In my opinion it should be the grandma’s responsibility to support the 13 year old girl AND the baby! Became the girl is only a minor and the girl should have been better taught how not to get pregnant. How about birth control ayyyyy?!	Old	Age - Over 65s	1/44	2.273

Had my first sibling at 10 1/2 and I knew how to hold a young child. At 13 my sister was already 2 and although I had knowledge about babies already I was nowhere near ready to have one.Edit: this is old , the actual baby in this vids at least 13	Old	Age - Over 65s	1/52	1.923

And here i am 17 YEARS OLD with a newborn baby sister.	Old	Age - Over 65s	1/12	8.333
Charlotte is a horrible mom. She called her baby a rat, she cried and threw a fit when someone was kind enough to buy her some things for her baby so she wouldn't have to for her birthday. If she can do 'it' at a young age and give birth, she can take care of her baby... she needs to own up to the consequences and responsibilities of being a mother... like why is she letting her mother and other people watch her baby when they weren't there when she was conceiving hope baby Sophie is doing well	Age	Age - General	1/60	1.667
i wonder if the girl has some sort of mental illness or something? seems mentally younger than 13, idk still too young to be a mom regardless but still	Mental	Physical Identity - Physical (and Mental) Impairments	1/29	3.448
'I wish I could turn the clock back, but I can't' even though her age , I've never heard a mom say that and regret her child like that. For most moms I know or have seen, their baby has been a blessing and they wouldn't trade them for the world	Age	Age - General	1/50	2.0
Its head is the heaviest part, you need to support it. I get its her baby, but her parents need to understand that they need to be the ones taking care of it. A 13 year old can NOT take full care of a child, no matter what you may say.	Old	Age - Over 65s	1/51	1.961

I mean I support teen moms but oh my god.. 13? That's so crazy . I support her and hope all turns out well ( apparently her kid's 13 now in 2019?? ) but she was just so young.. this is literally why we NEED to educate our kids on sexual education and health, NOT just abstinence or avoid it at all costs - -	Crazy, Sexual	Gender - General, Physical Identity - Physical (and Mental) Impairments	2/63	3.175

Ppl are being so hateful on the comment section. Having a baby at 13 was very common 200 years ago, the babies survived. It's actually not that deep	Common	Social Class - Working class	1/28	3.571
It was common for girls to have babies later in their teens, but not so much at 13. Girls typically didn't even start menstruating until their mid or late teens at that time. It is thought that puberty began later back then because people (especially those who were working class) were more sickly and undernourished. Only since about the mid-20th century, when healthcare and nutrition began to vastly improve, has it been more common for girls to start menstruating in their preteens and very early teens. The average age for girls to start their periods now is 12. Most sources suggest that it was between 14 and 16 in the 1800s. Which again, means that a lot of 13 year olds wouldn't have even been capable of getting pregnant.	Age, Common	Age - General, Social Class - Working class	3/129	2.326

Even at the age of six when i wasn't even responsible enough to care of my own self i used to go around at my neighbors to play and take care of their babies so they can do their house work easily. They used to thank me for that. They taught me that baby's neck needs support coz it's sensitive still but watching this video made me so sad that even after having her parents with her she can't seem to understand this basic fact yet.. it's like she doesn't even care about the baby. It's understandable since she's young:(	Age	Age - General	1/100	1.0
You should not be a mom at this young age if you can't handle it. There are teen moms who got babies at 13/14 and still manage to be motivated, and to love and raise their child. I know you did not planned this but the baby deserves love and kindness, and you don't get to be selfish anymore. You have a kid now, responsibility and that is not something to take lightly. I'm 12 years old , i Have a baby sister and i learned a lot of how to take care of a baby, but before my mom had my baby sister i had already knew about babies and what to do. I know how to hold baby and treat them. My mom always told me "babies before you" Whenever a baby cries stop what you are doing, check if they are hungry, need a diaper change, need to get held, or wanna play with the mom. It can be challenging but you learn from your mistakes. If i ever had a baby, i dont care if its a boy or a girl I will always treat them right and love them to death i will never put them up for adoption. I honestly would take that baby that, the 13 year old has if she put her up for adoption and treat her like a real mother!Btw im so sorry for this whole paragraph, im just being honest	Old	Age - Over 65s	2/168	1.19

I'm sorry but just by the way she speaks shows u her mental capability. She's young, she obviously has behavioral challenges and she doesn't care. Yes part of that has to do with age but not all of it. I have friends that have siblings 13-14 years apart and they have helped their parents immensely. Unfortunately this child should of been put up for adoption or her mother should be taking care of it. But seems like there is no proper guidance from her parents either, I could be wrong. Iteboheng Langeni yeah unfortunately that's a thing :- no need to judge, it does seek crazy but it can be done out of fear, disbelief, anger, sadness, or if you're in an abusive household where until the very last second they can't do anything about it... or if you know your family would pressure you into an abortion then you hide it because you just can't get one for numerous reasons ( whether that be its illegal or you're against it yourself or you can't do that to yourself etc. ) and then you have the baby last second. Personally I understand, but I find it INCREDIBLY disrespectful since her parents just don't know at all and then suddenly have a grandchild in the house?? It'd take even LONGER for the tensions to rise and/or for the parents to cope with it, and that'd be when the baby's born instead of whilst she's pregnant and they become okay towards the end or so of her pregnancy. It's so crazy .	Crazy	Physical Identity - Physical (and Mental) Impairments	2/169	1.183

I'm more bonded with the 6 month old I care for than this chick is to her kid. seriously I take care of this nugget like she's my own. for starters she needs parenting classes, her parents need it too. if the mother or whatever she is won't teach her, or figure out how to balance teaching her and letting her do things on her own, how does anyone expect her to just know how to do this she's 13 she doesn't have the ability to have a maternal instinct yet, teenagers are selfish, to no fault of her they just are. I see a lot of comments about her and I get it but I think she's doing the best that she knows how right now, they are going to grow together and she will learn if someone takes the time to guide her. they think it's funny she got banned from the class, seriously this kid didn't have a chance	Chick, Old	Age - Over 65s, Gender - General	2/162	1.235

She was 12 when she had it then 13 barely going on 14. I doubt most at that age would have a maternal instinct to care for a damn baby. I see many 13-16 year old's acting like they would be completely different in this situation. Do you all not understand that she was still a child when all of this happened? A child is not mature enough nor mentally stable to take care of a baby, she was practically still a baby when all of this happened herself! What's really sad about this is that the baby was not put up for adoption as soon as it was birthed. Her parents are also very questionable during that whole fiasco.	Age	Age - General	1/120	0.833

Where is the follow up to this? It cuts off quickly and leaves us hanging as to whatever happened to Mum and baby. I am shocked at the angry, shaming comments, below. The assumption that if her parents had been watching her every second that she never would have fallen pregnant is absurd. To be angry that a 13 year old is very bad at being a mum and understanding what she is dealing with is ridiculous. She is who she is, very immature and unable to cope, it's as if she's in some state of permanent shock. My concern is that Charlotte is detached in many ways; to not have any clue that something was going on physically, you know, like a full-term pregnancy?! is very off. I am very worried that she doesn't seem to really have a clue that this is a baby, the adults, both family and professionals, comment on this, and yet no one suggesting that the baby be put up for adoption. How is this going to turn out well?! The adults need to step up and do something. Unless the parents decide to raise the baby and not count on Charlotte's participation, then this child has not a chance in the world.	Old	Age - Over 65s	1/209	0.478

I agree that she had to learn to accept the consequences of her actions and grow into a more mature person, but I still feel bad about her birthday. Ofcourse she got upset over the presents - suddenly she is a mum which is a role she is NOT ready for, she has a baby which seeks all her attention and to top it all off everyone else looks at her as a mum - not just herself too. Adults mostly don't want a kid before their 30s today because they're scared to 'lose themselves', so it's pretty clear how a 13/14 year old would feel about that. And a birthday is a day about one person, so to give presents about baby wipes is bound to upset her, not because she is spoiled or anything, it just makes sense.	Old	Age - Over 65s	1/140	0.714

You are not. I am 19 Years old and I'm sorry but you are a child and so is she. Children should not take care of other children. It is just obvious that this girl didn't want the baby at all. She doesn't need to be told that she's immature, she needs psychological help to get through this experience and perhaps accept the baby or decide if it's better to give her up for adoption because both of them deserve to grow up happy. All I see is a mother trying to hide her failure by putting the blame on a 13 year old who doesn't even understand how to take care of a baby. All you can hear from her is that she is upset because her daughter doesn't take care of the baby, that she doesn't love her and that she is acting like a teenager calling for attention because she cried for not getting any presents for her birthday because all of them were for the child GIVE HER A BREAK. not even her mother sees the problem there. Wazzup Leo I'm almost sure that your Aunt was much more mature. I look after little babies to young parents on a regular basis and they've all stepped up to the plate and put their grown up pants on. I actually have to press them to go on their date nights. My husband and I love having our little charges overnight. We've got it pat down now especially as we both work and have a 15,16 and 17 year old . We also make sure we have a date night for us every few months. I have a degenerative disease so in another year or two, our teens will grow up and leave the nest for uniAnd? I will have to say goodbye to all the little babies we care for because their parents? They deserve all the date nights in the world. They are all wonderful parents. And? I'm more than sure your Aunt was and is just as wonderful	Old	Age - Over 65s	1/162	0.617

Alberta Rose exactly THAT attitude leaves the kids alone and is responsible for the difference in birth rates of minors between educated countries like the EU and - obviously less educated countries like the US. You COULD do something about it, but you refuse to do it. According to UNFPA, 'In every region of the world – including high-income countries – girls who are poor, poorly educated or living in rural areas are at greater risk of becoming pregnant than those who are wealthier, well-educated or urban. This is true on a global level, as well: 95 per cent of the world's births to adolescents (aged 15–19) take place in developing countries. Every year, some 3 million girls in this age bracket resort to unsafe abortions, risking their lives and health.'	Age	Age - General	1/131	0.763
