Europe does not understand Islamic politics or Islamic history. Where they are the majority brute force is used to subdue cultures. The christian cultures of the middle east, Turkey, North Africa etc. etc. Many christians are still martyred in those countries. I am not right wing but we have to recognise the danger of being Islamised through the birth bomb and Islamic law. It is spiritual war unfortunately. The right rebel and want to do it by force. The left lie down and do nothing and continue to pursue their sodomitic culture against the consciences of their christians. It is catch 22 and is driving me to my knees. Its all divide and conquer. It is an age old phenomenon. Creating chaos through division by way of staged violence and anarchy all designed using paid activists. These activists are political extremists and are deemed by the state to be useful idiots. They are promoted to bring about friction and bring about violence. Then another element is put into play namely 'The war on terror' This will bring more confusion. The state will use its media conglomerate to agitate the public into fear and anger by promoting all types of hatred and division. The state will agitate both sides to create more anger and envy. The state will trample on constitutional law. The state will do all it can to disarm the public of its means to protect itself. Into this the promotion of degeneracy and odd practices become the order of the day. The rational become the new heretics. The public growing ever tired of this maelstrom will beg the state to provide them with order and security. The state will then ensue marshal law to give them the false perception that they are being protected from chaos which has been strategically managed through stage craft. The state will use this as a pretext to rule over them with an iron fist. Any type of freedoms and liberty will be outlawed. The state will become tyrannical. The guns will be confiscated. The state is a servant to the oligarchy. The enemy of the oligarchy are the people who want to be left in peace. The oligarchy will consolidate into global governance. The people will be enslaved. I'll start by saying that I'm black (so don't come at me with the white privilege nonsense), but why shouldn't some Germans be upset with the way some immigrants are coming into their country, and disrupting the environment they've made for themselves. I go to Germany, the streets are clean. The minute you go to where refugees settlers are, there's literally trash all over the floor. Listen, I'm not arguing against immigration, but as an immigrant myself, I couldn't imagine myself going to another country that took me in, and dirtying it up with litter and trash. And, I think it's important to note that if there were thousands of whites flocking into black and brown countries, a minority of which were conducting terror attacks, sexual assault, regular assaults, and murder, etc., the same people crying 'xenophobia' and 'racism' would be making similar statements to these far-right people in the video. Let's all be honest. Immigration is good. Big selective immigration is better. In fact, they're not refugees, nor are they asylum seekers. They are economic opportunists using world events as a vehicle for getting into a more economically sound nation . Why are the majority of them young men? Why are there so few women, children, and people of a venerable age ? If most of these people should be from Syria and places where ISIS was located, why are so many sub-Saharan Africans showing up in Italy? wouldn't it be more accurate to describe them as desperate people crossing the border into Germany hoping to escape from difficult circumstances? That's not an invasion. There may be a criminal element and also some terrorists (such is the world we live it). So some care to screen out anti-social individuals is warranted.It appears generally true that immigrants are courageous, resourceful people. The less confident tend to remain where they are, perceiving it it as too risky to 'leave everything behind'. An immigrant population may seem undesirable at first, simply because they are 'different', but over longer periods of time, they tend to contribute skillfully to the societies that assimilate them. *the KALERGI PLANKalergi escribed his dreams for a One World Government with its foundations in the European Union. He hoped that the European project would go on to become the blueprint for a society run entirely by the global elite over a completely powerless population. He wrote that he wished to see the end of national sovereignty and self-determination and he believed that nationalism , and indeed the very concept of nations, could be demolished through multi-culturalism. He wrote that a society that was racially and ethnically diverse was one which was easily controllable by the political elite.According to Kalegri, a diverse and multi-cultural people were easy to control as they had no common identity to rally behind in the event of a political crisis. In addition to that, a diverse population would be easy to conquer by the means of divide and rule. It's sad to read all these comments supporting groups in Germany that have explicitly expressed sympathy with the Nazi past. Many of the AfD leaders have done so. One should be clear here: These Germans could have formed a resistance to Merkel's immigration policy without aligning themselves with neo- Nazi movements or without invoking notions of "pure" white Germans. Germany has had Turkish Muslim guest workers for decades, who are now citizens, and their children are now German citizens. For these anti-immigration parties, ANY non-white German is a foreigner. One could oppose new immigration by calling for limited quotas, or by making an argument that the German state does not have the resources to accept so many people so quickly (which is true). Instead, they resorted to arguments about the incompatibility of non-white and non-Christian people with German society. Yes, we've certainly seen this before, and to pretend it is just about "preserving" German culture is such a historically ignorant perspective, and it is disgusting to see so many commenters supporting that. Somehow, anything that is to the right of far left( which has become the norm, over the past few decades) is called " far right". Try calling them " centre", or simply " right wing". Being non-left doesn't make somebody an extreme right eing fascist. I am non-left. Simply a conservative. You would maybe call me far right, but I am what I was 30 years ago already. Back then I was " centre". Not left, not right, just a common sense middle of the road conservative. I haven't changed. The political landscape has changed. It has all shifted to the left. Ugh as a leftist, it's frustrating for me to see The NY Times reporting on this now. For years, the liberal media has been helping to normalize the far-right. They have run so many light, coddling pieces about how surprised they are that some people in the alt-right dress nicely, or that there are hipsters who are fascists, as if this is some quirky trend to cover with no consideration of how the tone and content of your reporting can literally affect the course of political history. By giving them the visibility of massive mainstream platforms, they exposed lots of people to the fact that there is a growing, ostensibly anti-establishment movement of these people and let them throw a few talking points out on the air, but they never really confronted the content of their platform in a meaningful way or really got confrontational with them when given the chance, to force them to show their true colors. Ironically, by shirking this journalistic responsibility in favor of the liberal ethic of "I have to seem nonpartisan and balanced, I can't take a side" they have helped mainstream the very people people who may end up literally undoing of the liberal culture and pluralistic liberal democracies that they claim to value. These monsters are cropping up in one country after another as people get fed up with the status quo of neoliberal capitalism (and in many places like the US, being excluded by two-party political systems that claim to be democratic), and liberals have no response. Historically it was the left that provided a productive alternative for people to go to, to organize and press their demands for a civilized, just society, but the establishment (liberal and conservative alike) in many of the Western countries (especially the US) have virtually wiped the left off the political spectrum— in America virtually all left-wing parties and labor unions are gone, and those that claim to represent labor are led by class collaborationists who are happy to sell the workers out to the owning class (so they might as well not exist). In places like France, Germany, and Britain, the socialist and labor parties ended up bought and accepted neoliberal "reforms" instead of pushing back, and that caused many workers to give up on the left altogether, moving to reactionary far-right movements (to the point where the French Socialist Party and the Greek Socialist Party were pretty much wiped out and replaced altogether). Liberals may not understand all of the ways that their politicians, journalist, and theorists/intellectuals have effectively aided these horrific movements, but there is a very real share of responsibility on them. I don't blame every liberal—most individuals haven't done anything active, because most of them don't have giant platforms to give them visibility on, or political power to either use to help average workers and the poor (thereby legitimizing the system of liberalism) or to use to benefit the few richest capitalists (what they actually did). Having political power or a major mainstream media outlet is a level of power and influence that really does come with a certain social responsibility, and the way they have used that power since WWII (and especially since the 70s, when neoliberalism replaced New Deal values in most "center-left"/social-democratic/liberal parties) has led us directly to this crisis, where democracy itself has become delegitimized in many people's eyes because of the failings

Of course, I am against banning hijabs and religious symbols in schools because that is your personal freedom.However, it is fine to put your country first. It's fine to be angry when your country goes downhill. It absolutely necessary to protect your children, and to demand that your country remains safe. However, we also can't put all the blame on the refugees. Most of them are normal people who's homes have been destroyed due to western intervention. Both sides are making this issue seem black and white. —> Of course you have the right to think about the possible changes in culture that would happen in your country if tons of other people start coming in, just look at what happened in Palestine. I'm not German, but the demands of those germans from the far right in my mind are not extreme. Why should the flood gates be opened to people, who by definition of the word "foreigner" or " migrant " under modern political theory, are not part of this statehood. Why would I want my tax money be used for migrants coming into my country? There is a very fine line that any government is walking along on this issue. For example, it puzzles me why the rich gulf arab countries like Saudi Arabia, the United Arab Emirates, Qatar, Kuwait, or Bahrain have not welcomed fleeing migrants from Syria. Joe I am sorry. I thought you were joking. Think of the country like your house. There is a reason you have a door with a lock. You want to be able to know who is coming in or out and keep your family safe. You can have people over. You can let them stay and even join your family. It all works out nicely because you know if you can support them or if they can support themselves, who they are and how many. If you did not have a door with a lock or a door period. asborhen I live in a metropolitan area in the USA that has been about 50 "taken over" by immigrants since the 70's. While it is not ALL bad, the areas in which they have "taken over" have been clearly blighted and are high with crimes of all kinds... the areas look like the places from which they "fled" for a better life, yet the areas they proliferate not only "look" like the places they came from, but are areas in which the opportunity they came to this country for have diminished greatly as well. I believe there will be another 5 decades or so before homeostasis is re-established OR another 5 decades or so before virtually the entire area is turned into something completely different AND something that changes the trajectory of increasing opportunities if they keep pouring in as they have AND if they continue to reproduce as rapidly as they do and at the young ages at which they begin to reproduce... it is likely that this kind of degradation will continue... of course there are a lot of dynamics going on and it does not necessarily mean the future is totally bleak, but I see the opportunities for EVERYONE diminishing as the true concern, whether that is how the trajectory will continue or not, it is difficult to say... I am mostly optimistic ... but, this idea about how a previously thriving and safe area can quickly become blighted and unrecognizable, rapidly, IS very real. It would not be impossible for the majority of a country to eventually become unrecognizable and the mindsets that supported the problems that lead the immigrants to leave their original homelands in the first place could easily serve to recreate the same atmosphere and problems in the new area if they dominate an area eventually. Frankly, I think that is what happened in the USA... the Europeans moved in... the natives were taken out... things developed, a lot of crappy crap happened (and still is happening) and while there was some good out of the whole deal... the same problems, due to the general European mindsets, exist here. The concern is not false fear... it is unfortunate that these real aspects cannot be discussed without it turning into some kind of race hatred thing. Although, when you are allowing millions of immigrants within a short span of time to move into a Western multi-cultural and tolerant society, from cultures that are chiefly intolerant and who are taught to hate the Western Civilization... it should NOT be ignored. At least in my area, the dominant immigrants are at least part of Western Civilization and do not hate the culture they have immigrated to.	Race	Ethnicity - General	1/450	0.222

ben dover Oh, I will happily give you some basic history classes, the type of classes that kids have at 11 or 12 in some countries where ppl are actually educated.1. the Franco-Prussian war ( July 1870 - January 1871): The conflict oppose the French Empire and Republic and Italy to a large coalition of German states led by the Kingdom of Prussia. More than 1M of dead and wounded. This world war (sorry but USA wasn't there, and this war is still considered as a world war between 2 majors powers at that time), was lost by the French and led to some majors territorial losses such as the 2 French states known as Alsace and Lorraine. Those losses lead to what is known as the "Great War".2. the "Great War" (July 1914 - November 1918). This war was initiated by the assassination of archduke Ferdinand in Sarajevo by some yougoslavists affiliated to the anarchists AND the German invasions of Belgium and France. This period represent the end of the European Empires in the XXth century and a need for revenge for a lot of europeans, who where fed up with the "German authority", France wanted back the Alsace and Lorraine considered as occupied by germans, which was the case considering the fact that the people living there where always loyals to France. This war represent also the first time when the term of "Allied" was use as a result of the "Triple Entente" between Russia, France and UK opposed to the "Triple Alliance" between Italy, Germany and Austria (Bulgaria too, who was under German authority and the Ottoman Empire who plead allegiance to Germany and then became somehow the "Quadruple Alliance"). The "Great War" is the deadliest conflict in modern history (almost 100 M deaths world wide), the conflict spread because of the fact that germans never wanted to respect the territorial integrity of others European nations.3. WWII as the Americans called it first and the became an usual/easy term, (September 1939 - September 1945). This war was fulled by the deep German humiliation in the "Great War", the poverty that been caused for the Germans, a need for revenge, a racist ideology and the European cowardice, France collaborate with the nazi Germany, mixed with some Italian fascism (Mussolini) and a Spanish civil war between republicans and the General Franco, also a fascist and a great friend of Hitler, USSR with Stalin who was a German allied until 1941, Japan at war with China since the 1920's and allied to Germany and USA who, after Pearl Harbor, in December 1941, join the "Allies" a.k.a. UK and USSR. So yes, there are 3 world wars in the modern History, all caused by Germany at some levels. You're welcome.	Nazi, Racist	Ideological and Political Identity - General, Ethnicity - General	2/462	0.433

This would not have happened if Liberal EU politicians had not opened the door to mass migrations of people who 1: Do not speak the language and therefore can't get accustomed to the local culture and customs. 2. Cant get jobs due to language and skill differences. 3. don't have adequate resources to house and educate at these numbers. 4: drain the welfare system that is there for tax paying citizens. 5. need to create ghettos to house these migrants which leads to balkanization of the region they live in causing them to resist integrating into German culture because they are only surrounded by those of their own culture . 6 the native German citizens should not be forced to change their Culture in order to accommodate nearly a million people in a short period of time. 7. those migrants are not the best of the best of immigrants and thus the actions of a few will stain the majority which in this political climate is enough to cause regular citizens to fear. Legal immigration works because the people applying want to be in the country they are immigrating to and are aware of the culture and have the requisite skills to integrate and be a productive part of a strong society. i.e Canada and the US. There will always be racists no matter what, but the majority of the Germans would turn to these political extremes if they felt that their way of life was under attack. And this is coming from a legal immigrant himself who can see both sides of the issue.	Immigrant	Nationality - General	1/265	0.377

Bobby P If I may go over your seven causes:1. Mosud, the man who was assaulted in the video, spoke in nearly perfect German and was still assaulted and his building griffited with swastikas...2. Polish people and Syrians are intergrating fine even without speaking the langauge and their are plenty of ways to learn or get help with thelangauge barrier.3. While the numbers are vast, education is simple, and immigrants are famous for intagrating to cultural norms (even if that means essentially killing their old culture to get there...)4.Welfare is made to help people, why does it matter to whom it goes to? If it goes to someone who will be a doctor in five-or-so years or a farmer, what is the problem then? If you are against it going to a one person, who validates who we should give it to then? Should it be given to nobody but the rich and the educated, or nobody at all?5. Ghettos, don't do that. What is your evidence to support that they do?6. Why do you think you do have to lose your culture? Your culture can stay, it won't change because a bunch of immigrants arrive.7. So where the Irish, yet, most irish immigrated across Eruope and settled well everywhere they ended up. Why do you assume that this will be any different?This is from someone who his naturalized in his home contry and has lived here most of my life...I am optamistic they will adapt, it will be slow, but they will...	Nobody, Old	Age - Over 65s, Age - Youngsters	3/261	1.149

Joan of Arc Alter I appreciate your optimism about the situation. And yes there are many great immigrants who come with very little, and succeed through hard work. But this situation is very different than the one you have in mind, one being legal immigration and two in controlled costed numbers. 1. That gentleman who was assaulted by those Nazi's deserves justice. Those people that committed that crime should be prosecuted to the fullest extent. There is no place for violence and racism. Unfortunately, in any population you will have people on either side of the political spectrum from Nazi's to anarchists. But the majority of people will be in the center of the distribution.2)Yes i agree. I personally know of people that have done so. I have no doubt some will. But the issue isn't that they can. The issue is the huge number in a short period of time. The resources required to coordinate, set up and teach German to thousands of people, while providing them food, shelter and living allowances isn't realistic. Government programs can only do so much. And the cost to provide all these things are on the backs of the taxpayer.3)Immigrants are famous for integrating ? Yes some are and others are not. In this case these people are literally coming with nothing and with little to no family support. They are essentially a ward of the government ( tax payer funded). The infrastructure has to be in place to be able to provide and accommodate for these people. It really is not that simple. And the longer it takes to do so the harder it is to integrate and educate them. Some of them may need to go to college. You think all universities can admit that number over night? Do german citizens get disadvantaged because there would be a quota to educate thousands of new people, and thus less resources for german citizens? 4.yes welfare is a safety net for those that really need it. What it is not is money for foreign aid. Which governments are essentially having to do to pay for thousands of migrants until they are stable enough to take care of themselves. You are also hoping that these people want to succeed. Not all of them are going to be doctors. Does anyone know what kind of skills these people have? 5. Ghetto, may have been a strong word. What i meant to say are areas where u have one culture completely dominate the native one to a point where it does not resemble the surrounding areas. You will see areas that have large numbers of migrants that are idle, such as coffee shops, malls etc where they associate only within their own groups. This drastically changes the demographics of the area. This does happen, check out Malmo, Sweden if you need a reference. 6. It is very difficult for one to change cultural norms unless they are a child. Have u read about reports in Germany about safety officials telling women to cover up because they can't protect women from being sexually assaulted by migrants? In your own country officials are willing to have double standards? What happened to the feminists? What kinds of people have they brought in? I have never heard of such things with legal immigrants before. 7.There is a huge difference between a person from Ireland and a person from the middle east. They have a completely different value system. This isn't to say all europeans are great either, you have good apples with bad ones. If u transplant 1 million germans and put them in the	Nothing, Racism, doctors	Age - Youngsters, Ethnicity - General, Nationality - General	3/625	0.48

The fact that immigration is not an urgent concern anymore comes from the rise of the "far" right. If they disappeared, leftist politics would keep importing migrants. You say it yourself: immigrants not refugees. Refugees would be no problem but immigrants stay in the coutry and from you get two huge problems from that fact:1. From other countrys (sweden) we know, that only a third of them has a job after 10 years. Its a huge strain on our econemy and gevourment budget.2. We already got a demographic problem in germany. But only in the german population. In the immigrant population (defined as first and second generation immigrants) there is no such problem. So even without immigration german population which ancestors lived here for hundreds and thousand of years will get a minority. Just trough having less babys than immigrants. It gets faster through immigration which is as last year about +400000 (came intro country minus went out of the country). Germany is changing and its not a small change. The population is changing and the culture is changing with it. If the trend countinues islam will get the predominant religion. You will always get resictance against such a change and it will rally behind far right groups because they have already always been against immigrants.Im a bid sad they did not talk about the eu. Gouverneur-Generaal van Heutsz Funny how I lived in Germany as a 'foreigner' (From Finland) for over a year, and every right-winger i came across was okay with me because "you seem German enough, you fit in". It seems the foreigner issue only becomes a real problem worth of protest when you have the wrong skin-tone and don't have the right "look" to be German. Another thing I noticed, during my stay as I lived in an immigrant heavy neighborhood in Berlin, because cheaper rents - I had a roommate that was a Syrian refugee and another roommate that was from Iran. Never felt unsafe in my home, on the streets, and was treated with hospitality by everyone, Germans and immigrants. The vast majority of the immigrants I met (including my two roommates) spoke nearly fluent German too. In fact, I found pretty quickly that many foreigners from places like Australia, Uk etc. that had moved there didn't seem to have any intention of learning German (even though some had stayed for years), but everyone I met from a middle-eastern background was enrolled in German courses and studying it rigorously. I can't help but think this immigrant -hate comes with a heavy schema of what kind of people others imagine immigrants from the middle-east/north-africa as, and there's plenty of propaganda out there to make it all seem like they are all unethical criminals. It's important to remember in all of this the most people are just normal people, no matter what background. That all said, I don't believe in open-door policies forever or do understand there is a limit to the capacity of migrants at a time that a nation can handle. But the Syria crisis was in fact an extreme situation, which lead to this influx in the first place. I don't agree that it makes any sense to create a threatening environment for other law-abiding people because you feel like they resemble other people who commit crimes. I live in Germany. It's horrible that this far-right horde, especially in the Eastern states, have gained so much ground. On the other hand, the Greens, who oppose the far-right and are the biggest opposition to nationalism , have doubled their numbers in recent state elections, while the AfD is not rising by more than 2. Every time 200 far-right protesters take to the streets, tens of thousands oppose them. The refugee crisis continues, because of economic factors, war, crime and illegal smuggling (which is raking in millions for smugglers). So long as we do not address these problems, far-right groups will have a foothold in German politics. We need international solutions to international problems. Im sorry but I see the Germans as evil. They don't care about the other European nations there true intent and goal is to sell as many german made products to as many people possible. They hide behind the veil of humanity and democracy, but it so far from it. They have let millions of people in deliberately into the EU and tryed to disperse them throughout the whole union, so this could be archived. They don't care if the infrastructure of nations that take the brunt of immigration can handle the amount of people. The pressure on housing, health services, increasing class sizes in public schools were kids with difficulties don't get a chance in their own country and public transport that crams people as cattle. Uninstall You don't seem to understand who funds the EU. Germany and France are basically bankrolling the EU, and poor countries (like Romania, Bulgaria, Slovenia) are benefiting from it. Plus, in the past few decades, more and more products are made in formerly poor nations like Romania, whose economies are growing. The EU pays them to care for refugees, many of whom are staying only temporarily. "They (Germany) have let millions of people in deliberately into the EU". Bollocks. The people entered through the EU borders, in places like Italy, Greece, Austria and Macedonia, NOT Germany. How is it Germany's fault that refugees came? Because although we humans as a species share many of the same attributes, the way we life and the way we act is entirely different based on the place on earth we come from and the way we biologically evolved, it's true that we life on the same planet, but we built borders and nations for a reason, we are a diverse species and need a certain amount of segregation from eachother in order to live in peace and harmony, humans have different goals and the diverse environments of earth like the desert, forest or rain forest have made entirely different cultures emerge. Your sentence is absolutely naive and stupid to say the least. Just read some basic books like Gustave LeBons "Psychology of the masses" or read some Nietzsche. You cannot create a human identity because we are to different. A poor chinese farmer has literally almost nothing in common with a rich european CEO. Let me just add, to be precise there already is a basic human identity, but what you people don't seem to understand is that national identity is about community and caring about those you love, human identity and your dream of a global civilization that is all multicultural will never work because you cannot move people to care more about a random arab from Irak then their own family and the people they love, the people that share their same way of live, have gone through the same hardships that are exclusive to their region, an arab will never cry about their weather being too cold for example or experience the hardships of a russian winter, therefore the people bind together, they share history and culture, you cannot take that away from them. I agree that generally speaking we should have some kind of human-patriotism that binds us, but we need nationalism and the acceptance of national identity and racial and cultural differences first because we can establish a meaningful and harmonic relationships between all humans worldwide, just compare the USA with countries like Japan or Switzerland and Iceland, homogenous countries are always more peacefull und unviolent then multicultural ones. Aylon5D Here's the problem with your logic. Although, there have been many changes throughout history, referring to territories and the people who occupy them, they have been fought for. Countless amounts of people have died fighting for what they believe in and for their right to claim the lands, cultivating it and building a civilized society. It is not an easy task. If it were, then people all over the globe would be content with where they reside. It is completely unfair to have had generations upon generations create (through bloodshed) a place for your family to exist, to have it completely overturned to individuals that are of no benefit to your society. These people (refugees) should be completely capable to create a civilization of their own, yet are too lazy to put in the years and years of work to do so. EVERY 1st WORLD CIVILIZATION on this planet has had to go through these obstacles to achieve what they have today, the best countries in the world..... BUT now others want their cut. They literally have the REST of the WORLD to make their own. Why should others, who have already accomplished these feats, have to give up what was earned by their families blood???? The main mistake of far-right politics is not that it questions mass immigration, but exactly that it does NOT actually question this phenomenon, i.e. it doesn't make any attempt to analyze its root causes. How can one be "anti-immigration" yet still support absurd military spending that leads to more imperialist wars in the Middle East and hence to more refugees? Or support more freedom for the large corporations to do what they want and thus exploit both the environment and the human inhabitants of the Third World even more, important factors that cause immigration? Most importantly, how can right-wing politicians defend their nationalist response to mass immigration, when the very causes of immigration are not only international, but also caused directly by wealthy and influential people in these countries which now suddenly act all surprised that they are "under attack" by "hordes" from the Middle East? Far-right politics is a populist farce that fails to recognize both the root causes of and the necessary solutions to mass immigration as we see it nowadays. And the heads of these institutions missuse the spirituality of the people to gain more power and that often ends in violence. So i dont blame the people, the believers of a religion i blame the key figures, these snakes that are in control. On the other side the root of such problems are not only on one side. When talking about Germany calling anything they have there "far-right" seems a bit fucking hollow. We know full well what happens in that country when the REAL far-right runs it, these people are NOT that. Theyre just sick of seeing their country turn into a slum, and that makes them nazis? If that makes someone a nazi , I guess Im one too. See here the folly of calling everything you disagree with nazi , eventually that word loses its meaning and no one cares if you call them that. Batti MollemannDid you ever compare the AfD to parties that are considered to be "moderate" in other countries? Compared to the Republicans in America, Shinzo Abe's LDP, or many mainstream European parties, the AfD is a leftwing party on most issues. A few decades ago, the same German "moderate" parties that are now in the Bundestag did not even accept the border with Poland. If you are living in today's Germany, you might not realize that similar views are normal in most countries. Americans talk of themselves as the "exceptional" or "indispensable" nation . China is the "middle kingdom". The USA, Japan, Turkey, China... actually any nation has a very different relationship to the massacres they committed. Even if not one of them showed the Nazi greeting, everyone only walks through the streets and commemorates the victims. The true patriots despise the Nazis. Is this shown in the public media? Reports are cheerfully cut together. A politician from the government's own ranks dared to publicly contradict the Chancellor: "There were no hunts in Chemnitz! What happened as a result? He was removed from his post. As Germans you always have this terrible story with you. But we cannot do anything for our history, that was before our time, and must never repeat ourselves. No genocide must be forgotten. But we may take to the streets for Germany. Peaceful protest, violence destroyed and achieved only the opposite. Many years ago there was this terrible incident at a home for asylum seekers in Solingen. This is still being commemorated publicly today. Even Mrs. Merkel arrived. And we must not draw attention to the German victims and publicly mourn them? I simply cannot understand why Mrs Merkel has such power. Now Austria has also decided against the migration pact. In Germany, petitions have no power? They are not published in order not to unsettle the population? We are still an occupied country, aren't we? Peace treaties are a no-no. what you didnt adress is how the so called social system in germany is failing in its core, which lead to this rage of the normal middle class. as an example : we recently had a change in tax law that increases taxes for retirees, people that get maybe 800€ a month have to pay more than 300€ of taxes, that is insane! loads of old people are poor ,like really poor, they cant afford to eat and have to go to the food bank. as a result suicide rates rose damatically, of course no one is talking about it and you wont see this in the major media outlets. germany needs to change dramatically ! i am not saying these htlr idiots are on the right way, i despise them as well, but you have to see where this is coming from. in that you failed !	Old	Age - Over 65s	1/148	0.676

Also alot of people just cant do „lesser work,,. In my hometown we had unemployed people and still jobs at places like burger king or as cleaning personal, that were unfilled for years. It is not failure if the aim is to set up a system with no incentive for creating an inheritance and a sense of family, dynasty and nation. Imagine if there were private pensions, no state pensions at all, a flat income tax instead of a progressive one and no inheritance tax. Then the state could not funnel money from old retirees to fund large and costly immigration as replacement programs. Traveler Tuber 96 you could argue patriotism is less tangible, but lets take the average american patriot. Why does he love his country? Because of what it stands for. What does it stand for? Individual liberty and freedom. What will he fight for? The right to choose, bear guns etc. Lets say half the american population thinks like this. Do they have to become nationalists? They dont need to.Patriotism in the modern sens didnt exist before the europeans first established the reality of nationality following the french revolution and napoleon. There are reasonable concerns. Immigration is definitely too high and people have legitimate concerns about that. What merkel did in 2015 was unwise. The european people just want to decide who gets to live in their countries, self determination is the right of all humans. About the nazis. They committed atrocities but by no means were they unique. What about the armenians, the native americans, the 20 million koreans indonedians and southeast asians killed by the japanese etc? Can they feel proud of their nation despite those? If the nazi flag is bad because of what it represents then why is the american flag ok despite horrible atrocities committed by americans under that flag not just in the past but right now in 2018? Ibrahim Musa You dont have the right to come to white countries and we dont have to accept you in our countries. And stop with the lie that these are mostly refugees. They are not. They are economic migrants who are useless to society. You are black so dont tell me how i as a native european should think about immigration	Black	Ethnicity - Black	1/61	1.639

Accelerationist Read the book "Germany must perish" (1941) from the jewish author Theodore Kaufman. Or the quote from former Jewish Foreign Minister Walther Rathenau: "Prometheus Germany! Even if you never descend from your rock, when your god-bled blood flows in disgrace and pain over the earth, suffer, suffer the great blessing given to the few, the strong. Rings are no longer for luck, because you have another choice. Not revenge, not institutions, not power and not prosperity buy you. Be what you were, what you should be, what you should never forget. Be hate and do not hate, be ridiculed and do not defend yourself."Simson Germany! Your eye is blind, your forehead is bald. Turn your gaze into yourself, turn your titanic power against yourself. You will not break the pillars of the earth. The court is not yours. Turn the mill of the Philistines and sing the song of God.Ahasver Germany! You do not have power to die. German feet will move across the earth and seek home. You will eat a bitter bread and your home will not be your home. From strange doors they will hunt you for the reflection in your tired eyes.O you Germany! Loved in your foolish delusion, tenfold loved in your godforsaken madman and vice, ten thousand times loved in your humiliating suffering, what do you know of your fate? ...You are arrested and lapsed, and when the hands of men let go of you, you fall into the hands of God." Source: Walther Rathenau in "Critique of the Triple Revolution", p. 67/77Ive asked myself why the elite is targeting germany/germans the most and ve found out really corious stuff.The Germans were the Assyrians.Before emigrating to Europe, they lived in the near of the Caspian Black Sea. After the Assyrian kingdom fell, they migrated along the Black Sea to the river Moselle in Germany. There they also built the first European city called Trier. Trier is 1300 years older than Rome. This is how it stands in Latin on the red house in Trier.In the past they invented the wheel and in the modern day the car.The Germans/Assyrians are called in the bible as "gods hands and the root of his anger. They are the sword of god. Jahwe said that the assyrian king (the next chancellor maybe) will be the one who leads the beast (political system/EU), will fight against Jahwe. Short Version: Who is Jahwe? The creator god of the egyptian believe was named "El Schaddai" and not jahwe. Moses was maybe a egyptian pharao (Tutmoses III) who connected to a creature which is described on the Kabbalah as a desert demon with the name jahwe. So i guess they are the good guys and not the bad ones.

No. Germany has been an occupied territory since the Second World War. They have received very little choice in the matter of their nation . After WW2, only Jews, Communists, and those that fled Germany before the rise of the Third Reich we're allowed to take part in government. Germany has also had the boot of the American government over their throats. They are being led by a bunch of people that want to exterminate their Gene pool and replace it with foreigner blood. I do hope that the right-wing rises up and purges their political system and reverses the damage done.	Nation	Nationality - General	1/101	0.99

Result analysis:

- Taking into account the words that were detected, we can reach the conclusion these comments are associated with : : Nationality - General;Physical Identity - Physical (and Mental) Impairments;Age - Youngsters;Gender - General; Ideological and Political Identity - General;Ethnicity - Native-American;Ethnicity - General;Ethnicity - Black;Age - Over 65s;Religious Identity - Muslim;Age - General;Sexual Identity - General;Sexual Identity - Male homosexuality;Sexual Identity - Transexuality;Nationality - European or anti-Europeans;Social Class - Working class;Physical Identity - Physical Features;Religious Identity - Protestant;Gender - Female age and physical appearance;Sexual Identity - Female homosexuality;Ethnicity - Asian (East- China, Japan, Korea, Philippines, Vietnam);Nationality - Chinese;Nationality - Japanese;Nationality - Southern European;Nationality - German;Nationality - American;
- The percentage of hate speech related words is 0.8751.
- Considering that the variable Nationality - General has the most occurences in the post, we can interpret that this is the predominant hate speech.
- Overall there were 674/2464 occurences of hate speech related comments.
