Who makes their three year old work???	Old	Age - Over 65s	1/7	14.286

While I love the idea of this show I'm not into the way they do it. They take the teens and put them into conservative white southern families who force their religious beliefs on them and force their kids to call them ma'am and sir and disrespect any mental or moral beliefs they have and it's very sad. They demand to be respected and don't respect anyone.	Mental	Physical Identity - Physical (and Mental) Impairments	1/67	1.493
Lol she needs mental help	Mental	Physical Identity - Physical (and Mental) Impairments	1/5	20.0
There's something off about those people. Nothing says "I don't have any confidence in how I raised my children." like sneaking around and spying on your teenagers. If they were really good parents, they would know they could trust their children to make the good choices they've taught them to make. They wouldn't have to spy.	Nothing	Age - Youngsters	1/56	1.786

Them parenting has nothing to do with why spying is pushy. It's all this were a loving close knit family who have parents who basically don't trust our kids.	Nothing	Age - Youngsters	1/29	3.448
Paul Reynoso it's called discipline, and there's nothing wrong with it.	Nothing	Age - Youngsters	1/11	9.091
I grew up in Alabama saying yes sir yes ma'am etc. It's a sign of respect. And no, saying yes sir yes ma'am to your parents does not make you look at them as just authoritative figures. If you grew up in the south, you'd understand. Although, these parents are definitely way overboard. The whole spying on their kids thing was weird as hell. DTEX Vice my dad likes to pull the "yes what?" Bullsh*t and my mom would say "you know how much you hated it when people did that to you? Yeah, well hes got your temper and mine cranked up to eleven. Cut that sh*t." Of course I always said sir just because my dad liked it, but it was never a requirement. There has to be some sort of mutual respect, and in these homes there is no mutual respect, just fear. That's mental abuse.
