.... When we have lowered the Requirements for women, they are NOT suited for war because the requirements was set for that REASON, unless they are able to go through the same requirements as men, they should not be allowed but that type of training is even bad for the female body.... It's why they lowered it to begin with, because the idea of a Female warrior have been ingrained since the 70s.. Even the BS about Viking Warriors was a lie based on 1-2 graves without any "CONTEXT" to what actually took place. In fact, Americans haven't had a reason to go to war for over 50 years, so in fact your Nation have slaughtered thousands of great men for NOTHING . Why should we then send our best and most brave women? to leave behind only WEAK GENES? For fuck sake think.I have been in the Military with Females, they can hold their own but they are not suited for war, we all have a place and it sucks for us all, that is the truth but we need to do what is demanded from us. Turok Hilsen; what have I ever said that would make you think I want women in war? (I don't!) When it comes to words like "inferior", I really feel it is usually used in the wrong way. As anyone who has read my posts knows, when it comes to spelling, I could be called "inferior", (I like to call it, "challenged"), but with spell-check I do manage to get by most of the time. I guess it all comes down to semantics. But when it comes to women in combat, that is definitely a BAD idea. Women do make VERY good clerks, and when I'm in the hospital, I would much rather have a woman nurse. It's not that I have anything against male nurses, but I do feel better with someone who has a gentler touch when they remove my stitches.	Woman	Gender - General	1/142	0.704

oldgysgt No you feel it's used in the wrong way, because Movies, Media and propaganda have been using it in a wrong way, i am simply stating the truth. Someone will always be superior then others, it's just reality and i am not afraid to step on egg-shells, i am not here to cozy up to fragile feelings. A gun is superior to a knife, and a man's physical strength is superior to that of a Woman. But in fact, Both Males and Females exist for a reason, they have different purposes and Civilization today is TWISTING it and i have had enough of it, it only causes more "Division" then unity. We all have responsibilities and i am tired of all these excuses that Civilization are coughing up to neglect it for the greater benefit of an agenda.A Man is a inferior care-giver then a woman, physically as women was born with the ability to breast-feed.. If the mother died back in the ancient world, that could mean the death of the baby. It's what we have created today that is causing problems, tend we try to fix it with more problems. People today believe Retarded is a bad word, because people abuse it. Retarded will soon no longer be a medical term because it "Offends" people.. Superiority only offends people who know their inferior, and that is the truth. If someone is a lazy fat slug, their inferior. They allowed themselves to be inferior.. It's not my or anyone elses fault and i will not spend my life walking on egg-shells, these egg-shells have made people weak.. The Great White shark is superior to the Seal, i don't see the Seal starting to cry about it, in fact the Seal is superior to the penguin, it's circle of life. A healthy human is superior to a unhealthy human, but it doesn't mean that we shouldn't have laws that protects everyone equally. People are so fragile.... Here is another example: Your boss is your "Superior" and there is nothing you can do with it :D Because it's circle of life, he did what he could to end up as a superior, he is a boss-man for a reason.. Well, People can always Ass-lick, in which you need to prove to his superiors that your superior then he is, it's all a manner of will-power.. I applaud the female will-power to undergo military training, i think it's good for her own self-esteem, but sending her to war... Well she isn't superior enough to face the enemy head-on, her chances is tiny.. There is a Video in Sweden of a Immigrant beating 5 police women, or 7... It was pathetic, it was a disgrace on all of Sweden. In fact, Women are not suited for grunt-jobs like that in general.. A Man can literally throw a woman around like a Rag-Doll, that makes her inferior as a Grunt. Women was born with specific purpose just like we, they are the child-giver and we are the protectors.. It's time to accept it. Both are capable of getting food on the table, it's team-work, but i don't see this team-work, in fact i think it was broken long before feminism, but feminism was like a nail in the coffin.	Fat, Immigrant, Nothing, Woman	Age - Youngsters, Gender - General, Nationality - General, Physical Identity - Physical Features	6/547	1.097

Every man fit for the job is a superior, if your not fit for your job, you are inferior. If your not fit for your Job, you have basically taken the place for someone else who are better suited, this is the weakest chain in your Unity. To say there is a place for everyone, but not everyone is fit for the Front-lines, their abilities serves a better purpose somewhere else. When you go up in Ranks, it means that your Superiors thought of you as a Superior. Superior and inferior is a ranking system. If you can't improve yourself, your a inferior. Only People who can improve themselves deserves to be elevated according to their skill-set, this way you serves the purpose of your skill. Are you familiar with the system of a Skill-Tree? From the day you are born, from a Sapling until you are fully grown, you are leveling up as a Human, you develop certain Skills, the Human with the most skills and higher level will always be superior to those with less. Because the People with the most Will-Power will achieve what they wish to be, because they work hard to achieve it, they are leveling up to achieve Skill-sets.It seem to me that you allow your "Feelings" to be greatly impacted by the word Superiority, it's only the truth, the reality of this world. There is nothing wrong with it. To be in accordance with reality is better then building deceptions built on lies, no matter how good these intentions are. I rather inspire people to be their own superior selves, then to inspire them into inferiority.. They will become a burden to themselves and everyone else. The normal distribution for man is "flatter" tho, basically saying you find more males in the area of vastly superior intelligence and vastly inferior intelligence. Ok, so throw out the entire medical field in the military, then. Or did you forget that women were the best choice to patch up men in the field? That's why they were employed as nurses at close hospitals during old war times. Women understand medicine far more than men do, because in order to work in that field you typically have to have some compassion for other human beings. And since women have a wide range of emotion, where as men do not, it's only natural that women be in roles that suit their compassion. Also... Guns aren't hard to use, nor are they really all that heavy. Anyone can shoot them. And since wars are fought with guns more so than anything else... It doesn't take a scientist to pull the trigger. Now, the rest of the gear is what's heavy, but not the weapons themselves. Those fucking packs with everything you need to survive for months is what would slow women down. Outliers are usually barred from statistics because of what they are....outliers. As an engineer you wouldn't take into account a huge outlier that draws away from the point of the statistic. As for women "Bitching" they are doing so because of the training right now set as the STANDARD is too difficult for them to complete. So they are bitching because they want it to be easier to complete the training. They are not physically able to do it and don't have the mental toughness to do so. Im all for giving them the opportunity but its like giving women the opportunity to play in the NFL. They are allowed but none are capable and not even as kickers. "Outliers are usually barred from statistics because of what they are... outliers". Sir, that's flat-out incorrect. For those that are statisticians (or those that have taken a class or two at their local community college), know that you must never, ever, disregard outliers. To "force" data to fall upon a bell curve by the exclusion of them is called a Type II error (google provides a sufficient explanation of what that is), and like I said, it is one of the worst reasoning errors you can make. Regarding " mental toughness", there is no studies to support that outlandish claim. You know why? Because it's like you and I both said: most women don't have what it takes physically to meet the standards that are required for infantry. If you have no (or very little) women in infantry, how are you supposed to measure whether they have the same psychological fortitude as their male counterparts or not from such a small, practically nonexistent sample size? Im not going to get into a mathematical debate with someone who took two classes at COMMUNITY COLLEGE lol. Ive taken about 15 classes at a top 10 engineering school in the US. I know what im talking about and I dont need some community college attendee to google their argument. You do not need "studies" to prove women dont have the mental toughness it takes. NO women has tried to do BUDS training or anything like it. Why? It isnt because they were barred from it, it is because they did not want to when presented the opportunity. This shows that they cant handle what is in store for them. They dont have the mental toughness to go through it. That right there should be a study in itself. HeartlandRanchTVSoooooooo, if another group like ISIS develops and starts bombing areas of your country including your home (you survive). Whaaaaatcha going to do about it huh? You cannot magically tell people like them to stop. The military is nowadays most likely for that purpose, of putting aggressive countries and groups into their place. They ARE defending our freedom, and you are being totally ungrateful for the sacrifices made.I'd rather let women do what they do best at home, than for then to serve in the army where they should NOT belong. Whoever thinks otherwise is trying too hard to be a white knight or whatever, and should give up that bullshit. Yeah it is nice to have women with you in combat, but they are not nearly as reliable as a man with the same training and experience. Both sexes do experience stress from war, but surely men handle it longer because of the fact that we are biologically stronger and bigger on average or in common sense. I don't care the gender , there are skills for every profession, if you can do it, do it. I mean equal in a way, that I want the same chances, if I can do it, no need to restrict me from that. Not every male is a Hulk either, that can put up with everything, those men have also to drop out. That is fair and resonable to both genders. Calling myself a feminist does not mean I'm stupid, I also don't want to be better than men, just want to do what I like, I didn't want to outdo the guys in my engeneering master, I just happen to like the stuff. Excellent news. As long as the females have to complete to the same standard as the men then it won't impact combat readiness.. The reality will be that for any women to pass out as infantry Marines standards will have to be lowered. The reality is that very few men are physically able to become Marines, that means that only a tiny percentage of women will be strong enough to pass out. How many women do you know who can carry 100lb of equipment on their backs all day for several days at a time? Men are faster, stronger, more resilient, they have more stamina, less hygiene requirements and are gifted with logic. It not only makes them superior, but vastly so. Women are weaker, slower, have less stamina, can take much less punishment, have extra hygiene requirements, take decisions based on feelings rather than facts and logic and make great PoW during conflicts: rapes, abuses, etc. These ARE proven facts.Women are not fit for fighting nor leading. Men are. Also, women generally live longer because they don't endure as much as men do and they don't work the harder jobs that men do. The average life expectancy for men in North America in 2018 is 77 years old , against 81 for women. Just explain me how living 4 years longer when you're already 75+ and a few years away from death is 'girl power'? It's not like life is gonna throw something extra at you just for being a female. Bottom line: women ARE inferior to men. Whether or not you can accept this fact is your problem. Perhaps your feelings are hurt. But why the fuck should we care.	Old	Age - Over 65s	1/187	0.535

Landon the Republican wrong. As many comments have stated (both by men and women) men have almost every advantage over women on the battlefield. Higher physical strength and stamina, less susceptible to injury, much more capable of handling that shit in the long term, and less emotional when it comes to decision making. I'm sorry to have to hit you with a truth bomb, but this has been proven many times by factual evidence. Being flexible is down to the individual, and i have seen plenty of men show flexibilty that easily matches what i have seen from women.Also, in a scenario where women are captured by terrorists, what is likely to happen? Rape. And then if their fellow men are there too, they are more likely to give up information to protect the woman . If they dont, the media would call them cowards and ruin their whole life. But if a woman were to allow a man to be killed, noone would bat a fucking eyelid.Again, i'm sorry to have to give you it straight, but women in the armed forces would not only be more likely to die in frontline combat (unless the men favor covering them or dragging them to safety which would be the most often and only reliable case that they survive getting hit), but they are in turn, decreasing the combat effectiveness of the unit as a whole, putting their comrades in danger. Robert Grant You obviously do not understand anything about infantry operations. Flexibility and speed will not allow someone to carry a combat load up hills day and night for days, weeks, months, years. Women do not have the muscle mass or the bone density needed to do this. Men prove their worth to the greater community by being able to procure meat, & in being able to defend the community's property from invaders. If they get killed while doing this, that is the price the individual male had to be willing to pay for the preservation of the group. Women prove their worth to the greater community by giving birth to the next generation, & in caring for that future generation until they are able to create & insure the survival of the generation after them. Explanation from a man's perspective: Being that we have a different body composition, different chemical balance, and typically a more masculine approach to potentially traumatic situations, men are physically the ideal choice for an infantry position. What women don't understand or even actually know about is the type of bond men build or can create in an instant. Especially in a Military/War scenario. A bond where guys can seemingly read the others mind with a simple look, blink, or subtle nod of their head that others would never notice. A trust that in some situations you would be willing to die to get the other out of, or know not to risk it because you know he will be able to handle himself. Men have not only been told our entire lives to watch out and care for women, we have held it as our nature. Maybe this would not be the case, but I do not feel I could trust a woman to pull or carry me out of a hostile environment. Whether it be a disastrous event or fighting for our or ally's protection. And while I could tell myself 'she can handle herself' in the similar situation as the man, I don't think I would actually believe it. That is not to discredit any woman at all, but more so that protective nature we hold as men to 'rescue' our women. This is just my take on the subject and not all men share it. Some say 'sure put them out there' with some speaking in confidence and some speaking sarcastically. Either way, I think that sending women out on the 'frontline ' is a completely unnecessary risk for not only our women but for men as well.	Woman	Gender - General	2/291	0.687

I was a very strong, fit, motivated soldier at 25 when I first deployed to fight in Iraq and I can tell you that I am now severely disabled as a result. There does not exist, on planet earth, but maybe 2 women who could have done a better job than me. That is being liberal in that assessment. Women will crumble physically or emotionally when up against the extreme rigors of infantry, close quarters combat. There is a reason that human beings have existed for 300,000 years WITHOUT female warriors. Some cultures in the past had female warriors but that makes up .00001 of female warriors which means... THERE HAS NEVER BEEN FEMALE WARRIORS! Maybe there is something to that 300,000 year history, ya think?	Disabled	Physical Identity - Physical (and Mental) Impairments	1/147	0.68
There really are some bad ass women out there. Problem is you don't really know until the shit goes down. Same for men. "Will they be commanded to do that even if they don't want to?" The underlying Western sense of female entitlement in that question is ASTOUNDING!!! Bit this is the military. Male soldiers get commanded to do things all the time that they might feel is unfair or goes against their WANTS, which basically this is what it comes down to. Women want the right to do whatever the fuck they want and accountability be damned. They have this fiction going on in their brains that being male is one big jolly party and we get to do whatever the fuck we want whenever we want and this couldn't be further from the truth. My thoughts about women in the front lines and infantry: Women and men aren't equal. Both Genders should have the same rights. But one isn't greater than the other. It's like saying a skilled and knowledgeable and wise judge is better than a brain surgeon. Different fields of expertise. Not to say one can't try nor succeed in the other's role. Just not everyone though. Not all judges can be a good brain surgeon and vice versa. But I think women should be allowed. But educated and knowledgeable of what they're getting themselves into. There are women who despite the physiological differences can be stronger and better than men in the men's field. If it's their choice, they're well trained and qualified, then go for it. I sincerely don't believe all women are incapable of it as I know all men aren't capable of it too. There have been many great women in the past that ruled as strongly as men, that fought as skillfully. That were as wise. It's a matter of both the mission at hand and the individual. Not generalized by gender . If there's a judge as skilled as a brain surgeon, and that's their choice, then why not?	Gender	Gender - General	1/202	0.495

Men have evolved over millions of years to be the hunter and protector, during that same time woman have evolved to be the gatherers and caregivers (probably why they worry so much and take so long to shop) we are from an evolutionary stand point a perfect match, where men lack woman excel and where woman lack men excel, perfect balance like everything else in nature... there is zero reason, nor should there be, for compete and total equality, that's not how we were designed. equal rights absolutely, which in 2018 we all already have, but to just pretend basic biology doesn't exist and 120 lb woman can do the same physical things as a 190lb man is just absolutely ridiculous... not to mention they waited for the most comfortable period in human exist to try this little experiment out... they couldn't have done it 200 years ago when we were conquering the Wild West? They waited for electricity, indoor plumbing, automobiles, modern medicine, how many female amputees do you see in old photos? The blonde woman on the left needs to spend a week with the WM serving together with the males Marines. I'm sure the blonde woman could not keep up with 98+ of the WMs in PFT, discipline, military bearing, etc. This goes for other woman who have never served active duty in uniform in a 'combat unit.' WM's are very aware that they are not equal to their male Marine counterparts. WM perform their function and are respected by their male counterpart for the service they perform. if you think about the stresses that an infantry unit goes through on a daily basis, is it wise to add sexual tension and infighting into a highly alpha male environment. Perhaps and all female unit as a test to see if it works, rather than change the whole program until we have a better understanding of the value if any of this direction. Further, in an artillery unit, these ppl are hoisting very heavy shells, and sometimes maneuvering heavy guns in less than ideal conditions. Even in basic training women are credited for doing less than the men. I'm not in the military myself but family members are and I can tell you this with personal experiences through my own family that women in basic graduate with less standards for example, a man has to run 3 miles in 18 minutes or less to pass grade or how ever basic training grades each individual. A woman would have to run the same distance but is granted more time for the same credit. Now take that same scenario into a battle field, a man has to be able to lift a fellow soldier weather male or female and be able to carry them while carrying upwards of 120 lbs of gear as well. Well why does the woman only have to carry the gear? It may be the choice of the individual when it comes to a situation like that but the bottom line and point are the exact same. If a woman wants to become infantry then she must do exactly everything the man does with the same standard of credit.	Woman	Gender - General	3/186	1.613
Why is it so hard to accept that there are roles than man excel in and there are roles that women excel in. For those who didn’t actually get what she said: the bar was lowered to accommodate women, many women who compete with men in these specific areas suffer long-term physical problems because of such (it’s brutal). In addition, because the bar was lowered, under-qualified men are also competing in realms they otherwise would not and are also suffering long term physical issues. The result, an operating force that is compromised from within because an all inclusive policy gave folks a false sense of empowerment; essentially catering to the lowest common denominator. If they raise the bar back to what it was in the 1980’s, those who pass are qualified, regardless of gender . Reality, the cost associated to allow less than 1 of a group to participate isn’t by any-means effective or viable and it’s absurd to expect such... that’s not discrimination, that’s being mature and reasonable, focused on the greater good for all. I particularly like your last section, as quoted below. After hunting a few years with my dad, I could hit a flying quail with a shotgun and shoot a squirrel in a high tree at age 18. This is a lot different than shooting fixed targets. " . . You can't give someone years of marksmanship experience in 12 weeks. Yeah, you can make them a damn good shot, and that works great. It's a cool concept, and I think everyone in the military should have the same idea, but everyone isn't a rifleman. They should have training, and even a cook should be able to pick up a rifle as needed. I used mine plenty, even as a medic. I figured the best preventative medicine was shooting the enemy first." I do realize that. I was trying to make an analogous argument to show my point of view about how this issue is not necessarily black & white. How sometimes a physically inferior person may be better suited to a physically demanding position because of superior mental or emotional capabilities. Obviously went way over your head, I am sorry.Let me try again. This time we will take the example of Tom Brady, he plays the position of quarterback, arguably the most important position in all of team sports and in arguably the most physically demanding sport. You would think that being a physically superior person would produce a superior QB. Then why is Tom Brady, widely considered one of the least physically gifted QB's of all time labelled as the GOAT (greatest of all time) and not someone like Michael Vick? In Tom Brady's case I would attribute it to his IQ and ability to read defenses quickly and stay calm in the moment. So in his case we have a person that could easily have been overlooked and not even given the opportunity to play. He was only given the opportunity to play high school, college and NFL football because of luck, he was passed over for other people who either left the team or got injured throughout his early career. It was only his persistence and belief in himself that allowed him to take advantage of this opportunity. An opportunity that may never have come his way if the first string QB in high school did not transfer, if the starting QB in college did not get injured and then the next college QB they wanted to start over him turned out to waver in clutch moments, and finally if it was not for Bledsoe getting injured he may have washed out of the NFL.What does all this have to do with anything? It is a great example of someone who seemingly was not suited for a job to not only be actually competent at it but the VERY BEST at it. So it may be generally true that women are not suited for combat roles in the armed forces, there may be some truly exceptional combat soldiers out there among the female population who should not be excluded in a carte blanche disqualification of ALL women for combat roles. Look outside the box sometimes and you may be surprised.	Black, Mental	Ethnicity - Black, Physical Identity - Physical (and Mental) Impairments	2/404	0.495

Dayveon Harris: More males are conceived than females. But more boy fetuses miscarry, & more boy babies are stillborn. However, there are still more baby boys born than baby girls. During childhood & adolescence, more boys die than girls, so that by the time you get to somewhere around 20 years old , there are an equal number of males & females. These numbers begin to reverse by the time you get to about 50 years old , when women now outnumber men. And as you go beyond middle age to around 80 or older, there are roughly 4 women for every 1 man left alive.	Age, Old	Age - General, Age - Over 65s	3/104	2.885

I was in war for two years (Croatia) - after few week all soldiers looked skinny but determined (we covered 10 miles distance allmost every day carrying all of our equipment).The conditions were horrible because our lines of supplie were broken or blocked many times and the enemy was far superior in number and weapons than us.I saw some women even in the worst periods of war but mostly they were in logistic and ambulances (although our logistic was in big trouble because we didnt have enough vehicles , ammunition and very often we eat just canned food- if it was available).But I must say that I saw some women on the front lines fighting - they were determined to defense their homes and families . I really think that life in army (especialy in combat units during the war) is not for women but when circumstances are very bad they can fight side by side with their male comrades. In this answer I wanted to emphasize significant role of women in war and another thing is that the size (height and weight) of an individual soldier mean nothing- determination and endurance are the biggest qualities. (I was a sergeant in Croatian army during the war (1990-1995)- we defeated our enemy which had everything :tanks,planes,guided missiles and we didnt have nothing except small arms (rifles and pistols)- women in our army were very valuable and brave soldiers)	Nothing, Skinny	Age - Youngsters, Physical Identity - Physical Features	2/241	0.83

Lachs geräuchert not really. You refer to the avarage man and the avarage women ignoring the fact that women all cluster in the middle while men cluster at the extremes. And this is true for every race. So the smartest will always be men. For every woman with a 120 iq there are 6 man that can do the same. The difference is much more accentuated on the same race. Males in every case have way way more geniuses than the female counterparts. As camille paglia said "there is no female jack the ripper as there is no female Einstein". Females are "like little bit dumb little bit smart" so they have a mediocre variety and cluster in the 80 100 iq range while men are at the extremes and thats why we have a lot more males geniuses and lot male morons but also in both cases a woman differs for man that she is absolutly not a risk taker.	Dumb, Race, Woman	Ethnicity - General, Gender - General, Physical Identity - Physical (and Mental) Impairments	5/161	3.106

If you want to test physical abilities make the standards the same! A female should be required to do the same amount of pushups, sit ups, pull ups and have the same standard on the running! If a woman can do that then yeah let her in! Just face it! When you are on the front lines in a war zone do you really think the enemy will take it easy on you, because you are a woman ! If you really want gender equality I dare you to go on the front lines in a war! You will experience gender equality really quick when you face off with the enemy! If you are a man or a woman the enemy will kill you with no discrimination! Let that sink in! How well will a woman take it when they see their peers getting their heads blown off or other gory situations! Majority of women are too emotional! I told a woman to shut up one time, because she kept nagging and nagging! She couldn’t even handle that, so if you are emotional like that on the front lines it is game over! You are dead! It is more serious than trying to do everything a man can do! If you really want to go that route women, then you better bring it is all I have to say!	Gender, Woman	Gender - General	7/228	3.07

It isn't even just that. Say in this scenario there are two people shot in the leg and one is a woman one is a man. You need to retreat but can only save one. The woman is under heavy fire and the approach to her is perilous. The man is close by and has cover, success of rescuing him is much higher. Who would the gentleman and soldier in you try to save? Would you rather leave a woman behind to be captured or a man? Conclusion is there are now three people shot in the field of battle.	Woman	Gender - General	3/100	3.0

I did literature research on female soldiers for my study a while ago. In social sciences the literature is very one sided. Nobody in social sciences would admit this. While I would like there to be complete equality in this matter, men and women are just physically different. People just have to accept that. It doesn't mean that women can't play an important role in the military, as they have in the past, but not everything is physically possible. It's nice to see a woman admit it. I do not, however, believe standards should be lowered for them, as this would hurt the Military as a whole. The phrase all men and women are created equal is meant to be implied as we are equals as human beings and no one is to be dominant over the other. That's it! No one is created equally from an intelligence or physical standpoint. There are some women stronger than men. There are men more intelligent than women. We are all different not only in gender but also abilities. Feminists are extremists and believe women are superior to men and therefore think they are smarter and physically stronger than men. Jay Pond. You hit the nail on the head. This is 'collectivist ideology' 101 and feminism is a collectivist ideology exactly the same as any marxist permutation you care to name. The trouble is a logical brain struggles, hopes, tries to get the 'light' of reason to go on in the collectivist mind because well, it's REASONABLE. This is a pipe dream. It will never happen. If I was an enemy, seeking to go to conventional war in the future with the USA, I would do EVERYTHING I could to legislate to get women on the front line stopping bullets. It dilutes the forces because 'combat ready and capable' troops are 20 at least less effective, before you consider a women screaming for help from medics, mental breakdown or a 'draft' division. Forget also that all civilian women will no longer be 'non-combatants' in the minds of enemy soldiers. Even 'support' would be lost as instead of a few hundred support women on base being killed by bombs, twenty thousand are killed per month on the battlefield. The logistics of support in battle would be exactly the same, possibly even more as more body bags would be used, along with a far reduced effectiveness in oppositional force. For an opposing enemy, this is a dream come true especially if the war enters an attrition phase. If feminists had pushed such an agenda in WW2 they would quite rightly have been lined up against the wall as 5th columnists and shot or maybe just thrown into a pit with a grenade as they weren't actually worth wasting a good bullet on. These people will still push their poison, no matter how many bodies stack up. Oh and another effect, forget women being effective spies. In war men would now just look at any woman as 'especially' dangerous instead of letting their guard down. Women in the World Wars were exceptional at being spies. Maybe their right. The 'enemies' of America are possibly behind all this social engineering. I would, if I were them.	Mental, Woman	Gender - General, Physical Identity - Physical (and Mental) Impairments	2/342	0.585
Moggy1000. A female, captured by an enemy who has no humanity left (quite likely in war), is forcefully interrogated, then 'recreation', then interrogated, then 'recreation' then killed, hopefully quickly. A man 'disarmed' can still escape or be dangerous often warranting killing if troops are stretched. A woman 'disarmed' is recreation, far less often 'dangerous' and if troops are stretched can be 'kept' as recreation on the march and then discarded in a pit. Such 'treatment' is biologically and logistically defined in a war environment not that these 'feminist' collectivists give a damn about what happens to women OR men.	Woman	Gender - General	1/99	1.01

This isnt an issue of sexism . At a biological level women and men are different. Women's traditional purpose is the gatherer and the carer of the children. The men were the hunters. (Hunter-gatherers) Now of course this wasnt a set deal, some women would help hunt and men would sometimes care for kids and gather food, but the way we are designed as humans men and women are different. They did not evolve like men did. Because of this, men are much better suited to be infantrymen than women. This doesnt mean that there will be women out there that could be infantrymen. First thing that comes to my mind is if a woman soldier has her period. Women on their periods are more moody and emotional. This doesnt help the fact that women are more driven by emotions than logic. Also, a vagina is a very easy place to get an infection and if a woman soldier has a yeast infection, thats just wasting time and resources that didnt need to be wasted. Im not a sexist, women have their roles in the army, but they most certainly do not belong on the 'front lines'.	Sexism, Woman	Gender - General	3/196	1.531

Having women in an infantry unit will disrupt the infantry's identity, motivational tactics, and camaraderie. The average infantryman is in his late teens or early twenties. At that age , men are raging with hormones and are easily distracted by women and sex . Infantry leaders feed on the testosterone and masculinity of young men to increase morale and motivation and encourage the warrior ethos. Few jobs are as physically and emotionally demanding as the infantry, so to keep Marines focused, the infantry operates in a cult-like brotherhood. The infantry is the one place where young men are able to focus solely on being a warrior without the distraction of women or political correctness. They can fart, burp, tell raunchy jokes, walk around naked, swap sex stories, wrestle, and simply be young men together. Although perhaps not the most polite environment, this is the exact kind of atmosphere that promotes unit cohesion and the brotherly bond that is invaluable. This bond is an essential element in both garrison and combat environments. Ask any 0311 what encourages him to keep training or fighting in combat when he thinks he can go no further, and he will respond, 'My brothers to my right and left.' No matter how masculine a woman is, she is still female and simply does not mesh with the infantry brotherhood. In the young, testosterone-filled infantry ranks, this is asking for love triangles, unit drama, and the potential for intraunit relationships. Platoon commanders in co-ed units already deal with a tremendous amount of drama, pregnancies, and sex in the co-ed unit barracks most of the people who want to incorporate women into infantry are civilians or young, inexperienced Marines. Although advantageous to individuals incorporating women into infantry units is not in the best interest of the Marine Corps or U.S. national security. Anne Anni I totally agree with you ma'am, but if a female is in the front line as a infantry soldier it is more dangerous if she gets captured. If a male soldier gets captured he gets tortured badly. It is well documented that the male soldier will have his testicles wired up to electricity, he will also be beaten and even killed. A female soldier who is captured will be constantly raped and passed around as a sex toy, sexually assaulted, beaten then killed. Women should not be anywhere on the front line. I'm not against women in infantry because of gender , I just think it should be top notch. There is a large of men that shouldn't be there either. Just being real, the above average healthy man is still probably stronger, more durable than the top 10 of the healthiest women. I'm not talking talent, athleticism, brains, or anything like that. There are dozens of animals that could pull a carriage, but a horse is still always the best choice overall. It's the same as women and men being in same boxing ring, basketball court, ufc octagon, football field. Those are recreational and we don't do, why would we do with lives? I'm being logical, I love women and think they are definitely more talented than men in 100's of 1,000's of more things, just not physically, maybe physically aesthetically, but no where near durable and as strong which is a majority of what's needed. If it was up to me I would turn down men too, I would want the best, and who wants to be there not someone forced anyway. Speaking as a medically retired veteran do to spine injury. O.K., Leaving all gods, deities, and belief systems aside, here is the truth ! The human animal species tends to have the belief that all knowledge is obtainable, and all knowledge that we have gained thus far is true, until proven different. We must first understand that we are just another animal species on this planet, and there is no magical power that says we should know anything ! Given that if all humans, as well all life itself on this planet, were to cease to exist,the universe would not be effected in the least. Earth would still exist as a planet. Now, given that knowledge, we are left with one thing, the universal insignificance of survival of life, and even more insignificantly put, the survival of the human species. Passing on our genetic code by breeding, and the survival of each generation, and adaptation to ensure that existence. Now, the one thing that has allowed our species to survive so well, is that we humans mimic our surroundings, and all that we retain in our memories, putting these memories together with infinite possibilities. Social interaction has also helped our success of survival. Engineering successful social guidelines. These must be seen as universal beliefs, in order to coexist successfully. This struggle to re-engineer a society may, or may not, be beneficial to a societies healthy survival. We should always go back to this simple knowledge. Are we adjusting to our benefit, or are we being led into the drama, that will lead to our downfall ??!!! We must stop being so tunnel visioned on small, dramatic issues, but step back from our issues continually, and re-study our issues importance, readjust our focus in the most beneficial way, continuously ! Now, there are many subspecies, and even more genetically different subspecies, within the human species. Within these regionally located subspecies there are different belief systems in place. If those belief systems cannot adjust, and adapt, into one main agreed upon social set of guidelines, we must stay separate for the survival of both subspecies, and/or subsocieties, or face a non-survival situation for both, or at least one group of humans ! If you disagree, please intelligently voice your reasons for disagreement !!!!? On the sex issue, all living organisms on this planet fit into one of three categories, male, female, or self regenerative. In many species, the gender difference is highly specialized for a reason, to benefit the species survival. End of discussion ! In humans, disregarding scientific advances, both male, and female are needed to procreate, in order for that particular genetic information to continue, this we know, so we must be able to cohabitate, at least in the short term, but long term ensures a better survival rate for the offspring. All else is psychological ! Arguing this fact is an empty discussion ! All governments are designed to infinitely grow, till they consume, and control everything within it's reach ! They will use anything to obtain this goal !!! All religions are designed to believe through faith, not reality, in order to benefit from its hope, controlled by its fear, and promised great knowledge in its compitulence, and study ! Human abortion in the name of choice, or freedom ? Ask a vegetarian, or animal right supporter to help protect a puppy, kitten, or farm animal, and their 100 on board, but ask them to help stop the abortion of human babies, and you will be met with	Gender, Sex, Sexual	Gender - General	3/681	0.441

The ONLY question is if the individual in question can put bullets where they need to go, if they can get themselves and the required equipment to the location before and after the engagement, and if these things can be done under the pressures of fear and destruction. Not all men can do this... not all women can do this... not all people can do this. When fatigue becomes a factor marksmanship goes down hill. Not that I intend to disparage what those 8 women (& the many others just like them) did for their country. They are no less dead than any of the men. It was meant to help keep things in perspective. Women have been involved in the military affairs of this nation since the days of the Revolution. However, there were, & yet still are, certain roles best left to the men.	Nation	Nationality - General	1/104	0.962

Ian David: The question should be rhetorical because the answer is obvious. Women were banned from all combat positions until relatively recently. That was one of the arguments against allowing them into the military academies. But common sense was overcome, & women have been admitted to West Point, Annapolis, & the Air Force Academy since September of 1976. The military has simply reclassified many positions as non-combat over the ensuing years. During WWII, my father was classified as not fit for combat because he was blind in one eye. The Army still found a use for him though; first as a prison guard for Italian & German POW's who were being housed in Texas & Kansas. Then, shortly before D-Day, they sent him to England, & eventually France, in a support role with a hospital unit several miles behind the front lines. He still wound up in a few air raids which killed several members of his unit. Additionally, during WWII, a cousin of mine served in the WAC's as a typist for Army intelligence in Washington, DC. To be perfectly honest, I have met a couple of women in the Marines who could out perform me and probably kick my ass. Although they were very few and far between (I only met 2 and heard of 1). They were the top 0.01 of women athletes, and they were impressive. I have no quarrels with women being in combat roles, as long as they can pass the same tests that men do. Having the PFT and CFT have different scoring metrics for men and women is absolutely sexist. A perfect flexed arm hang is not equal to even one pull up. Just because you're a women doesn't make it okay that your perfect PFT run is minutes slower than a man. Combat doesn't know gender . Combat knows physical hardship, emotional hardship, fatigue and death. If you can handle all of those, then you have my support to be in a combat role. +Claudio Guerrero The measuring contest is all too fluffy to comment tbh. For any of this to make sense one must first define what exactly "lifting" the 45lb object involves, specify the bulk and balance point of the object in question, then state how far away from the body said object must be moved. Imo the easiest measure is a standard dumbbell curl, since only a moron will opt to lift an object away from their body (putting all the load on the shoulders and back) when they could hold it close, and if held close to the body, the transition from curl to overhead press should support similar weights.If dealing with curls and overhead press, 45lb is piss weak, even for reps. For a one-off lift, I would consider it "very easy" to lift 45lb with one arm, from the ground to an overhead press. Receiving and passing a 75lb bale of hay, assuming it was a manageable size, would also not be a big deal depending on the number of bales to be passed. I say that having moved my spare gearbox around plenty, and that's holding it well off my body due to all the oil and studs on it, and the gearbox weighs 85lb. Seriously it bothers me when people say crap over the internet. The weights you boast are not normal and I wouldn't believe them and don't so stop boasting about them. About the woman , she was probably lazy. The only time a 45lb object is heavy to lift is if it's bulky, which if bulky enough it's understandable since you can't get a good grip, thus making your strength mute. And boxes are only bulky if they're big and have nothing to grab onto to center the weight.Seriously curling 45s is easy? How the hell do you curl them? You're supposed to do it nice and slowly, fully extended, making sure your arms have your biceps facing the front. Bull shit people can do that easily for 10 reps. Sure I can curl that, but not with proper technique for more than five reps. It just pisses me off when I hear people just make shit up so blatantly. 8th grade, give me a break, that's not true, so stop saying it. Bit late to the discussion but, we had a production line at my old job and it was in the requirements: Must be able to life 50 lbs boxes off the floor.The parts needed to keep the line running came in those boxes. Well management decided to staff the line with about 90 percent women and guess what? They later had to hire more men and have them go up and down the line (Whilst maintaining their own job) lifting up these boxes and placing them on the tables for the women. I mean damn at one point they hired a 60-70 year old woman , who could not meet the requirements for the job, then wondered why the men would get mad about doing our jobs, plus the women's lifting. 45 lbs, 75 lbs is nothing ... is this thread full of children? An infantryman who cruised through PT and easily bested other platoons, struggling with 45 lbs in one hand? Come on, how can I believe that? This has nothing to do with women being weaker, only children or lifelong weaklings can believe these lies. My 7-year-old daughter can shoulder 45 pounds easily, and my 3-year-old son can lift it to waist height just as easily.What the fuck is wrong with people?!	Nothing	Age - Youngsters	2/83	2.41
Lil Stack'n for a very athletic person? Really? Are we talking one mile then sub 5min is considered good sub 4.30 is very good. 8min is what I'm doing atm training for a 35mile trail race ffs.	Race	Ethnicity - General	1/37	2.703

Uhh Lil Stack you were talking shit about someone who said lifting a 45lb human being was not easy and you compared it to doing curls with perfect form, and then you're going out there and saying no one is running 15 min mile with 150lbs backpack, except theres plenty of guys who are like 350lbs who would be able to jog that if you really motivated them (probably with KFC)... Btw I dont mean with the backpack, I mean with their fat . But a fit person 200lbs with that backpack can eat it up. How hard do you think it is to run with a backpack? I've never seen so many men voluntarily and publicly renounce their own man cards like this. I'm 40 years old . I haven't touched weights since I was around 26. I can easily lift my 150 pound English Mastiff off the ground and into the back of my truck.If you put a 200 pound sack of beans on the ground and said huck that up onto your shoulders, no problem. And it's not like I was EVER close to being the guy lifting the heaviest weights in the gym.Pretty much all I do these days is trail riding on my mountain bike.	Old	Age - Over 65s	1/103	0.971

That's because feminists don't really care about power, responsibility, and being equal to men. They care only about vanity, entitlement, and hating men. That's why they spend so much time whining about majority of men in high paying jobs, and keep looking for and encouraging OTHER women to compete in their place. They want to be represented as being strong, but not actually be strong.If the military woman in this video didn't say what she said, most feminists would have cited her as prove that women are as strong as men, rather than using themselves as proof. You'd be shocked how weak, unflexible, ect you can get not doing something for years on end.I used to do karate a long time ago, above a black belt actually full contact.I could jump so high to do some crazy kicks with my legs, stretch them out in the right way for maximum impact, had such quick snaps for my punches, ect.I have noticed I've got a lot weaker and lost a lot of it physically, so I'll need to train myself up again to do all the complex moves and have the impact I used to. I wouldn't say they CAN'T compete, I'd honestly just say women in the military are too lazy and not trained hard enough.You see some of these freakish women body builders, I wouldn't say thats how a woman should be, but they CAN be that strong, it's definitely possible.But yes, in geeneral women have weaker muscles than men. chuck wood I wasn't saying I could. I know I can't lol. I was just pointing out that this chick is weak af even for girl standards if she can't carry 45 pounds. Also men in the military don't carry 120 pounds on their backs for 7 months straight. That would mean continuously without taking it off for that time. Also I probably could carry that for a some minutes a day. The problem there however is that I don't really want to. Just as a person I'm somewhat lazy so a lifting job wouldn't be my ideal job. Swagonborn That is bullshit and you know it. Next time come up with more believable lie. Even for a relatively strong man to pick up someone who weighs the same as he does with 1 arm is not an easy feat, not at all. Anyone whose ever lifted weights or even has common sense can tell you're lying or at the very least explained poorly how you picked him up. Of course just picking him up from standing for few seconds its not that hard, but try to grab and lift him from ground with 1 arm and see what happens... I bet you couldn't do it even with 2 arms. Lil Stack'nYou said that you were able to lift 50 pounds with one arm, 3 sets of 10, in eight fucking grade, and you called it "normal, healthy strong". Only kids on roids could do this at 14 years old . It's quite heavy even for the average adult.Then you claimed that a mile in 8 minutes is a good time for a very athletic non professional runner. At least one of your two statements is complete bullshit. I'm 16, I have rowed agonistically for 6 years (6 days of 7 for the first 4 years, 1.5 hours per training, fairly light; 7 days of 7 for the last 2 years, 2.5/3 hours of training, really hard). I'm 160 pounds and I consider my body very athletic. Although we focus mostly on legs strenght, endurance and recover time we do lifting sessions 2 days per week, and they're maximal. I'm not very strong in absolute terms (I'm 16, duh) but I'm definitely much above average for arms strenght (and overall body strenght) for my age . Now, I can barely curl 50 pounds with my strongest arm and that's for once, let alone doing it repeatedly.Then at maximal I can run 2.48 miles in 14:53 (my best time). As I stated before, I'm a rower, not even a runner. 12 km/h is our heat up speed.Maybe I'm a weak ass guy and my country is a country of weak asses guys who are really good at running, but I have been in quite a bit of other countries and I haven't seen giant 14 yo guys lifting all the time. Heck, in normal sports and normal gyms you aren't even allowed to lift at 14 years old , unless you are doing a sport that requires bulking, like rugby (because normally lifting heavy weight with your bones underdeveloped isn't really good, duh). Some say women who cannot do their thing should not serve, I beg to differ, imagine the worlds first anti missile feminist meat shield, I say why not, its not like in the west we don't have a huge amount of incompetent females in the workplace (it is actually starting to be a problem) due to gender quotas that never seem to apply if there is more women, at least as a meat shield they could have some use xD. How about, we simply not care what a candidate has between their legs and simply allow only those who can satisfy the physical requirements. If a big strong woman can handle all of the requirements and pass all the tests? great, cool. There are skinny little dweeby guys who cannot handle the tests, you know. So it doesn't matter if you are male or female, all that matters is you are capable of performing the job at the required physical rates. If you can't do it, don't whine that it's unfair and standards should be lowered to accommodate females.	Skinny, Woman	Gender - General, Physical Identity - Physical Features	2/99	2.02

I like the area of my son staying at home while women go to have their heads blown off or watch fell soldiers body parts fly around or land on their face . The Police in my City lowered the standards and now women do parade duty and street festivals. We also found out that the female Officers have a crisis for LTD claims from PTSD because they were lied to by the Posters to recruit them that didn't show the suicides and spouse abuse or child-abuse cases by a 9-1-1 response. Even the butch dykes can't handle it . Me: At no point did she say women are physically inferior to men. She also did not say women should not be allowed into the infantry. The title of this video is complete click-bait bullshit”Pro life brother: ”that doesn’t make it false thought”It makes the title click-bait bullshit, exactly like I said. The title is false and the original poster is a liar who is deliberately trying to mislead and manipulate the audience. Even if the original poster is correct in his lie, it does not change the fact that I am right about what I said about the title. Anybody who disagrees with that is clearly not capable of simple logic and honesty. I am surprised no-one else mentioned the blindingly obvious fact that the video title is completely untrue. If a person can’t realize that simple fact, then are they even capable of delivering any kind of rational argument or holding a rational opinion about anything? Frankly, I would not trust an argument or point of view from someone who cannot admit to the plain truth. The fact that the title is bullshit does not mean that the opinion it expresses is false, obviously. But I am not talking about whether it is false or not. I am just pointing out the title is dishonest. I don’t have much time for people who are blatantly dishonest.If someone has to resort to lying and manipulation to make their argument, then their argument is probably crap. If the argument had merit then why resort to lying in order to manipulate the audience? You only resort to those tactics when you have nothing actually worthwhile to say, like, apparently, the original poster.	Nothing	Age - Youngsters	1/284	0.352
Mike: ”She clearly implied it though, didn’t use those words but that was essentially the message.”I don’t think so. I think her awkwardness that you picked up on was because the interviewer was trying to force her to follow a particular ”politically correct” narrative. She clearly was not comfortable with this. She was trying to talk around the expectation that she should have the opinion that women are on the front line, just like the guys. This is a classic case of public peer pressure. She was doing everything she could in the face of the media spotlight not to say anything bad about women. She clearly was not comfortable with the woman interviewer fishing for a forgone conclusion.One needs to ask, ”Why did she not just speak plainly?” What made her feel uncomfortable enough to dissemble in this interview?Once you figure that out, you are pretty much sorted as far as this crap goes.
