To those who keep speaking badly about her getting the plastic surgery, think about it for a second. She can only take on so much hate as one individual person. To do what she is doing, and not get plastic surgery, the world, as it is today, would be waay harder on her. It would be unbelievable. I believe that she is just trying to live as normally as she can, while still doing what she loves. If people can eventually come to accept Madonna performing in her older age , but LOOKING young as she does, this could pave the way for other female performers to not only BE older, but to LOOK older too. She is so self-absorbed and in denial. Her songs from '84 - '95 are still played on the radio, and always will play on the radio, because they are great pop songs. Since then, she has been desperately trying to use the same old skanky shock formula that worked so well in her youth. It has nothing to do with ageism , and everything to do with people not warming to the idea of a half-nude grandma singing shallow lyrics and writhing around the stage like a pubescent teenager.	Ageism, Nothing, Old	Age - General, Age - Over 65s, Age - Youngsters	3/88	3.409

Have always thought that of all rich celebrities she lives the most removed from the real world. Complaining about ageism - someone as rich and famous as her shouldn't really complain about anything. All she knows about or ever thinks about - is Madonna.	Ageism	Age - General	1/44	2.273
Madonna it is always about you isn't it? The material girl is still materialistic even at 60. Never liked Madonna and now even less - instead of speaking about ageism why doesn't she speak out against real problems like the terrorist state of Israel and its human rights violations against the people of Palestine. All self-respecting artists have done so but Madonna instead will perform during the ESC for the hefty sum of a million dollars. Sold you soul for money!	Ageism, Terrorist	Age - General, Religious Identity - Muslim	2/81	2.469
It's not the fact that she is turning 60, its amazing how everybody continues to lie for this arrogant, tasteless skank! Nobody knows her especially young or cares...her music is whacked, her performances are super whacked if you take away all the tvs, and special effects. But even those things dont make a performance successful anymore as you see with her! Nobody feeds into her anymore and she cant stand it....she wants all the attention and she is not getting any.....her day is done and this crying is making her look more suspect...just bow out gracefully, apparently not even her old following. Make sure she reads this..everybody elses comments make music magazines. This one definitely should because its the truth and a read...most people don't want to her the truth!	Nobody, Old	Age - Over 65s, Age - Youngsters	3/130	2.308
Why doesn't she make up her mind. Last year she said she was 60. She's right but the entertainment business needs to share the loaf more fairly with all women. Anybody that ever tried big enough should be rewarded for their contributions to the scene. If Hollywood isn't forcing the income skew, I don't know anybody else that is either. It's probably because most of us are disabled . What about that, Madonna? You help minorities and women, but, there are millions of oppressed disabled women who have been abused to no end. Are we your favorite sitting ducks, too?	Disabled	Physical Identity - Physical (and Mental) Impairments	2/99	2.02

I think Madonna used to be inspiring, she did what she wanted, and didn't care about rules she was breaking. When I was growing up, I always looked up to her. But after "Confessions on the Dance Floor" Seeing how souless her music got, the more she relied on auto tuning, it made me lose so much respect. Not only that, but just seeing how she truly only cares about herself. Not to mention, she preaches about fighting age , but showed such signs of insecurity of her age , and relied on surgery to further inflate her ego. Plenty of women have aged gracefully and didn't fight it, but have accepted it. True acceptance is the only way to age . Fighting it, like fighting the inevitability that we're all going to die, is futile.	Age	Age - General	3/133	2.256

Sex sells in this line of work she is in. This is what she does as a living, her job, her meal ticket. They put a lot of pressure on women, more than men to look sexy, and look young in the face, in this business. When Marie Osmond did the Donny & Marie show back in the 70's. A guy took Marie out in the parking lot, and told her about her weight, like she was getting fat , and she was little then. Unreal ! Donny & Marie couldn't even have a pimple on their face. Marie is a pretty girl, little or big, pimples or no pimples, but it looks like she gets a little work done to herself now. Whoever is her doctor knows what he is doing. I think she would be more relevant right now if she hadn't done severe botox work on her face. I love her music and I respect her career but its painful to see her physical transformation. I used to love Madonna! I had all of her cds & tons of magazines that featured her. Now, I can't stand the sight of her. Everything is for attention. You would think that a woman that age , would have enough self-worth, to know that she doesn't need to act like a 10 year old so people will pay attention to her. Her message now is so watered down and it changes with the wind. She used to be bad-a, but now she's just making a fool of herself. IF SHE WANTS TO FIGHT AGEISM , JUST MAYBE SHE SHOULD PUT PEOPLE REMOTELY CLOSE TO HER OWN AGE IN HER OWN VIDEOS. SHE DISCRIMINATES THE SAME WAY THE INDUSTRY DOES. AND PEOPLE ACT LIKE THIS IS SOMETHING NEW, OR THE ROLLING STONES WOULD STILL BE HOTTER THAN 21 PILOTS....., & IT HAPPENS TO THE MEN AS WELL. " ageism " is something that doesn't exist. It's just another opportunity left wingers are trying to create to gain what they want from life, even when they're clearly not suited to it. Just like sexism , racism etc, the list will just continue to grow from these entitled, emotionally unstable people (and I mean people in a general sense) Madonnas old music was great - it was the stuff that made her known as she is today, but she's clearly hitting elderly age while trying to maintain a narcissistic view of how the world should treat her. The new- age music she partakes in nowadays isn't doing her any credit. It's not iconic and telling people what or how to think is definitely not moral. Yes, if you are young, talented and beautiful you will one day be old . Have sense enough to bow out gracefully.... old age makes us all hideous looking so you should just disappear with dignity just like Garbo did. Marilyn Monroe had sense enough to depart just prior to hitting 40 therefore we will always remember her the way she was. Don't continue to force yourself on the public when you get old or yes..the public will discriminate against you if you don't assume your place in the nursing home. Jane Fonda, at 80 is another one who insists on parading around as if she is 30 with her satanic plastic surgery and youngish hairdo. At 80, Jane should retire and disappear with dignity to a nursing home wearing the standard hospital issued gown and slippers and using a walker like any respectable 80 year old woman would. Madonna is delusional. Firstly: Her insistence that women aren't allowed to age and remain sexual rests on the false premise that "being sexual " means being like HER: Slutty, lascivious, dressing like a prostitute, and being shocking. That is not what "being sexual " even is to 99.9 of the population. Sophia Loren, Ann Margaret, and Raquel Welch are all still considered sexy seniors - the difference is Raquel Welch is not still trying to wear the fur bikini and pretend she's 21. Nobody says people can't age and still be sexual . But there is a pretty worldwide consensus that life has seasons and it's SAD when anybody (famous or not) tries to hold on to their youth. There are lots of sexy aging 80's female singers who are embracing aging, look their age , and are sexy as hell. Madonna is just SAD. Secondly: Her insistence that there is a double standard for men and women as they age also rests on the false premise that men don't also adjust their looks and shows and physicality to respect their aging. Rocking men who did back-flips on stage, flexed their abs, and did jump splits into the audience when they were 20 are not still doing that at 60... sorry Madonna. Madonna used to embrace change and re-invention. Now she's dug in her heels and embraced victim mentality. She refuses to embrace aging and is (ironically) SAYING she's embracing aging by "fighting ageism ," but what she's really doing is rebelling against aging. She's not embracing it at all. Again... SAD.	Age, Ageism, Nobody, Sexual	Age - General, Age - Youngsters, Gender - General	10/257	3.891

+ 46foryounger Livestreams - I agree with everything you wrote. Here's the thing: People who "need to be themselves" must accept responsibility if the public is not interested in them. People who don't want to conform to what the public wants are either celebrated as groundbreaking, or they are dismissed and criticized. Being celebrated is not a human right. LOL Madonna has spent her life being celebrated as groundbreaking - everybody has wanted what she is putting out. And she has gotten REALLY entitled. Now she expects to always be celebrated no matter what she does? Well, guess what Madonna... the world does not revolve around you. Now she is being dismissed because people don't WANT a sad old woman who is so self-obsessed she eats kelp, work out 8 hours a day, and puts magical clay on her skin to retain her youthful glow. The public has always had the RIGHT to want what she's selling or not want it. Lots of people want to be "true to themselves" but for the vast majority of us that means being criticized, mocked, derided - not celebrated and loved. Artistic acceptance is not a right. Maybe she's at a crossroads in her life where she has to decide what's more important to her: A) Madonna being Madonna in pasties with tassles, or B) making changes to retain the fame and external adulation she lives off of and has come to expect. Here's the thing - SHE HAS A CHOICE! If she chooses not to re-invent in a way that keeps her adored and beloved - that's on her...not society. She doesn't get to start playing victim and whine and cry and moan " Ageism! " because nobody wants to see a fossil in a thong. If nobody wants to see a fossil in a thong - DO SOMETHING ELSE THAT PEOPLE WANT TO SEE IF STAYING ON TOP IS SO DAMN IMPORTANT TO YOU. The public retains the right to want, or not want, what an artist is selling. If she values her current brand more than popularity then that's her choice - start playing in smaller venues and accept personal responsibility for making that choice. Otherwise do whatever is required to stay super-famous. It's up to her. She holds all the cards here. But she doesn't get to play fake victim just because she can't have everything she wants her way. Ken Alexandre Meridi No, she isn't. No one is saying that she cannot perform, make pop music, or tour at age 60. She wants to be considered as sexy and desirably sexy. She wants to be promoted like this, instead of being a pop legend who still makes good music. Aretha Franklin came out with an album, doing covers of her favorite songs and few years ago and there was some promotion of it. To show appreciation for Adele's 'Rolling In The Deep', Aretha sung that. Aretha was not trying to compete with the young artist. Madonna wants to be competitive with the young artist, even in terms of sex appeal, WHICH IS WHAT YOUNG WOMEN COMPETE AGAINST EACH OTHER FOR THE MOST, SEX APPEAL AND SEX . Young women are very competitive with each other. They usually grow out of it by a certain age . Madonna doesn't want to grow up. I like her but, I'm gonna shoot it how I think I see it. M Sol Thank you. A lot of young people and the extreme liberal people just hop on bandwagons. Ageism isn't a thing. It's just a damn word Madonna wants to promote to make somebody feel guilty. ManPursueExcellence Keen observation, but I disagree. I think she is doing both. Ageism in the music industry is overwhelming. Once women get past about age 30, airplay starts to decline. Casey R But often times, those people in their 30's have had their run, a good run at that. I remember Pink's music from the early 2000's. The industry must always be on the look out for fresh talent, someone that can connect with a unique audience and newer generation. The older artist, while good, are not as hot, because, despite how we may feel about them, people actually get tired of paying their attention to the same Individuals. It's a business. They have to keep their eyes open for new talent and groom the new talent. Everything in life has its birth, growth, climax, decline, and then, death. I'm old enough to be realistic about this. Yes, the industry looks away from you the more you age but, Madonna is personally struggling with aging more than any artist I've seen in a while. The older artist must be able to 'let go' and realize they have had their season and no things are permanent. She can still make music but, she shouldn't expect the industry to give a BIG push to a legendary artist. They pushed the hell out of her in the late 80's and early 90's alongside Michael Jackson and others like, Cindy Lauper 'Girls Just Wanna Have Fun'. Yeah, but that's just it, she hasn't seemed like herself for 10 years now. What stand out to me besides the overwhelming amount of procedures she has had to her face - She hasn't evolved since she made her album "Ray of Light". If you listen to the lyrics of that album it talks about deep internal changes - growth. She was evolving when she made that music and then, I don't know, maybe when she hit 50, she decided she had to keep up with the younger crowd to stay majorly relevant. Her style choices, wearing grilz on her teeth, her music. She used to have such unique sophisticated style that changed with every album she did. Now she seems like a caricature of all the young pop stars. It makes me wonder if her talk about ageism isn't about fighting it, but an expression of her complete terror about aging and becoming even slightly irrelevant.	Ageism	Age - General	1/157	0.637
Carolyn Lyford Sullivan I don't think it's really about aging but more about being sexually attractive at that age .personally I've always thought women become more attractive after the age of 30.the trouble with so many older women today is they have too much Botox, surgery etc.they all end up looking the same, therefore losing that individualuality they once had.pity. Are most of her fans blind ? Sorry but as a fan myself, some of the criticism she gets has nothing to do with her age (although a lot of people give her a hard time because of that, I agree). Tell me there's no difference between her early work in the 00s and what she's done since Hard Candy in terms of quality. She really started following trends at that moment. I don't care about her surgery, the way she dresses, all that. I'm talking about music. As a fan, I would NEVER have thought she would collaborate with Nicki Minaj (THREE TIMES), someone the whole industry has already collaborated with. Now I'm afraid she might work with Cardi B and Migos. Justin Timberlake, Lil' Wayne, Nicki Minaj... What is she doing? Don't tell me she's not trying to appeal to a young audience. Her music has become immature. During Ray of Light, she used to flash her nipples too, and so what? The music was still wonderful. Now compare a timeless dance song like Music to a disposable one like Bitch I'm Madonna... The difference speaks for itself. Her last three albums are extremely weak and uninspired. Not because she's 60, but because she's Madonna, and she used to make great pop music. I wish she would see that instead of hiding behind the "fighting ageism " excuse. Hopefully working with Mirwais will be fruitful since he produced two of her best albums. I really don't want her to retire, I just expect better music. kayak0 It's like you took every word out of my mouth. She started making shit music beginning with hard candy. Then MDNA was absolute trash. She has only been trying to stay young and in touch with the youth and copy what young singers do, to stay popular. But sadly instead of copying singers like Adele she copied the behavior and music style from singers like Miley Cyrus Nicki Minaj and all the shitty ones, only to stay relevant. But if radios don't play her shit music it must be because they are ageist and sexist. Typical SJW mentality. I used to love both her and her music . Ray of Light was my nr.1 album ever, i was obsessed with it. Music too. And she was chill, calm, confident. Now she is just trash. It took me a while to accept that i'm no longer a fan but i can't be a fan of someone with such a shitty personality, and crappy music. I am glad people are starting to talk just a little more about ageism . Ironically, over the last half century, as we have fought intense cultural battles to stamp out racism , sexism , and " homophobia ", ageism has actually become significantly more of a problem than it used to be. It will always be a struggle in America, because of our constant looking to the future, and relentless spirit of moving on. It is rooted in our history, and is a painful fact of life that most of us have to deal with eventually. It actually kicks in years earlier than I had realized... One radio programmer did admit that older female artists don't get played because of that...their age . The radio hasn't stopped playing her music because of her age . The radio has stopped playing it because she simply doesn't make good music anymore. I dunno if it's just her being so far up her own arse or not, but all she's got to do really is work with a relevant producer and create an instant hit - Calvin Harris for example who makes hits for every other artist on a regular basis. Totally agree with what you said here. And you know why, because in reality, if these celebs provided some valuable advice to aging women about how they coped with going through menopause, it would highlight to people - especially men, and let's face it, they all want younger men like men want younger women - that they aren't 20 somethings anymore. Their silence on this issue, along with the plastic surgery, photoshop, trendy styling, pandering to a younger demographic, running around trying to convince people they aren't pushing or over 50 perpetuates ageism - especially in their industry, which they then run around trying to denounce - like in her speech at that awards ceremony - give me a break. Sadly, it is all about preventing imperfections and aging. Notice how a lot of women don't even smile in their selfies? Remember how beautiful Marilyn Monroe was? She used to smile in almost every picture taken of her. They don't smile now because even a small natural creese in the skin is an imperfection considered unattractive. So, instead, they all look at the camera and pout their lips with that frozen and vacant stare and filter all the pics - like a bunch of robots in a sci fi movie. Disturbing. They don't have to talk about menopause. We all know what that is. I don't see why anyone would want to complain about those "personal" experiences, who gives a shit. You can see she's still aging even with plastic surgery. I don't think its hypocritical or even makes a difference if you chose to get plastic surgery or not. I don't think it perpetuates ageism , I disagree. It's quite the opposite. Fight aging at the same time. Ageism is discrimination based on a person's age , not the wrinkles on their face. Young women who take selfies don't even smile in their pics, pouting their lips with that "frozen vacant stare" like a robot. I think you're going to a bit of an extreme criticizing them because they're older. People like you are the biggest problem with ageism .	Age, Ageism	Age - General	4/137	2.92
Elijah Shane - So you must be at that age where you are starting to or in menopause? Sorry, but menopause comes with aging for women. If you want to talk about aging, then you have to talk about peri-menopause and menopause. I'm cruising into that part of my life, and I will tell you, it's something aging women don't openly discuss enough, and that's too bad because it's a fact of life. The research I've done on it has really helped me to see it doesn't have to be a negative experience and to accept it, and accept that I'm getting older and can be comfortable with that. It's about the level of discomfort I see in her around aging. As you disagree with me, I'm sorry, but I disagree with what you are saying here.	Age	Age - General	1/137	0.73

Just wait and you will see. It isn't pleasant and feels defeating. And hold on to your hat when you see how much your body, face, hair start to uncontrollably change when you hit your late 40s. Madonna has not allowed herself to age gracefully - she needs to stop being a victim blaming her industry. She is extremely powerful, rich and successful. If she had less fillers and botox in her face people would still come out to see her perform. I think her problem is how she sees herself. I agree with what you said, as well as being young at heart, but (acting your age) in the appropriate maturity for each decade age bracket is something someone like her should think about since SO MANY look up to her from all ages, genders, & sexual identities. But I feel with men, "they may get called out on it too" but the standard for them is lower than what is EXPECTED for women. That's like expecting a female pop star like Madonna to still look the same, sound the same, & be the same as time goes on. It's unrealistic & delusional, but when it comes to guys that same expectation/expectations aren't there as much. Aside from that, she, Madonna needs to gracefully slow her role & be more of a role model & a "mother" instead of making out with various people on/off stage & swinging from poles half naked. I'm 48, I could like many guys my age go that way, put weight on. But I'm like hell no. I now train 8 times a week I take supplements, my diet is tight. I've been doing ketogenic diet for 5 year. I am probably in better shape than I was in my 20s. And I am criticised for it. Apparently training that frequently is too much. I should eat cake and 'be happy' people say oh I could never be like that. But u know the traditional image of a 48/50 year old is not something I identify with. I remember 20+ years ago when Madonna was out training (bodyguards in tracksuits and Lycra) and I was 19 at the time. And for me, I personally found it inspiring. That level of discipline and dedication. I started to 'workout' (as I called it then) and it's something I have maintained to this day. she kind of entrapped herself though with the flaunting of her sexuality ... yes it was defining for women or even liberating but as time goes by how many times does one want to see Madonna roll around in her underwear (no matter how fit she is or will be) at some point the selling of sex can no longer support you and you will need to make sure the talent is still in tact AND that the buying mass sees the talent not the boobs/ass/and tight clothing. Mariah ... JLO ... Janet all jumped on the Madonna highway of selling sex as part of their image and as they age they too will feel the sting of just how far can one take it. Look at other strong female artists from the 80's still succeeding that didn't sell the sex at the level Madonna did... Pat Benatar, Stevie Nicks, Cyndi Lauper ... older than Madonna and not worried about selling 1 million or looking cool for the younger generation. Of course Madonna has mega talent; but when will Madonna try and tell the world "hey, i have talent beyond T&A" and hope that it sells just as equal as before. Final note. i've seen comments on here that she is irrelevant or a has been...That, she is not and never will be. Her legacy and contribution to pop culture forever changed the industry and set the standard for generations still to come.	Age, Sex	Age - General, Gender - General	4/243	1.646

anglianchannel When has she ever admitted to being a drug addict ? I've never heard any rumors of her being on drugs or having group sex .Also, many people have had multiple sex partners in their lives, that does not mean they are whores. And to my knowledge, Madonna has only 2 baby daddies and she was married to one of them and that makes that baby legit. She took the time to adopt kids from Africa to give them a better life...I don't think she has ever showed up for work drugged out of her mind or missed a job because she was too hungover. So, I have no idea where this drug shit comes from. A woman can date men just like a man can date as many women as he wants. Dating and being sexual responsible does not equal whore. To all the haters and everyone who gave her hell remember she thanks you for your the ones who pushed her say she would not she should not she must not again Madonna said thank you.Remember all the controversy around her hanging on a cross during the confessions tour. This was not about religion christ or Catholicism it was about the children who as of that time there were 12,000,000 orphaned because their parents died of AIDS. The message was by 2010 the number of 12,000,000 would climb to 20,000,000. The message was about us as a species treating each other with kindness and respect. The message was we all need to be more like Christ. This part of her concert was such a spiritual and enlightening experience that it filled me with joy and sorrow. Randall Collins It's not a step down though. That's like saying Madonna is inferior to Whitney.Yes, vocally Madonna is no match for Whitney but musical artists don't necessarily have to be r&b vocalists to be considered talented.What Madonna did with her music, her artistry, her performances and her activism for the LGBT and the de-tabooing of sex in mainstream media is something even Whitney and her million dollar voice couldn't do. Let's not discredit one artist to upscale the other. The point Madonna is making is that women are not allowed to grow old gracefully in entertainment. There is enormous pressure to look young as long as you can. Her decision to have cosmetic surgery is probably a personal and professional one. Yes, its obvious shes had work done and her skin is pulled back and too smooth for a 60 year old .She looks healthy and full of energy. If shes happy, its her business what she does with her face.
