Mr Russell is an "old style feminist" more than a current day Neo -Nutsy. He should've said that more than just "I'm a feminist". I do not agree with what appeared as his dismissing Egalitarianism. Most of what he said was pretty much saying most of it's tenets.	Old	Age - Over 65s	1/48	2.083

This is part of the reason a lot of men won't get married. Many women complain the guy they're interested doesn't want to get married. Now you know why. Gay guys likely have it easier since they're not marrying women, who will eventually fuck them financially if it ends in divorce. This isn't a good time in history for anyone attracted to women for a relationship.	Gay	Sexual Identity - General, Sexual Identity - Male homosexuality	2/66	3.03
Why do you think ALL WOMEN wanna get married so badly... ITs part of their life experience. IT has way more benefits for women than men. STARTING at the proposal where a man GETS on his knees to the wedding where the its all about her to the honey moon where you woo HER to the decades of NAGGING and no SEX to the DIVORCE where she basically takes all your advantages in life and goes to BONE every other guy with your money in your Old house. I haven't seen my mom in 10 years. She chose the drug party life. I got raised in foster homes. My mom has hit the wall and can only get abusive old men. She is lonely everyday and she tries to reach out. But I never developed feelings for her. I could not care if my mother dies today. I don't care if any woman dies today. Women are the most satanic creatures there are. Eve was the first women, think about that.	Old, Woman	Age - Over 65s, Gender - General	2/83	2.41
I had a child with a one night stand. I was young and dumb as they say. I was ordered to pay child support, which is fine, but the part I don't think is fine is I was 18, didn't have insurance at the time. She didn't have insurance either. The judge ordered me to pay the hospital bill. Not we split it, but I had to pay the entire bill. My son is 19 now. I calculated what it all cost. $118,000. Kids are expensive. Just graduated high school, and basically got a bill for 120,000 dollars and 18 years to pay it. It was really tough at times, there were many times I thought to myself, I could raise my son myself, and would cost me the same. I felt like I was paying for everything and she didn't have to financially support him at all. But I love my son, and I didn't mind paying to make sure he had everything he needed. But I felt so powerless, I had no control over anything. I was in control of no decisions in his life. The courts made it seem like I was nobody but the bank. "the divorce laws are patriarchal and sexist" feminists have been saying that for a long as time.... You want him to call himself egalitarian for your own comfort, cause you hate the idea of agreeing with something feminist. The only thing I have a problem with is where he says a No would stop a rapist, male or a female rapist, no won't stop them, and a guy has the advantage to overpower a woman physically, but he can still be raped by a woman in a higher position, by blackmail, by thteths, by drugs and alcohol , and a simple No won't cut it for anyone, male or female. Men are massively disadvantaged in divorce court is a radical idea? What does that say about the general population? I knew a family who are white. woman gets pregnant and the baby that comes out is half black . they divorced and he lost custody of his other child and had to pay child support and alimony. All of the political problems we face are ultimately the result of an old system trying to deal with new problems for which it is inadequate. If we want to fix the problems we face we need to start by looking at our legal system and its structure within its historical context and secondly realize the ways in which society has changed and thirdly determine whether or not those systems are adequate to the new social reality or if they need to be changed. Alimony is a perfect example. Alimony made sense 50 years ago when women primarily kept the home. The work was divided and hence the income despite being solely or primarily earned by the man should be divided as well. The social fabric has changed though and women have careers now and men share the duties at home. Before women had no sufficient work experience or income that they could rely on but now they do. Alimony was a proper solution to past problems but now is inadequate to current social realities. This is an area among many others that needs to be updated to deal with that new reality. Its ironic how modern feminists, progressives, and liberals are some of the most hypocritical, sexist, authoritarian, and racist people you will ever find in the US and the west in general for that matter. These people are literally creating social hierarchies based on gender , race , and social orientation. They are so extreme in their ideologies that they view anyone who doesnt agree with anything they say, no matter how stupid or irrational, alt right and nazis. They still claim theyre oppressed in a society that caters to their every fucking whim. And whats most annoying about these people is they claim to be the moral authority on every issue while constantly infringing on the rights of other individuals to further their own goals. These people want to be the creators and leaders of a "new world" without having any personal accountability whatsoever and acting like children who cant solve their own problems. Theyre a joke and the fact we take them seriously is a sin unto itself.	Gender, Race, Racist	Ethnicity - General, Gender - General	3/167	1.796

5:36 I suffer debilitating depression and bipolar I. The woman I married I had known all my life and she was aware of my condition. Life was normal with bouts of mania here and there and depression always in the background. We were married 12 years (I'm only 36) and have one son. All she cares about is money and success and that's why she left me. I can't hold a job for very long, make minimum wage. She have a three figure salary, über successful, takes vacations, has cars, another man she's going to marry, custody of my son, and all of my belongings. I still have to pay 350$ a month for child support even though I make less than 1,200$ a month, rent at 650 a month; energy 200+ a month, intranet, phone, health and care insurance, food expenses and money left over to play with my son (who I love more than water and air) that I only get to see on weekends. People, her relatives (great grandfather or some shit) is the guy that created Prego. Her grandmother is sitting on MILLIONS and guess who's going to get a fat check when she dies? Normally alimony is paid until the ex wives remarry. I swear that is how it goes. It is funny when men complain about sexism . I agree with a few things they said, but at the same time men want to be the bread winners and have their wife stays home but what happens if they divorce? The women would be screwed financially. I think it depends on the people involved and why they are getting divorced.	Sexism	Gender - General	1/76	1.316
"It's painting women as weak" YES!!!! I've been saying that since all of this bullshit started! We are not victims, we are strong women who can do what needs to be done. Heres my thoughts on it. I think in a situation where a couple gets married at a young age and has kids or even not have kids. Either the man or woman works so the other doesnt have to so they dont go to college or work at all. and 5, 10, 20 years down the road the couple splits up. Well now that person who has little to no work experience and is 30 plus years old gets tossed to the curb. Since they thought they were in a relationship that would last forever and are now pretty much fucked because they are in a point in time in life were its much harder to get into the workforce. In that situation i think the person should be compensated. But then there is the situation where lets say a girl cheats on her husband and leaves him and he gets completely fucked over financially. He did nothing wrong but be a loving husband to a whore. There are so many different situations when it comes to divorce and since most judges are bias you cant do it by case by case situation. And that is why God created the prenup! Alimony should only be for 15 of the time you have been married with a max of 5 years to get your shit together and stand on your own feet. If there's children the house needs to be downgraded so that both parties have a home so that kids can stay and no one is put on the street or expected to live in a bedsit and there should be an assumption that any woman with school age kids works and child support is shared. My grandparents were married for 48 years. When they were married my grandfather, who was extremely abusive, didn't allow my grandmother to work a job. Had to have dinner on the table at 5:00 on the dot or there'd be hell to pay. At the age of 65 she had never worked a job, she had been a homemaker her whole life. When my grandparents got divorced my grandfather had to pay alimony. There were plenty of 'rules' that came along with that check and if my grandmother got remarried then she would forfeit it. Okay, I am with child support. But what if a lady is pushing to come over and sex with a man. The man kindly declines a few times because he isn't attracted to her. But one weekend, he is sitting around the house after a rough week and decides to get drunk. The woman pushes to come over again and he finally says okay. She claimed to be on birth control prior to all of this and they have sex . Guy wakes up the next day, doesn't even remember majority of the night or how it went down. Literally like 3 days later, the girl gets all crazy and says she feels pregnant and that she has been trying for five years with her ex to get pregnant. Then the guy says "you were on birth control right?"... she says "No I wasn't." and the guy is like, wait a minute.. she lied. The man tells her this whole night was a big mistake. A couple weeks later, she says she is pregnant and then immediately starts talking about finances. She also asks him if they were going to get together and if not she was going to take him to court. He blocks her because she is acting all crazy and he doesn't believe her, because she is claiming she is knocked up a week before her period. A year later, the man gets a letter requesting a DNA test. In the hearing, this lady tells them she quit her job a few days before the hearing (to try to get more money off the man) and they passively call her out on it..... I know a guy who dealt with this. We all do silly things sometimes, but does one drunken night with a baby trap artist have to cost this man his livelihood? First off she lied about being on birth control. She obviously wanted to try to trap this man and was obviously trying to fish as much as she could off of him. I feel that is a little unfair. It's not fair for the child either and I agree the kid should be taken care of. But I think there needs to be a better system for that. Because anyone who has seen this first hand could tell you the mother and father are NOT on even ground. 80 percent of that support does not go into the child. There just needs to be a better system. Maybe a card that the child has that the income goes into. That BOTH parents pay into. Where everything that is taken out is monitored and only to be used to support that child. This would be beneficial in many ways. Women would also be more inclined to not want to attempt to trap a man when that money isn't filling their pockets. This is why I dont like modern feminism. It basically makes a mockery of real life issues and makes a boys vs the girls environment rather than a finding equality movement. Rape is terrible and a lot of women really don't get justice they deserve however getting framed for rape when you havent done anything is nearly as bad. All these false assault claims and calling men pure evil for even just looking at a girl and the hate speeches coming from feminists lately is really a lot like crying wolf. something i find very scary, is after years of studying people, and women, and how society treats women with kid gloves, is that women become equal to , or socially less than a male when he is roughly around the age of 6-11 years old . meaning, that is the age , when if he was to say hit a woman , society will punish him and coddle the woman . I think a lot of people glorify the feminism of the past. It actually wasn't very different from what we see today. I mean take the right to vote as an example. On the surface its fucking obvious that this was something that feminists accomplished for the sake of equality right?Well... if you dig up even a little bit you start to notice weird things. In most places in the world women were actually voting against their own right to vote more than men.(This is not an opinion we have literal records of this.)Well is there a reason for that? oh Its because at the time women assumed that obtaining the right to vote would make them equal to men which meant they would have to share in the responsibilities of men and they were not interested in fun stuff like being drafted. So feminism fought so that men and women would obtain this equality despite most women not being interested?No they basically fought for women to get the right to vote without any of the responsibilities associated with it. So literally the most notable thing feminists have ever done was to actively fight against equality based on the belief that women weren't as capable as men.Don't get me wrong I'm not saying that we should include women in the draft...but if you believe in equality and that women are exactly as capable as men in every way possible...You shouldn't have a problem with women being drafted. But obviously theres also the problem that a lot of the responsibilities feminists were refusing had nothing to do with the physical differences between men and women so can't be excused as easily. Taddeus is not a feminist - he's calling himself that in an attempt to appear that he's on women's side, whereas actually he's on his own side. He adopts some women's views that just happen to align with his own which then he thinks gives him enough reason to call himself a feminist. He's also doing a highly manipulative move - convince someone that their attempt at protecting themselves is actually a regressive system designed by the opposing side ( in this case the patriarchy ), therefore devaluing and tainting the very thing that will help them. His support of that woman 's tweet shows his true colours.Also, there are many situations where it's difficult to say a clear, assertive 'no'. The fact that Taddeus doesn't acknowledge that shows how little he knows. If you are in a rotten system, like a university where the leadership has more interest in protecting itself than the welfare of it's students or staff, you will probably find it very difficult to report a lecturer who's put a hand inbetween your legs whilst suggesting that you should discuss your grades over dinner. Many people would freeze in that situation and would try to politely decline for fear of retribution from said creep. Some men really don't like the word 'no'. It hurts their ego and they can become vengeful because of that.Try saying a clear 'no' to a guy that is deliberately blocking the exit in front of you (as happened to one colleague in my work a while ago when she was in an almost empty building). In that situation, the main goal is to stop it from escalating. In that fearful scenario, you simply don't know if what you do or say is going to make things worse and make the guy really angry, but if you DON'T say 'no', or 'get out of my way dickhead', you have guys like this idiot insinuating that women who don't or can't say 'no' are somehow weak or helpless, as of that's an awful thing. In that kind of situation, a woman IS helpless - for one thing, men have a far greater upper body strength not to mention arm muscles.	Patriarchy, Woman	Gender - General	2/367	0.545

He wasn't talking about sexual assault. He was talking about alimony. Sexual assault is a very different matter. I would imagine his views on sexual assault are very different. I'm a moderate feminist like him and I think the answer to sexual assault is train all young girls self-defence, give them rape whistles and teach them general vigilance. Tell men not to rape, teach them cues of sexual respectability and equality. If a woman has been assaulted then and it's not just miscommunication then that's a different protocol, then she naturally deserves all the support and help we can give her and the guy should be punished. However it's not enough to just put the onus on men though, because even if we teach all men 'not to rape' from a young age there is still that 1 of fringe psychos. So engendering a sense of general vigilance isn't victim blaming at all, it creates LESS victims in the long run.	Age, Sexual, Woman	Age - General, Gender - General	7/161	4.348

I like Joe Rogan but I don't agree that women get paid enough alimony to "not have to work for the rest of their life" (I think that's what he was saying in the beginning, but I could be wrong)Maybe if the guy is like, a multi-millionaire. But if the guy is making 60k/year, and the woman is making 50k, and if alimony is 30 of the higher earner's income minus 20 of the lower earner's income, that comes out to about 8k, which is nowhere near a livable wage. Yeah, I understand this shit because of my current stepdad, who I actually just call dad, because he is an amazing guy who has now been with my mom for 10 years is still paying alimony to his ex-wife. They had adopted two girls, which was more of surprise for him, seeing as he came home to them after a business trip, since he was a traveling VP aerospace engineer. However, being who he is as a person, he accepted and treated them as his own daughters, but his wife brainwashed them and divorced him. Essentially, they hate him now to the point where one of them called him up on his birthday a few years back just to tell him how much she hated him. She isn't a child, but a woman three years younger than me, which would make 24 years old at the time. So, he has to deal with that shit. I also have to accept that he is still paying a ridiculous alimony amount that will only stop if she remarries. Oh, she has had a boyfriend for well over 6 years, but no marriage. I have always been skeptical of men because my birth father turned out to be a pedo that got away with it due to lack of evidence and witness testimony. My last stepdad wasn't a bad dude, but he wasn't a good guy for my mom. Especially, since he had one toxic son that caused issues and one of my sisters who is birthed by mom in a previous marriage became toxic herself would conspire together making it even more difficult for that marriage to work. I didn't know cause I was out being a jock and a dork with my friends until after we pack up and left when I was 16 right after I got home from school. I see both sides of the spectrum since my real father was a dead beat that got away with things because he was high ranking military and a very good manipulator, not to mention an intimidating 10-degree black belt at 6'9" almost 300 pounds of muscle in the past. So, he tried to get out of alimony when my mom needed the support while we ran to California for her new job, but I also see the woman who turns a good guy into a monster to everyone she talks to that doesn't know the guy personally or is starts it while their young to really sink it in. Heck, my sister, the one who became a toxic liar, is actually quite nice to everyone except our mom, whom she has turned into a monster to her husband and his family, to all of her friends, and even tries to manipulate our cousins into turning on her. So, I have kind of witnessed a lot of the good, the bad, and the ugly, but after my moms marriage to my "dad" and my sister not being in the picture anymore, which is a sore spot for my mom, but nevertheless, it is has been a boring, productive, enjoyable, and loving experience.	Black, Old, Woman	Age - Over 65s, Ethnicity - Black, Gender - General	4/521	0.768

I agree about alimony. It should really never be forever. I don't want to say it that way (with absolutes), because I'm sure there are some crazy situations people will bring up, but generally, no one should be obligated on take care of someone forever. Mostly if something untoward happened the person should be compensated for what they helped with and/or there should be legal action taken against the guilty party. I.e. abuse, fraud, etc. Another thing to say, women used to get shafted too- but I think it has changed a lot and does still vary by state a lot. My mom - a navy vet- worked and helped to put her first husband (not my dad) through med school, and he promised to support her in school when he was finished. He tried to literally turn her into a trophy wife, manipulated to change her behavior and motivations, change her personality and all, and she ended up with a divorce she didn't really want (she tried to reconcile) and he left her with absolutely nothing. She's a wonderful and strong person, but she had nothing, not even the full education she was aiming for. At least she still had the military and got through it- but it would have been a raw deal for anyone regardless of gender.	Crazy, Gender, Nothing	Age - Youngsters, Gender - General, Physical Identity - Physical (and Mental) Impairments	4/220	1.818
The only way I think alimony is ok is if a woman had been taking care of the cooking cleaning, laundry, and all of that stuff instead of working for years. Her job for years was being a housewife, so it will be much harder for her to then find a job to support herself when she is divorced. However, I don't believe the man should have to pay her for life.	Woman	Gender - General	1/72	1.389
Thats a good point I didnt think of. I do actually know a woman who has been a housewife since 19 (now around 60yo) and wanted to divorce but she can't because she can't work (no education, never worked all her life bc she raised child after child). In that case I suppose I understand... But I still wonder if the husband should have to pay? But who else would pay? I guess it would have to be him since they made their choices. You seem like you agree that that should be the vast minority of cases though. The majority are women who are perfectly able to work and don't need lifetime handouts or even short term hand outs. Divorce is expensive on both parties, not just the woman. I'm a woman, btw. I think alimony should be an exception, not the rule itself	Woman	Gender - General	3/145	2.069

This is the problem with intersectionality and ALL forms of identity politics. Just like alimony is sexist against women, affirmative action is racist against minorities. It's essentially the government stepping in and saying to a black man, "here, we're going to give you a leg up on the competition since you can't possibly achieve anything on your own". Not really. That's egalitarianism. Feminism is primarily concerned with rights and special privileges for only women. If feminism was really about equal rights then women would've always had to declare for the draft in order to vote, divorce court would not cater to women, and as they brought up at the end of the video... when a man and a woman have consensual drunk sex, then the male would not be considered a rapist. Those are just a few of the many examples of how rights ARE UNEQUAL but where feminists don't care because the inequality only affects men, not themselves. A feminist only cares about equal rights when it helps them, not men. Feminists do not protest on the behalf of men when men get fucked over by the law (e.g., false rape accusations). In Europe, 2 feminists (who were a part of a feminist organization) conducted a research study on the "gender pay gap" to see how badly women were affected being paid less than men. To their own surprise, what the 2 feminists actually found in their research was the WOMEN were in fact actually getting paid more than men for the same work. And, when the 2 feminists reported their facts to the feminist organization they belonged to, the feminist organization kicked them out, LOL!	Gender, Sex, Woman	Gender - General	3/219	1.37

Jeffrey Youngblood How about I'm a woman and a feminist and I think I know what I'm about more than a whiny little god-botherer. Also if you think women are trying to get revenge then you're admitting they've been wronged and abused. I recently heard a male complain that his gf was emasculating him by mowing the lawns. She said well why don't you just mow it then? I agree with her.	Woman	Gender - General	1/72	1.389
TL W How about slutty broke bitches targeting successful men so they can get pregnant and get a free ride for 18 years? How about bitches saying they've been raped and putting men in jail behind false accusations? Don't they believe the women everytime? Especially white women. You seem like one of the those pathetic saggy tittie bitches that no one is interested in so you became a spiteful feminist out for revenge. TL W How about I'm a woman too and just because you don't believe in religion doesn't mean you are right. Let me clarify by stating that I'm not saying you have to believe in religion when I say this. I just don't you should use religion as an example especially when you say you don't believe in it. Many to most "modern day feminists" are bitter and blame men for everything. They don't even have to have ever been wronged or abused. Some may have been. However, you're saying Jeffrey Youngblood is admitting to having said that and he never did.The PARTICULAR man you're speaking of and his comment were both stupid. That doesn't mean all men are like that. As women we have every right a man does. We can vote, choose any career we want and be in healthy relationships. We are very empowered as women in today's society. Claiming billboards and TV shows prove otherwise is silly. Choose not to be a victim of that mindset. There are many TV shows and billboards that I've seen showing the opposite. You keep bringing up religion and when he answers your questions all you counter offer with is "I don't believe in religion." or you name call. That is typically why many feel the way they do about modern day feminists. There's been a constant attack on men and how're they're continually wronging us. That's not true. Men are being attacked for being gentlemen, giving compliments or simply having an opinion anymore. As a very independent, strong and opinionated woman I find those things ridiculous. It's embarrassing to watch women tear men down for those things. We should be happy knowing there are good men in the world. Yes, there're men who are complete jerks in our society. At the same time there're also women who're just as bad. I've seen women be abusive, lie about being raped and lie about paternity of a child. Those are all terrible things. Just as terrible when a man does them. I think both sexes should be punished equally for those things. If we want to be treated equally then we must treat men equally too. We also shouldn't tear each other down or teach our children that we aren't equal.	Woman	Gender - General	2/381	0.525

TL W Nobody said that the media can't have an effect on females. As you clearly stated it also has an effect on males too. You said that every billboard, every verse from every popular religion, the tv and roles in society.. have humiliated and disempowered women. That's a huge false blanket statement. Sure those things "can" affect a person or it has happened to some people. However, it's not how you made it sound by saying "every" and saying that they humiliated and disempowered women. You are claiming victimhood for all women based on incidents that can happen to men and women. It's simply not true. Women as a whole aren't disempowered. Now you're talking about female porn stars being victims? I'm not going to judge anyone for their career choice but please don't expect sympathy from me for people CHOOSING a lifestyle. I do believe that some people, women and men, are forced into that lifestyle. (Ex. Sex traffickers exploiting the innocent against their free will.) I'm sorry about your friend, I'm being completely sincere, nobody deserves to be assaulted or abused. As for you thinking there aren't women that assault or abduct young males.. don't be naive. It happens all the time. Maybe not as much or maybe because you just don't hear about those cases as often. I don't condone any violence towards anyone just so you know. Their have been many instances where women have falsely accused men of rape & that includes football players. You're arguing that it doesn't happen "as often" doesn't make it right. Wrong is wrong no matter who does it. Another thing modern day feminists love to do is label people. They love to generalize and assume they know it all too. Just like you did. You can take the race baiting BS and shove it. Yes, I'm white but I grew up with 4 brothers and 2 sisters. My parents worked their asses off and just recently retired. I grew up in the projects where my brothers were chased around by other boys with an axe. Those boys were black but do I think all black boys from the projects are like that? No I don't. I've worked from the time I was 16 years old and have faced more problems in my life than many. I don't however think I have a bad life. As a matter of fact, I'm thankful that I was raised the way I was. I don't blame others for my problems and I am accountable for my life. You on the other hand seem to be blaming everyone for yours. Hell you're blaming men and everyone else for every problem any woman has ever faced. Maybe you should stop using race, economics and identity politics for excuses. You'll always be a victim if you choose to be. I'm speaking from experience.

Don't try to compare modern day feminists to actual feminists who fought for the women's right to vote. They're nothing alike. Besides we have every right a man has. We can vote, do whatever we want for a profession and are every bit as free as a man. My parents installed morals, hard work ethics and God in my life. I raised my daughter the same way. So maybe stop blaming others, labeling people and playing the victim. You'll find out that you can do anything you want. Nobody has it easy and that is just life.

TL W Actually it is. Go reread your comments. I never said that those things haven't happened. Stop saying it's happened more than false accusations though You can't say that for a fact. Unless you're going to give me statistics on "male sports teams who have gang raped women" being greater than "women who've made false rape accusations against male sports figures". That's absurd and reckless. You're making that claim so you back up your facts. Modern day feminists are constantly outraged, playing victims and blaming everyone for everything. They claim to be defending women's rights but it's BS. They're just loud, hateful and act like they're superior than others. The MeToo movement is a joke. It opened up the flood gates for women that think sexual assault is being looked at wrong or cat called. It made it harder for real victims to come forward. Some might have and some may have helped people cope. For the most part it was another SJW Hollywood flogging of men. They "chose" who to believe & who was guilty before due process. FYI I never said all women sexually exploited by former creepy employers were all actresses. You keep adding things that were never discussed and ignoring points that were brought up. You're not alone but I'm not going to defend a movement that was exploited by rich Hollywood elites. They chose who was good enough to be in the MeToo movement and they destroyed people without due process. I saw way too much of "he cat called me or he said I had a nice ass" being used as a claim for sexual assault. You might get offended by those things but they're not assault. They made it harder for real victims to be taken serious. There were people like Weinstein that were monsters yes &amp; I think he should burn in hell. Who the hell do you think I need to suck up to? Male approval? You're hilarious. Again you go back to bashing men. I don't need anyone's approval in life. I've ALWAYS ran my world sweetie!! I just don't blame all men for the things that happened in my life. I have an amazing dad, 4 brothers, 7 nephews and many Uncles that I'm proud of. Not to mention good friends who are males. They aren't to blame for the men who treated me badly. See how easy it is to be able to separate good and bad? I said that there are good women and good men. That there are bad women and bad men. Not good enough for you though. I called out bullshit and that was you. You focus on nothing but the bad. You claim you're not a victim then stop using the victim card. You said you're equal in your circle of very hard men and women.. then why are you complaining? You don't speak for all women. BTW go back and look.. "I think you're basing your opinion on a pretty white middle class example" So save me your loud, self righteous and sanctimonious bullshit. You label people you don't know anything about trying to make it fit your argument. Then when you're told FACTS you ignore them and you claim you never said it. As for your comments concerning God &amp; saying it might be over my head. You say he's imaginary.. then you proceed to say he is used to control and dominate women. You can't have it both ways. Don't use God as another tool in your "oppressed woman argument" if you don't believe or claim he's imaginary and made up but still wields power. Your argument is just sad. Child support is not okay at all. Yes if a man and woman decide together to have a kid and things don't work out and then they decide the woman will care for the child it is reasonable to have the man pay child support.However. If a random 1 night stand decides she's going to use her right to not abort the accidental pregnancy she should be solely responsible for all that child's needs and if she can't provide the child should be offered to the father and other relatives of the woman and taken from her.You can not allow women to decide who is born and who isn't and then require men to foot the bill. Beyond that even if they were married and decided together to have the kid and then split later and they both want custody whichever parent declares that they will forfeit their right to child support should get custody of the child. If they both forfeit child support then each parent should be assessed and the best fit parent should get primary custody. Depending on the age the child should also have some say in who they stay with.There's no reason to have a bias in favor of women in custody battles. There are statistics that show children of single mothers have higher rates of mental illness, physical and sexual abuse, death, learning disabilities, poverty etc etc. If the bias should lean either way it should lean toward men having custody. Men should also have the right to forfeit parental rights and avoid child support. The same way women have the right to forfeit their parental rights by abortion or giving the child up for adoption without ever even telling the man she was pregnant by him. If a man tells a woman he doesn't want the child she should only have the options of having the child and caring for it on her own or getting rid of the child (abortion or adoption).She should never have all the power in deciding the fate of the child with the safety net of charging all the child's expenses to the man and the taxpayers. No one would be surprised how fewer children would be born each year if women didn't have all these incentives in mind. "How did that happen?"Because when at fault divorce was eliminated, a bunch of men left their old housewives, who had developed no skills in their adulthood, out to dry and refused to be a gentleman during the proceedings and provide even temporary stability till that person got back on their feet. Same reason child support is decided by court - if it wasn't, a lot of men would high tail it without paying anything at all. So the courts decide if the men can't take their responsibilities seriously even during a divorce, then the court will be responsible for deciding how much is owed.Alimony, along with mandatory separation times, was always meant to ensure that women who function only as homemakers aren't just up and left by their husbands on a whim with no way to take care of their children or themselves. It serves as a punishment of sorts to ensure a man doesn't just stop supporting a wife who upheld her end of the marriage contract. I think child support is reasonable, as long as it is not more than half the cost of raising the child and the other parent that has physical custody should also be held responsible for taking care of their half of the cost as well. Child support shouldn't be a free financial ride for any woman or any man just because they have physical custody of a child. And if the custodial parent can't financially hold up their half for a significant amount of time, then custody should be given to the parent who can afford that responsibility. And the other parent should be held responsible for paying child support. That would incentivising them to get their act together financially. But I could be wrong.	Woman	Gender - General	1/125	0.8

I'm not sure why the courts decide on the money given for divorce settlements. The reason why it's given in the first place is cause women were 'allowed' to work, generally. They were the home makers. If you were a woman working you were looked at off. Especially, if you were married. When couples got divorced the woman would have no skills to go out and work. While it made sense for back then it's clearly outdated. +cale lively,When a Feminist says's "equality" it makes me laugh, because they want power.An as for non-Feminists, they don't want equality either, what they want is equity, if Women had equality (real equality) then Western society would become worse than the Middle East, because at least in the Middle East they have equity.An if Women did have equality, then it would fuck them in every way;1. They'd be shit scared to talk down to any Man.2. They'd be fucked in the work place, as no Employer would employ them (let's me real, what mother fucker is going to pay for a Woman to have a baby, as well as pay them to take more sick days as well as having them be less committed to work weekends and late nights).3. They'd have to fight in Wars (Against their will) in times of need.4. They'd now have to spend more time in Jail (as their sentence's would now be equal to that of a Man).5. During a Divorce they may end up losing half of their shit.6. They may be forced (against their will) to have an abortion if the guy loses interest in the Woman i.e. way too many Women decide to get abortions after splitting up with their Boyfriends (it will now end up being both ways e.g. If I decide to split up with my pregnant girlfriend, where I don't want the baby, then she's getting an abortion whether she likes it or not)....And the list goes on.P.S. But as for equity, well that can work.	Woman	Gender - General	2/269	0.743
P.S. An just to be clear, here is my view on Abortions.1. Rape, get an abortion.2. Incest, definitely get an abortion.3. If having a child is bad to the Woman 's health and/or Baby, get an abortion.4. If the guy who got her pregnant turns out to be a murderer and/or Pedophile (or something unforgivable by today's standards), get an abortion.But if she decides to break up with the guy who got her pregnant, where out of spite she aborts his baby, then that should be a crime against nature.If the guy decides he doesn't want to be a Father, but she still chooses to have the Baby anyway, then the Man should not be forced (against his will) to pay for the thing i.e. he doesn't want it.If the Woman decides she doesn't want to be a Mother, but the Man wants to still be a Father, then the solution would be for her to have the Baby, then when it's born she would hand over full parental responsibility to the Father (some may even say it's fair game for her to help pay for it, after all Men have been made to pay for Baby's they don't want).But with the current Laws the way they are, Men don't get a say in any of it (but somehow us Men are still "privileged"). Problems with the divorce system do not invalidate feminism or have much to do with it at all. I have literally never spoken to a feminist who were concerned with making men pay more in divorces... I don't know the details (maybe it's stacked against the major income earner and he just assumes that to be a man, because in his case it was– I don't know). But taking one messed up area or the legal system and trying to use that to say anything about feminism is dumb as a brick. Feminism by definition is about liberating women so that they are on a legally and socially equal level. Are there crazy people who are feminists? Sure, there are crazy people who hold any kind of view. Those people are not doing right by feminism, and many feminists will tell you that (TERFs among others do not generally have good standing with sane, normal feminists). Making these mass generalizations about women not needing to push for equality in any area, because in ONE area of your life you felt you got the short end of the stick is just nonsense. The way this guy got screwed in divorce, women get screwed on virtually everything else, and only recently are beginning to approach equality. But this is yet another case of people making assumptions about things they don't know about... Why? I don't know– they assume the experts who actually know about this stuff (people who study gender, sociology, etc.) must just be biased, because they generally agree with feminism... But they agree because they actually see the details of why feminism exists and what it actually aims to do. If you have to build this strawman where feminists actually want to create a matriarchy and hate men, then you have no argument. You're living in a fantasy world and feminists can't even give you facts, because they're arguing on behalf of what feminists actually believe... So you'll go on thinking "Okqy maybe this one feminist is a moderate, but the ones who really set the agenda are craaaazy manhaters..." But the ones who want equality, not female supremacy, are the regular ones. They are the vast majority of them. It's only because your argument doesn't hold water if you accept that there are only a handful of fringe people who believe anything close to what you're arguing against, and maybe, just maybe, feminism isn't the problem.	Crazy, Dumb, Gender	Gender - General, Physical Identity - Physical (and Mental) Impairments	4/407	0.983

Yeah my ex got me to sell her weed in Grade 9, While we were together I always refused to give her. I was always blazing but it didn't feel right to give her instead of have her join me for a smoke. Anyway me and my best friend we used to walk all the way to the city about 10 km (15 miles I think?) and back home to go get weed. In South Africa its cheap as fuck. It's like $2 -$10 for a dinebag. Above that is God Grade. So anyway we started having fun throwing eggs off of this pedestrian bridge over the highway. We only threw eggs at trucks cause cars could be a Big problem. She lived in an enclosed area next to the bridge. She promised us a whole tray of eggs for weed. She payed for the weed we made huge profit and we got like 8 eggs. Anyway that's the first part of my story. A year later me and my best friend drifted apart I was a lot less into weed had a new girl and stuff. Anyway on my way home my parents got a call from the schools office that I wasn't at school or something. We went back and this was a big deal in a way cause I had 100 school attendance since the First Grade. So we went back I told my dad to stay in the car and that I will quickly talk to the Principle. I got into his office and greeted him. When I sat down the first thing he asked me was 'Have you ever given anything to (girls name)' .. fuckkk my heart sank cause I fucking knew she ratted. Basically I was under pressure with 3 adults being the Principal Vice and the Psychology type teacher (she knew me from the age of 5 I was best friends with her son) and this bitch pointed a finger at me and cried and said I got her into weed. I played dumb and I kept asking questions on what substance are they saying I gave her. And that I have probably given her alcohol at a party and I know I am underage. You know playing the fool. Even after they say Weed. I started defending her to put on a show and implying how we were together forcing the idea of a bad breakup. I kept saying No she is a nice girl she wouldn't do that. But she was really really stupid . She bought weed from a guy in our school and started bragging to everyone how she had weed and by the end of the day someone told on her. She basically ratted out EVERY stoner in the school and she always put on stuff like she is a true stoner and stuff on her profile. Anyway I didn't rat anyone but everyone ratted my friend. I find it interesting that when something is sexist against men you have to find a way it is also sexist against women and frame the problem that way for people to care.Usually this kind of thing is bad in some way for both men and women but some things affect mostly women and some things affect mostly men. If women are the main victims people have no problem with it, if it is men, people are immediately skeptic. I reject the notion that we live in a patriarchal society, but it's a result of a justice system that makes rulings based on precedent. Once precedent is set it becomes a broad template, there is no consideration of individual circumstance in the face of established guidelines for dealing with certain types of cases. . It's the one thing that gives me pause about common sense legislation regarding our rights. It will never shift back towards more freedom and more fairness...there is only 1 direction these thing can travel. It's why I oppose constraints on abortion rights, and gun control laws respectively, it's the reason I shake my head when people want to curb free speech. I may agree that what a person is saying has no place in social discourse,, but once you allow that foot in the door it will be shoved open. Look at the patriot act. I like to consider myself a REAL feminist. I minored in women’s studies in college I’ve taken many courses on the history of feminism and modern day feminism and the very subtle struggles that women deal with in modern day life. But the very core and foundation of feminism is equality. Meaning that women don’t deserve to have it easier than men. And it certainly doesn’t mean that men owe us anything. We deserve to be equal. I have watched every uncle and male cousin in my family have their lives ruined by alimony and child support. My grotesque sister cheated on my brother in law, they got divorced, and he is now homeless and living in a motel 6 trying to keep up with alimony and child support payments. He can’t even support himself with all the money he’s paying her. Often times he can’t make the payments and it’s right back to jail for him. But the most disgusting part is that her boys don’t even live with her. Our parents are raising her kids and they pay for everything out of their own pockets and never receive a dime of that child support money. So basically my sister doesn’t have to work a day in her life because she’s living the high life off those alimony and child support payments. She’s eating sushi and getting her nails done once a week, and she barely even knows her own kids. It disgusts me. That’s anecdotal evidence to be sure, but anyone who is a real feminist will tell you that sexism doesn’t just effect women. It effects men and gender fluid people as well. A real feminist will tell you that most self-proclaimed feminists today are so angry that they’ve lost their way. Sure the patriarchy is real, and in a certain way it’s crushing men. Like women getting treated differently than men during traffic stops. That’s extremely sexist towards women, but it’s also beneficial for women and hurts men. That doesn’t make it any less sexist. It’s embarrassing to be a feminist nowadays. It’s a dirty word with dirty connotations. Stop trying to brainwash women!! Stop trying to make women be anti feminist. We don't see you trying to make these awful men be anti chauvinism. Also, how is divorce against men? If you caused your wife to give up her career, the career she had before she married you, then she lost all her money and she was just like one of your children. She was financially dependent on you. So do you men expect for a woman to let you divorce her and she has no finances after all those years of marriage she you kick her out?? . Maybe now you see how a woman feels as a wife. A wife gets beat down and worn down over the years. She puts up with the husband's shit and the drudgery of household tasks! So you then hear where sexist, arrogant, egotistical, controlling men, expect for the wives, to stay young thin , and look like a celebrity. How unfair, how unrealistic, and how evil. This conversation and comments are a bit scary for women. Sounds like at the foundation, men just wanna get laid and damn anyone else's life. I worry that this type of thinking is pushing men away from relationships with women. Men already have a hard time accepting to be just friends. I do not agree with that guy paying alimony for longer than they were married. Must be some backwards state. We live in a patriarchy and so it's time to fix some of these asinine laws. It SHOULD be hard to get divorced, unless both parties really just want to be gone from each other. If it's not mutual, then yeah, someone will need to pay for wasting the other person's life. The idea of alimony comes back from this time where women were financially dependent on their husbands or their families. They need reforming. But you should also consider, for child support especially, that women take time off work to raise children- and if a couple decides to have the man financially support him, he should consider continuing this, after the divorce. But when the children grow old , the women are going to have missed out on their careers, so their financially worse off than they would have been without having the children. So I think this is another reason that payments continue, even when the children grow older.	Old	Age - Over 65s	1/108	0.926

So wouldn't this be considered sexist of them to keep assuming that men don't want to take the child/children when a divorce takes place? Just saying. My partner was very upset that his ex wife got custody and actually just worked to finally get custody of their child. It's sexist against men... not every time but... you know... it's also sexist to assume that men are the only ones that have to hold onto this financial baggage of a previous family- yet are granted the experience to form a new one- that is , instead of the woman /mother. I know a lot of this has to do with the biological element that makes us assume that a woman would be the better care taker, however, this would also mean that she would have to take on the hunter role as well. He's arguing that the residual elements of what were patriarchal laws designed to protect 'incapble' women from poverty in an age where women couldn't be breadwinners is no longer reflective of reality. And as society has changed and women have become key breadwinners and more equal that law is in fact patronising and thus creates inequality against men now. There are situations where maintenance for life is the right thing. Those are the situations that match the original situations those laws were intended for, in other words when one spouse has sacrificed their career for the purpose of taking on the housework and raising kids in full and allowing the other spouse to fully focus on their career. And this is exactly the same regardless of the sexes of the spouses. People who have spent potentially 20+ years of their prime career life out of work are most often not able to just hop back into work life and earn a pay to support themselves, whether it's a woman or a man. But if you have two career people who both have been earning good pay and continue to do so immediately after divorce? It's not fair for one spouse to be "supporting" the other after divorce, they don't need it.It's been nice to see more stay-at-home dads get alimony from their rich ex-wives. If he sacrificed his career and personal income for the sake of her career by taking on the tasks of maintaining the house and kids, he is absolutely entitled to alimony. And if she sacrificed her career for the sake of his career in the same way, then she is entitled to alimony. That's how partnership works in the domestic setting.	Woman	Gender - General	1/227	0.441

well one plausible reason for alimony they leave out is that the woman gives birth to the babies and usually stays at home for a while to take care of them. So she has a major opportunity cost, because of this carreer-break, that the man doesn't have. She looses chances to get re-employed, to make similar wages, to get promoted etc. etc. So yes, he should repay her to some extent, because both of them once planned to have children and both of them should be held responsible for it. It's like how it's strange to think that despite brexiterers being constantly called racist it'd technically be the remainers who are because they want freedom of movement within the European union which means they want it to be easier for people who are from most of the white majority countries to get into the UK than those who aren't. Brexiterers actually don't bring race into the equation if you think about it they care little about if you're Caucasian, asian or African and more about what level of immigration is sustainable alongside our current social services, if you'll be a boost to the economy or a drain and if you're peace loving or have violent/hateful ideals. Feminists are giving men an unfair deal. Here's how: T. Russel says that women now want to be taken care of. That's the kind of feminism that women want now. They want to be taken care of in a Patriarchy way, like in Joe Rogan's example of a man married to a woman, they had no kids, they got a divorce, and now this guy must pay his wife alimony for the rest of his life. That's insane in this day and age. But where does this insane attitude come from?.....It comes from what I call "the old deal"....Which means for most of our history, men had to protect and provide for women. In return women gave the man children and was the center of his family. Men dominated outside the home, in the world of work and politics and economic competition. Women had their sphere, and men had theirs. This was kind of a deal worked out, by the sexes. Each side gave of something: men had more responsibility financially for the woman, to make up for the fact that women were not his economic competitors outside the home, and they had to use all their energy for raising children. Men had the protector role, and so close to 100 of all combat deaths in history, were to men. And pretty much all hard and dangerous jobs in history have been done by men. In return women were all about home and hearth, and children.... And that was a fair deal between the sexes, that lasted a long time. Then science progressed and the modern world was invented. In the 1800s infant mortality was still at 50, and people lived short lives, and there were no jobs for women outside the home, so they worked at home. Then when science conquered a lot of diseases, people lived longer, fewer babies died, and places appeared in the world...factories and offices...where women could work outside the home, and compete economically with men, in large numbers. Birth control was invented and feminism came along, and this picture meant that women could work outside the home. "The old deal" was broken....women recently became the direct economic competitors to men, for the first time in history. Women now became men's economic competitor's, and competitors for power of all sorts, in the world. Hillary is the latest example. Finally a woman had a serious shot at becoming President. Very soon we will have our first woman President. And women under 35 now earn more money than men, in America, and the women under 35 in America earn more money than men under 35. So women will dominate the workplace, and eventually be the man's equal at work. At least half the time, a woman will be your superior at work. And that raises a tricky issue: As I said at the beginning, and as T. Russel says, women still want to be treated as delicate kittens, and protected, even though they are now a man's competitor for social and economic and political power. And that sets up a real conundrum for men: Is this a good new deal for men? My answer: No, it's a horrible new deal for men. Here's why: Women now expect us men to protect them and kiss their rear ends, like in the old days, when they could get pregnant at any time, were vulnerable, and were focusing on having children. But today fewer children are being born, and women are at work, often being your superior at work....and competing with males at work, for money. And if you are not sufficiently compliant at work with women, you are labelled "sexist". Will men

This is a super interesting conversation, but neither of them has a firm enough understanding of family law. Thankfully I am a lawyer who specialised in family law. In Australia, alimony (aka spousal maintenance) is given when one spouse has sacrificed an income to support the other spouse. For example, if I didn't stop working to help my disabled son, my husband would have had to. Therefore, he would not have been able to work full time and receive promotions. A of his current income is thanks to me. In oz, we don't have lifetime alimony. It is generally only given for a few years and must be proportionate to the years together. Example - 10 years together would receive about 4 years of alimony. Maybe America just has a really fucked up family law system.	Disabled	Physical Identity - Physical (and Mental) Impairments	1/137	0.73
I agree with you, the parent who is looking after the children all the time has got so much on their plate, balancing job, child care during working hours, time with the kids, providing for them, etc, whereas the parent who pays child support and only sees the kids on a weekly or fortnightly basis only has to worry about themselves. All they do towards the kids is make a payment, but they conveniently skip over all the other perks the other parent doesn't have: more free time, more dating options, holidays, etc. The child support money is not about what SHE deserves or about whether or not SHE is able to make it on her own! It's about the fucking circus of plate spinning of life: children, job, non-social life, mother/yes/woman/no, etc, etc. If a man had to give up his sexual life in order to raise a kid (in such a way as to not lose that kid's respect and love as they grow up), he would just dump the kid!! Or prefer to pay a certain amount to WHOMEVER will do that job for him, anything but seeing his fucking agenda messed up with! Mia Smith Go fuck yourself, you man hating cunt. No wonder your husband left you and from my brother and other men who had to fight not only cunts like you but the courts who automatically give custody to women, even if they are unfit to be parents for custody of their children, I say double go fuck yourself and shove a hot curling iron up your fat, ugly, hairy, smelly pussy for that comment about men just dumping the kid. Go fuck yourself you cunt, if anybody dumps their kids, it's more often the women that do it then men, especially if that woman is 30 or younger. They demand custody not because they want the child, they see a payday and want the money and that child is usually passed around to family members or worse, the little whore straps her kid in the car seat and leaves it in the car on the side of the road, so she can go clubbing, not to mention all the fucking cunts who have killed their children because they couldn't cope or worse, their new boyfriend didn't want to be strapped with someone else kids so instead of leaving him, they strap their kid or kids into their car seat and then roll the car into a river or lake and just like every fucking cunt that has ever or will ever live, she blames someone else (my car was stolen or I was car jacked). The best way I have ever heard a woman being described was from the movie, as good as it gets, when the romance novelist is asked how he writes women so well, he says :”I think of a man, then I take away reason and accountability”. Even your last sentence shows what a cunt you are. ”I only get child support, no alimony (As I live in the UK) don't know UK family law but the way you wrote that implies that there is no alimony in the UK but if there was, you would have taken that too. In north America but especially the US, the cunts and courts bleed men dry. Why isn't acceptable for a man, any man, to tell a woman she can't have an abortion but it's acceptable for a woman to tell a man he has to pay for her decision to keep a child and because she is keeping the child he also has to pay her because she can no longer pursue whatever career or job path she wanted to.You ever hear of the old expression, Women are like children ? It's not true. Women aren't like children, women are children. Whinny, bitchy, temper tantrum throwing children. If it's your decision and yours alone whether or not to keep or abort, the responsibility of whatever action you and you alone decide, should also be yours and yours alone, if not, then married men should be able to fuck as many other women as they want and you women must accept that because it's his body and you have no right to tell any man what he can and can not do with his body.	Fat, Old, Woman, pussy	Age - Over 65s, Gender - General, Nationality - Chinese, Physical Identity - Physical Features	7/529	1.323

My first and only experience with the sexism of a feminist was at a factory I once worked in. I was palleting boxes half the day, she was lidding those said boxes. She wouldn't shut-up about the feminist movement, how women deserve equal rights and opportunities just the same as men, to which I replied "I totally agree. Rotation time" She gets down to the pallet, picks up one box and says "I'm not doing this. This is a mans job" ... And that very sentencing has summed up the definition of what feminism really is. soma balestra No. If feminists want equality then it should be across the board. Feminists complain about the wage gap but then they refuse to work the more dangerous, more physical jobs that pay more. And also refuse to work longer hours {50-60 hours a week) especially when they have had children.Feminists want the vote but refuse to qualify for the draft and complain about taxes and having to pay for healthcare when white men pay more taxes than any other demographic in America. Feminists embrace the sexual revolution and the birth control pill but run to the government when they choose a bad man with whom to have kids or when they accidentally get pregnant. Women also destroy their capacity to pair bond in a relationship when they are sexual licentious, then complain that a man won’t date them after they have hit the wall.Feminists spearheaded the prohibition movement to take away men’s alcohol because women chose drunks to marry, instead of having higher standards and choosing a more stable man and provider. Feminism is just women’s way to ”have it all” but without the responsibility of the burden from bad decisions. Men are burdened with these bad choices that women make to the determent of society. And now women resent men because we have bent to all your demands; men lost women’s respect years ago. So when all the money runs out and the government can no longer print money to devalue the dollar, women will be unable to waste time and resources in school. Women will no longer have the luxury of being a single mother and being paid for it. Women will no longer be able to divorce their men on a whim. Women will have no choice but to return to men in supplication for protection and their resources. And will be take you back? I fucking hope not. Seriously, name a right I have as a man that you don't. Until then, stfu.You have the right to bodily integrity. Men don't and are circumcised. Yet, any argument you use to justify male circumcision, wouldn't work if you applied it to female circumscision. How about how you have the right to vote without signing up for the draft and having the possibility of dying to get to vote? You don't have that, or anything close. How about reproductive rights? Anna-Maj Andersson the first wave was about a lot more than that. The fact you think that, only shows how little you have researched, and highlights that you really have no clue what you're talking about here. There were sufragettes, the feminists. Then you had the suffragists, everyone else. At that time in history, most men also didnt have the right to vote. Were you aware of that? You had to be white, male, and own property to vote. No one else got to vote. The push against giving women the right to vote was mostly from other women. You didn't know that either, did you? They were afraid that they would have to take on the same responsibility as men and need to sign up for the draft on top of getting the right to vote. But again, the vast majority of men didn't get to vote either. It's hilarious to me that the only way feminist theory works, is if you only look at the top tenth of a percent of men. Moving on.... The suffragists, not sufragettes got EVERYONE the right to vote. The sufragettes were known to be very racist and only wanted to extend the right to vote to white women. The suffragists wanted everyone to have that right. So, even first wave feminism isn't what you seem to think it was. I think you need to do some more research using objective historical sources. Not, simply the stiff your gender studies professor tries to spoon feed you.	Gender, Racist	Ethnicity - General, Gender - General	2/253	0.791

&gt; 'Can you name a single right I have as a man you don't as a woman?' It does not have to do only with legal rights. Indeed, it is pivotal, women and men respectively to share the same rights. Now we are talking about the West I guess, so when we say 'There is no gender equality and feminism is indispensable' we mean that women have to face discrimination on a daily basis or they may be treated with contempt. Generally, when people judge someone based solely on the gender. &gt; 'Also, there has never been an oppressed group of people that live longer, go to college at higher rates, get lower criminal sentencing for the SAME crimes, don't have to sign up for the draft to vote, etc. You aren't oppressed and feminism is a joke.' It depends on how much research you have done on that particular issue. For example, those women who condemn Feminism are at least hypocrites. They claim they do not advocate Feminism because they have never been victims of patriarchy or sexual harassment. I'm not a victim of sexual harassment or patriarchy either but does that really mean other women are not oppressed? Does that mean other women had the opportunities I had in my life? Could you tell me how the woman was enfranchised? The feminist movement fought for gender equality and was against male privilege. Without that movement, the overwhelming consensus of women would not have the right to vote, to decide for their own bodies, take important decision on their own et cetera We all know that when it comes to child marriage, girls are more likely to be married under the age of 18, aren't they? You may think that child marriage is not a thing in the West but it is indeed. To begin with, there is a law that says that a girl can marry someone at the age of 16 with parental acquiescence. However, we do know that girls who marry under the age of 18 are more likely to find a partner who will abuse them; either physically or mentally or even both. It is essential to galvanize those girls to complete their education and be independent financially. In the United States, there are some states that do not have age limit for marriage... That means many girls may be married without their consent to older men and simply no one knows about it. There are some religious communities which oppress women. In the UK, there is a conservative Jew community which oppresses women. We all know that religion is one of the biggest hindrances for the woman's emancipation. In addition, many immigrants may come from countries where marriage with a minor is legal. They should be found and be punished. Many women who come from countries where FGM is a banality may continue this devastating tradition and cut their offsprings' genitals . Don't you think that these things cause gender inequalities? Many of them discourage girls to pursue a career and convince them to focus on household chores. However, I do think that it would be better for them to complete their education because then they will be able to assert their rights, they will be able to know what is wrong and what is right. Many women who have to face sexual harassment, abuse or rape may not reveal the truth because of trepidation. We have to educate those women and provide them with emotional support.Also, some countries deprive the right of abortion. Carolina V. I can't make it through that word salad. Let's break this down to one topic here. I'll let you pick one if you want.I just want to ask a very simple question first and hopefully you'll see your own hypocrisy in what you just said regarding circumcision. This is coming from someone who has worked in medicine for over a decade too. You said there are health benefits for men to be circumscized. Would that justify female circumscision? Because that has health benefits too. Like, not catching HIV as easily, just the same as men who are cut. I ask, because I guarantee that you will disagree that's reason to do it to a woman. Yet, for some reason it is for a baby male. Why? The equivalent to male circumscision would be removing the entire clitoral hood. In vitro, that develops just the same and later when sex is set, it grows a little different. The same problems with female circumscision, also happen with males. The glans, or head, of the penis, is meant to be internal and a mucosal membrane. When you remove the foreskin, which is a very specialized body part with hormone receptors, specialized nerves, etc. Anyways, when you remove it, it dries out. If you removed the clitoral hood, the clitoris would do the exact same, and dry out. However, most female circumscision isn't that extreme. In about 90 of the cases, it is a pin prick and completely heals. Not the case with men. I don't know where you are getting your info, but many European countries are banning male circumscision because it is inhuman and immoral to do to someone who can't consent. Which, consent is the highest issue for me. Why not let them decide when they are 18 and above? I'm more interested in why you say medical benefits justify it for men, but would never say that about women? I'd say because you see men, just as most of society does, as less important and more disposable than women. You just do it on a subconscious level and don't realize it until it is pointed out. Please don't go off the rails again. If you address my question about circumscision, I'll let you pick any topic you want, and have a little debate on it where you'll lose. You can pick rape culture, the wage gap, education, or really anything you want pertaining to feminism and I'll show you why you are mistaken. You have to stay on topic or we'll just go in circles.	Sex, Woman	Gender - General	2/428	0.467

It is not a "salad" because I picked each question and I answered below. I won't lose any conversation because I addressed serious problems that but be alleviated. But you preferred to ignore them. I said that FGM and male circumcision can't be compared. And that's why Male circumcision is not illegal. If you can compare those things, that shows that you don't know anything. However, I said women and men respectively have the right to decide for their own bodies and male circumcision should be optional. You didn't even read what I said? 'Cause that's what I meant. I said "MEN SHOULD HAVE THE RIGHT TO DECIDE FOR THEIR OWN BODIES" and some men do it because they want it. And if you have read all my comment, you would have known that I don't agree when parents can make such decisions. And obviously FGM is much worse especially the type 3 so don't come here without knowing what FGM is. The procedure has no health benefits for girls and women. You just proved you know nothing .If you are unable to disprove all the problems I listed in my previous comment, don't come back. You just show me you can't oppose what I said. By claiming I went off the rails proves that I just wasted my time typing that comment. If you are not interested in what I have to say, then don't start a conversation. Carolina V. Again, I ask. Would health benefits be reason for even type one female circumscision? If not, your misandry is showing. Do you even know why circumscision is so popular among males in the US? Because Kellogg, yeah the cereal guy, was very religious and pushed and pushed to perform this operation precisely so male sexual sensation would be blunted. It's actually why he made the cereal too. It was supposed to be bland, and bland food was supposed to reduce sexual desire. You are going to tell me, someone with a masters degree in biology and anaromy/physiology, that I don't know what I'm talking about? That's completely absurd. You mam, are grossly misinformed on this topic. And no, I'm not addressing all of that, because it would be well over ten pages worth of refutation. I don't have that kind of free time. This is already going to be many paragraphs for me to address just one of these topics. I know the differences. Type 3 is incredibly rare. I also told you that MGM is the female equivalent of removing the entire clitoral hood, anatomically they're the same thing and develop almost identically. It would border on type 3 female circumscision. It has a marked and objectively testable decline in sexual sensation for males. Saying otherwise shows me you have no clue what you're talking about when it comes to anatomy and fetal development. Stop projecting and saying the person with a masters degree in anatomy and physiology is clueless, because that is absolutely laughable. Maybe listen to the person with almost 15 years dedicated to the study of the human body and learn something? The health benefits do NOT out weight the risks, and is precisely why most European countries no longer do it. The only publications you will find that say it has medical benefits, are places in the US, getting kickbacks from the places and groups that monetarily gain.Also, I don't know where you get your information from. I'm guessing heavily biased sources that agree with the ideology you subscribe to. Which, is called confirmation bias. It isn't coming from world renowned medical journals. Female circumscision does lower the risk of getting an std. But again, why does that only justify it for one gender? No clue who told you that female circumscision has no health benefits. It demonstrably and objectively does. The issue is, do those benefits outweigh the risk and damage to the body? I'm not a monster, so I say no it doesn't in any circumstance. Just because it has medical benefits is not an argument if it doesn't go both ways. It's hypocritical at best. The foreskin has such specialized cells, that it is used, again with zero consent, in very expensive anti aging creams for women. If it gets banned, people like Oprah will no longer be able to push their baby penis parts face creams. Sickos...I'll say it one more time. Cutting off the foreskin is almost identical to removing the clitoral hood. They both serve the exact same function. Which, is to create a mucosa membrane on the most sensitive part of human sexual organs, male and female. Now that you know that, why is it OK to do it to men and not women? You want to outlaw even the most mild forms of female circumscision. All the while, don't think we should outlaw a very extreme version of it on male babies who can't consent. You say they should have the choice. However, if you don't outright ban it, you	Gender, Misandry, Nothing, Sexual, Weirdo, Zero	Age - Youngsters, Gender - General, Physical Identity - Physical (and Mental) Impairments	10/991	1.009

'Female circumcision does lower the risk of getting an std.' 'No clue who told you that female circumcision has no health benefits. It demonstrably and objectively does.'According to the World Health Organization FGM has no health benefits, and it harms girls and women in many ways. (see ; [LINK] This video is from the organization I mentioned above where the Director-General dr. Tedros puts emphasis on the fact that Female Genital Mutilation has no health benefits. Also, I find the claim that I am not informed about this issue grossly inaccurate. 'Now that you know that, why is it OK to do it to men and not women'Seriously, I don't know if you understand but I said 'Men and women respectively have the right for bodily autonomy and informed consent. In my initial comment, I stated that I do not support when procedures can be done with parental acquiescence. I said the exact opposite; It is a violation of human rights to take pivotal decisions without the person's consent. His body, his choices and her body, her choices. However, sometimes Male Circumcision is necessary. For instance, in the case of phimosis (the inability to retract the foreskin) may be recommended. Male circumcision is linked with some health benefits such as a reduced risk of stds in men and protection against penile cancer. However, there are some risks as well. If a man over the age of 18 believes that the risks are outweighed by the health benefits then he can do it. That means that the law that allows children to be circumcised with parental consent must be abolished. Nothing more, nothing less. 'They're the only people with enough hubris to argue biological FACTS.'But I'm not the only one who argues that FGM has no health benefits. There are studies that clearly state there are no health benefits and there are little to none evidence that support your claims which means there is no valid evidence. You're welcome'I'm light years ahead of you on the human body and the functions thereof. Plus, you are fine having parts of little boys dicks cut off ya weirdo'You have to learn many things from me indeed. And that is because I have been devoted to this issue for a couple of years now. I have talked with both women and men who were circumcised. The reason why over 200 million girls and women had to undergo Female Genital Mutilation (FGM) was neither for their health nor for any serious reason. I will outline the basics. Initially, a girl is considered to become a woman in many of the cultures that still practice FGM. Also, some cultures believe that FGM enhances fertility and promotes child survival and the external female genitalia are considered dirty and unsightly and are removed to promote hygiene and provide aesthetic appeal. Some girls believe they will not find husband if they are not cut.'Type 3 is incredibly rare.'According to one 2008 estimate, over eight million women in Africa are living with Type III FGM. If that number is insignificant for you, then you should reassess your values. .Women have to face sexual problems (decreased satisfaction, pain during sexual intercourse), psychological problems, need for later surgeries et cetera 'Do me a favor and watch a few circumcision videos on here. Carolina V. Carolina V. First, I'm not going to explain why the WHO has biased information on this. All I will say, is try reading your sources before posting them. They are ONLY talking about full clitoral removal, and not the type I was referring to. Which, is the most extreme type and less than 5 of those performed. I'm referring to lesser versions of it as those are the vast majority.The only point I was trying to make was this. There is no justification for male genital mutilation, because that's what it is per dictionary definition. Phimosis is easily treated without lopping off chunks of flesh. We aren't living in an age without antibiotics either. So, the cleanliness argument is BS too. I apologize if I came off as brash. This is an issue I take very seriously. I just feel that anything short of advocating for the outright banning and outlawing of this ridiculous practice is causing harm to many, many men. When it comes to feminism. I honestly believe the modern western woman is the most privileged group of people that has ever walked the face of the earth. Looking at the statistics, they are simply better off in almost every regard. So, I have a very hard time saying they are oppressed. Not to mention, identity politics has been responsible for the deaths of hundreds of millions of people in the 20th century. However, not of the people who witnessed that have now passed away and it looks like we have to learn that lesson all over again now. We are moving to a point where an individuals group identity matters more than the character of the individual. I find that reprehensible. A fun question from here could be. We know when the right goes too far and it ends up in a fascist state. But, what does it look like when the left goes too far? Is that possible? How would the leading up to it look?	Age, Woman	Age - General, Gender - General	2/333	0.601

>'I'm not going to explain why the WHO has biased information on this. All I will say, is try reading your sources before posting them' So you claim the World Health organization spreads falsehoods and has biased information? Not only does WHO oppose Female Genital Mutilation (FGM) but also a number of other national and international organizations because of its harmful physical and mental effects. Studies suggest that FGM is linked with an increased risk of HIV infection. I have done an extensive research on this particular issue and the only ones who advocate this practice are the individuals who are followers of a religion... I think that says everything. There are no health benefits for FGM and the only reason some communities practise it is due to religious or cultural purposes (I have already mentioned why FGM is promoted)>'I'm referring to lesser versions of it as those are the vast majority.' I can't understand how you claim FGM has health benefits while so many doctors and health organizations demand its abolishment because of global health and human rights. Also, you should fathom that the type of FGM that is chosen depends on many factors and each of them is painful and devastating and may have many implications. The United Nations and other organizations have stated that there is no tolerance for FGM.>'There is no justification for male genital mutilation, because that's what it is per dictionary definition.' Yes but that is something males will decide. Some adults come to the decision to go through this process. The problem is not the male circumcision, the problem is when young boys have to undergo this procedure without their consent. If an adult believes the benefits outweigh the risks, he can do it. He will decide what is better for his life. The only thing I said is you cannot compare FGM with male circumcision. Male circumcision is devastating because the boy was not asked. The difference between FGM and Male circumcision is that FGM has no health benefits and it is always practiced for non-medical reasons. On the contrary, some men even when they are older decide that this is what they want after a research. >'This is an issue I take very seriously. I just feel that anything short of advocating for the outright banning and outlawing of this ridiculous practice is causing harm to many, many men.' I can't understand how Feminism is involved in this particular issue. I bet that if all countries wanted to outlaw and ban this procedure, no feminist would oppose it. This statute would be opposed by religious groups such as Muslim or Jews communities. Religion has always been the biggest hindrance for the human's emancipation. That means you should blame religious groups. Have you ever tried to talk about it with religious people? Because when you mention male circumcision and if you say that you support to outlaw it, the overwhelming consensus will get offended because it is their 'right' to apply those procedures in their communities as they claim.>'I honestly believe the modern western woman is the most privileged group of people that has ever walked the face of the earth.' You mean the average western woman.... Everyone can point to women who are abused either physically or mentally, women who are treated with contempt, women who are raped, girls who are forced to be married without their

Carolina V. Annnnd I'm done. You are either only reading parts of what I am saying. Or, being intentionally obtuse and putting words in my mouth. The point of bringing that up was to make a hypothetical scenario and ask you a question about it. You said male circumcision was sometimes beneficial for health reasons. Instead of answering the following question I asked in a straightforward way. You are choosing to get into specifics of the actual medical reasoning. Which, has absolutely nothing to do with why I asked and gets off the subject, I'm guessing intentionally. If we are going to say that male circumcision can be done for medical reasons. Would that argument hold up for justifying female circumcision? And, we can even say what if it did so we don't have to discuss the actual benefits or lack thereof, because that has nothing to do with the original question I'm asking. I told you that study is ONLY looking at the most extreme method where the entire clitoris and clitoral hood is removed, and I said it wasn't a fair analysis because that is a very small fraction of the female circumscisions that are performed. Of course doing that is going to have adverse affects. Just like with a male, and chopping off the entire glans, or head of the penis. It's going to cause that organ to malfunction, because that is a crucial part of the anatomy. I guess I need to explain the disease process of stds to you now. The clitoral hood creates a mucusa membrane underneath where things like bacteria can more easily get deposited, and then stay there longer because it's a great place for bacteria to grow. There is also the issue of having a clitoral hood become very tight, just like a male getting phimosis. That isn't a reason to just up and cut the damned thing off though! There are stretches a person can do in both cases to fix it. Most people don't even know that a foreskin is NOT supposed to be retracted until well into puberty. A lot of people seem to think you need to retract it when they are still babies to clean there. That's wrong wrong wrong and any doctor who says to that needs to go back to medical school. That was the practice much earlier before antibiotics could easily be used in the case of infection. We don't just up and die from infections anymore. So, worrying about an infection there and chopping that off is absurd.Google the function of a male foreskin and how it develops, and then I think we can talk. It has special signaling cells that cue the body to make certain hormones. It also has special nerve cells and removing the foreskin absolutely reduces sexual feeling and orgasm intensity. Guys who are cut also have sex differently. Ones who are tend to have sex and try to go much deeper and faster. Guys who are uncut tend to go slower and be more gentle as they tend to be more sensitive there. Please watch a YouTube video of the procedure actually being done. There are also studies, and feel free to look them up, that show when that is performed on a baby, it causes permanent changes in the brain that appear on mri scans very much like ptsd.We need to be trying to outlaw circumscision, period. If you look at studies from Europe that are much more free of financial influence than the stuff written in the US now. You will see that they are calling for an end to the practice for males as well because with the advances in medicine like antibiotics now make it so the benefits no longer outweigh the risks. &gt; 'You are either only reading parts of what I am saying. Or, being intentionally obtuse and putting words in my mouth. The point of bringing that up was to make a hypothetical scenario and ask you a question about it. You said male circumscision was sometimes beneficial for health reasons.' Yes exactly. However, I've never said you MUST do it. The fact that male circumcision is linked with some health benefits does not mean you have to undergo this procedure if you do not want to do so. You are quibbling about it while the only thing I said is that FGM and Male circumcision are two different procedures but both of them are devastating without your consent because you have the right to decide for your own body. You should re-read my answers and see that from the beginning I stated that I STRONGLY BELIEVE EACH SINGLE PERSON SHOULD DECIDE FOR HIS/HER OWN BODY. AND IF ANYONE DOES THE OPPOSITE, THAT IS VIOLATION OF HUMAN RIGHTS. &gt;'Which, has absolutely nothing to do with why I asked and gets off the subject, I'm guessing intentionally.' I stated that there are not health benefits for Female Genital Mutilation (FGM). I thought you claimed there are health benefits and I cannot leave such references like that. 'If we are going to say that male circumscision can be done for medical reasons. Would that argument hold up for justifying female circumscision?' Okay, let's consider Female circumcision had some health benefits, it would be okay to undergo this procedure ONLY IF YOUR DOCTOR SAID THAT IT WAS NECESSARY OR MANDATORY FOR THE PERSON'S WELL BEING OR THE PERSON'S LIFE WAS AT RISK. But FGM/C has no health benefits and can cause long-term health problems. And by FGM/C we mean everything, cutting, removing, piercing and/or sewing closed all or part of a girl's or woman's external genitals for no medical reason. And believe me, NO SINGLE GIRL WHO WAS CUT IN THIS WORLD WAS CUT FOR 'MEDICAL REASONS'. The overwhelming consensus is cut for religious duty, cultural reasons, condition of marriage et cetera That means, girls are cut not for their own 'hygiene' but because they have to do it for men. You should do a research and see the reasons why FGM/C is applied. First of all, they want to decrease the woman's sexual pleasure and do not want her to have sexual desires whereas others claim this disgusting procedure is applied because it increases sexual pleasure for the man. The women who cut their daughters do not take into account their health, because if they actually did, they would not practice FGM/C. &gt;'Google the function of a male foreskin and how it develops, and then I think we can talk.' Yes, I know about it but I can't understand what is your problem. And I can't actually understand what makes you think I am clueless about this particular issue. You seem to focus on the fact that minors have to undergo this process. The thing is I have never said the foreskin is something useless that must be cut. Also, I never said that someone should do it for no medical reasons. That means that you do not have to remove something of your body unless it lowers the quality of your life or put your life at risk. Nothing more, nothing less. The fact that male circumcision is linked with health benefits does not mean that	Age, Nothing, Sexual	Age - General, Age - Youngsters, Gender - General	7/842	0.831

Who said it is normal? Removing any part of your body for no medical reason is not normal. And it is not only guys. There are new fads, called "labiaplasty" and "vaginaplasty". But who cares right? who cares that girls as young as 15 years old want to undergo an unnecessary procedure in order to reach the beauty "standards of a "vagina" or "labia". They are a form of FGM. They remove a part of their body for no medical reason. The only difference between FGM and Labiaplasty/vaginaplasty is consent. However, some women wanted to undergo FGM because it is the norm in their cultures or nations. Similarly, women in the west want to undergo this procedure because our society promotes "an ideal vagina" or an ideal labia minora. But is it really their "free" choice? Most of them claim they feel discomfort. The doctors state that they have completely normal vaginas and labias. They have been brainwashed and in fear of what men think they are willing to put their health at risk for a man. So stop acting like only men have to go under the knife for unnecessary things. Both genders are victims of social pressure and we claim to live in free countries while such things happen!!!In my comments I said that some men decide to undergo this procedure for no medical reasons. Similarly, women go under the knife for no medical reasons. Do I agree with it ? NoCan I stop it? kind of no. Only if we try to enact a law which will state that no one should undergo a procedure if it is not for medical reasons. Thaddeus Russell is missing the point. It's not sexism against women, because the premise is not that women are somehow handicapped , or weaker and in need of extra protection. Modern Feminists take advantage of that old belief still lingering in our culture (the chivalry) to push for something else: an aristocratic system where men are serfs that must sacrifice themselves for the superior gender . Superior from birth. They say so themselves "we women are superior". But, and this is key, not superior in a meritocratic way of "I'll show you how superior I am by inventing stuff, curing disease and making tons of money". Atom Storm The one good thing from your story is that you and your brother were able to still see your father and not be kept from him altogether and brain washed by your mother, as it happens all too often. A good friend of mine has two daughters with his ex wife and when they were only 1yr and 3yrs old the mom took off to another state with a new guy. It took my friend 7 years to locate her and then get the courts to force the mom to let him see the girls. Sadly the mom had 7 years to brain wash the girls against their own father and no matter how hard he tried there was no getting through to them. The girls are now 18 and 20 and have cut off all communication with their dad. It's heart breaking for him and what the mom did is disgusting. Too many women seem to get the idea that the children are somehow more hers than they are the dad's and when they no longer want the man they think he no longer has rights to the children. Judges should give full custody to the dads in cases like that.	Old	Age - Over 65s	1/204	0.49

I think the dude is on the right track in regards to his thinking; however, I don't think he understands why things have gotten the way they have. It's not the patriarchy that demands women be taken at their word in regards to rape, it's feminism. Read any Salon or Huff article or anything written by ANY prominent feminist in academia on rape and you'll see time and time again these women calling for "believing the victim". Sadly, none of these people ever express what that means exactly. They won't because what they want is to provide women the power to throw men in jail without evidence. Rape is fucking awful and it really fucking sucks that it's so bloody hard to prove. There is no doubt some women freeze up after saying no a bunch of times and just go limp. There is no doubt the men who fuck those women know they are fucking them against their will. But how do we, as a society, handle a situation like that. If there is video of it, yah, throw that dick away, but without video you're not going to have any evidence. There will be no signs of a struggle. It's a shitty situation, but we can't allow rape to redefine how the judicial system operates. actually you're just repeating the same historically inaccurate dogma everyone hears daily. The law has always been that people who owned property either house or land could vote, meaning wealthy women could vote a long time before poor/working class men ever could. I'll grant it was far less common for women to own property, usually wealthy women were just married to men with the property, but in the cases where women did own property they could vote and poor men could not. Women have been going to university for more than a century, e.g. elizabeth blackwell being the first female doctor nearly 200 years ago. Divorce was nigh impossible for anyone 100 years, in fact in countries like canada you actually had to get a law from parliament to be granted a divorce, something that virtually no man or woman could ever obtain. Upon reaching Philadelphia, Blackwell boarded with Dr. William Elder and studied anatomy privately with Dr. Jonathan M. Allen as she attempted to get her foot in the door at any medical school in Philadelphia.[1] She was met with resistance almost everywhere. Most physicians recommended that she either go to Paris to study or that she take up a disguise as a man to study medicine. The main reasons offered for her rejection were that (1) she was a woman and therefore intellectually inferior, and (2) she might actually prove equal to the task, prove to be competition, and that she could not expect them to "furnish [her] with a stick to break our heads with". Out of desperation, she applied to twelve "country schools".[2]Medical education in the United States[edit]Portrait of Elizabeth Blackwell by Joseph Stanley Kozlowski, 1905. Syracuse University Medical School collection.In October, 1847, Blackwell was accepted as a medical student by Hobart College, then called Geneva Medical College, located in upstate New York. Her acceptance was a near-accident. The dean and faculty, usually responsible for evaluating an applicant for matriculation, were not able to make a decision due to the special nature of Blackwell's case. They put the issue up to a vote by the 150 male students of the class with the stipulation that if one student objected, Blackwell would be turned away. The young men voted unanimously to accept her.[6][7] SO BASED ON THIS SHE WAS ONLY EXCEPTED BECAUSE THOSE MEN WERE NOT A BUNCH OF DOUCHE BAGS!!! LUCKY FOR HER I WOULD SAY! But you do not live in reality if you think a women on her own merits was able to do anything that a man was allowed to do you would be wrong. it has been and is a mans world and that WILL be changing. Frank Drebin We all know what he meant to say and why he said it that way. He was speaking in a way that was more palatable to women and feminists' ears. The thing that is wrong with that however is that is that it still shows priority towards women and paints them as the victims. He only cares about women. He said himself that he is not egalitarian. He obviously sees the patriarchy as a problem still and thinks that feminism is still relevant in the US today. That is the "problem" people are having with him. Just because we agree with him on the topic of alimony that doesn't mean we can't look at his way of thinking for what it really is. I personally knew what he meant for him saying that but I noticed that he didn't bring up anything about men's issues aside from agreeing with Joe on some things. (From this clip alone, maybe if I saw the whole thing...) What I will say is that his way of opeating is probably a way more affective way on bringing change to the feminist movement than most stuff. Its not that difficult to understand why there is an abnormal imbalance in the law ... it is there to discourage males to enter into a relationship and it is there to give some women the tools to exploit the law to their advantage. This part of the grand scheme for the purpose of population control as well as create a distraction from real issues as through this mechanism we are so preoccupied with bullshit that we do not have the time to think about the system that fucks us everyday. Just look at how many mechanisms we have that can be directly linked to the concept to slow down population...economic manipulation = population control , laws where now any type of unwanted advances can be deemed "rape"... new policies emerging to encourage diversification of work culture by encouraging companies to hire 40 to 50 more women..this system now ignores best person for the job and focuses on the gender , which is a battle men will lose...for those who are working, men will dig their heads into work, isolating themselves from interacting with female counterparts out of fear that they can lose their job as a result of sexual harassment..this will eliminate romantic relationships at work..and since we spend more time at work than outside of it this will hinder those natural interactions. Socio-engineering is very important to meet this new quota. Dont get me started on Monsanto, now BAYER. Absolutely EVERYTHING can be linked to population control and this has been a concern to the global elites since 1900s. This is simply fact and is necessary. Morgan F right?? My point of view is that if you are good father to your kids and want to be involved in your kids life and you haven't committed any crime, you should be allowed access to your children after a divorce no questions asked. I also feel that if you have joint custody and you are already providing for your kids and contributing to their school clothes and feeding them out of your pocket you shouldn't be obligated to pay child support to the mother. It's weird because every households situation is different and when divorce happens and lawyers get involved it gets messy especially when there's animosity. But any mother worth her salt should never let her own anger towards her ex get in the way of her children having their father in their life. The real issue is misunderstandings and miscommunications. Only the parents will know full well which is the parent that will be most beneficial to the child. Unfortunately, the role of 'mother' Is more detrimental to the early developmental stages of an infants life. So most cases involving that age group for children is supposedly medically superior, and thus, the only real decision to be made is how the father should be forced to contribute. Which obviously becomes here-say. So when he say she say is the norm, ya kinda just gotta go with the feel of it all, lying is a trait almost exclusively human, and we're by far the best at it. If a parent of either gender goes for 50/50 and the judge says no...its not to benefit the other financially its because the children are better off with the parent who gets sole custody. Think you're the one with the mental issues...or deficit.	Gender, Mental, Woman	Gender - General, Physical Identity - Physical (and Mental) Impairments	3/64	4.688
TL Walker Really, because the research says otherwise! It's been proven that children who spend equal time with each parent have much better outcomes than those children that don't! News flash, the reason the courts deny fathers 50/50 is because there's no money for the state in that deal! The states benefit greatly from the collection of child support. It has NOTHING to do with what's best for the children! Look it up! You must be one of those that fought for full custody then cried about needing money from the other parent to help poor you!	Nothing	Age - Youngsters	1/99	1.01
TL Walker another reason you're wrong is because there have many many cases where the mom was on drugs, in and out of jail, constantly making poor decisions and the dad was obviously the better parent but the courts still gave custody to mom. I wonder why that is because it couldn't be about money! Yeah you're right because it's always about what's best for the children! Also, if you fight for something that you know is expensive, then you should be adult enough to financially cover that decision on your own. Look at this way, if we shared a car and then broke up (assuming you're a woman ) and I fought to keep the car 90 of the time and won. Then told you that you need to pay the car note, gas, insurance and maintenance on that vehicle that will be with me 90 of the time, would you think I was crazy for demanding such a thing? jchief Ok children are not possessions so I'm not even going to compare them with a car. I live in NZ not USA and parents are not denied access to their children here unless they are a danger to them or unfit to care for them. If there are drug problems the parents must be in recovery and be drug tested to have custody. Its not about gender . I agree kids should have time with both parents. I think in the past judges have leaned toward mothers having custody as up until the divorce they've been the primary caregivers and the judges feel its less upheaval for the children to continue to be with that parent. I believe custody and child support shouldn't be based on the gender of the parent. All I would suggest to any parent of either gender denied access or over-charged support is to appeal with a better lawyer and get some support from a psychologist or accountant etc. I'm sorry if you don't get to see your children :(	Gender	Gender - General	3/174	1.724

Joe, I have to say I'm a little disappointed how readily you agreed with this man. I get the points where you talked about alimony and even the lack of due process in college sexual assault allegations as actual sexist offenses against both genders. I had never thought about these things and agree with you both. Where I take issue is at the point where he begins to callously make claims that the judicial system is doing women a disservice by investigating any sexual assault claim against a man. There is a difference between women and men, as you have acknowledged both in your routines and on the pod, women are physically less capable than men to protect themselves in the majority of cases. Sometimes, it is that simple. Forgive me if I, myself, begin to sound patriarchal but women do deserve the benefit of the doubt in an instance of physical violence; especially when your guest himself admits the administration and judiciary staff are predominantly male and many of us I am sure have witnessed it fail women. What he is saying is not "controversy" but is truly, TRULY disrespectful towards women and men who are actual victims of sexual assault whom have not been fairly served by the powers that be. The comments I see on this board right now are kind of repulsive and I'm beginning to think that cretins begin to show their colors when an "intellectual" or as I prefer, "complete dipshit" happens to sing the tune of their unfortunate beliefs. Nonetheless, I'm a fan and hope that you keep throwing a wrench in the works from time to time and frustrating/exciting people. Keep up the good work.	Sexual	Gender - General	3/283	1.06

Unless you're being clever and argue that modern "feminists" are not, in fact, feminists at all. I'm all for female equality of opportunities. So I'm a feminist. I'm against discrimination towards anyone on grounds of gender , so those who disagree with me are sexist. And anyone arguing that America is a patriarchy has never been to a real patriarchal society. In patriarchies, women have no voice, so feminism does not even get of the ground. What modern "feminism" is trying to do, is deny men a voice, to impose a matriarchy, social and legal. Seems clear as day to me.	Gender, Patriarchy	Gender - General	2/100	2.0

vazquezb2011 Feminism is a Trojan horse. It is a lie that feminism is about achieving social equality for women. In the pursuit for the eternally elusive equality...family and the common decency between men and women has been sacrificed. Feminists get women angry and mistrustful of men and tells them they are entitled to be a bitch and walk around like a slut without being ashamed and abandon their obligations to their families and expect to be honoured and respected for just being a woman . Meanwhile, feminist organizations discriminate heavily against men and are a haven for man hating abusive lesbians. Feminists oppose equality when it comes to shared parenting post divorce. Feminists are arrogant and self serving and act like spoiled children. No one is saying women should be shackled and owned by abusive men...but guess what? Abusive men in power do not spare men and boys any abuse either. In lands where women are treated like property and enslaved (like Sunni Muslim lands) the men are also murdered and enslaved. Little orphaned boys are raped and kept like property too...feminism seems to not be aware of or care about this at all except to point out that men are rapists. Where is feminism when it comes to acknowledging that awful women exist and are among its ranks and use feminist narrative that women are always victims of oppression as an excuse for crimes committed by women? Like many kids have had to grow up under the thumb of abusive and manipulative mothers and feminism always blames the absent father..yet feminism doesn't acknowledge that the kids are often left alone with abusive mothers because the feminist loving courts often discriminate against the fathers.Fuck feminism..it is sexist and responsible for a lot of suffering. I have been working on a inversion of that speechI was appointed as good will ambasador for UN men six mouths ago.The more I have spoken about Meninism the more I have realized that fighting for Mens rights has to often become synonymous with woman hating.If there is one thing I know for certain, it is that this has to stop.For the Record Meninism, by definition, is the beilf that Men and women should have equal rights and opportunities.It is the theory of the political, economic, and social equality of the sexes.I started questioning gender based assumptions a long time ago- when I was 8. I was confused about being called disrespectful when I politely questioned what I was being taught in school, but everyone else seemed to beilve things with litte or no investigation. When at 14 I started to be de-sexualized by certain elements of the media. When at 15 Men started dropping out of colleges because they didn't want to appear masculine. When at 18 my female friends/and family demonized me every-time I expressed my feelings. I decided that I was a Meninist and this seemed uncomplicated to me. But my recent research has shown me that Meninism has become an unpopular word.Men are choosing not to identify as Meninist. Apparently I am among the ranks of Men who's expressions are seen as to strong, to aggressive, isolating, and anti-female- yet strangely attractive.Why has the word become such an uncomfortable one.I am from Britan!And I think it is right, that i am paid what I earned.I think it is right, that I should be able to make decisions about my own body.(applase)I think it is right the Men be involved on my behalf in the policy and decisions that will effect my life. I think it is right, that socially I am afforded the same respect as whamen.But sadlly, I can say that thier is no one county in the west where all men can except to receive these rights.NO country in the west can yet say that they have achieved gender equality. These rights I consider to be human rights; But I am one of the luck ones.My life is a sheer privilege. Because my parents didn't love me less because I was born an son.My school did not medicate me because I was a boy. ( they tried )My mentoers didn't assume i would go less far because i would have to pay alimony one day.These influences for the gender equality ambassadors, that make me who i am today.They may not know it. But they are the inadvertent Meninist that are changing, the world today. We need more of those.And if you still hate the word.It is not the word that is important.It is the idea and the ambition behind it.Because not all Men have received the same right that i have.If fact statistically very few have been.In 1997 Hillary Clinton made a famous speech in berlin about Mens rights.Sadly many of the things that she wanted to change are still true today. But what stood out for me the most was that less then 2 were female.How can we affect change in the world when only half of it is invited,Or feel welcome to participate-in this conversation?Women I would like to take this opportunity, to extend your formal invitation.(applase)Gender equality is your issue to.Because to date, I see my fathers role of a parent as being valued less by society.despite me needing his presence by my side as much as my mothers.Ive seen Men destroyed by the very people they sought for help. Even when their feedback was requested. Living in fear that their masculinity	Gender, Woman	Gender - General	5/664	0.753

Voting should be restricted to two types of people: Those that serve in combat roles in the military, and those whom are net taxpayers. Also, Being a net taxpayer should only get you the voting rights for Congressmen, while Military duty gets you the right for Presidential voting. Basically you should have to demonstrate a contribution to society in order to have a say in it. I know that some loon is gonna flip his or her lid at the idea, but it's the only way to keep a society afloat. Stupid and useless people will always outnumber the intelligent and productive. So if you give EVERYONE equal power in a meritocracy, the first thing that the dumb will do is seek to tear down the Meritocracy.
