I not only smell the common smells in my home better after returning from being away for hours, I also can smell everything right after a shower. I don’t have pets but people seem to be immune to how badly pets tend to stink up their homes unless they clean/vacuum daily.	Common	Social Class - Working class	1/51	1.961

I always have this, as I have a guinea pig. She has a large cage in my room, and even though it's well ventilated with a fan going on to circulate all day and the door open, most people feel like I should be able to smell something, yet I never smell a thing! My aunt does not like my piggy, so she always tells me it smells horrible and she never seems to get used to it - which fits well with this video (bad = not adapting). But my mom likes my guinea pig and she sometimes smells it, but it never really bothers her.And then my mom hates farm smells, but I go horseback riding a lot and my dad grew up on one, so we never smell that either. Both my dad and I, have come to the point where we don't smell manure and dirt or whatever, so it never bothers us. The only thing I smell on my horse is a sweet hay smell which I actually like. It's called sensory habituation, all of your senses have it, and it's an idea that has been around for some time. It's like how you don't feel your clothing on your body after a time, unless I remind you that you're wearing clothing. Or how white noise eventually fades into the background. Neurons get bored of sending messages and stop if nothing new or interesting happens. Your eyes would do this except that they take part in microsaccades, a slight unnoticeable movement of the eye, which keeps the neurons in the eyes constantly functioning. If you didn't have these and attempted to focus on an object, everything in the world not in motion would disappear.The interesting part is the study about people habituating more slowly if they thought it was toxic than if they thought it was natural. This adds to the current literature on sensory habituation.	Nothing	Age - Youngsters	1/148	0.676

You've got nose blind you need fabreese	Blind	Physical Identity - Physical (and Mental) Impairments	1/7	14.286
Staring at something long enough DOES make you go blind actually. Sort of, anyway: if you can keep your vision very still, your ability to perceive patterns fades away as your brain just goes into auto-pilot and fills in the color. If the receptor cells in your eyes keep firing in exactly the same way, they'll eventually stop and let your brain take over to assume what's there. The problem with this is that your eyes make small movements very frequently, so this effect is almost never noticed. But, yeah, kind of a science fail there. I am disappoint.	Blind	Physical Identity - Physical (and Mental) Impairments	1/99	1.01
staring at exactly the same spot for like 5 minutes make me go blind ... i thought that was normal. 0.o	Blind	Physical Identity - Physical (and Mental) Impairments	1/20	5.0
Actually you would go blind if you quit moving your eyes... kind of. Your eyes have to constantly be moving to continue to see things. If your eyes stopped their nearly undetectable shaking and the exact same areas continued to be stimulated by the same input the receptors would burn out and you wouldn't see anything. As soon as your eye moves a different set of receptors catch the input and you see it for just a fraction of a second. The first set have a moment to rest or refresh with new input. If the same input hits the same area continuously you stop seeing anything.	Blind	Physical Identity - Physical (and Mental) Impairments	1/107	0.935

I must be one of the strange humans. My sense of smell is so sensitive that when I'm in my house for long periods, I can detect a new smell right away while still smelling the house normally. When my elder mother sprays the air freshener in the bathroom, my nose goes into over drive of knowing how nasty the bathroom now is or was so to stay out of said area for ten minutes. I don't adapt to such scent because I've had to learn how to stay on the defense cause of the type of life I've had. I keep my instincts and senses going at all times. I'll only adapt if the threats are gone for good and that can take years.	Elder	Age - Over 65s	1/125	0.8

White people smell weird	Weird	Physical Identity - Physical (and Mental) Impairments	1/4	25.0
Ehhh, not entirely true!!! I live in a smoking friendly apartment with my brother, we both smoke, and all of our friends that visit smoke. That being said, we're white. And everytime I leave home for work or whatever, and come back, the place smells like a moist ashtray! My point is, that white people do not always have the cleanest, or most pleasant smelling homes, and that race has nothing to do with smell... Bob MittActually, I'm mixed race with parents and have friends from literally every single continent (minus Antarctica) that live on those continents. I travel the world. I speak multiple languages and don't care what religion anyone is, what skin colour anyone has or relationship preference people go for. Treat people like human beings and nothing less.No person is any less than you when it comes to skin colour, religion or love preference. Get over yourself.Not a single person roaming this planet doesn't have their entire existence originating from Africa, so treat people equally because we're all the same in the end on the inside when born. People just learn different ways of life and think things of other people. If people like you didn't think yourself above other people, then the world would be a much happier place. If ANYONE should grow up, it's you for having such a shallow mind. Can't even see the bigger picture of the incredible world and people around you. Muslim houses smell the best of the best, you maybe go to some guy who calls themselves a muslim but isnt, oh and grow up! making an offensive statement about some body because of their religion, race , or name(Ügot Trollt, this goes to you) is just immature and irresponsible! our houses dont smell like cum, food, dirt or any smells that are commonly found in American and some European homes, and again, grow up! oh, and go ahead, make fun of my name, i matured long ago and wont care about some trash talking people... TinyLittleSilver could not have said it better! lets not also forget that its europe who is responsible for many wars here in arabia! they gave Palestinian land to the jews, they made arabia(which was as borderless as europe now, and divided it into countries you know today. which is a reason many wars became a reality, not to mention usa going into iraq and killing innocents, and when someone who had all his loved ones killed for no reason and gets mad and tries to get revenge, he is a terrorist ?! and lets not kid ourselves, we all know isis is organized by the uk and us! how could a terrorist group have a million pound in the vault without any external help?! uk has been its entire life trying to destroy arabia, they introduced the arabic slang to kill the real arabic, tried to separate countries from each other and fueling wars between them...Ügot Trollt when looking at it this way, sure, i havent matured, but this is just like judging the book by its cover, and no, profit Mohammed(pbuh) was NOT a pedophile, and this is proven! and there are infinite things that prove god do exist, go read the quran , and then come back and speak! Lindsey Jackson THIS! How retardedly misogynistic to assume that it's only women who do that. In fact, I rarely encounter women who are completely doused in perfume yet it's really, really common to see some axed-up douchebag smother themselves in that nasty stuff.	Common	Social Class - Working class	1/43	2.326
Jeremy Smith Though I agree that it's stupid to only talk about women when it comes to overpowering body fragrance, I don't agree with your second point. It's purely anecdotal and, judging by how you phrased your first part, probably biased. I take the ground that both genders do it equally unless anyone can provide some evidence that points to one gender specifically.	Gender	Gender - General	1/63	1.587

Persistence of vision is exactly the same as what Tara is describing with the olfactory system. The reason if you stare at a red dot for a few seconds and then look away you will see a green dot that isn't actually there is because your brain has turned down the red cones in that part of your retina leaving the green and blue more predominant. Exactly the same as the brain turning down specific odor receptors when consistently exposed. Uhh... of course all the other senses do this. I bet 9 out of 10 people reading this weren't aware their butts are sitting on a couch or if they're standing, their feet are touching the floor. When you chew gum for several hours, the flavor may diminish after a while but you're also getting used to the flavor at the same time. Spit your gum out, eat something else, and re-chew the gum and you'll start tasting the original flavor again. As for eyesight, if our brains gathered every piece of information we saw, we wouldn't be functional. We are literally blind to most of what we see, and magicians use this fact to their advantage. There's also our sense of temperature - you can comfortably ease yourself into a jacuzzi but you can't just jump right into one. Tara is the best host, I'm much more likely to watch if she's in the thumbnail... unlike Laci Green, Tara doesn't have a ridiculous + over exaggerated fake smile the entire video, and seems to genuinely care about the topic at hand. As a plus, she's also very attractive and does not have a creepy side channel dedicated to talking about sex ...	Sex	Gender - General	1/62	1.613

Laci seems to generally bubbly and happy, what's so fake about being happy? Shouldn't we encourage people to be happy all the time? Also Laci's channel isn't creepy. She's educating people on topics relating to sex . How is that creepy? She covers things like contraception which people should know, and dispels or explains any concerns, worry's or misconceptions the majority of us have about sex and our bodies. She's explained a lot of things I had worries about. Her channel is great, not creepy.	Sex	Gender - General	2/84	2.381
evildesu Don't worry, RangerHD is clearly just a virgin who's afraid of sex and especially strong women talking about it. Laci is awesome :)	Sex	Gender - General	1/24	4.167
Jeremy Smith> Don't worry, +RangerHD is clearly just a virgin who's afraid of sex and especially strong women talking about it. Laci is awesome :)I'd like to inform you that calling someone a virgin (which also perpetuates a sexist stereotype) and afraid of sex (something you can't know) usually indicates that someone can't come up with a better argument. The ad hominem fallacy is an easy choice for these people because, since they can't counter their argument, they try to invalidate it by making the opponent less credible (which it rarely ever does).Now, since I proved that the first chunk of your comment is irrelevant, the only thing left your comment says is "Laci is awesome". Fine, that kinda works, but it's still irrelevant because you provided no evidence or reason why she is or why you think she is awesome.Therefore, your entire comment can be deemed 'pointless'. It adds nothing to the conversation here (hell, it even insults a participant here), so it might as well not have been there in the first place hogging up space.Tl;dr: Your comment is pointless.	Nothing, Sex	Age - Youngsters, Gender - General	3/187	1.604
Nurdoidz This started from Jeremy's argument that outright insulted Laci. What you say about the ad hominem fallacy is generally true but you have to keep in mind that this entire conversation is based on a subjective opinion in the first place. Tara being a better host than Laci is pretty much impossible to "factually" prove so this discussion does not need hard counter points. He also expressed his opinion in an insulting matter so it's common sense that people will defend Laci and insult him back.	Common	Social Class - Working class	1/87	1.149

TonyMishima92I mentioned that I saw the comment with forgotten context (since the comment was on an old thread), so I just replied to that one comment as it stands alone.
