Buy My eBook! I do agree that some ignorance exists in people that see a picture in lingerie as a whore, but that is ignorants though and should not dictate... She wears less ON the field than she did in the photo so I guess I was more confused as to their statement on why she was let go... It's ok to go 3/4ths nude if I tell you too BUT it's absolutely horrible to go 1/4th nude on your personal page unless I say so..! Absolutely companies have rules but what I do OUTSIDE of my job is not my jobs business... I'll give you an example of what I mean.. You can actually look this up.. A woman teacher of 9th grade went on vacation in the Caribbean.. A friend took a picture of her laying in the sun with a swimsuit on and having a drink. (Looked like a mixed fufu drink)... The friend uploaded it to social media... Come Monday she was FIRED because her ATTIRE and HAVING A DRINK, that is NOT acceptable.. Chocolate Milk Yeah but these girls signed up for it. It's how basic economics works (and it would be hyprocritical of you to criticize it since you abide by these basic laws) as these companies are just trying to protect themselves from losses in the millions. Fuethermore the "problem" isn't only exclusive to females but males. Take adult acting,modeling and even male prostitution for instance. Males get paid almost nothing and alot of them go into debt. Us men don't complain about it though because in general we know that there is no value in men in these fields and that's just how it is. When was the last time you've seen a girl get busted for soliciting a male prostitute? The truth men and women are equal and I would argue that men are the ones being treated unfairly as we suffer in silence. Take the family court system for example, marriage etc... There is no excuse anymore for you guys. You girls are the majority of people with an education and in the workforce.	Nothing	Age - Youngsters	1/176	0.568

The first time it hit me: A few years ago I made it the the final round of the New England Patriots Cheerleaders auditions. Not only are there 2 dance rounds, but there is a round where each girl must walk in front of the judges in a bikini while their bio is read. It seemed odd that we had to do that when we already were wearing skimpy outfits during our audition. But of course the NEPC have a calendar shoot each year, which include definitely suggestive photos of each girl in tiny bikinis. I am sure the organization makes thousands off of these calendars each year. I never understood why it was adequate to pay these women 15 dollars an hour to cheer for men that literally make millions and a team that generates an enormous amount of money each year. They sell this to us by saying that this is the big break... that every door will open for us after the exposure of being on this team. By the way, in this group there were Entrepreneurs, Ivy League graduates, teachers, and community leader. Far from the "typical cheerleader" stereotype. They all deserve so much better. The second time it hit me: Some time after the audition a professor at my University asked if I would be interested in organizing a dance team for the new semi pro state basketball league. When I met with the directors, they assured me that we would all be compensated. So I found some extremely talented women and brought them together. For months we practiced three times a week + game days and promo work. We sacrificed our jobs to be there. I thought it would be a good experience for me to coach so at first I was really passionate and excited. But when we still were not paid after months of work, I started asking questions. I found out the players were making $4,000+ per game. And that was the moment I realized that because of my gender, no matter how hard I worked, the odds are against me. I could go to the gym and practice as much as these men did for basketball. I could be more talented at dancing than these men are at basketball. But in the end, we don't matter. Soon I started having nightmares and eventually resigned. Hundreds of hours wasted for "exposure". My heart goes out to all these women that are used and thrown away. You matter.

I've grown up in the south, and football is ingrained in the society here. It's crazy . I've never cared about it, but people here take it super seriously. I did cheerleading for a while (Competition cheerleading, not sports cheerleading) Cheerleading is really REALLY hard. I did it for extreme competition. We had to have makeup on, we had to have (and pay for!) our own uniforms and our practice shoes and our performance shoes as well as traveling expenses. We trained for hours. The NFL wants to sexualize these women for their own profit, and then slut shame them when they want create their own social media image. This isn't okay. I'm so fucking tired of women being treated like this and nothing happening.	Crazy, Nothing	Age - Youngsters, Physical Identity - Physical (and Mental) Impairments	2/124	1.613

I would say the cheerleaders should quit and find a career where they feel more respected, however, I do think they need to expose the NFL for sexism and honestly, I would almost call this wage theft, exploitation. The tradition of cheerleading - having the men play the game and having women come out to dance, cheer, and smile in swimsuits , to me, is awkward and super weird to begin with. In my opinion, cheerleading for a men's football team is a supportive, dependent role - with inequality built into the role. Maybe women should reconsider their role or restructure the whole thing or stop supporting men's teams in the first place. Why can't the cheerleaders be a mix of men and women? Oluchi Osueke not easily, especially w the added cost of all of the mandatory primping. Many NFL cheerleaders work one or more other jobs, if not during the season, which can be tough scheduling-wise, then definitely during the off season. For many it's something related such a teaching, coaching or choreographing dance or cheer, at least in part, & I've heard doing temp work is also pretty common . I'm not a big fan of football or cheerleading for various reasons, & am even less fond of the NFL in particular, but given the massive amount they bring in as an organization & considering how much even the lowest tier benchwarmers make it is atrocious - & imo downright inexcusable - that their cheerleaders - elite athletes in their own right - don't even make a living wage during the season. And that doesn't even begin to touch on the plethora of nonsensical inequities & other issues that are long overdue for some serious revision.	Common	Social Class - Working class	1/164	0.61

The industry here in Australia is just as bad if not worse. I was a cheerleader for a major national football team. I only did it for my love of dance. I used to cheer for CJFL (Canadian junior football league - they filtered into the CFL). We did not get any compensation. We practiced 3 times a week, we bought our own outfits, we paid our own way. This sucks that they have these awful standards... in our league it was about doing stunts. At least, most of the time.. we were all a group, except the older members who were in a special group. We were also told not to fraternize with players, but pretty much all of the head cheerleaders were at their parties. It felt awful being a 14 year old watching a 17 year old shame me for being young.. and I bet some of my teammates have gone down bad paths because of it.	Old	Age - Over 65s	2/129	1.55

They can make rules about how she has to dress at work, during work hours, as long as they're not discriminatory... But they have no fucking right to tell her how can she dress or not outside of working hours nor about what she can publish in her social media. It's her life! Her privacy! She is not their property! Those women are human beings, not plastic dolls, not trophies, not things! It's hard to break the double standard of an "old school," male run organization. You need to get them to drop in on 2019 where women no longer have to stand for this type of abuse. I'm behind you all the way. Cheerleaders are sex symbols and without them I doubt that the players would be making as much. The cheer leaders bring in the crowd too. It's a big scam on the wages. You gals are not being appreciated in your roll as money generators. You train even harder then the players do for next to no money. Time to start a cheer leaders union IMHO.The money men know that if they fire all cheer leaders they are going to loose out so they try to keep you under their thumb while filling their pockets. This is not a fair world so if you want the respect due you, you have to fight for it. You gals may look like Barbie dolls to be played with but your not and you should stand up for your rights to your fair share of the profits.Remember Cheer leaders can't be replaced with funky robots or costumed clowns.The League knows that, "sex sells," it's your ace to work with.Lets just say that all the cheer leaders posted images in sexy lingerie. (Not recommended for the possibility of attracting stalkers but you don't have to be a cheer leader for that anyways.) All the fans on Instagram are going to flock to the stadium to see you in real life for a chance to meet you. If the money men had half a brain they would encourage this practice. Sure you're going to feel safer if you take self defense training. With the raise at the box office, the team will be able to afford it.	Old, Sex	Age - Over 65s, Gender - General	3/307	0.977
Football started out as nonprofitable sport and has been like that for long time in history. Female football and male football are both businesses nowadays. The female one is about 40 times less profitable. If you want to get paid equal you have to produce equal. People, including women, generally want to see peek performance, hence they watch male sports more than female sports. Cheerleaders do not train as hard as an athlete. Cheerleaders are pretty much irrelevant to overall profit, hence they are paid poorly. If they brought double the people, they would have similar salaries to players. In short, logic > feelings and there are objective reasons for the way things are, not sexism or unfairness as victims want to believe for their lack of understanding and success.	Sexism	Gender - General	1/130	0.769

sweet bunny "Cheerleaders do not train as hard as an athlete." Sorry I'm going to have to correct you on this. As a dancer that studied the art for over 30 years, it's more training then most athletic endeavors involve. These gals are athletes in their own right. Practice practice practice. We use to say it was the hardest passion to perfect and involved the most energy. I was never a cheer leader BTW, (Wrong body type for the era and too many other options to work with.) There was one show that ran for a few years that showed the behind the scene work involved. Sorry, senior moment, I can't recall it's name. It all revolved around the the players and the cheer leaders. It showed the amount of effort involved in the art of cheer leading.If your not good enough to be one of the very few who have what it takes to join the ballet companies, don't want to be a clown or strut your stuff in the strip joints, then Cheer leading is a well respected choice. At the wages they receive, it's criminal. Years of dance classes for what? Sure they are all hot gals who can land a rich husband, but it's a new century and women need to be able to control their own lives if they wish to without being trophies. We are not chattel.	Senior	Age - Over 65s	1/234	0.427
Diane Neill Learn to compete in the free market. As a woman you have the advantage because women make up 85 of the consumerist purchases, despite the "wage gap". It's not the men that makes the rules, it's the market that decides. Otherwise 80 of the homeless would not be men. Plenty of women in sports who make shit tons of money, the good ones. Being a cheerleader is voluntary. Professional victimhood and scamming for example also pay well e.g. Anita Sarkeesian. Sink or swim, you are not chattel, you are an independent and responsible adult who makes choices and suffers consequences, like all adults should.	Woman	Gender - General	1/106	0.943
Diane Neill Sex sells alright... just not in the NFL. People don't pay thousands of dollars to go see cheerleaders dance. They pay thousands of dollars to watch 6 foot tall 200 pound me demolish each other. It doesn't matter how much work one puts in. If you don't produce value, you're worthless. If people got paid depending on how much work they did then a Mexican fellow down the street I know who works on a farm would be a multi millionaire.	Sex	Gender - General	1/83	1.205

Diane Neill It's just insane. You don't see guys complaining about this crap in the porn or modeling industry. It's because we are aware that there is no market for males which is why the VAST majority of male adult actors and modes get paid little and sometimes even end in debt. It was their choice though the same way as it's these cheerleaders fault. This is exactly why nothing will change and there is nothing you can do about because any rational person knows this. And by seeing your point of view on issues like these it seems like you are going to hate alot of things in life because we have rational laws everywhere that irrational people like you seem to hate. My advice to you is to inform yourself so you don't live a life of hate. Because things like these will NEVER change. :)	Nothing	Age - Youngsters	2/148	1.351

Buy My eBook! Who is asking for pay equality? No one said they should earn what players are earning. Asking for fair compensation is not the dame as asking for pay equality. Guys in porn tend to have longer careers and only a few women get top tier so that they really outpace the guys in their careers.I wonder if part of the reason that men in porn don't complain is because they know what they value in porn. Do they see their worth simultaneously through the eyes of the performer and consumer? Do they know that they may get slightly less until they become a name and that they'll probably be in the game much longer than their lady counterpart?	Dame	Gender - General	1/122	0.82

T C You're strawmanning aswell. Quote to me a statement of mine that said or implied that I was refuting equal pay? There was no such thing. I'm stating that these cheerleaders don't get "fair compensation" because they only work 10 days a season and they don't bring in enough revenue therefore they get paid what they're worth. What you want is that you want them to get paid money that they don't deserve. Not to mention that you cherry picked my example of male adult actors and models to make it seem like you won the arguement. There is no emperical evidence which shows the breakdown of porn through measurements like gender but I can say anecdotally that the porn industry is dominated by women. What I do know is that even in non top teir porn women get paid while men don't, that isn't to say SOME men will make more than women but it seems like, to you, that the exception should overturn the genral rule. Just because one man, such as Johnny Sins, Manuel Ferrera etc..., gets paid millions DOES NOT change the fact that the VAST majority of men don't get paid as much as women in the adult entertainment industry. Buy My eBook! Where did I say that you were refuting equal pay? My comment was based on this "You don't see guys complaining about this crap in the porn or modeling industry" I assumed that "this crap" was pay equality because that is what most of theis thread has been about. If you intended it to mean something else, then that is cool but it is easy enough to understand why I thought that you were piggybacking on the train of thought discussed earlier by someone with a similar stance as yours. You say they don't deserve it BUT they do far more than work during the games. hell, I just saw my city's cheerleaders performing at a concert for an old school jam. They used their official uniforms and repped the team so it was all official. They work more than 10 days a year and are pretty ambassadors for the team. No one is sayign they should be able to work it as a full time job and live in luxury just that $10 an hour and having to pay out of pocket for a lot of things required of them seems nutty given the profit margins of this particular companyCherrypicked? You gave the example so I talked about what you talked about. How is that cherry picking?Men don't get paid in porn? They're doing it for free? What exception? The exception is people who make it to top tier period. Other than that it all depends on the scenes and the person. Overall women end up paid more per film and men end up paid more during their career due to longevitiy or at least that is what some surveys, and articles have said. The only common thing seems to be that directors get the most and that's definitely still a male dominated field. It's all over the place. Back to cheerleaders, they seem to do a lot on the field and off but are getting paid the same as someone in a field that requires little to no training. That seems a bit off to me. I don't get why that is such a controversial statement. It's like dudes goign on an on about whether someone is worth 10 mil or 5 mil when they're traded. You may not see their value because you're just watching the game but someone in the NFL sees it or they wouldn't bother using them as ambassadors at all.	Common, Old	Age - Over 65s, Social Class - Working class	2/412	0.485

T C "Where did I say that you were refuting equal pay?"What you said "Who is asking for pay equality?" directly implies that I was refuting pay equality. However, I'll just take what you said as an honest mistake, no harm done."You say they don't deserve it BUT they do farm more than work during games. hell, I just saw my city's cheerleaders performing at a concert for an old school jam. They used their official uniforms and repped the team so it was all official. They work more than 10 days a year and are pretty ambassadors for the team."This is an anecdote with no emperical data to back it up. Can you say with certainty that other organizations do this? "No one is sayign they should be able to work it as a full time job.."Then shut the hell up because I wasn't refuting that either. If you actually read my comment instead of skimming through it you would know that I specificaly said that they get paid on how well they do their job and how much value they make in the marketplace. They very well COULD be paid lots of money... but only if they brought in enough revenue to make them worthy of earning that type of money.Furthermore, you did cherrypick my examples because you had nothing to say about male modeling. You realised that you couldn't debate it, therefore you avoided it and focused all then attention on male adult actors to make it seem like you won the arguement.The truth is men in the "non top tier" porn get paid very little if not any? Where do you think Manuel Ferrera and Johnny Sins started out? Working for FREE. There is a fundemental misunderstanding that I can spot here though. I am not talking about the adult acting industry as a whole (CEO's, crew members, casting members, camera men etc...) I am talking about the front line of the industry, the pornstars. If we take a look at the industry as a WHOLE, yes males do get paid more because.. well... they wre the CEO's and the ones in high positions, women can make their own companies if they wanted to.. but they don't. If we were to focus the attention onto the frontline of the industry, we see a much different story. Women DO get paid more then men and there ARE exceptions to this rule because there are male pornstars who get paid more than some women. It's not a hard concept to understand. In general though, males make less. Link to me these surveys and articles... as if there any reliable sources. oh yeah anywhere men are there's sexism . start suing ladies. easy money.	Sexism	Gender - General	1/12	8.333
Jesus Wept You can't generalize something if you know nothing about it. I'm from Louisiana (my uncle is Cory Webster). I remember going to a Christmas party for him and I thought it was weird that all of he cheerleaders sat on one side of the room and always sat back down when some of the players and coaches got up and moved around. I now understand that they weren't being weird but trying to keep their jobs.	Nothing, Weird	Age - Youngsters, Physical Identity - Physical (and Mental) Impairments	3/78	3.846
i don't feel bad for her. if you want to post stuff like that, go strip and ask fashionnova or some other like brand to cut a check. but nfl is for the family. this is fighting for women's rights to solicit sex in the mainstream, right? no bueno lol	Sex	Gender - General	1/50	2.0
when tryna slut it up goes wrong lol. nothing to see here except a woman complaining that she can't post sexually suggestive pictures on a public platform while representing her company on that same platform and keep her job.	Nothing, Woman	Age - Youngsters, Gender - General	2/39	5.128
If you think the job only entails shaking one's butt then I urge you to try out and see how it goes. These are professional dancers and athletes who have spent a lifetime, from 5 and 6 years old , training. Many were college athletes with sports scholarships (yes, cheering is a sport). They have to learn dance, gymnastics, etc, all at a professional level.	Old	Age - Over 65s	1/64	1.562
Butterfly Blues of course i am. You sound like a cute blonde former cheer leader. Cheerleading isnt a sport. Cheerleading is women doing jumping jacks to get the crowd (men) aroused. If you arent aware of it, NFL cheerleaders make less than minimum wage. They do it to advance their own personal agenda of social status. Our society places a higher value on exterior appearances . If a hot young blonde from a wealthy family disappears, the entire country panics and searches for her. If a poor ugly fat black girl from the ghetto disappears, nobody cares. That is messed up IMO. jenny ho - my bad. They are out there researching a cure for cancer with their butt cheeks hanging out.	Ho	Gender - Female sexuality	1/20	5.0
jenny ho don't try to reason with these two guys. if they have to hate and demean women to elevate themselves they really have bigger problems with themselves.	Ho	Gender - Female sexuality	1/28	3.571

...and after the spraytan, manicured nails,etc,it basically amounts to ZERO .	Zero	Age - Youngsters	1/10	10.0
Exactly why do it if you are going to complain about it biotches be dumb	Dumb	Physical Identity - Physical (and Mental) Impairments	1/15	6.667
But they still managed to arrest and convict another black man who had nothing to do with it. Her having her own show is the epitome of white women victimhood and privilege	Black, Nothing	Age - Youngsters, Ethnicity - Black	2/32	6.25
So the 15 year old bus boy at Denny's should be making 40k annually since Denny's is a multi-billion dollar corporation?	Old	Age - Over 65s	1/21	4.762
dev0n james sadly that not the case but we are working on it! nothing wrong with equal rights for everyone!	Nothing	Age - Youngsters	1/20	5.0
It's true at least in my experience. I just moved out of Nashville and I'm originally from New York and it was such a culture shock. Sexism and Racism is actually still really rampant there.	Racism, Sexism	Ethnicity - General, Gender - General	2/35	5.714
Ima Go Apesht What's the difference between racism in Nashville and New York?	Racism	Ethnicity - General	1/13	7.692
Very good video showing misinformation and a victim's perspective. Football started out as nonprofitable sport and has been like that for long time in history. Female football and male football are both businesses nowadays. The female one is about 40 times less profitable. If you want to get paid equal you have to produce equal. People, including women, generally want to see peek performance, hence they watch male sports more than female sports. Cheerleaders do not train as hard as an athlete. Cheerleaders are pretty much irrelevant to overall profit, hence they are paid poorly. If they brought double the people, they would have similar salaries to players. In short, logic > feelings and there are objective reasons for the way things are, not sexism or unfairness as victims want to believe for their lack of understanding and success.
